

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

Per. L. Eng. 714 c. 1.

= L.L. F. 150.

X CW. U.K.

300

L 300

Per. L. Eng. 7/14 c. 1.

= L.L. F. 150.

XOW. U.K.

300

L 300

Digitized by Google

All Complete

THE LAW TIMES:

THE

JOURNAL AND RECORD

OF

THE LAW AND THE LAWYERS.

FROM MAY TO OCTOBER 1869.

VOLUME XLVII.

LONDON:

PUBLISHED AT THE OFFICE OF THE LAW TIMES, WELLINGTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

1869.

LONDON:
PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY HORACE COX, AT THE "LAW TIMES" OFFICE, WELLINGTON-STREET, STRAND.

GENERAL INDEX.

A.

Adulteration of Food Act, 264
 Agreements for Leases and Leases, 198
 Albert Insurance Company, The, 329, 335, 342, 356, 373, 379, 382, 414, 436
 America, Habeas Corpus in, 22
 American Jurist on the Alabama Question, An, 412
 Ancient Lights—Compensation and Injunction, 123

APPOINTMENTS AND PROMOTIONS:—

Bailey, F., 118
 Beale, A., 416
 Bedford, E., 232
 Bompas, H.M., 275
 Bromley, E., 432
 Challinor, C. E., 232, 320
 Chalmers, D. P., 304
 Clark, A. R., 419
 Cobbe, C. A., 37
 Collisson, W., 462
 Colyer, C., 18
 Dewes, T. H., 377
 Drake, W. R., 370, 380
 Draper, E., 98
 Elphinstone, H. W., 275
 Fallon, J., 317
 Fisher, J., 18
 Force, E., 18
 Grady, S. G., 149
 Grundy, —, 57
 Hartley, F., 462
 Harvey, J. W. H., 462
 Kelly, F., 275
 Kirkpatrick, Capt. S., 264
 Mantle, Sir W., 317
 Moncreiff, J. 391, 441
 Mote, J., 332
 Newman, E., 416
 O'Dowd, —, 226
 Pearson, F. F., 98
 Postlethwaite, J., 232
 Pritchard, —, 91
 Reade, W., 416
 Roberts, F. E., 445
 Romaine, —, 149
 Rowland, F. B., 358
 Thompson, J. G., 345
 Torrens, R. W., 71
 Trollope, W. M., 212
 Vaughan, C. J., 175
 White, J., 462
 Wood, C., 320
 Woods, A. W., 441
 Young, G., 407, 441

Arbitration, 175

Assize Intelligence:—

Summer Circuits, 98, 138, 152, 225, 235, 243, 263, 271, 304, 317

Attorneys, Gentlemen applying to be admitted as, 90, 131

B.

BANKRUPTCY LAW:—

Arrest and Detention of Bankrupts, 256, 276
 Bankruptcy Law Reform, 16, 21, 35, 61, 62, 74, 97, 101, 121, 141, 176, 191, 215, 255, 275, 312, 319, 387, 415, 459
 Creditors' Remedies under Trust Deeds, 103
 Fraudulent Preference by Insolvent Partner, 84
 Joint Notes, 210
 Joint and Separate Creditors, 358
 Liquidators, Solicitors, and Trustees, 235
 Notes on New Decisions, 16, 35, 73, 96, 135, 170, 191, 231, 290, 307, 319 343, 358, 402, 415,
 Sheriffs and the Bankruptcy Act, 176
 Unliquidated Demands in Bankruptcy, 295

Beerhouse Act, The, 456

BENCH AND BAR:—

Barristers and Attorneys, 368
 Calls to the Bar, 33, 132, 149
 Chief Clerks, 316
 Forensic Monopoly, 422
 Home Circuit, The, 275
 Judge on Juries, A, 337
 Judging Judges, 311
 Judicature Commission Report, The, 4
 Legal Changes, 295, 311, 328, 339, 353, 379 400
 Legal Customs in England and America, 365
 Vacations, The Abolition of, 121
 Westbury, Lord, and the Courts of Appeal, 409

Betting and Gaming Laws, The, 199

Borough Quarter Sessions, 33, 165, 186, 207, 227, 245, 400, 413, 427

Breach of Promise of Marriage, 296

Bread Law, 121, 156

Brierley Case, The, 323

C.

Cab Law, 142

Capital Punishment, 317

Cash Deposits, 205

Chancery Retrenchment, 441

Chester Town Council and the Lawyers, 162

City Jurisdiction, 3, 81

Civil Justice, The Statistics of, 313

Clerks of Assize, 216, 264, 314, 325

Colonial Law, 354

Colonies, The Profession in the, 101

Common Land, The Inclosure of, 217

Contagious Diseases Act, 264, 450

Copyright Law, 43

Coroners' Inquests, 427

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION:—

Admiralty Jurisdiction (County Courts) Bill, 331

Articled Clerks, 374, 402

Bankruptcy, 191, 192, 231, 319

Chancery Commissioners and Statutory rations, 443

Chancery Dividends, 285, 306

Civil Service, The, 118

Commission Agents, 17

Conditions of Sale, 308

"Confidential and Legal Advice," 327

Conveyancing Form, 136

Copies of Documents, 191

Costs, 402, 415

County Court Procedure, 57, 210, 290, 291, 308, 319, 331, 344

Customary Hereditaments, Covenant to surrender, 402, 430

Drake, Sir Wm. 430

Final Examination, 250, 270, 290, 308, 319

Fraudulent Mortgage, 308

Friendly Societies, 415

Habitual Criminals' Act (32 & 33 Vict. c. 99), 415

Highways, 270

Infant Heirs of Intestate Mortgagees and Trustees of Freeholds, 117

Inns of Court Regulations, 270

Intermediate and Preliminary Examinations, 36, 231, 415, 430, 443

Invasion, 319, 374

Kain's System of Solicitors' Bookkeeping, 319

Land Laws, 415

Land Registry, 288

Larceny by Servant—Embezzlement, 358

Law Courts, The New, 117

Law Studentship, 231

Locke King's Real Estate Bill, 36, 250

Lockwood's "Every Lawyer's Own Book," 17, 36

Magistrates, The Functions of, 374

Managing Clerks in the County and Magistrates' Courts, 135, 171, 191

Notary, Public, 57

Phonographic Deed, 402

Professional Honour, 402

Public Prosecutor, A, 308

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION (continued):

- Purchase—Right to Abatement in Purchase-money—Conditions of Sale, 290
- Reg. v. Taylor and Others, 56
- Report Wanted, 331
- Retainers, 308, 319
- Signing Depositions before Magistrates, 331
- Solicitors as Magistrates, 36, 74, 117, 150, 171
- Special Bails Bill, 216, 238
- Strange Sentence, A, 308
- Study of the Law, 374, 389
- Unprofessional Advisers, 243
- Wine and Beerhouse Act 1869, 250, 308

COUNTY COURTS:—

- Bankruptcy in the County Court, 178
- County Courts (Admiralty Jurisdiction) Act 1868, 347
- County Court Advocacy, 218
- County Court Appeals, 217
- County Court Judges, 41, 64, 121, 142, 155, 177, 197
- County Courts and Municipal Elections, The, 357
- County Court Reform, 34
- Judge Smith on Juries, 342
- Notes on New Decisions, 34, 55, 135, 150, 169, 230, 247
- Remitted Actions in the County Court, 178
- Swansea County Court, 248
- County Financial Boards, 41, 62, 87, 165, 227, 265

COURTS, THE:—

- Arches Court*:
 - Edney v. Smallbones, 250
- Bankruptcy Court*:
 - Charlton, C. H., re, 399
 - Gill, W., re, 286
 - Matthews, G. B., re, 459
- Bankruptcy and Insolvency Court (Ireland)*:
 - Byrne, T., re, 249
 - Horne, J. A., re, 374
 - Noble, re, 170
 - Ring, re, 170
- Bankruptcy Court, Exeter*:
 - Willing, J. W., re, 307
- Bankruptcy Court, Leeds*:
 - Tindal, G., re, 170
- Bankruptcy Court, Liverpool*:
 - Blatherwick, ex parte; re Lightfoot and Fernihough, 388
 - Benn, E., re., 210
 - Best, J., re, 248
 - Commissioner, The New, 170
 - Dunstan, W. R., re, 248
 - Franghidi and Dunn, ex parte; re a Trust Deed 96
 - Hurst, re, 430
 - Jones, Gardom, and Co., re, 307
 - Titherington, W., re, 290
 - Trader-Debtor Summons, A, re, 443
 - Underwood, G., re, 231
- Bankruptcy Court, Newcastle*:
 - Blackett, R., re, 191
 - Creighton, J. S., re, 343
- Bedford Summer Assizes*:
 - Reg. v. Mann, 287
- Bodmin Assizes*:
 - Morehead v. Sobey, 304
- Bury St. Edmunds Quarter Sessions*:
 - Reg. v. Taylor, 227
- Cambridge Borough Magistrates*:
 - Guardians of the Cambridge Union v. Plumb, 400
 - Howlett v. Osborne, 245
- Cambridge Borough Sessions*:
 - Reg. v. Liddiard, 226
- Cambridge Division County Magistrates*:
 - Beerhouse Act 1869—Rateable value—False Measures, 413
 - Public-house Licence—Evidence, 413
- Cambridge Spring Assizes*:
 - Harlock v. Swift, 163
- Central Criminal Court*:
 - Reg. v. Chandler, 456

COURTS, THE (continued):—

- Clerkenwell Police Court*:
 - Local Rates—Liability of Assignees, 287
- Common Bench*:
 - Attorney, An, re, 130
 - Collette v. Bruce, 184
 - Guibot v. Tyler, 148
 - Lanrie, P.O., v. Schofield, 205
 - Varley v. Ellis, 206
- Common Bench (Ireland)*:
 - McGovern v. Viscount St. Lawrence and Blennerhasset, 203
- County Courts*:—
 - Attleborough County Court*:
 - Clowes v. Colman, 429
 - Bath County Court*:
 - Cruse v. Stafford, 342
 - Blackburn County Court*:
 - Fletcher v. Kay, 306
 - Brecon County Court*:
 - Jenkins v. Mid-Wales Railway Company, 189
 - Jones v. Price and Price, 442
 - Cambridge County Court*:
 - Custance v. Bidwell, 429
 - Camelford County Court*:
 - Jewell v. Trease, 269
 - Chertsey County Court*:
 - Benham v. Wells, 55
 - Darlington County Court*:
 - Whitfield v. Bowser, 387
 - Huntingdon County Court*:
 - Bottomley v. Carter, 169
 - Looker v. Parsons, 170
 - Kingston-on-Thames County Court*:
 - Kemp v. The Local Board of Teddington, 95
 - Leyburn County Court*:
 - Herring v. Hammond, 358
 - Liverpool County Court*:
 - Gough v. Clare, 190
 - Milligan v. Mack, 230
 - Newbury County Court*:
 - Mayor, &c., of Newbury v. Fidler, 269
 - Newport County Court*:
 - Burt v. Vincent, 414
 - Otley County Court*:
 - Dobson v. Ainsworth and Another, 189
 - Oxford County Court*:
 - Mann, H. B., re, 73
 - Portsmouth County Court*:
 - Cousins v. Wheeler, 11, 96
 - Mary Ann, The, 56
 - Reading County Court*:
 - Goldsmith v. Harris, 459
 - Romford County Court*:
 - Solomon v. Wood, 15
 - Skipton County Court*:
 - Sidgwick v. The Yorkshire Mining Company (Limited), 209
 - Soham County Court*:
 - Neathercoat v. Alderton, 456
 - Southwark County Court*:
 - Powell v. The London and South-Western Railway Company, 306
 - Reed v. Scott, 73
 - Stourbridge County Court*:
 - Prescott v. King, 330
 - Sunderland County Court*:
 - Dickinson v. Bell, 306
 - Friendship, The, v. The Spartan, 135
 - Towcester County Court*:
 - Ayres v. Arnold, 247
 - Wakefield County Court*:
 - Oates v. Stansfield, 96

COURTS, THE (continued):—

- County Courts (continued)*:—
 - Wandsworth County Court*:
 - Morris v. The London and South Western Railway Company, 169
 - Welshpool County Court*:
 - Davies v. Dyson, 442
 - Westminster County Court*:
 - Harold v. Watson, 230
 - Wigan County Court*:
 - Anderton v. Webb, 427
 - Winchester County Court*:
 - Boyes v. Phillips, 415
 - Yorkshire County Court*:
 - Smith and Another v. North-Eastern Railway Company, 190
- Croydon Assizes*:
 - Morony v. Lee, 304
- Devon Assizes*:
 - Reg. v. Downes, 285
- Diss Petty Sessions*:
 - Blomfield v. Bartram, 165
- Ely Quarter Sessions*:
 - Hobbs v. Pell and Others, 457
- Exchequer Court*:
 - Bass v. Homewood, 170
 - Merriman v. Seers, 149
- Guildhall Police Court*:
 - Lawyers and Clients, 440
- Huntingdon County Sessions*:
 - Reg. v. Bewley and Another, 207
- Judges' Chambers*:
 - Albert Life Assurance Company, re, 387
 - Bell v. Galway, 326
 - Colman v. Lacon and Walpole, 326.
 - Beverley Commission, The 453
 - County Court Act, The, 442
 - Gardner v. Samuelson, 259
 - Metropolitan Land and Finance Company v. Smith, 425
 - Novel Point, A, 69
 - Torr v. Seely, 241, 259
- Lancashire County Sessions, Bolton*:
 - Beer and Wine Licensing Act, The, 264
- Landport Police Court*:
 - Marsh, re, 92
- Longford Quarter Sessions*:
 - Ferrall, T., re, 454
- Malins, V.C.*:
 - Land Shipping Company, re, Jones's case, 205
- March Petty Sessions*:
 - Pearson v. Fountain, 413
- Marlborough Street Police Court*:
 - Refreshment House Act, The, 441
- Middlesex Sessions*:
 - Brierley, re, 285, 329
 - Habitual Criminals Act, The, 328, 354, 413
- Newnham Petty Sessions*:
 - Beer Act, The new, 329
- Norfolk County Justices*:
 - Game—Poaching Act—Evidence, 114
 - Vagrant Act Amendment Act 1868, 71
- Norwich City Justices*:
 - Great Eastern Railway Company v. Williams, 245
 - Public Houses Closing Act 1864, The, 13
 - Reg. v. Grey, 245
 - Reg. v. Kindle, 340
- Portsmouth Petty Sessions*:
 - Barber v. Peel, 354
 - Hart v. Way, 426
- Portsmouth Police Court*:
 - Barber v. Judd, 207
- Preston Quarter Sessions*:
 - Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company, v. Over Darwen Local Board of Health, 227
- Probate Court (Ireland)*:
 - Eastwood v. Eastwood, 162

COURTS, THE (continued):—

Queen's Bench:

Attorney, An, re, 52
Robinson v. Bayley, 130

Queen's Bench (Ireland):

Walsh v. Dunne, 13

Rolls Court:

Best, J., re, 285
Gray, J., re; ex parte The Incorporated Law Society, 90

Rolls Court (Ireland):

Belfast and County Down Railway Company v. Belfast, Holywood, and Bangor Railway Company, 372

Saffron Walden Petty Sessions:

Tant, re, 400

Southwark Police Court:

Police v. Smith, 71

Surrey Sessions:

Wheeler v. Woolrych, 207

Wandsworth Police Court:

Beerhouse Act, The new, 305

COURTS, SAYINGS AND DOINGS OF THE:—

Arches Court, 453
Bail Court, 47, 161
Common Bench, 8, 27
Exchequer, 9, 28, 46, 65, 110, 127, 147, 182, 222
Exchequer Chamber, 66, 87
House of Lords, 124, 143, 159, 179, 200, 219, 239, 281
Judicial Committee of Privy Council, 144, 159, 179, 201, 220, 239
Malins, V.C., 7, 26, 85, 108, 125, 145, 160, 181, 202, 222, 240, 281, 300
Queen's Bench, 7, 26, 45, 65, 86, 108, 126, 146, 181, 203
Balls Court, 6, 25, 44, 84, 107, 125, 144, 180, 201, 221, 240, 259, 281, 300
Stuart, V.C., 85, 145, 180, 202, 221, 240

COURTS AND COURT PAPERS:—

Chancery, Orders in, 18, 32, 38, 150, 270
Common Bench:—Trinity Term, 77; Michaelmas Term, 463
Common Law Notices, 232
Court of Appeal in Chancery:—Trinity Term, 76, 98; Sittings after Term, 151; Michaelmas Term, 462
Exchequer:—Trinity Term, 77; Michaelmas Term, 463
Exchequer Chamber:—Trinity Term, 78, 160
James, V.C.:—Trinity Term, 76, 99; Sittings after Term, 151; Michaelmas Term, 463
Malins, V.C.:—Trinity Term, 76, 98; Sittings after Term, 151; Michaelmas Term, 463
Queen's Bench:—Trinity Term, 76; Michaelmas Term, 463
Rolls Court:—Trinity Term, 76, 98; Sittings after Term, 151; Michaelmas Term, 462
Stuart, V.C.:—Trinity Term, 76, 98; Sittings after Term, 151; Michaelmas Term, 462
Court of Common Council:—Felons Goods, 456

Courts of Appeal, 64
Courts Martial, 219
Creditors under Estates in Chancery, 12, 32, 52, 70, 90, 114, 149, 163, 184, 205, 225, 243, 263, 285, 316, 327, 370, 426
Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, 12, 33, 52, 70, 91, 114, 149, 163, 184, 205, 225, 243, 263, 285, 316, 327, 370, 399, 412, 426, 440, 454
Crime and Criminals, 13, 33, 53, 115, 141, 155, 165, 166, 192, 235, 245, 264, 265, 305, 323, 335, 340, 351, 371, 379, 385, 413, 427, 447, 448, 455
Cruelty to Animals, 156

D.

Debtor and Creditor, Law of, 267, 370
Debts of Deceased Persons Bill, 183, 255

Defendants out of the Jurisdiction, 142
Defendants in Scotland, 197
Deputy Judge Advocate General, The new, 235
Dismaying, 43

E.

ECCLESIASTICAL LAW:—

Advowsons, 97
Church Reforms, 373
Clergy, Decline of Self-Government of the, 448
Crown and the Church, The, 435
Disestablishment in Wales, 306, 402
Ecclesiastical Courts Bill, 270
Ecclesiastical Fees, 38
Ecclesiastical Prosecutions, 152, 169, 189, 373
Irish Church Disestablishment and Disendowment, 14, 68, 133, 150, 155, 195, 289, 347
Letters of Request, 122, 158, 175
New Law on the Resignation of Bishops, The, 373
Notes on New Decisions, 133, 169, 189, 209, 230, 250, 270, 306, 330
Presentations, 330
Sequestrated Livings, 343
Voluntary Bodies, The Powers of, 200
Correspondence:
Irish Church, The, 14

Edmunds Scandal, The, 149, 206, 441

ELECTION LAW:—

Ballot, The, 203
Borough Elections, 439
Bribery and Corruption, 391, 407, 421
County Elections, 384, 411
Double Returns, 48
Election Commissions, 195, 206, 326, 352, 391, 435, 436, 439, 441, 447, 448
Election Petitions, 6, 24, 41, 48, 81, 88, 111, 204, 223, 285, 303, 326
General Election Statistics, 67
International Elections, 67
Libel, A. 175
Lodger Franchise, 363, 369
Municipal and Parliamentary Elections, 363, 381, 393, 408, 422, 437, 450
Notes on New Decisions, 6, 48, 67, 223, 241, 325, 397, 411, 424, 453
Personal Disfranchisement, 365
Registration, 256
Report of the Committee on Election Practices, 259, 275
Revising Barristers, 275, 296, 311, 328, 339
Woman Suffrage, 122, 303, 347, 397
Working Men in the House of Commons, 303, 324, 326, 337
Correspondence—
Election Petitions, 6
Parliamentary Elections Act 1869, 453
Registration of Voters, 88

Erdowed Schools Act Commission, 304
English and Colonial Law—Phillips v Eyre, 143

ESTATE AND INVESTMENT JOURNAL, 10, 31, 51, 69, 88, 113, 129, 148, 161, 183, 204, 224, 241, 262, 284, 303, 315, 326, 338, 352, 369, 384, 398, 411, 425, 439, 454

European Assurance Office, The, 379, 436
Evidence, The new Law of, 311
Executors and Assignees, Security for Costs by, 157
Expiring Laws, 68

F.

French Courts and Court Costs, 58

G.

Gaming and Betting Laws, The, 199

GAZETTES, THE:—April 23 and 27, 18, 19; April 30 and May 4, 38, 39; May 7 and 11, 58, 59; May 14 and 18, 78; May 21 and 25, 99; May 28 and June 1, 118, 119; June 4 and 8, 139; June 11 and 15, 152, 153; June 18 and 22, 172, 173; June 25

GAZETTES, THE (continued):—

and 29, 193; July 2 and 6, 212, 213; July 9 and 13, 232, 233; July 16 and 20, 253; July 23 and 27, 272; July 30 and Aug. 3, 292, 293; Aug. 6 and 10, 309; Aug. 13 and 17, 321; Aug. 20 and 24, 333; Aug. 27 and 31, 345; Sept. 3 and 7, 361; Sept. 10 and 14, 377, 378; Sept. 17 and 21, 389, 390; Sept. 24 and 28, 407; Oct. 1 and 5, 416, 417; Oct. 8 and 12, 433, 434; Oct. 15 and 19, 445; Oct. 22 and 26, 464, 465
Grand Jury Presentments, 149

H.

Habeas Corpus in America, 22
Habitual Criminals Bill, 115, 235, 323, 335, 340
Heirs at Law and Next of Kin, 12, 52, 70, 114, 184, 316, 327
Historical Manuscript Commission, The, 426

I.

Imprisonment for Debt, 68, 69, 191, 216, 275, 400
Infants in Chancery, 65
Inns of Court Volunteers, The, 114
International Law, 225, 349, 357

IRELAND:—

Administration of Justice at Cork, The, 165
Appointments and Promotions, 13, 447, 455
Crime in Ireland, 23, 166, 245
Granard, Earl, on the Land Question, 356
Irish Bar, The, 132
Treasonable Oaths, 394

J.

Jersey Judge and his Fees, A, 292

JOINT STOCK COMPANIES LAW JOURNAL:—

Bad Bargains by Companies, 381
Company Laches, 266
Impossible Assurance Companies, 142
Insurance against Accidents, 366
Insurance Agencies, 391, 410
Joint Stock Companies Arrangement Bill, 101
Liability of Subscribers of Memorandum of Association, 266, 289
Misstatement or Fraud? 199
Notes on New Decisions, 14, 33, 53, 72, 94, 116, 133, 149, 167, 208, 228, 247, 266, 288, 305, 318, 329, 341, 356, 372, 386, 401, 414, 428, 458
Railway Companies Rights and Liabilities, 44, 94, 141, 236, 298.
Transfer of Companies, The, 63

JUDICIAL STATISTICS:—

1. Common Law Courts, 337, 352, 367
2. County Courts, 367
3. Borough, Hundred, and Manorial Courts, 384
4. Lord Mayor's Court, 384
5. Stannaries Courts, 384
6. Bankruptcy Court, 396
7. Chancery Court, 424, 452

Jury System, The, 141

K.

Kerr, Mr. Commissioner, and the Common Council, 132
Knox, Mr., and the Night Houses, 2

L.

Land Transfer and Middlesex Registries Commission, The, 81

Law Courts, The New, 2, 21, 71, 82, 91, 114, 130, 132, 141, 155, 163, 175, 184, 206, 243, 255, 280, 299, 316.

LAW LIBRARY:—

Castle.—Practical Remarks on the Principle of Rating, as applied to the Proper and Uniform Assessment of Railways, 460.

Cave.—Addison on the Law of Contracts, 37

Cockburn.—Nationality; or the Law relating to Subjects and Aliens considered, with a view to future Legislation, 375, 403

Flux.—A Law to Regulate the Sale of Poisons, within Great Britain, 172

Foster.—Doctors' Commons, its Courts and Registries, with a Treatise on Probate Court Business, 118, 291

Fry.—The Vaccination Acts and Instructional Circulars, Orders, and Regulations, with Introduction, Notes and Index, 460.

Glen.—Shelford's Law of Railways, containing the whole of the Statute Law for the Regulation of Railways in England, Ireland, and Scotland, with Notes, 460

Guthrie.—Savigny.—Private International Law, a Treatise on the Conflict of Laws and the Limits of their Operation in respect of Place and Time, 97

Henderson.—Latin Proverbs and Quotations, 150

Ingram.—Elmes.—Compensation to Land and Houseowners, being a Treatise on the Law of Compensation for Interests in Lands, &c., payable by Railway and other Public Companies, 57

James.—A Practical Treatise on Life and Fire Insurance Annuities and Reversionary Sums, 172

Keane.—Smith.—Selwyn's Abridgement of the Law of Nisi Prius, 231

Kerr.—A Treatise on the Law and Practice as to Receivers appointed by the Court of Chancery, 359

Leonard.—Precedents of Pleading in Equity in the County Courts, &c., 75

Norton.—Commentaries on the History, Constitution, and Chartered Franchises of the City of London, 75

O'Malley.—Hardcastle.—Reports of Election Petitions, 376

Paterson.—Practical Statutes for 1869, 431

Starling.—Indian Criminal Law and Procedure, 58

Umlin.—A Manual of the Law relating to the Office of Trustee, with an Appendix of Statutes, Forms, &c., 118

Young.—An Historical Skdth of the French Bar, from its Origin to the Present Day, 332, 344, 359

LAW SOCIETIES, PROCEEDINGS OF:—

Articled Clerks' Society, 18

Emperor Life and Fire Assurance Societies, 152

Gloucestershire Law Society, 138

Hampshire Law Society, 232, 271

Incorporated Law Society, 250, 291, 319

Law Association, The, 211

Law Property and Life Assurance Society, 138

Law Students' Debating Society, 18, 38, 58, 118, 172, 211

Liverpool Law Students' Debating Society, 18, 58, 98

London and Provincial Law Assurance Company, 37

Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association, 17, 295

Newcastle-upon-Tyne and Gateshead Articled Clerks' Society, 444

Solicitors' Benevolent Association, 58, 81, 118, 136, 152, 211, 295, 461

Social Science Association, 232, 292, 312, 353, 380, 404, 416, 432, 444, 461

United Law Clerks' Society, 37

Yorkshire Law Society, 309

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL:—

Answers to the Examination Questions, 54, 95, 116, 188, 208, 229

Examinations, The, 73, 117, 134, 247, 267, 289, 306, 357

Examination of Articled Clerks, 428

Gentlemen who have passed their Examination, 34, 134

Law Lectures, Prospectus of, 268

Questions for the Examinations, 14, 34, 134, 168, 459

Leases and Agreements for Leases, 198

Leeds, The new Police Magistrate at, 185

Legal Profession, The, 1, 407

Legal Quarterly, The, 24

Libel, The Law of, 63, 102, 156, 421

Life, The Presumption as to the Continuance of, 347

London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company, The, 61, 64

Lunacy, 264

M.

MAGISTRATE AND PARISH —

Beerhouse Licences, 1, 297, 317

Contracts with Boards of Guardians, 166

Highways, 121, 217

Notes on New Decisions, 33, 53, 71, 92, 114, 132, 149, 164, 186, 206, 244, 264, 205, 317, 328, 339, 353, 370, 385, 412

Rates, Rating, and Ratepayers, 62, 129, 155, 166, 216, 340

Readings of New Decisions, 163, 353, 455

Readings of New Statutes, 226, 243, 263, 286

Vagrancy, 186, 227, 447

Manorial Rights, 41, 84, 255

Manual of Leading Cases in Common Law, 103

MARITIME LAW:—

Abandonment, 230

Admiralty District Bill, 330

Admiralty Jurisdiction over Foreign Ships, 42

American Decisions, Recent, 247

Concealment—Underwriters' Knowledge, 122

Contracts to Load and Unload, 218

Digest of Shipping Law Cases from 1860 to 1864, 258, 277, 297, 366, 383, 394, 410, 423, 438, 451

Insurance—Bottomry, 208

Jettison and General Average, 104, 156, 236, 348

Notes on New Decisions, 54, 168, 208, 247, 267, 289, 306, 318, 342, 357, 373, 429, 458

Salvage, 267

Seamen's Wages, 123

Through Freights, 230

Marriage Laws, The, 1, 23, 87, 336, 276, 295, 393

Master and Servant, The Law of, 195

MERCANTILE LAW:—

Agents' Limited Authority, 82

Bankers as Gratuitous Bailees, 449

Bankers' Securities for Advances, 21

Cheques, The Presentment of, 177

Guarantees, 256

Machinery, What is, 230

Mercantile Law Amendment Act—Retrospective, Legislation, 83

Notes on new decisions, 54, 72, 94, 133, 187, 208, 267, 289, 357, 458

Telegraph Law, 230

Misrepresentation and Fraud in Equity, 365

N.

NOTES AND QUERIES, 17, 36, 57, 75, 97, 118, 136, 150, 171, 192, 211, 231, 250, 270, 291, 308, 319, 331, 344, 358, 375, 389, 402, 415, 431, 443, 459

Nuisances Removal, 142

O.

OBITUARY:—

A'Beckett, Sir W., 185

Barker, G. W., 431

Barry, —, 184

Bennett, R. W., 360

Challinor, E., 58

Chester, H., 412

Chubb, T., 17

Coode, G., 431

OBITUARY (continued):—

Egan, C., 195

Egerton, E. C., 360

Hogg, J., 431

James, H., 172

Jones, T., 435

Knox, G. W., 435

Law, W. J., 431

Lee, W., 232

Lefroy, C. J., 97

Lord Justice Clerk, The, 404

Lott, T., 263

Lowry, J. C., 163, 292

Maskey, B., 316

Murphy, —, 286

Needham, W. M., 225

Perry, Mr. Commissioner, 114

Phippen, R., 207

Pierce, F., 426

Porter, H. W., 454

Rawlinson, J. T., 426, 454

Rutter, W. S., 285

Selwyn, Lord Justice, 304, 376

Smith, J. T., 98

Smith, R. E., 138

Smith, T., 75

Smyth, Col., 186

Trafford, H. L., 286, 332

Walsh, J. A., 435, 441, 462

Waugh, G., 339

Whelan, W. C., 270

Williams, E., 172

Wingfield, J. M., 292

Wolves, —, 339

Obscene publications, 257

Osgood's, Mr., Petition to Parliament, 22, 89

Outlawry, Proclamations of, 327

Overend, Gurney, and Company, 12, 163, 175, 176, 195, 196, 205

P.

Parliament—Examination of Witnesses before the House of Commons, 225

Parliament—Law Work of the Session, 238

Parliament—New Laws of the Session, 237, 256, 277, 296, 313, 324

PARLIAMENT, PROCEEDINGS IN:—

Assize Sentences, 302

Bankruptcy, 10, 50, 161, 242, 261, 283, 300

Beerhouses, 148

Betting Houses, 183

Brentford Magistrates' Sentence upon Children, The, 112

Capital Punishment, 261, 283

Charity Commissioners Bill, 223

Clergy and Parliament, The, 68

Companies Clauses Act (1863) Amendment Bill, 112

Compound Householder, The, 129, 302

Costs of Prosecutions, 112

County Coroners Bill, 112

County Courts, 10, 50, 113

County Financial Boards, 51, 112, 204

County Treasurers, 10

Criminal Law, 68, 283

Edmunds' Scandal, The, 50

Election Commissions, 161, 183

Election Commissioners (Expenses) Bill, 112

Evidence, 10, 112, 260, 282

Extradition Treaty with France, 260

Felony, 223

Fire Insurance, 50, 204

Friendly Societies, 183, 283

Highways Act, The, 302

Imprisonment for Debt, 10, 242, 261

Irish Magistracy, The, 242

Judicature Commission, The, 148

Judicial Functions of the House of Commons, 50

Justices of the Peace Qualification Bill, 182

Law Courts, The New, 30, 48, 128, 161, 284, 300, 302

Law of Hypothec (Scotland) Abolition Bill, 242

Legal Statistics, 112

Libel, 30, 224

Licences of Cabs and Omnibuses, 302

Marriage Laws, The, 242, 281, 300

Municipal Franchise, 30, 129, 241, 283

Night Houses in the Metropolis, 30

Oxford University Statutes, 112

Patent Laws, The, 283

Primogeniture, 223

PARLIAMENT, PROCEEDINGS IN (continued):—

Public Institutions, 30
 Public Prosecutor, 302
 Recorders' Deputies, 30, 148
 Revising Barristers, 223, 302
 Special Bails Bill, 223
 Special and Common Juries Bill, 242
 Stamp Duties, 30
 Stamps for Local Fees and Fines, 283
 Statute Law Revision, 128, 302
 Stipendiary Magistrates (Deputies), 161
 Succession Duties, 50
 Trades Unions Bill, 262, 282
 Turnpike Trusts, 30
 Patent Laws, The, 114, 339
 Pauper Suitors, 102
 Peers, The Place of the, 255
 Pleading, The Future of, 2
 Police and the Public, The, 256, 349
 Privileged Communications, 63, 102, 156, 298
 Profession in the Colonies, The, 101
 Professional Incomes, 103
 Professional Touting, 114
 Prosecution Briefs, 215, 255
 Prosecutors in Civil and Criminal Causes, 155
 Prostitutes in Public Houses, 198
 Public Prosecutor, A, 196, 278, 350

R.

Rachel Case, The, 12, 41, 53, 62, 81

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER:—

Elementary Precedents in Conveyancing, 13, 93, 187, 207, 228, 246, 265, 288, 355, 371, 386, 401
 Land Law Reform, 41, 215, 279, 312, 324, 335, 336, 341, 348, 364, 379, 380, 391, 392, 402, 407, 414, 420, 449
 Notes on New Decisions, 13, 53, 72, 93, 115, 132, 167, 187, 207, 228, 245, 265, 288, 305, 318, 341, 355, 371, 386, 414, 427, 457

S.

Saurin v. Starr and Others—A Motion to Commit, 6
 Scotch Law of Hypothec, 61
 Scotland, Defendants in, 197
 Scotland, Legal Procedure and the Profession in, 238
 Sedition, 449

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL:—

Attorneys, Responsibilities of, 3, 12, 42
 Double Functions of Solicitors, 419
 Notes on New Decisions, 11, 31, 51, 69, 89, 113, 130, 148, 162, 183, 205, 224, 242, 263, 285, 303, 315, 327, 339, 353, 369, 385, 398, 411, 425, 440, 454
 Securities for Untaxed Costs, 224
 Solicitors, Admission of, 11
 Solicitors' Managing Clerks, 419

Special Fishery Commission, The, 401
 Stanley, Lord, on Posthumous Disposition of Property, 212

Statute Law Revision, 121
 Strange Sentence, A, 276

T.

Tally System, The, 83, 191
 Telegraph Act, The, 356
 Tichborne Case, The, 316
 Trade Combinations and Trades Unions, 30, 155, 195, 196, 207, 216, 235
 Trustees and their Banking Accounts, 380
 Turnpikes, 186

U.

Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the Bank of England
 12, 52, 71, 91, 114, 131, 149, 205, 225, 263, 316, 327, 370, 399, 412, 426, 441, 454

W.

Weights and Measures, 93, 227
 Wills and Bequests, 163, 192, 232, 252, 321, 333, 345, 361, 377, 405, 445

[Faint, mostly illegible text from a legal document or case report, possibly containing names and dates.]

FROM MAY TO OCTOBER 1869.

CONTENTS—REPORTS.

MAGISTRATE AND PARISH LAWYER:— Norwich City Justices	page 13
REAL PROPERTY LAWYER:— Notes of New Decisions in Conveyancing	13
Elementary Precedents in Conveyancing	13
JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL:— Notes of New Decisions	14
ECCLIESIASTICAL LAW:— The Irish Church Abolition Bill	14
Correspondence	14
LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL:— Questions for the Final Examination	14
Questions for the Intermediate Examination	15
COUNTY COURTS:— Romford County Court	15
THE NEW BANKRUPTCY LAW:— Notes of New Decisions	16
CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION	17
NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE	17
LEGAL OBITUARY:— Thomas Chubb, Esq.	17
LAW SOCIETIES:— Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association	17
Law Students' Debating Society	18
Liverpool Law Students' Debating Society	18
Articled Clerks' Society	18
PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS	18
THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS:— Chancery Order	18
V.C. Mails' Court	18
THE GAZETTES	18
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS	20

W.—The examination we believe is dispensed with in such cases, but application should be made to a judge on an affidavit stating the facts.

LAND TAX.—The latest work on this subject is that of Mr. R. R. Davies, 8vo, 12s. 6d.

ERNEST HOLLOWAY.—Apply to the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery-lane.

All communications must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

Four lines or thirty words.....	3s. 6d.
Every additional ten words	0s. 6d.

Advertisements specially ordered for the first page are charged one-fourth more than the above scale.

Advertisements must reach the office not later than five o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

Paid in advance :—		£	s.	d.
One year		2	13	0
Half-a-year		1	7	6
On credit or for separate numbers :—
Single numbers (stamped)		0	1	1
" " (unstamped)		0	1	0
Double numbers (stamped)		0	1	7½
" " (unstamped)		0	1	6

Law and the Lawyers.

THE state of Illinois has passed a law to protect the earnings of married women. It consists of one section, and runs thus:—"That a married woman shall be entitled to receive, use and possess her own earnings, and sue for the same in her own name, free from the interference of her husband or his creditors: Provided, this Act shall not be construed to give to the wife any right to compensation for any labour performed for her minor children or husband."

THE Irish Law Times looks forward to the institution of life peerages as calculated to strengthen the highest Court of Appeal by the addition of some of the most eminent Irish lawyers. Our contemporary observes: "The presence of at least one Irish lawyer in the ultimate Court of Appeal is absolutely necessary in order to entitle it to respect when it reviews the decisions of the Irish Judges. This could only be attained by the institution of life peerages."

MR. DROOP, in a paper read before the Juridical Society, has arrived at some strong conclusions against majority voting. In this paper, which is well worth perusing, he endeavours to establish (1), that majority voting gives to bribery and all kinds of undue influence a power which they would not have under single voting; (2), that majority voting promotes the election of commonplace representatives without independent opinions, in preference to statesmen and political thinkers; and (3), that majority voting produces an unnatural division of all active politicians, and, to a certain extent, of all electors, into two and only two parties, and concentrates the attention of Parliament and of the country almost exclusively upon certain questions which either are or are likely to become party questions, while single voting would restore both the combinations of politicians and the course of public opinion to their natural state of freedom.

THE most mischievous act ever done with a good intent was that which permitted the Excise to licence beerhouses without limit and without inquiry. In practice it has proved an unmitigated evil. After years of complaint, always stifled by the whispers of interest, Parliament promises redress. The Government has given its sanction to a Bill by Mr. IBBETSON, which proposes to transfer the licensing of beerhouses to the magistrates. The measure is to be limited to two years, with the intention that, in the meantime, the entire licensing system may be revised.

As we mentioned last week the Profession in the North of England is not inclined to allow the question of legal education and qualification to rest. The executive committee "appointed to consider and report upon the best means for carrying into effect the resolutions passed at a meeting of deputations from the Law Societies of Manchester, Liverpool, Birmingham, Leeds, Hull and Newcastle, held at Leeds, on the 25th Sept. 1868," have made a report. This report informs us that the committee have submitted copies of the Leeds resolutions to the Council of the Incorporated Law Society, and to the Committee of the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association, and that a committee comprising some members of each of those bodies has been appointed with which the executive committee have held several conferences, resulting in resolutions which have been unanimously adopted by the associated committee. These resolutions are three in number, and run as follows:—1. That it is desirable that an inquiry should be instituted by the Government or the Legislature into the whole system of legal education and organisation, and professional status and remuneration. 2. That the LORD CHANCELLOR, the PRIME MINISTER, and other authorities, and the Houses of Parliament, be memorialised and petitioned to cause these subjects to be brought under consideration, and other efforts be made to that end; and that the several branches of the Profession, and all professional and other associations taking an interest in the subject, be invited to take part in such efforts. 3. That the Leeds Executive Committee be commissioned to prepare a draft memorial, based on the resolutions passed this day, and that such memorial be printed and circulated, and marked "for consideration."

We shortly noticed last week the scheme for a law university, which the committee have adopted. This scheme we are told was submitted to Sir ROUNDELL PALMER, Q. C., at whose suggestion it has received some amendments, and subsequently to the LORD CHANCELLOR. Both the LORD CHANCELLOR and Sir ROUNDELL PALMER have authorised the committee to say that they approve of the general principles of the scheme. Acting on the advice of the LORD CHANCELLOR the committee have, since their interview with his Lordship, submitted the scheme to the benchers of all the Inns of Court, and requested their approval.

In order to carry out their plans fully, it has been thought advisable that a central committee should be formed and located in London, and "empowered to conduct the agitation which has been so favourably commenced." With this view it is intended to organise a permanent association, the objects of which are to be the following: First—The institution of a central law college or university for the education of students intended for both branches of the Profession. Secondly—The abrogation of admission to the Bar by the Inns of Court, and admission to both branches of the Profession on the basis of a combined test of collegiate education and examination by a public board. Thirdly—The application of all revenues now by law applicable to the purposes of legal education, after due provision being made for existing interests, to the support of the proposed college or university of law. Fourthly—An easy transition from one branch of the Profession to the other of persons qualified for both branches. Fifthly—The admission of attorneys equally with the Bar to the unpaid magistracy, and to all offices for which their education and course of practice qualifies them.

We feel disinclined to make any comment of our own at this early stage of the proceedings, and shall therefore content ourselves with stating merely that we concur in the general method of procedure.

THE NEW LAW COURTS.

THE fate of the new Law Courts is decided—at least the Government has decided it—and with so large and submissive a majority, what the Government determines will be done. Mr. Lowe's speech pronounced the doom of the scheme originally promoted by the commissioners and sanctioned by Parliament. He condemned the Carey-street site and the concentration of offices as extravagantly costly and excessively inconvenient; and he hinted that he had a plan of his own, differing alike from that of the commissioners who had chosen Carey-street, and the æsthetic gentlemen who preferred the Embankment; and he concluded with a recommendation, universally approved, that, wherever the site selected, to the Government and not to a commission should be committed the labours and responsibility of performing the work. But a few days have elapsed and the whole matter is settled, subject to the approval of Parliament, of which there can be no doubt. Six acres are to be purchased behind the Strand, in the region of Howard-street, close to the Temple, and upon that the courts and offices are to be erected at a cost not to exceed 1,600,000*l*. Mr. STREET, the architect of the original design, is forthwith to adapt his plan to the new position, and, without more ado, the work is to be begun and finished with all practicable speed.

We differ from the majority of the London lawyers in giving a decided preference to the Embankment site, especially for the great convenience of access which it affords by a railway, the river, two roadways, the Strand on one side and the Embankment walk on the other side. But our preference of the river site was qualified by the condition that the courts and offices should not be thrown together, but occupy separate buildings. Our desire was that the courts should be splendidly lodged on the Embankment, with ample space for use and ornament, and that the offices should be brought together in plainer garb on the Carey-street site. We objected to a second rabbit-warren, or "Tower of Babel" as it has been called, on the bank of the Thames, and, more than all, we feared the indefinite time that must elapse before such a monstrous work could be completed. Separately stationed, both would proceed together, and a man of middle age might hope to see the completion of them. Moreover, the cost of two buildings would be much less than the cost of one, for this reason, that the offices might be plain but solid, but, if mingled with the courts, the entire erection must partake of the ornamental character requisite for part only of the uses to which it was to be put. Artistically, also, a building of lesser size might be made more beautiful than one of such magnitude as would be required for the whole design.

We do not quite gather from the official statement in the House of Commons whether it is proposed to place both courts and offices upon the new site, or, if so, whether they are to form one building or two buildings. If the former, the objections we raised to the old site will attach to the new one. But, from the large diminution of calculated cost, we conclude that the concentration scheme is abandoned; that the courts with their necessary offices will be erected alone, and that the law offices in general will be brought together in a separate building, either upon the embankment or on the cleared area in Carey-street.

MR. KNOX AND THE NIGHT-HOUSES.

MR. KNOX is exceeding wrath with the Middlesex Magistrates for having quashed one of his convictions of the keeper of what is called a "night-house" in the Haymarket, for permitting prostitutes to assemble therein, and The Times echoes his complaint in an angry article, calling for the interference of the Legislature if the Magistrates of Middlesex will not mend their manners and adopt Mr. Knox's interpretation of the law, or we should rather say, his opinion of what is or is not sufficient evidence that the law has been violated, and the penalty incurred.

The precise nature of the decision of the Quarter Sessions not being accurately understood, we propose briefly to state it, and we have some special knowledge of the nature of that decision.

The offence charged was that the defendant permitted prostitutes and other disorderly persons to assemble in his house.

The policemen proved that they went to the house in question, and found in it several men and women, the latter of whom they knew to be prostitutes; but they were quietly eating and drinking, in an orderly manner, not as one or more parties, but separately, and, save that they knew them to be prostitutes, there was nothing in their conduct different from that of respectable persons in other refreshment houses. They did not see them go in or out in parties, nor was there any proof of their associating together in the house.

On these facts the magistrates were unanimously of opinion that the charge was not established. If it had been the design of the statute to prevent a prostitute going into a refreshment house to eat or drink simply, it would so have enacted and made it penal for a refreshment-house keeper to admit any prostitute. A public-house is as open to a prostitute as to any other person, provided she behaves decently there. The object of the statute was to prevent the assembling of disorderly persons for disorderly purposes; the prohibition is of such an assembly, and the penalty is imposed upon the keeper of the house permitting it. But the offences must be proved, like all other offences, by evidence. It is not enough that persons of doubtful character are in the house, for it is a house for public refreshment. It may be, as the police say, that their coming is announced by signal, and that before they can enter decorum is restored. But that is only assertion; no attempt was made to prove it, and the magistrates could not do otherwise than quash a conviction made, not on proof, but on suspicion and conjecture.

The police say that it is impossible to enforce the Act if strict proof is required. This is no reason whatever for dispensing with proof. The province of law is to deal with the public peace and with public decency, and not with private vices and follies. An act incapable of proof might thence be supposed to belong to the latter rather than to the former category of offences. Besides, it seems to be forgotten that, not long ago, an outcry was raised against the condition of the Haymarket streets at night. Vice, it was said, should keep itself indoors, and not insult decency in the public streets. These were to a considerable extent cleared. Vice retreated indoors. Is it desired now to turn it into the streets again?

THE FUTURE OF PLEADING.

WE remember some time since recommending that common law pleaders should qualify as equity draughtsmen, and thus be prepared to draw the pleadings in a suit whether brought at law or in equity. This suggestion was but an advance on the proposition now made by the Judicature Commissioners, namely, that all pleading under the new system should be the result of an amalgamation of the two methods. Accordingly we welcome the proposed change as one calculated to be a great benefit not only to suitors, but also to the Profession.

But a question arises, whether the commissioners have gone far enough. Their recommendation runs in the following terms: "We recommend that a short statement constructed on this principle, of the facts constituting the plaintiff's cause of complaint, not on oath, to be called the declaration, should be delivered to the defendant. Thereupon the defendant should deliver to the plaintiff a short statement, not on oath, of the facts constituting the defence, to be called the answer. When new facts are alleged in the answer, the plaintiff should be at liberty to reply. The pleadings should not go beyond the reply, save by special permission of a Judge; but the Judge should, at any stage of the proceedings, permit such amendment in, or addition to, the pleadings as he may think necessary for determining the real question or controversy between the parties, upon such terms, as to costs and otherwise, as he may think fit."

This recommendation does not meet one prominent evil. In their preamble on the subject of pleading, the commissioners say that "common law pleadings are apt to be mixed averments of law and fact, varied and multiplied in form, and leading to a great number of useless issues, while the facts which lie behind them are seldom clearly discoverable." This is rather a sweeping assertion, applicable rather to the period anterior to the Common Law Procedure Act 1852, and the rules made in the following year, than to the existing state of things. The great evil to be remedied, in our opinion, is the abuse of forms of pleading, which can only be checked by verifying the statements made. Frequently pleas containing statements of fact are put on the record which to the knowledge of the party and his advisers are false, and set up for the simple purpose of embarrassment and sometimes intimidation. Take, for example, the plea of fraud. It is a plea which, without the slightest foundation, is set up as an answer to a perfectly honest declaration. Of course, the defendant may be made to pay the penalty of placing such a plea on the record if he fails to substantiate it, but being groundless it raises what the commissioners call a useless issue.

In short, no issue should be allowed to be raised which has not a foundation on real or supposed fact. To take another example of the evils arising out of false averments in pleadings, look at what may be said to an action on a bill of exchange. It is open to a defendant to deny every averment in the declaration, and to plead fraud and no consideration, or as appears by the index to Chitty, Jun., on Pleading, there are no less than fifty-one defences distributed amongst the different parties liable to be sued on a bill. There may be some inconvenience in rendering it necessary that the averments in pleadings should be first verified on oath; but we cannot help thinking that it would tend to shorten very considerably the trial of causes, and thus to expedite the transaction of business, and consequently promote the trial of causes which by reason of expense and delay are compromised almost before they have come thoroughly within the cognisance of the Profession.

We should like very much to know what are the views of our readers generally as to the advisability of urging upon the commissioners the propriety of amending their recommendation in this respect. As to the general effect of the proposed change there cannot be two opinions—it must prove beneficial; and, as regards the business of pleading, we believe that it will not be damaged but rather promoted should the recommendations be carried out.

POWERS OF COURTS OVER PRACTITIONERS.

THE question which at the time we write is pending before the Common Pleas in Ireland, relating to the power of the court to suspend an attorney who has slandered a Judge, is one of vital importance to the Profession. We state the facts of the case, under an appropriate heading elsewhere; but, the matter being one of the greatest consequence, and involving really a constitutional principle, we will recapitulate them here.

Mr. BARRY was solicitor to Mr. WEGUELIN, who was unseated on petition for the borough of Youghal. After the trial, and after a point reserved had been decided by the Court of Common Pleas, Mr. BARRY made a speech attacking the Judge, and aspersing the Court of Common Pleas. As to the first he said that, while he deplored the loss of Mr. WEGUELIN, he should complain publicly, through the press of the country, of the manner in which that gentleman had been treated by the hon. Judge who tried the case. In doing so, he did not speak from himself; he appealed to the judgment of the learned Judge, delivered by him at the close of the Youghal Election Petition.

Mr. BARRY then read the portion of the judgment to which he objected, and proceeded thus: "Was that just, fair, or honest? Did that maintain law in the country? No Judge should have done so. Was it not a sad thing to think that, because of the pusillanimity—he could call it nothing else—of that man, they should be deprived of such a man as CHRISTOPHER WEGUELIN? All he could say was that, while he deplored his weakness, he still more deplored the court to which the matter was afterwards referred. He could tell them more. When Mr. Justice KEOGH made use of the words 'It was treating made easy,' and wanted to laugh them out of court, Mr. ISAAC BUTT stood up like a man, and reasoned and argued and fought, but all to no use, for the court had been well trained beforehand."

This attack naturally enough excited the attention of the Judges. Indeed, they could not fail to take cognisance of it without subjecting themselves to very general contempt. But proceeding with strictness in the matter, they appear to have gone a length which, as far as we can see at present, there is nothing to justify. After receiving from Mr. BARRY, in accordance with their order, an affidavit which they considered unsatisfactory, they call upon him to show cause "why he should not be declared guilty of misconduct as an officer of this court, and be suspended from practising in this court for such period of time as the court may think fit."

It is somewhat surprising that the court should have gone as far as this in the face of the recent decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Re Wallace, L. Rep. 1 P. C. C. 283, which leaves it somewhat difficult to decide when an attorney commits an offence in that particular capacity which renders him liable to be suspended. And it is even more difficult to say precisely under what circumstances an attorney may be suspended for such time "as the court may think fit."

In Re Wallace the appellant was an advocate and also an attorney admitted to practise in the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia. He also became a suitor in that court, and as Lord WESTBURY expresses it, "in two or three cases in which he was such suitor he seems to have supposed that he had reason to complain of the conduct of the Judges and the court," and he accordingly wrote a letter addressed to the Chief Justice reflecting on the Judges and on the administration of justice generally in the court, which his Lordship said "was undoubtedly a letter of a most reprehensible kind." On examination we find that that letter contained these expressions: "I may be wrong, but I can't help thinking that I am not fairly dealt with by the court or Judges, and that the well-beaten track is often departed from for some bye-way to defeat me. Even in that little case of Wallace v. Connolly, the case was not decided upon the affidavits, but a person was spoken to out of doors, and the case decided upon what he said, not under oath, while the rule is that a Judge can't use even knowledge within his own mind, much less obtain it from others, but must decide upon the affidavits. Better tell me at once to bring no affidavits into court; for if Mr. SMITH, or any such person, shall even state to me that there is a different impression of the facts on his mind, you must fail as a matter of course. I could also recall cases where the decision was, I believe, largely influenced, if not wholly based, upon information received privately from the wife of one of the parties by the Judge. Is this justice? I think a Judge in England would be a little startled to hear that a Judge in Nova Scotia listened to, much less decided upon, information obtained in this way." And the letter concludes, "I was on more than one occasion almost tempted to bring these things to the notice of the Legislature, but I overlooked them, as I trust you will overlook anything in this, should there be anything in it not strictly within allowable limits."

The appellant stated in the affidavit he afterwards made, that in writing the above letter he had no intention whatever to impugn the conduct of any of the puisne Judges of the Supreme Court, and no intention whatever of offending or insulting either them, or the Chief Justice. To the latter he took an occasion of offering the fullest apology. But this notwithstanding, proceedings against Mr. WALLACE were continued, and judgment was delivered, in which this passage occurs: "This was not a contempt for the nonpayment of money, or for disobeying some order of the court in the progress of a suit, but a contempt levelled at the court itself, and which the court has the authority and the right to adjudicate upon its own motion without invoking the aid of any barrister, upon the production of the obnoxious letter by the Judge to whom it was addressed." And reference is made to Lechmere Charlton's case, 2 My. & Cr. 316, who for a similar offence was committed, not suspended. But without citing any further authority the judgment adds, "It will be seen, therefore, that we have guided ourselves by a precedent of high authority, while our right to substitute a suspension from practice for imprisonment is too clear to be disputed."

This being the main point, we will at once recur to the judgment of Lord WESTBURY, and see how far any one in the position in which Mr. BARRY was when he committed the offence is without or within exemption from suspension. His Lordship said that Mr. WALLACE's offence was "committed by an individual in his capacity of a suitor in respect of his supposed rights as a suitor, and of an imaginary injury done to him as a suitor; and it had no connection whatever with his professional character, or anything done by him professionally, either as an advocate or an attorney. It was a contempt of court committed by an individual in his personal character only." He then defines cases in which a practitioner might properly be suspended. "If an advocate, for example," he says, "were found guilty of crime, there is no doubt that the court would suspend him. If an attorney be found guilty of moral delinquency in his private character, there is no doubt that he may be struck off the roll." Later on in the judgment we find the reason of the rule to be applied. His Lordship said, "When an offence was committed which might have been adequately corrected by that punishment, and the offence was not one which subjected the individual committing it to anything like general infamy, or an imputation of bad character, so as to render his remaining in the court as a practitioner improper, we think it was not competent to the court to inflict upon him a professional punishment for an act which was not done professionally, and which act, per se, did not render him improper to remain as a practitioner of the court."

Now, from what we know of the facts, Mr. BARRY, in his speech, did not speak professionally, and his speech was not an act which rendered him improper to remain as a practitioner of the court. The insult to Judge O'BRIEN and the court was a contempt punishable by what Lord WESTBURY called "the ordinary mode or standard of punishment." It is clear, indeed, from all the cases, that the grossness of the insult to the court, is not the standard by which punishment is to be measured. The effect of the conduct of the practitioner upon himself is the real standard. Insulting the court he incurs the penalty of contempt—fine or imprisonment. Rendering himself infamous, ruining by his conduct his own moral character, he makes it "improper for him to remain a practitioner of the court," and accordingly the appropriate punishment is suspension. And that so, not for the purpose of preserving the dignity of the court, but mainly to protect suitors against a practitioner who has shown himself unfit to conduct their business with decency.

CONSTITUTION AND JURISDICTION OF THE "SHERIFFS' COURT."

It is a fortunate thing for a city when it finds so able and indefatigable a champion of its ancient rights and privileges as the deputy registrar of the Marylebone County Court. On two previous occasions Mr. TORR has come forward with a learned pamphlet on the jurisdiction at law attaching to the City, and we have now before us a full recapitulation of the contents of those two publications, and also a review of questions of immediate interest. One of those questions relates to the criminal jurisdiction of Mr. Commissioner KERR; the other relates to that learned Judge's power to appoint a deputy registrar, which was argued in the case of Wetherfield v. Nelson: (see Reports of the week C. P.)

The first of these questions involves the important consideration whether the County Court Act of 1867 had any, and, if any, what, effect upon the constitution of what has been known from time almost immemorial as the Sheriffs' Court of the city of London. We will therefore here give Mr. TORR's view on this head. Stated broadly, his contention is that, notwithstanding all the County Court Acts, the Sheriffs' Court remains the Sheriffs' Court still, and that the powers conferred upon it by the Equitable Jurisdiction Act of 1865, and the Act of 1867 are accumulative and accruing, and not in derogation or substitution of the statutable jurisdiction and practice of the court in actions or proceedings to be commenced or carried on under the provisions of the Act of 1852. "Nor," he says, "do they infringe the protective provisions of the 37th section of such Act: 'That no County Court Act shall extend to, or relate to, or affect the jurisdiction and practice of the Sheriffs' Court in any action or proceeding to be commenced or carried on therein under the provisions of the Act of 1852,' which is the touchstone for testing whether the jurisdictions, powers, and authorities may be adopted, as being conferred in and by County Court Acts, which do not extend, or relate to, or affect the jurisdiction and practice of the Sheriffs' Court in any action or proceeding commenced or carried on therein under the provisions of the Act of 1852. In illustration of which, attention is directed to the County Court Act 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 57), for limiting the power of imprisonment for small debts exercised by County Court Judges, which is submitted to be a County Court Act, affecting and limiting the jurisdiction and practice of the Sheriffs' Court, holden under the provisions and for the purposes of the Act 1852, and therefore in accordance with the provisions of the 37th section of that Act, is not to be allowed, or construed to extend, relate to, or affect the jurisdiction and practice of the Sheriffs' Court."

The learned author also directs attention to the 37th section of the Act of 1852, "wherein," he says, "is recorded a solemn contract of assurance by the Legislature, which is as yet unrepudiated, namely, 'that no County Court Act should extend, or relate to, or affect the jurisdiction and practice of the Sheriffs' Court in any action or proceeding to be commenced or carried on therein, under the powers and provisions of that Act.' And he contends that as the suspending of the name of 'The Sheriffs' Court' would of necessity prejudicially affect the jurisdiction and practice of the court, the enactment upon which the alteration is based is inoperative. Consequently from his point of view the ancient criminal jurisdiction of the Judge remains.

In support of our author's view of the criminal jurisdiction of the Judge of the Sheriffs' Court, he refers to the Act 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 36, which enacts that the Judges of the Sheriffs' Court, for the time being, "shall be and be taken to be Judges of a court to be called the Central Criminal Court," and consequently that they shall have power to try and determine all offences therein mentioned. With a formidable array of authorities, Mr. TORR supports the view which will be argued to-day on RACHEL's writ of error in support of the validity of the conviction. In his third paragraph setting forth these authorities, Mr. TORR points out that "the Central Criminal Court is a special court of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, created and constituted by Act of Parliament; and not like assize courts of that kind, constituted by the Sovereign's commission directed to two of the Judges of the Superior Courts, and many others, wherein the Judges, Queen's Counsel, barristers, with patents of precedence, or Serjeants-at-law, only being of the quorum, they cannot act without the presence of one of such Judges and justices named in the commission. And that what is required in assize courts of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, does not apply to London, Middlesex, and some adjacent parts. For by the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, a new Court of Oyer and Terminer and Gaol Delivery was established for the trial of offences (as treasons, murder, felonies, misdemeanours) committed in London, Middlesex, and certain suburban parts of Essex, Kent, and Surrey, and also offences committed on the high seas, &c., called the Central Criminal Court, the Judges whereof are the Lord Mayor of London, the Lord Chancellor or Keeper, the Judges of the courts at Westminster, the Judges of the Admiralty, the Dean of the Arches, the aldermen of London, the Recorder and Common Serjeant of London, the Judges of the Sheriffs' Court for the time being, any person who has been Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper, or a Judge of any of the Courts at Westminster, and such others as the Crown shall from time to time appoint. And it is provided (sect. 2) that the Crown may issue its commission of oyer, and terminer and gaol delivery to such a court, and that the said Judges, or any two or more of them, shall hold a session for London and Middlesex, and the parts of Essex, Kent, and Surrey, before mentioned, in the City of London or the suburbs thereof at least twelve times in every year (and oftener if need be)."

In his next paragraph he mentions the important fact that by the Act of 1852 it is provided that all cases above 50*l.*, and all other proceedings in the Sheriffs' Court, might and should be carried on as if the Act had not passed, and points out that this upholding of the common law jurisdiction of the court is not swept away by the Mayor's Court Procedure Act 1857. Further, he mentions that the language and provisions of the Act of 1852, and the Mayor's Court Act 1857, both recognise the Sheriffs' Court as one of the ancient City Courts of Record, having an unlimited and customary jurisdiction; that the Act of 1865 left the title of the court intact; and that the Act of 1867, whilst adopting the language of the Act of 1865, "was somehow betrayed into a work of supererogation and inconsistency in enacting 'that the court should be holden under the name of 'The City of London Court.' Against this provision he ably argues that it is inoperative from internal inconsistency; for it will have been, or may be, seen that there are no courts held by virtue of the London City Small Debts Extension Act 1852, to take this new name, but only a side or branch of a court, which court that Act designates "The Sheriffs' Court," holden under the provisions and for the purposes of that Act, and that this unnecessary name cannot attach or apply to the two courts of the Sheriffs of London, for such courts, or branches of the Sheriffs' Court, are held by custom and charter, according to common law, and not by statute law of the London City Small Debts Extension Act 1852; also that the 35th clause of the County Court Act 1867, is subject to and rendered harmless by the general and well-known rule of construction, that a subsequent General Act shall not repeal a prior Special Act (26 L. J. 62, and 164, Ch.); and there is the authority of Lord Eldon: "That an Act of Parliament giving a new name does not take away the former name, and that a legacy given by the former name may be taken; and that in such Acts is generally contained a proviso to prevent the loss of the former name: (15 Ves. 100.)"

This question is so interesting that we will here give Mr. TORR's conclusions in extenso. He says:

The conclusion to be deduced from these Acts of Parliament is, that the Sheriffs' Court proper is not in any way remodelled or renamed; for the same has relation only to the Small debts side or branch, which is designated "The Sheriffs' Court holden under the provisions and for the purposes of the London Small Debts Extension Act 1852;" and, even if that be a distinct and separate court from the Sheriffs' Court proper, which the Acts all clearly recognise as existing intact, except as to actions not exceeding 50*l.*, the small debt side or branch has no other judge to preside in it than the judge, or one of the judges, of the Sheriffs' Court, who have always been appointed from barristers of long standing and ability, like the present Under-Sheriff, who is, in his own person, judge of both; and in the event of a vacation of the office of Under-Sheriff and judge of the Sheriffs' Court, the Common Council of London would have to appoint one or more Under-Sheriffs and judges of the Sheriffs' Court, who would, ex officio and in pursuance of the Central Criminal Court Act, and of the provisions of the London City Small Debts Extension Act 1852, sect. 7, thereby become as well the designated and duly qualified judges of the Sheriffs' Court for the time being nominated by the Act, of the Central Criminal Court, and also the presiding judges of the Sheriffs' Court holden under the provisions and for the purposes of the Small Debts Extension Act 1852.

Thus the present Under-Sheriff of London and judge of the Sheriffs' Court (with its two computers) for the time being is ex nomine constituted a justice and judge of the Central Criminal Court, under the 1st section of 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, which also constitutes that court a court of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, having jurisdiction to hear and determine, &c., independently of any commission, which may or may not be issued to such court at the pleasure of the Crown, and if issued in accordance with the provisions of the 2nd section, shall be directed to the justices and judges already nominated and constituted by the Act, together with such other persons, if any, as the Crown may think fit to include and name in such commission as commissioners of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, which persons thereby become justices and judges of oyer and terminer and judges of the Central Criminal Court, in addition to those named and already constituted by this Act, 1834. Hence it will be seen that it is under the Act 1834 that the judge of the Sheriffs' Court is constituted a judge of the Central Criminal Court, and by virtue of the commission that he acquires the title of "Mr. Commissioner Kerr;" and that, as judge of that court, he has by Act of Parliament full power and authority to hear and determine all, &c., in like manner, as the Courts of Probate and Divorce, &c., which are created by Act of Parliament, and exercise jurisdiction without any commission from the Crown; for it will be seen that the general commission referred to in the Central Criminal Court Act is only subsidiary to, and directory of time and place and manner of holding, such courts of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, and for the purpose of thereby adding new judges at the will and pleasure of the Crown, who would thereby only become justices of oyer and terminer and commissioners, whereas all the judicial personages originally nominated in the Act 1834 are thereby constituted judges and justices, as well as nominated commissioners of the Central Criminal Court.

We shall not here refer to the question in Welherfield v. Nelson, with regard to which, however, Mr. TORR takes the view which has been adopted by the court. In conclusion we may say that our author hopes for a judicial construction of the Act of 1867 in favour of his contention, incidentally supported by the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE in Osgood v. Nelson, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 149, Q. B., that the Sheriffs' Court is not a County Court. We unite with him in this hope, for undoubtedly the court is one which, if presided over by a Judge popular with the Profession, would certainly attract a large amount of business. The scales of costs framed by the present Judge are more liberal than those which prevail in the County Courts. As an example we may cite the first two rules:

(1) In actions in which plaintiff's claim does not exceed 5*l.*, neither party shall be allowed the costs of either counsel or attorney, unless both parties shall have agreed before the hearing to be represented at the hearing by counsel or attorney, and the Judge shall afterwards certify for counsel or attorney, or both.

(2) In such actions a fee of 10*s.* 6*d.* may, by order of the Judge, irrespective of an agreement between the parties, be allowed to counsel; and, in special cases, a fee, 1*l.* 1*s.* And the costs allowed to the attorney (exclusive of counsel fee) shall in such cases be 7*s.* 6*d.* and 10*s.* 6*d.* respectively.

For full information on the subject of this important jurisdiction, we refer our readers to Mr. TORR's very admirable publication.

THE REPORT OF THE JUDICATURE COMMISSION.

The following is the conclusion of the abstract of the report taken from the Standard, the first part of which we gave last week.

We have yet to deal with those portions of the report which relate to the sittings and assizes, the summoning of juries, and the appellate tribunal. The commissioners are, however, needlessly tender, not to say timorous, in dealing with the division of the legal year. At present there are four terms of rather more than three weeks each, during which, according to ancient theory, all business is to be got through. It is hardly necessary to say that this fiction has long since been practically given up; but, nevertheless, in deference to an exploded fallacy, there are still some kinds of business which can only be done in term, while, as to others, the court regularly go through the form of appointing after-term sittings in banco and at Nisi Prius. The commissioners propose to divide the year into three terms of four weeks each, commencing on Nov. 2, Jan. 11, and May 1, giving a total of eighty-four days, instead of ninety-two, as at present, for the transaction of term business. We cannot see the advantage of a change, which, if it is to have any practical operation, will still further diminish already insufficient opportunities. The commissioners see this, and hence they advise that all distinctions between in term and out of term matters be done away, the courts having power to sit at any time for the dispatch of any business. Would it not be much better to make the three terms co-extensive with the periods during which there is any legal business to do, arranging them so as to give short vacations at Easter and Christmas, and a longer one in the autumn? Such a division would have a practical meaning; but that which the commissioners propose seems to involve nothing more than saying that on certain days the courts will draw a hard and fast line, which everybody is to step over when it suits them, thus rendering it in effect no line at all. There is much more value in the suggestion that henceforth all common law causes shall be entered on a common list, and tried in their order at Nisi Prius sittings, held continuously (vacations excepted) throughout the year, whenever there are causes to try, including in Nisi Prius causes issues of fact on which the Courts of Chancery may desire the assistance of a jury. This is, unquestionably, one of the most important recommendations which the report contains. By the establishment of a permanent Court of Nisi Prius, before which all common law causes are to go, opportunity will be afforded for clearing the lists of the heavy arrears which encumber the Queen's Bench and Common Pleas in London, and the former court both in London and Middlesex. It will do away with all occasions or excuse for taking London causes by the score to Maidstone, Bristol or Liverpool, and by the hundred to Kingston, Guildford, or Croydon. Hitherto London litigants have gone to country assize towns because they had no chance of getting a hearing at Guildhall or Westminster. Should the recommendations of the report be carried out they will have ample opportunity for trying them at their own doors, in which case the Home Circuit would speedily expire of inanition, for not even barristerial faith and patience would long survive the spectacle of 400 learned gentlemen spending a month or so in travelling round five counties, to pick up a living by pleading in about twenty causes, and prosecuting or defending a hundred or so of prisoners. From such a trial, however, those interested are to be delivered by the abolition of the circuit, as, having regard to increased and increasing railway facilities, the commissioners think it will be better to bring country causes to London, and country prisoners to the Central Criminal Court, than to continue to hold assizes in the county towns. The area from which jurors will be summoned to serve in London will be proportionably extended, and if some additional powers are given to the Courts of Quarter Sessions it is believed that any additional expense caused in other cases by bringing prisoners and parties to London will be more than compensated by saving the money now spent in taking judges and other functionaries from town to town.

The readjustment of the remaining circuits is almost a necessary consequence of the abolition of the Home. The practice of laying local venues making causes triable only in particular counties is to be done away with, and the court or a judge is to retain the power of controlling a plaintiff who has chosen an inconvenient venue. The county boundaries which, by lapse of time and change of circumstances, have become more or less arbitrary, are no longer to be treated as sacred, and the judges of assize, instead of going to many towns, each with a small amount of business, are to go to the centre of an enlarged district, all parts of which are to be treated, for assize purposes, as in one venue or county, whose assize town is to be chosen from regard to the practical convenience of those who dwell within its radius. Advertisements in the London Gazette and in the local newspapers are to be substituted for the time-honoured formalities with which the commission is now opened. The form of the commission is to be so altered as to allow assize judges to leave the smaller cases untried, and to make all judges auxiliary to each other whenever the state of the business requires it.

As to the jury system, the defects on which we have often commented are unreservedly recognised, and the recommendations of the Commons' committee are, almost in their entirety, adopted. The fact that the special jurors of Middlesex number only 1800, while those of Kent and Sussex are but 400 and 197, is rightly taken as condemnatory of the present system, which leaves to churchwardens and overseers the task of deciding whether a man is "a merchant" or a tradesman, "an esquire" or a common-place ratepayer. For a test applied by what may be called the parochial mind, the commissioners propose to substitute a new form of property qualification. At present a juror is qualified by occupying a house of 30*l*. rateable value in the metropolis, of 20*l*. in the county, and of 12*l*. in Wales. The commissioners desire to raise the qualification to a 50*l*. rating in houses wholly or in part within any town of 20,000 inhabitants, and to 30*l*. in other places, though we think it very doubtful whether this practical way of saying that ability to try causes or prisoners is not possessed by persons rated below 30*l*. or 50*l*. will commend itself to a House of Commons elected by household suffrage. Alienage is no longer to be a ground of challenge. Aliens, otherwise qualified, who have resided ten years in this country, are to be liable and compellable to serve as jurors, and the trial of foreign prisoners by a jury de medietate lingue is to be abolished. Special jurors are to retain their present qualifications, but their ranks are to be recruited by persons rated at 100*l*. for a private dwelling-house in towns of 20,000 inhabitants, or at 60*l*. elsewhere, who occupy premises other than a farm, rated at 200*l*., or a farm rated at 500*l*. But special jurors are not, as now, to be exempt from serving as common jurors. Their exclusion from the common jury panel is described as "inconsistent with the present state of the law," as having been twice emphatically condemned by the common law commissioners, and as depriving suitors of the advantage of improving the common jury, by an admixture of persons of higher education and intelligence. Suggestions are offered for a better preparation and revision of the jury lists, with penalties for negligence, and, in order to secure the impartial summoning of jurors, the officers are to be bound, under penalties, not to summon a second time any person who has once been summoned, so long as there are sufficient jurors who have not been summoned since he was. The special jury panels in London and Middlesex are no longer to be made up for each cause, but for all causes triable at the sittings. Either party is to have a peremptory right of challenge as to six names, and to a greater number on cause shown. A tales, or calling in of common jurors to supply the places of absent specials, is no longer to be of right, but by leave or by consent. Fines for absence are to be fixed in amount, and not to be remitted without good cause. The illness or death of jurors, pending proceedings, is not to nullify what has been done already, if the judge thinks proper to allow the trial to proceed. The practice of keeping the jury without fire is to be discontinued, and, in the discretion of the Judge, reasonable refreshments are to be supplied to them. Payment is to be made, not by the cause, but by the day, care being taken not to fix such an amount as shall make common jurors desirous of serving for the purpose of obtaining the fee.

One of the most important, and to professional readers the most interesting, portions of the report is that which deals with the subject of appeals. To follow the commissioners step by step would occupy far more space than we have to spare. To condemn the existing system, it is enough to quote the paragraph in which they say that "at present the appeal from orders or decrees made by the Judges of First Instance in the Court of Chancery, is either to the Court of Appeal in Chancery, or to the House of Lords, at the option of the appellant; there is also an appeal to the House of Lords from the Court of Appeal in Chancery.

Appeals and errors from the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, must in all cases go to the Court of Exchequer Chamber, from whence a further appeal or error, as the case may be, lies to the House of Lords. From the Court of Probate appeal also lies to the House of Lords. From the decrees and orders of the Judge Ordinary of the Divorce Court an appeal lies to the full court, consisting of the Judge Ordinary and two common law Judges; and also in certain cases from the full court, or from the Judge Ordinary exercising the powers of the full court, to the House of Lords. From the Court of Admiralty the sole appeal is to your Majesty in Council, or, practically, to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council."

Of the House of Lords as a court of appeal we are told no more than that "it unavoidably impairs the efficiency of the Court of Chancery during the session of Parliament, by withdrawing the Lord Chancellor for the whole of four days in every week from his own court." The Privy Council also cannot get through its work without the help of one or more Judges, who ought to be engaged elsewhere. The Court of Chancery Appeal is less satisfactory than it might be because of the difficulty of getting its three Judges to sit together. The Exchequer Chamber is formed out of two of the common law courts, sitting, whenever time and opportunity serve, to review what the third court has done, and is "eminently unsatisfactory," because some of its Judges, whose opinions have been overruled to-day, may take part in overruling their overrulers to-morrow. Similar objections apply to the full court of Probate and Divorce, and the technical rules of Practice as to appeals from the various courts are stated and reviewed, very greatly to their disadvantage. "For these various and discordant systems of appeal" the commissioners desire to substitute, as part of the Supreme Court, a court of appeal, consisting of the Lord Chancellor, the Lords Justices, the Master of the Rolls, and three other permanent Judges, with three of the Judges of the Supreme Court to be nominated annually by the Crown; an additional vice-chancellor being substituted, as a Judge of first instance, for the Master of the Rolls. The court of appeal thus constituted should be empowered to sit either as a full court or in divisions, but the number of Judges sitting together in any division ought never to be less than three. The Judges of the court, other than the nominated Judges, should always form a majority of the court.

To this court "appeal should lie from all judgments, decrees, rules, and orders in all suits or proceedings not strictly criminal," subject only to certain specified exceptions; and it is reserved for consideration whether the decision of this appeal court should not be made final, subject to its giving leave to carry the matter to the House of Lords, to which, however, appeal is to lie direct, by consent of the respondent. The time for appealing on interlocutory orders made during the progress of a suit is to be fixed by general orders. In other cases appeals must be lodged not more than six months from the time when any judgment, decree, or order, was entered of record. All appeals are to be brought before the court in a summary way by motion, without any petition or formal procedure, but as a rule, the right to appeal is to be exercisable only on condition of substantial security being given for the respondent's costs of appeal, nor is it to operate as a stay of execution, or of further proceedings, unless by the exercise of large discretionary powers, which it is proposed to vest in the court from whose judgment the appeal is presented. The appellate tribunal is to be empowered to allow amendments and to admit additional evidence. Shorthand writers' notes of a judge's ruling are to be admissible as proofs, and the court is to be at liberty to decide, not upon any single short dry point, but upon what may eventually appear to be the real dispute, in order to do substantial justice between the litigants.

It will be seen that an anxious desire for such changes as will tend most effectually to advance the interests of justice and equity is apparent in almost every paragraph of the commissioners' recommendations, and that most of them will tend to secure this very desirable end is, we think, almost self-evident. It may be doubted, however, whether the scheme for effectuating the fusion of distinct and separate systems, has been carried far enough, and some of the suggestions as to the pleading and taking evidence are at least as likely to increase as to diminish the unavoidable expense of litigation. Members of, and other persons interested in, the Home Circuit, would probably have been glad of some intimation as to the course which the many learned gentlemen thereunto belonging are to take, when the new régime has been established. At present they have the prospect before them of becoming as it were a disbanded regiment, about one-fourth as numerous as all the rest of the common law brigade of the forensic army. What are they to do with themselves? Are they to become so many free lances, ready to go anywhere, without regard to circuit boundaries? If so, the circuit system itself, so far as the Bar is concerned, will not very long survive the destruction of the Home Circuit, though probably such a consummation is not very devoutly to be deprecated.

The whole of the commissioners have signed the report, thus showing their general approval of its recommendations. Sir Robert Phillimore, however, desires to guard his expression of opinion on two points. He thinks the special jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty ought to be retained, observing that it has always administered maritime international law, alike in times of war and peace, while its forms and system of pleading are as nearly as possible those which the report recommends. The commissioners' lack of power to consider the composition of the Final Courts of Appeal Sir Robert thinks unfortunate, because it has practically prevented any consideration of the expediency of retaining the House of Lords and the Privy Council as final courts of appeal, and of inquiring whether their present composition should or should not remain unaltered. He also takes exception to that very doubtful part of the scheme which contemplates the rotation of three Judges of the first instance, who by an annual election or selection are to be made Judges of Appeal pro hac anno, thus for twelve months doing exactly what Exchequer Chamber Judges do now, overruling and being overruled in turn. Sir Robert, however, thinks so favourably of this arrangement, that he doubts "whether the Appellate Court should be composed for the most part of Judges exercising appellate jurisdiction only," though many will think that the exercise of appellate functions by Judges not specially appointed to hear appeals has been sufficiently condemned by the commissioners themselves. Mr. Baron Bramwell "cannot concur in the recommendation as to circuits, to its full extent." Mr. Justice Montagu Smith and the Solicitor-General think that, either "the present system of holding assizes, which is based on the existing divisions of counties, and which brings justice reasonably near to the homes of suitors, witnesses, and jurymen, should, with some modification, be retained," or that circuits should be abolished altogether, and provincial courts established, with judges who would go frequent circuits within each district.

As Mr. Ayrton was a member of the commission, it was only selon la regle, that he should have something to say on his own account. To the report, and to the observations of the legal dissentients from some portions of it, the chosen of the Tower Hamlets appends the record of his opinion that sundry questions should be further considered. As might have been expected, the honourable member's suggestions are of very doubtful value. They tend to show his readiness not only to talk but to write upon any subject, without stopping to reflect whether he will thereby display the profundity of his knowledge or the boundlessness of his verbosity. He would have all proceedings commenced and prosecuted in the County Courts unless (query until) it appears proper to remove the case to the Supreme Court, thus entailing upon many suitors the expense and delay of needlessly commencing proceedings in a court from which they know they must be removed. He doubts "whether it is desirable to allow such facilities for appealing and repetition of appeals," forgetting that the report has dealt at some length with this very question. "Having regard to the unequal means of litigants" he inclines towards "a new system of legal remuneration," and to limiting "the claims of suitors against each other for costs," in happy unconsciousness that these claims are already limited by duly appointed taxing masters. As for the suggestions about "unequal means of litigants" and "a new system of remuneration," we presume they are intended to foreshadow a grand Ayrtonian scheme for providing everybody with counsel and attorney at the public expense, a proposition which will have all the charm of novelty to recommend it, and will be sure of enthusiastic support from barristers in want of briefs and attorneys in search of practice. With equal shallowness he desires to consider whether, for the discretion of the judges in respect of costs, "certain rules of positive application," should not be substituted, though the very report Mr. Ayrton has signed contains a recommendation to abolish "rules of positive application," such as he seems to long for, and to put costs at law as in equity under judicial control. In harmony with his avowed proclivities he questions "whether the qualifications of jurymen should not rather be lowered than increased;" therein expressing himself intelligibly, though his antithesis is rather clumsily constructed. And then come two paragraphs which for confusedness and redundancy of slipshod English, have the true Ayrtonian ring about them. He asks—"whether sufficient consideration has been given to the other elements in the administration of the law beyond that of excellence of judicial decision, namely, the time of the suit, the expense to the suitor, and the influence of the administration of justice on the social and political condition of the people;" and, "whether the House of Lords, if it is to continue a Court of Appeal, might not be rendered efficient for the purpose by legal peerages conferred on judges of a certain standing, so as to make the Bench independent of the pleasure of the Crown, and by constituting a permanent committee of such peers, on the principle of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council."

To the first of these it may be sufficient to answer that "excellence of judicial decision" has a great deal to do with "the influence of the administration of justice on the social and political condition of the people." The second is disposed of by the fact that the constitution of the House of Lords and the expediency of life peerages were not matters within the purview of the commissioners' instructions. We are not surprised that Mr. Ayrton should wish to discuss them, limited instructions notwithstanding. But, looking at the constitution of the commission, we should have greatly wondered if he had prevailed upon any of his colleagues to bear him company in his digressions.

A MOTION TO COMMIT.

[COMMUNICATED.]

ON Thursday the 22nd, Mr. Glasse, Q. C., instructed by Messrs. England and Co., of Hull, moved before Malins, V.C., to commit the publishers of the Weekly Register and Eastern Morning News newspaper, for contempt in publishing an article reflecting upon the plaintiff in the suit of Saurin v. Starr and others. Mr. Bury, who appeared for the Weekly Register, apologised and made submission to the court, and an order was made directing the publisher of that paper to pay all the costs of the application. Mr. Martineau, instructed by Messrs. Rollit and Son, appeared for the Eastern Morning News, the Hull daily paper, and read an affidavit by Mr. Hunt, the publisher, stating that the article in question had originally appeared in the Weekly Register; that he had merely republished it as an extract, with the name of the original paper attached; that this was done inadvertently and in accordance with the universal practice in newspaper offices, and that he had similarly published numerous articles in favour of Miss Saurin. The affidavit also stated that the first intimation Mr. Hunt had received of any cause of complaint, was the service upon him of the notice of motion to commit by a clerk in the office of the plaintiff's solicitors, and that he had at the earliest opportunity afterwards inserted an ample expression of regret for any inadvertent injury. Under these circumstances Mr. Martineau contended that Mr. Hunt ought not to be visited with the entire costs, and cited Mostyn v. Tichborne (Weekly Notes 1867) and Daw v. Eley (Ib. 1868). Mr. Glasse pressing for costs, his Honour asked why Mr. Hunt had not been written to in the first instance, as an apology might have been obtained at once, but said he thought the costs were not pressed for in the Tichborne case. Mr. Martineau said he thought such was not the case, but immediately his client had received notice of any complaint he had apologised. His Honour in delivering judgment said the publisher of the Weekly Register, in which the article had first appeared, must pay all the costs. Mr. Hunt, however, had acted in a most becoming and honourable manner, so soon as he was apprised of any complaint, though with some want of discretion in the first instance. Such articles could, however, only be copied at the peril of the publisher, if the matter was brought to the notice of the court; but he thought justice would be done in this case by merely ordering Mr. Hunt to pay the costs of the application, from which he should except those of any affidavits sworn after the publication of the apology by him.

We certainly think Mr. Hunt had reason to complain of somewhat discourteous and unusual treatment on the part of the plaintiff's solicitors. The service of notice to commit, in the first instance, in lieu of the usual letter of complaint, is even more surprising than the pressure for costs, the motive of which seems inexplicable, and at variance apparently with the course pursued in previous cases. It is certainly usual in the Profession to acquaint those who may have rendered themselves liable to proceedings of the nature of the complaint against them, to afford them an opportunity of making reparation. This seems to have been denied Mr. Hunt, and has afforded him, we think, just ground of complaint.

ELECTION LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

SCRUTINY—OPENING REGISTER—PROCEDURE—PARTICULARS—RECEIPT OF PAROCHIAL RELIEF—PERSONATION—RESIDENCE—JUDGE'S POWER TO AMEND BARRISTER'S LIST—NON-PAYMENT OF RATES—DOUBLE OCCUPANCY—TENDERED VOTES—INTIMIDATION.—There were four candidates, H., P., and C., of whom two, H. and P., were returned. C. and S. petitioned against their return. C. was in a minority of six as regarded P., and of twenty-four as regarded H. S. was in a minority of thirty-eight as regarded P., and of fifty-six as regarded H.: Held, that the best course to pursue was for the petitioners to put C. in a majority over P., and then for the respondents to attack the votes of the petitioners; and that if C. should succeed in beating P., then S. should be left to beat H. The court will not allow any formal objection to the several heads of objection in the lists provided to be given by the 7th of the Regule Generales: Semble, if a name is placed on the register any objection should be in the shape of an appeal, as the register is intended to be conclusive. The court will order the books of the overseers to be produced for examination by counsel on either side, for the purpose of showing what voters have received parochial relief. The charge of personation is a matter of fact in which the evidence explains itself. The question of residence is a matter of fact which the judge will decide on the evidence. Where the names of persons appear in the list of voters, although struck off by the revising barrister, and those persons voted, it would seem doubtful whether the judge has any power to amend. It is competent to the judge to deal with objections actually taken and overruled by the revising barrister. The petitioners in preparing their lists did not refer to persons who had not paid their rates before July 31: Held, that the matter could not be gone into, as it was one which must have come before the revising barrister. An objection of double occupancy is one which should be taken before the revising barrister, and if not then taken cannot be raised before the judge. Where good votes are tendered and rejected at the poll they will be added on the scrutiny. Persons making threats through other persons, and persons through whom they are made are guilty of a misdemeanor, and their votes are bad, and will be struck off on a scrutiny: (Oldham Election Petition, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 302. Blackburn, J.)

PRACTICE—COSTS.—At the trial of the petition the petitioners, finding that the respondents had a class of objections which petitioners had thought it undesirable to bring forward, applied to add a list of particulars. An order to that effect was accordingly made by the judge: Held, that the petitioners having failed, must pay the costs in respect of that class. Two classes of petitioners' objections, allowed by judge's order, were rejected, improperly as they alleged, by the judge at the trial. Had it been known that these classes would have been rejected, the petitioners stated that they should not have protracted the inquiry to such length. The petitioners also proved at the trial two cases of mild bribery and two cases of intimidation by an unauthorised person. But the judge being of opinion that the petitioners would, in the event named, have prosecuted the inquiry as far as they could, and that the respondents, not having exhausted their objections, might have recriminated and proved bribery and intimidation at the trial: Held, that the order that the costs should follow the event could not be varied: (The Oldham Petition, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 329. Blackburn, J.)

Correspondence.

TAUNTON PETITION.—Mr. Serjeant Cox answers my question, but he does not favour us with particulars of that it most concerns the Profession to learn—who were the persons guilty of the breach of professional honour and good faith towards him and his legal advisers, of which he complains, and what are the specific acts of which they were guilty. This is a professional question in which we are all concerned, for it strikes at the root of professional confidence. I hope the learned serjeant will favour us with full particulars.

CAVEAT EMPTOR.

ELECTION PETITIONS.—The two special cases out of the seventy election petitions arising out of the late general election have been appointed to be argued in the Court of Common Pleas on Wednesday next. The cases are New Sarum and Manchester.

THE HANGING JUDGE.—We extract the following from an able article on "The Election Petitions," in St. Paul's:—"If in electioneering matters the unseating of a member may be regarded as the legal equivalent of punishment by death, we describe Mr. Justice Blackburn as a 'hanging judge.' It may be that the cases submitted to his jurisdiction have been of a darker character than those over which Mr. Justice Willes or Baron Martin have been called to adjudicate; it is certain that hitherto his judgments have been more Draconian. Bewdley, Wallingford, Stalybridge, Bridgwater, Taunton, and Hereford, have been in turn honoured by his visits, and in four out of these six boroughs he has declared the election to be void. At Bewdley it was proved that treating had been carried on through the clerk of a solicitor, who acted as agent of the sitting member, Sir Richard Glass. His Lordship laid down the principle that a candidate is not only responsible for the acts of his own agents, but for the acts of the subordinates whom these agents may employ, 'though with these subordinates he might not have come into contact, and might have known nothing about them.' Acting on this principle, the judge unseated Sir Richard Glass; and it is obvious that if the principle had been adopted by his colleagues, it would have sufficed to vitiate many other elections. At Wallingford the only question raised by Mr. Justice Blackburn was, whether 'there had been sufficient treating to void the election.' His Lordship decided this question in the negative, but remarked that 'whenever a sitting member had a score at a public-house, he would be in danger of imperilling his seat, by giving an opportunity for the presentation of a petition.' In the present instance, the election was ordered to stand, and costs were given against the petitioners. Stalybridge was the scene of another Conservative triumph. Mr. Sidebotham was confirmed in this return; the judge deciding that though there was bribery in a mild form, by the promise of payment of wages to voters, agency was not sufficiently proved to void the election. Bridgwater was one of the few boroughs where the charge of direct bribery was deemed to be clearly proved; and though, as usual, the judge completely exonerated the Liberal members, Messrs. Vanderbyl and Kinglake, from any personal complicity, he annulled the election, on the ground of corrupt practices having prevailed extensively, and sentenced the respondents to pay the cost of the petition. At Taunton the plea for the petitioner, Mr. Henry James, rested substantially on the allegation that a number of votes recorded in Serjeant Cox's favour were vitiated by the payment of what was called barrister's money; that is, of a sum of about five shillings to voters for their attendance, or supposed attendance, before the revising barrister. The plea was found good; and Mr. Justice Blackburn decided that the Conservative victory had been unfairly won, and that Mr. James was the rightful representative of Taunton. At Hereford, again, Messrs. Clive and Wyllie, the Liberal members, have just been unseated by the learned judge on the ground of their election having been influenced by corrupt practices on the part of their agents. According to this statement, it appears that out of six inquiries held by this judge, four have resulted in the success of the petitioners. By his decision two Conservatives and four Liberals have been turned out of their seats, while two Conservatives have been confirmed in their elections. But notwithstanding the severity of his decisions, Mr. Justice Blackburn has agreed with Baron Martin and Mr. Justice Willes in holding that in no single instance was the member whose return has been successfully disputed cognisant of the corrupt practices which led to the loss of his seat.

SAYINGS AND DOINGS OF THE COURTS.

[CONTRIBUTED BY THE REPORTERS OF THE SEVERAL COURTS.]

ROLLS COURT.

The past week has produced the following cases deserving of notice:—

Re The British and South American Steam Navigation Company, Ewbank's case, was an application by Messrs. Ewbank, Schmidt, and Co., of Rio Janeiro, to have their names removed from the list of contributories to this company in respect of 500 shares, which came into their names under the following circumstances:—On the formation of the company in 1864, the post of agents to the company at Rio Janeiro was offered to Ewbank and Co., on condition of their undertaking to distribute among their friends at Rio 500 shares in the company. Ewbank and Co. made no application for the shares; and, strictly speaking, there was no allotment, but in the minute book of the board of directors there was an entry, dated 31st Jan. 1865, in these words: "That 500 shares are hereby allotted to Ewbank, Schmidt, and Co., or their nominees, and that the secretary be hereby directed to write them accordingly by next mail." The words, "or their nominees" had been struck through, but there was no evidence by whom this had been done. The 500 shares were, however, accepted by Ewbank and Co., and were duly registered in their names, and 11. per share was paid to the company's bankers by Ewbank and Co.'s branch house at Glasgow. In 1866 the company passed a resolution to wind-up voluntarily, and later in the same year it was ordered to be wound-up under the supervision of the court. No calls had been made in respect of the 500 shares; but Ewbank and Co. knew as early as Oct. 1865 that their names were on the register as holders of these shares, and took no steps to repudiate their liability till they received notice from the liquidator that they had been placed on the list of contributories. They now asked to have their names removed, on the ground that the shares had been allotted to them merely for the purpose of disposing of them among their friends at Rio. On the other hand, it was contended on behalf of the liquidator, that there was an ulterior condition that Messrs. Ewbank and Co. were themselves to take so many of the shares as they should not succeed in disposing of. His Lordship inferred from the evidence that the shares were allotted for the purpose of distribution only, and that there was no such ulterior condition as the liquidator contended. Even if there was such a condition, there would have been an implied contract that a reasonable time should be given them for the distribution of the shares; but such time had not been given, owing to the collapse of the company before it had fairly commenced operations. He was, therefore, of opinion that the names of Messrs. Ewbank and Co. must be removed from the list of contributories; but, under the circumstances, he would give no costs.

Beachey v. Hooper was a suit instituted by Mrs. Beachey, a widow, to set aside a deed of settlement on the ground that when she executed the deed she was not aware of its effect. The plaintiff being entitled to a life estate in certain property under her marriage settlement, and to a life or widowhood estate in certain other property under her late husband's will, and being indebted to tradesmen and others in the sum of 700*l.*, applied to the trustees of her marriage settlement to pay her debts out of the trust funds. Thereupon a deed of security and settlement was prepared; such deed was dated the 14th Jan. 1865, and made between the plaintiff of the one part, and the defendants, Hooper and H. G. Beachey, of the other part, and thereby, in consideration of the payment by the defendants, out of the trust funds, of the sum of 700*l.* in discharge of the plaintiff's debts, the plaintiff assigned to the defendants the rents and income to which she was entitled for her life, to secure the repayment of the sum of 700*l.* and interest, and the plaintiff thereby covenanted that the defendants should hold the said rents and income upon trust to pay the same to the plaintiff until she should assign, charge, or otherwise dispose of the same by way of anticipation, or until she should be declared bankrupt, and upon the occurrence of any such event, upon certain trusts in favour of the plaintiff's children, and in default of children, upon certain trusts for accumulation; and it was thereby declared that if at any time during the plaintiff's life circumstances should exist which, in the opinion of the defendants, their executors, &c., might justify or render it expedient that such accumulations, or any part thereof, should be placed at the disposal of the plaintiff, then the defendants should be at liberty to make any such payment to the plaintiff at their discretion. In May 1867 the plaintiff mortgaged her life-interest to secure payment of a sum of 200*l.*, and she now sought to set aside the deed of Jan. 1865, alleging that, when she executed it, she did so under the impression that it was a deed of security merely, and that she was not aware of the settlement contained in it. His Lordship was of opinion that the deed could not be supported; the plaintiff must pay into court the sum of 700*l.* secured by the deed; and there must be a decree in the terms of the prayer of the bill.

Gwynne v. Gell was a suit instituted to make the estate of a trustee answerable for a breach of trust committed by him in allowing the widow of the testator, George Gwynne, to receive the rents of the testator's real estate required for payment of debts, and also to make the widow's estate liable to repay the amount of the rents received by her. By an indenture dated the 26th March, 1836, and made between Samuel Gwynne and Elizabeth, his wife, of the one part, and George Gwynne and Thomas Gwynne, of the other part, Samuel Gwynne assigned his share in the personal estate of his brother, Iltid, deceased, unto George and Thomas, in trust, to invest the same, and hold it upon trust for Samuel and his wife during their lives, and after their death upon trust for such of their children as should attain twenty-one. The plaintiffs in the present suit were three of these children. Thomas Gwynne died insolvent, and George died without having invested the share assigned by the deed of March 1836. By his will he devised certain copyholds and all his freehold hereditaments to trustees upon trust to sell and to pay the proceeds in the first place to his executors in aid of his personal estate, and after the payment of his debts, &c., in trust for wife Sarah Gwynne absolutely. The testator died in 1838. After the execution of his will he became possessed of certain other freeholds, with regard to which he died intestate. All his devised freeholds were sold and applied in accordance with the directions of the will, but the trustees allowed the widow to enter into possession of the devised copyholds. In 1853 Samuel Gwynne and two of the plaintiffs in this suit filed a bill on behalf of themselves and all other the creditors of George Gwynne for the administration of his estate, and it then became known to the plaintiffs that the widow was in possession of the copyholds, but they took no steps to obtain possession of the rents, or to obtain a receiver. The present bill was filed in Nov. 1865. His Lordship said that, assuming that the will of George Gwynne had created a trust, and that the Statute of Limitations did not apply, he was of opinion that the plaintiffs were debarred from recovering by their own laches. It was no excuse for their laches that their interests did not accrue in possession until the death of Samuel Gwynne in 1860. Two of the present plaintiffs were plaintiffs in the former suit, and should have taken all steps for the protection of their interests in that suit. The bill must be dismissed.

Daw v. Eley was a suit instituted by Mr. G. H. Daw (the winner of the prize recently offered by the Secretary of State for War for cartridges) to restrain the defendants from manufacturing or selling cartridge cases for breech-loading firearms in infringement of the plaintiff's patent for improvements in the manufacture of such cases, by making them of a metal tube formed from a strip of thin rolled sheet metal, bent into a tubular form and having its overlapping edges soldered or cemented together so as to form a perfect tube. The defendants were alleged to have infringed this patent by selling cases of brass lined with paper or thin pasteboard, made after Rochette's patent, of which the defendants are proprietors. His Lordship said that this was not a subject-matter for a patent. If a patent might be granted for this, it might be granted for anything. To render a patent valid, it must be granted for some invention or some new adaptation; there was nothing of the kind in this instance. It was admitted that the use of metallic tubes for cartridge-cases was known before; the method of cementing the tubes was known before; the principal innovation in Daw's patent was that he made use of thinner metal. This was not the subject of an invention, it was not subject matter for a patent; the bill must therefore be dismissed with costs.

V.C. MALINS' COURT.

During the past week there has only been one case of any interest; one or two others, however, may be touched upon. The first was Cutler v. Saville, which was a bill filed by the plaintiff a well known West-end tailor, to be absolved from a liability which he had come under by adding his name to a security under these circumstances: Mr. Saville was in partnership with another person, as a printer, and, being in weak health, it was desired that he should retire, and it was agreed that his partner should, on payment of 5000*l.*, take the whole business himself. Not having the money, he applied to his two brothers, who came forward, and the plaintiff, the husband of a sister, added his name to the security then given for that sum. He now sought to be relieved from the liability; but, after a lengthened hearing, Mr. Saville being dead, and his widow standing in his shoes, the Vice-Chancellor was of opinion that the plaintiff failed in his contention, and dismissed the bill.

The next was a case of Johnson v. Hammons, which, being brought as a short cause, the Vice-Chancellor made some very strong remarks on the discreditable nature of the suit. It was instituted, he said to charge property with a sum of several thousand pounds in favour of an infant thirteen years old, who, on coming of age, repudiated it; also to raise 800*l.*, for which 500*l.* costs were incurred, and a poor widow, knowing nothing of the circumstances, might be beggared by the costs (it was stated that they might be 1000*l.*). He should thoroughly investigate the whole matter, and, if he saw fit, fix costs on those who had so improperly acted.

The case first referred to is that of Pronjé v. Matthews, which in form is to set aside a settlement contained in letters between the plaintiff's wife, Harriet Pronjé, and the defendants, her solicitors, under the most extraordinary circumstances. M. and Mme. Pronjé were married in 1829, with a French settlement, and in 1832 a son was born, Léon; the wife then eloped with one Dunailly to England, was taken back by her husband; again left him, and never afterwards lived with him. She then resided at different places in France, went to India and back several times, joined the firm of Greenfields and Co. at Calcutta, and amassed 8000*l.* or 10,000*l.* She then returned to Bordeaux, and entreated her husband to take her back, which he would not do, having meantime solaced himself with another lady, by whom he had several children. Meantime Léon, the son, met and formed an illicit connection in Paris with Julia Camille, who was the wife of another man, of which Léon was said to be ignorant, and had a female child by her, took her to London, and went through the ceremony of marriage with her at St. James's, Westminster. The child was educated in France, but the mother of Léon on seeing the photograph, said it was too ugly to be his child. He then died in India, and Harriet Pronjé having lived in India with a Dr. Cheviot as his wife till his death, came to Bordeaux, remitted nearly 3000*l.* to England to be settled on her grandchild, and left nearly 6000*l.* in securities in a casket in the hands of one Madame Degage. The plaintiff arrived after the funeral and obtained legal possession of the casket, and now sought to set aside a proposed settlement of the 3000*l.* contained in letters between Harriet Pronjé and her solicitors, the wife of one of whom was a school friend of hers. The opinions of French advocates were taken, and there was a large mass of evidence, correspondence, &c., of a most singular description, chiefly letters of Harriet Pronjé, not one of her husband's. After a lengthened hearing, the Vice-Chancellor was of opinion on the evidence of the French advocates, that the plaintiff could not succeed on the whole of his claim, but he must take till Trinity Term to consider the question, as the French law was most difficult to interpret. On English law she was clearly entitled to have dealt as she thought proper with property of which her husband knew her to be possessed; but, there being no divorce in France, he had allowed her to amass and deal with it for thirty-one years without interference. It was a most unconscionable claim, which, if successful, might reduce this poor child to beggary, and he trusted that some settlement would be come to.

One more case, viz., Overend, Gurney, and Company (Limited) v. Gurney and others, may be noticed. This came on upon a demurrer on the ground that the case involved a common tort, and that the remedy was at law. After considerable argument, the Vice-Chancellor held that a bill involving such grave charges, which for this purpose must be taken to be true, must be answered; and that was held in The Charitable Corporation v. Sutton, 2 Atk., and followed by Lord Langdale, in 2 Beav. It had been said that the Lords Justices had that day said that all matters involved in this winding-up could be disposed of summarily; but if such a case as this had been presented, any court would have directed a bill to be filed. The demurrer must be overruled, reserving the costs. The bill was filed against the directors involving the identical charges made in the Oake's and Peel's cases, involving the charge of breach of trust.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

Levenson v. The Queen.—This was the case of the writ of error, brought by Mrs. Levenson otherwise Madame Rachel, to try the question of the correctness of her conviction, and which stands very low down in the Crown paper, and not likely to be reached in the regular course for a considerable time to come. The Solicitor-General applied that it may be advanced, in order that it might receive an earlier determination, as it involved a question of very great and pressing importance as to the administration of justice at the Central Criminal Court, namely, whether the two commissioners who must be present at a trial in that court need be the same two throughout the trial? The same principal Judge, Mr. Commissioner Kerr was present throughout, but not the same other commissioners. Upon the decision in this case will depend the question of whether or not a great number of prisoners have been lawfully convicted. After much consideration (Mr. Mellish appearing for the plaintiff in error), it was arranged that the case shall be argued on Saturday the 1st of May.

In the cases of The Queen v. Hall, an interesting question arose as to the right of appointing the Registrar of the County Court of Ashton-under-Lyne. By the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95 sect. 13 (The County Court Act), a provision is made reserving the rights of certain Lords of Manors in which County Courts were directed to be held, and which courts are named in schedule C of the Act, to appoint at the then next vacancy the clerk (now Registrar) of the court. Amongst the number of courts so included in the said schedule there is that of Ashton-under-Lyne; at the time of the passing of the above statute there was a court of requests held at Ashton, of which a Mr. Robert Worthington, was clerk, Lord Stamford and Worthington being the Lord of the Manor. Shortly after the passing of the Act, the old court of requests was by order in council abolished, and the next day a County Court was constituted in its stead, and Mr. Joseph St. John Yates, was appointed judge, and he thereupon without any communication with the lord of the manor, appointed the above named Mr. Worthington to the office of clerk of the court, and he has continued to fulfil the duties until his death in July last, whereupon Lord Stamford treating the vacancy as the first, under sect. 13 appointed a Mr. Hall; Mr. Yates, however, treating his original appointment of Mr. Worthington as the first appointment, considered the present vacancy not as the first, but the second vacancy to which Lord Stamford would have no right to appoint, and he consequently appointed a Mr. Leaf, the present relator. The appointment of Lord Stamford received the approval (as provided for by sect. 13) of the Home Secretary; but upon Mr. Leaf applying to the Lord Chancellor for his approval (as provided for by sect. 24) it was suspended to abide the event of the present litigation. It was now contended on the part of Mr. Hall that the appointment of Mr. Worthington by Mr. Yates, was not in reality the first appointment, but merely a continuation of his old appointment, to which he was entitled under the 34th section, and that the present was the first real vacancy in the office; or that if this were not so, the relator who represented Mr. Yates has no right to apply inasmuch as Mr. Yates usurped the right to appoint in the first instance of Lord Stamford, and so cannot be allowed to take advantage of his own wrong. The court without expressing any opinion of the merits, thought that as the only legal means of properly raising the question was by quo warranto, made the rule absolute.

In ex-parte Thomas Byard Shepherd, Re a proceeding against the Rev. J. C. Bennett, Mr. Stephen, Q.C., moved for a mandamus to be directed to the Bishop of London directing him to issue a commission under the Church Discipline Act, 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, to inquire into a certain charge made against Mr. Bennett, who is vicar of Frome in the county of Somerset, contained in a letter addressed to the said bishop on behalf of Mr. Shepherd, who is a parishioner of the said Mr. Bennett, relating to a work of the latter gentleman entitled "An Examination of Archdeacon Denison's Propositions of Faith, in which, as it was alleged, he had maintained doctrines on the subject of the Lord's Supper opposed to the 29th article of the Articles of Religion. Mr. Shepherd having in due form applied to the Bishop of London upon the subject, he received in February the following reply: "Having carefully considered the matter laid before me, and having examined the book, I am of opinion that it is not a case in which I ought to issue a commission under the Act, and I therefore decline to accede to your application." It was contended that the bishop was wrong in this refusal, and a number of passages were cited from Mr. Bennett's book to show that they were heretical and opposed to the Thirty-nine Articles, especially to the 29th. In the course of the argument it transpired that proceedings are now pending against Mr. Bennett in respect of similar doctrines promulgated by him. The court felt that under existing circumstances, as similar proceedings are pending, and as the present application is to the discretion of the court, and the bishop himself had investigated the subject and examined the book which in fact was published ten years ago, it would be unwise to grant the present application, and they therefore refused a rule.

In Reg. v. The Mayor, &c. of London, which came before the court on Thursday, Mr. Mellish (with Mr. Archibald) showed cause against a rule obtained by the Solicitor-General, calling on the defendants to show cause why they should not deliver to Mr. Walker a sum of 270*l.* found in the possession of the burglars engaged in the great robbery of watches in the city, which ended some time ago in the transportation for life of the burglars after a trial at the Old Bailey. The money has been retained by the corporation of London, and it seems that applications for it have been made to them from more than one quarter. The Solicitor-General (with Mr. Crompton Hutton) now argued in support of Mr. Walker's right to the restitution of the money. The question turned on the jurisdiction of the Court of Queen's Bench to order the restitution of the money, and this now depends on the construction of sect. 100 of the Act 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, which provides that "if any person guilty of any such felony or misdemeanor as is mentioned in this Act, in stealing, taking, obtaining, extorting, embezzling, converting, or disposing of, or in knowingly receiving any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever, shall be indicted for such offence by or on behalf of the owner of the property, or his executor or administrator, and convicted thereof, in such case the property shall be restored to the owner or his representative; and in every case in this section aforesaid the court before whom any person shall be tried for any such felony or misdemeanor shall have power to award from time to time writs of restitution for the said property, or to order the restitution thereof in a summary manner, &c." The court, consisting of Mr. Justice Mellor, Mr. Justice Lush, and Mr. Justice Hannen, were of opinion that they had no jurisdiction under this section to order the restitution of the money to the plaintiff, and the rule was discharged with costs.

In Ex parte Stevenson, the question whether the foreshore of the sea is within the jurisdiction of the Commissioners of Sewers was argued on motion of certiorari to quash a conviction for taking away sand from a part of the foreshore of Lincolnshire, between high and low water mark. The court were clearly of opinion that the foreshore was within the jurisdiction of the Commissioners of Sewers, and refused the rule moved for.

Great amusement was created in court by the facts of the case of Peacock v. Young and White, as stated by Mr. Hawkins, Q.C. (with whom was Mr. Cockerell). It was an application to send back to the deputy judge of the Wisbeach County Court, to state more correctly a case for appeal, and to hear the parties before doing so. The facts of the case arose out of the late election for the county of Cambridgeshire, and were reported in the newspapers of the time, and the public were somewhat surprised to hear that a County Court judge held one of the candidates (Mr. Young) liable to pay for the windows broken by one of the mob which the election proceedings brought together at Wisbeach. Although it appeared that the candidate held liable had done everything in his power to prevent the excesses committed by the mob on the occasion. The parties had agreed on almost all the facts of the case, but differing as to one, the judge was called on to settle the case, and he refused to adopt the facts on which the parties had agreed, and drew up an entirely different case of his own. Mr. Young being dissatisfied with the judge's statement, the present application was made. The court were of opinion that the judge's statement was defective, and though they expressed a doubt at first whether, when once the judge's jurisdiction had attached by failure of the parties to agree on a case the exercise of his discretion could be interfered with, they ultimately granted a rule nisi.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

Thursday was one of the days set apart for the special paper, but before the cases in that paper were taken, the court heard the conclusion of the arguments in a new trial which had been commenced the day before; the question in dispute was the liability of the defendant upon the construction of a guarantee. The plaintiff Bew was assignee of a bankrupt, and he proposed to some of the creditors to institute legal proceedings against a person named Bill, who had obtained possession of some of the bankrupt's goods under a bill of sale; he declined, however, to take any steps unless the general body of creditors agreed to guarantee their shares of any costs which might be incurred, and with that object he sent copies to several creditors of a document which purported to be signed by several persons who each undertook his share of the legal costs which would result from prosecuting the action: defendant signed one of these copies, and three other persons signed each of them another, but by far the larger portion of the creditors declined to make themselves responsible. The action against the assignee of the bill of sale was decided against the creditors' assignee, and the latter now attempted to get the defendant's share of the costs upon the guarantee note signed by him. There was an equitable plea to the effect that the defendant signed this document upon the representation by the plaintiff that all the other creditors would be liable for their share of the costs. The court now entered judgment for the defendant, on the ground that this plea was a sufficient answer to the action.

The rest of the day, besides several hours of Friday, was occupied in arguing the special case, Dungey v. The Mayor, &c. of London, the question in which was the liability of the corporation for damages claimed by the owner of a house, which he alleged was injuriously affected by the construction of the Holborn Valley Viaduct. The first point raised was, whether the Holborn Valley Improvement Acts incorporated the 68th section of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845; the second was whether, even if that section were not incorporated in the Act, the various sections of the Improvement Acts did not imply a right to compensation; the third point was, whether the right of action at common law for this injury was taken away by these statutes; and the fourth was as to whether the circumstances of this case established a claim for injury under the Lands Clauses Act. The court, still consisting of Justices Keating and Smith only, took time to consider their judgment.

In Waygood v. James, the Taunton election petition, Mr. Mellish, Q.C., moved for a rule nisi, calling upon the petitioners to show cause why this petition should not be taken off the file, and quashed, and all further proceedings stayed. It was stated that at the last general election Mr. Serjt. Cox was elected one of the members for Taunton, Mr. Henry James being the unsuccessful candidate; that upon a petition by some of the electors duly filed, Mr. Serjt. Cox was declared by Blackburn, J., to have been unduly elected; at the same time the judge declared Mr. Henry James to have been duly elected. The bribery, which was held to have been established against the sitting member, consisted of the payment by the Conservative Working Men's Association of 5*s.* a head to voters, nominally for their expenses in attending the revising barrister's court, really in many cases where they never attended at all. Notice had been given that recriminatory evidence against Mr. James's return, under the 53rd section, would be adduced at the hearing of the petition, and, although no such evidence was actually given, Mr. James and his witnesses were cross-examined as to the allegations against the unsuccessful candidate. Attention was called to the 6th section, which requires a petition to be presented within twenty-one days after the return has been made to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, and to the 13th clause of the 11th section, which makes the determination of the judge upon his certificate final to all intents and purposes. It was argued that there was no new return when Mr. James was declared duly elected, and that the Act did not provide for any second petition. Mr. Justice Keating said, "My brother Blackburn has given a certificate that Mr. James was duly elected, and the Act makes that certificate final. If there should be a new petition, there will have to be another certificate. At all events, you have said enough for us to grant a rule nisi."

In Trenfield v. Lowe, one of the registration cases which have been postponed to this term for the convenience of counsel, the court held that upon the facts stated, the appellant was entitled to a vote for West Gloucestershire.

On Saturday, according to notice given the day before, there was no sitting of this court in banc: the Lord Chief Justice was still absent from ill health, Mr. Justice Willes was engaged in an election petition, one judge was at Nisi Prius, another at chambers, and two of the judges of this court were required at the Court of Criminal Cases Reserved.

The first case of the special paper on Monday was Trowsdale v. The North British Railway Company, a dispute between a railway contractor and the company with whom he contracted. By one of the articles of the contract, it was agreed that any difference between them should be referred to an engineer named Tone, and power was given to either party to refer without consent of the other. To the present claim of the contractor, the defendants pleaded an award made by Mr. Tone on the matters in difference upon a request of the secretary of the company to arbitrate upon it. It was now contended by the plaintiff that although it was competent to either to refer any matter of difference, it was necessary, especially when the other party did not consent, that a proper submission of the matter should be previously made. Here the plaintiff had persistently refused to refer, and had always protested against the award, and at the same time the only submission was contained in a letter by the secretary; there was no seal of the company attached, and it was shown that the secretary was not authorised by the directors to make this submission. The court decided in favour of the plaintiff.

The next case was Morris v. Ogden, in which several points were raised under the Act for enforcing the residence of clergy, and under the Church Discipline Act. The arguments were not concluded on Monday. It appeared from the facts stated in the special case, that the plaintiff, who was some years ago incumbent of St Peter's, Ashton-under-Lyne, had been convicted, in the Divorce Court, of adultery with one of his parishioners. The Bishop of Manchester issued a monition requiring him to reside in the parish under the 54th section of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106; the plaintiff answered, as his excuse for not residing, that his life was in danger from the inhabitants, who had on more than one occasion hooted at and stoned him; the bishop, not deeming this excuse satisfactory, ordered him to reside within thirty days, and sequestered the living upon non-compliance at the end of that time. By sect. 58 a benefice continuing sequestered for one year, becomes void; before the year in this case was concluded, the plaintiff had been suspended, under the Church Discipline Act, for three years. That term of suspension being now concluded, the defendant, who had been appointed to the benefice on the supposition that it had become void, was sued for breaking and entering the plaintiff's pulpit. Four points were taken by Mr. Brown, Q.C., for the plaintiff: first, that the order to reside was not personally served upon the plaintiff as required by the statute; secondly, that the sequestration was void because it was made without the plaintiff's having notice to show cause against it; thirdly, that the order to reside and the sequestration were revoked by the decree of suspension; fourthly, that the benefice was not void, because there was no wilful disobedience; the plaintiff did not reside, only because he would have been in danger of his life.

Upon the application of counsel representing the petitioners and respondent in the Salisbury election petition, which has been turned into a special case, Wednesday May 5th was fixed for hearing the arguments. The Manchester petition is to be taken on the same day.

A couple of rules were granted on Wednesday, and the court early took the renewed arguments in the special case, Morris v. Ogden, which came on last Monday, and for a short time were continued on Tuesday. It had been admitted by Mr. Holker, the counsel for the defendant, that the first sequestration was invalid in consequence of the want of any notice to the plaintiff to show cause, before the order of sequestration was made, and therefore the case now turned upon the effect of the subsequent proceedings. The order of suspension was dated the 13th Sept. 1861, and consisted of the following words:—"We hereby suspend him (the plaintiff), accordingly ab officio et a beneficio for the space of three years, to commence from Sunday the 15th Dec. 1861, on which day we direct our said sentence to be published by affixing the same on the principal door of the said church of St. Peter, Ashton-under-Lyne. And we further decree that the said sentence shall remain in force until he, the said Thos. W. Morris shall produce a certificate to our satisfaction, signed by three neighbouring beneficed clergymen of the diocese of Manchester, of his good conduct during the period of suspension, and that such suspension be not taken off until he shall produce such certificate." Subsequently the living was sequestered. The order of suspension was affixed to the church door, but the plaintiff was in ignorance of its terms for about a year after, during which time he was residing at Leeds, out of the diocese. He obtained certificates of good conduct during that time from neighbouring clergy, and as soon as he became aware of the particulars of the order, he went to Manchester, and remained there during the rest of the three years. Upon the conclusion of the period of suspension, he sent to the bishop certificates of good conduct for the time he was at Leeds, and also from beneficed clergy of the diocese of Manchester during the subsequent two years. The bishop, however, declined to accept these certificates, and appointed the defendant to the incumbency, at the same time revoking both the sequestrations which he had ordered. This action was commenced before the termination of three years from the time of the plaintiff's coming to Manchester. The points taken by Mr. Brown, for the plaintiff, were, (1) that the period of suspension had elapsed before the action was brought; (2) that the sequestration was not in force after the revocation; (3) that the sentence of suspension was invalid on the face of it, because it did not show the jurisdiction of the bishop, because it did not show either that the proceedings were public, or that notice had been given to the plaintiff, and because it was uncertain, by reason that it was recited that the plaintiff had been guilty of adultery or fornication. By the Ecclesiastical Law, it was alleged there was a distinction between the two charges. The arguments were concluded at the rising of the court, but judgment was reserved.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

In the case of Spendlove v. The Midland Railway Company, in which a rule was applied for on Tuesday, April 20, to set aside a nonsuit of Mr. Justice Hayes, a point arose somewhat analogous to that raised by the case of Siner v. The Great Western Railway, recently decided in the Court of Exchequer Chamber. The court, however, thought the matter sufficiently doubtful to make it proper that a rule should be granted. The facts were as follows:—The plaintiff was a butcher near Rotherham, and was, when the accident happened, returning from a weekly cattle fair by a special market train. On the way an express train had to pass the slower market train. The latter was shunted on to a siding to let the former go by, but as it did not arrive the market train proceeded again. Near Rawmarsh station the train slackened, and then there was a great deal of whistling, and after a violent jerk, it came to a stop altogether. One of the passengers looked out, and cried out "Good God! we shall all be killed, the train has divided and we are left behind." The latter part of his statement was true, though fortunately the prediction was not true, inasmuch as no one was injured but the plaintiff. All the persons in the carriage that had been thus deserted by the rest of the train hastily descended, and the plaintiff, unfortunately, in the hurry of the moment, slipped in getting down, fell, striking the lower part of his back on the step, and rolled down an embankment, thus sustaining severe injuries to the spine. It appeared that there had been an accident by the express running into this market train some time before, which would be known to the plaintiff, and might cause him to get out with more precipitation. It appeared that the express was not in sight, but it was overdue at the time. The court seemed doubtful whether there was any cause of action; it was admitted that the question was, whether the plaintiff had acted in a reasonably prudent manner by descending as he did, and that that question depended on whether he had sufficient reason for thinking the express near at hand under the circumstances; as before-mentioned, however, they thought enough had been stated to show the case ought to be discussed.

On Thursday the 23rd, a curious point of law arose with relation to the measure of damages in the case of Wright v. Chappell and another. It appeared that the defendants had carried on a business as music and musical instrument sellers, under the firm of Cramer and Co. at Brighton. This business, and the premises where it was carried on, they assigned to the plaintiff, covenanting with him that they would not thereafter carry on the same business within forty miles of Brighton, or do any act whereby the business should be prejudiced either in plaintiff's hands or those of his assigns. Some time after plaintiff assigned the goodwill of his business as carried on by the defendant's former premises and elsewhere, to the firm of Hawkins and Potts. By the articles of agreement between plaintiff and Hawkins and Potts, the former agreed not to carry on the business within fifty miles of Brighton, and also to execute all proper deeds, &c., which might be necessary to carry out the articles. There was no assignment in terms of the benefit of the defendants' covenant to Hawkins and Potts. Subsequently one of the defendants became a shareholder and director in a company which was incorporated to carry on a business which defendants had formerly carried on in London. This company set up a business in Brighton under the style of Cramer and Co. (Limited). The plaintiff thereupon brought an action for breach of covenant against defendants, as was alleged, as a trustee for Hawkins and Potts. The case was tried before the Chief Baron, and a verdict entered for nominal damages with leave to move to increase them to the damages found by the jury, viz., 250*l*. It was now urged by Mr. Prentice, Q.C., Mr. W. G. Harrison, and Mr. Hume Williams, for the defendants, that the plaintiff could only recover nominal damages inasmuch as he had personally sustained no damage at all, and was not, there being no assignment of the covenant, a trustee for Hawkins and Potts. Mr. Grantham, in the absence of Mr. Brown, Q.C., his leader, contended that plaintiff was a trustee for Hawkins and Potts of the covenant, and as such entitled to recover the damages the latter had sustained. He contended that the first deed clearly contemplated the protection of assigns, and the subsequent agreement being for the sale of the goodwill of the business as carried on by the plaintiff included the business of defendants, and the protection under which plaintiff carried it on, and moreover that as the latter agreement stipulated that all necessary deeds should be executed that would entitle Hawkins and Potts in equity to an assignment of the benefit of the covenant, and so equity would make plaintiff a trustee of the damages on the principle that equity considers id factum esse quod fieri debet. Mr. Brown, Q.C., then appearing, proposed to argue further on the same side, but was stopped by Chief Baron Kelly, who stated that although he continued of the same opinion as he was at the trial, his learned brethren Barons Martin and Cleasby differing from him, the decision of the court would be for the plaintiff.

In the case of Isitt v. Beeston the court approved of and followed a Nisi Prius decision of Lord Tenterden, in the case of Cotton v. James, 1 Moo. & Malk. 273. That case cannot exactly be considered a binding authority on the Court in banc, inasmuch as, although those very learned judges, Littledale and Parke, intimated their concurrence with Chief Justice Tenterden, when the case went to the court above it there ultimately turned on another point. For this reason the present decision of the Court of Exchequer is of some importance. The question was this: The 67th section of the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act enacts that a fraudulent gift, delivery, or transfer of his goods by a bankrupt, to defeat or delay his creditors, shall be deemed an act of bankruptcy. In Cotton v. James, Lord Tenterden held that the word "delivery," taken in its collocation with the words "gift" and "transfer," must mean a delivery with intent to pass some title to or interest in the goods delivered. In the present case the goods had been delivered to a store warehouseman early one morning, and the bankrupt then absconded. The assignee brought an action against the warehouseman, who pleaded that he held the goods as a pledge. It appeared that this was so, he having, subsequently to this delivery, advanced money to the bankrupt on the goods. The whole question, therefore, was, whether the delivery was an act of bankruptcy, it being admitted that if it was not the subsequent advance was valid, and the defendant entitled to hold the goods. The court held, that the delivery not being at the time it was made intended to pass any interest, was no act of bankruptcy, and therefore defendant must succeed.

On Saturday, in the case of Mosses v. Dewhurst, various points of interest arose. It appeared that the action was brought against colliery proprietors, under Lord Campbell's Act, to recover damages for the death of a man who was killed on a siding running from the colliery to a railway. The siding belonged to the colliery company, and was not constructed under any statutory powers; it crossed a highway on a level, and appeared to have been so constructed with the consent of the highway authorities. It appeared that on the day in question deceased was riding a horse, and had occasion to cross at the level crossing. At that time a train of coal waggons was being backed at the rate of four miles an hour across the highway. The case for the plaintiff was that the horse was startled by a puff of steam, and, rushing across the rails, was caught by the train. The case on the other side was that the deceased deliberately endeavoured to cross before the train. The jury found in plaintiff's favour. It was contended for defendants that there was no evidence of negligence, and a rule was obtained to set the verdict aside on that ground, and also on the ground that it was against the weight of evidence on the question of contributory negligence. On showing cause it was attempted to be argued that drawing trucks on a tramway crossing the highway on a level was itself illegal and a nuisance in the absence of statutory authority, and that the highway authority could give no authority to do it: (Reg. v. Train, 31 L. J. 169, M. C.) Baron Bramwell expressed strong doubts whether this were so. In Reg. v. Train the tramway was found a nuisance in fact, but why should a string of coal waggons going at the moderate pace of four miles an hour in a colliery district across the highway be more of a nuisance than a string of brewers' drays crossing from premises on one side of a street to another in London, or dung carts crossing from a close on one side of the road to another on the opposite side. This point, however, it was not ultimately necessary to decide, inasmuch as it appeared that by the General Highway Act (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50), s. 71, it is provided that, whenever a railway crosses a highway on a level, the proprietors shall keep gates and persons to watch them. This, it appeared, the defendants had not done, and the court thereupon, thought they could not say there was no evidence of negligence, inasmuch as if there had been gates the horse might have been stopped if running away. They thought, however, the verdict was against evidence with respect to the question of contributory negligence, and that there must therefore be a new trial.

In the case of Dixon and others v. Wrench, the plaintiffs had obtained a judgment against the defendant for 281*l*. odd in Dec. 1867, and on the 10th March 1868, an application was made at chambers, on summons, to Mr. Justice Willes for an order charging a number of preference shares in the Stockton and Darlington Railway standing in the name of Matilda Wrench (deceased), and also for an order charging a certain sum of stock, amounting to 233*l*. 4*s*. 10*d*. in the Three per Cent. Reduced Annuities, standing in the joint names of G. Hillhouse and Matilda Wrench (deceased), which orders the learned judge made. The defendant, it appeared, was interested in the stock and shares in question, under the will of Matilda Wrench, dated 3rd Feb. 1865, whereby she gave, assigned, and disposed to and in favour of W. Wynne and G. W. Skyring, or the survivor of them as trustees, all and sundry lands and the whole estate and effects of the said testatrix, on trust, in the first place for the payment of debts, funeral and testamentary expenses; secondly, for the payment of certain specific legacies; and, with regard to the residue and remainder of her estate and effects, upon trust to pay, assign, and dispose of the same equally between the defendant and two other persons when they should attain the age of 21 years respectively. And by the said will the trustees were directed to pay or invest as thereinbefore directed the legacies thereby bequeathed so soon after the decease of the said testatrix as her estate could be judiciously converted into cash; and, in any event, that that should be done not later than twelve months after her death. The testatrix died on the 1st Oct. 1866, being at that date absolutely entitled to the shares and stock in question. Wrench, the defendant mortgaged his share and interest therein to one Banks; and on the 10th April 1867 Wrench and Banks filed a bill in equity against the surviving trustee of Matilda Wrench's will for the administration of her estate; and a decree in the suit directing the usual inquiries to be made, and that the personal estate not specifically bequeathed should be applied in payment of debts and funeral expenses in due course of administration, was made on the 27th July following. Subsequently the plaintiffs recovered the above-mentioned judgment in this action and obtained the above orders, by which the course of administration was impeded and the trustee was rendered unable to deal with the stock and shares in question. Thereupon an order was made by Vice-Chancellor Malins directing an application to be made to the Court of Exchequer, in pursuance of which a rule was obtained by Mr. Day in Michaelmas Term last to set aside the above-mentioned charging orders of Mr. Justice Willes, and it was argued in Hilary Term last by Mr. MacIntyre, who showed cause against it for the plaintiffs, and Mr. Day who supported it for the defendants. The court, however, after having looked into the will of Matilda Wrench, desired to have the case argued again, and accordingly it now came on for a second argument. Mr. MacIntyre for the plaintiffs showing cause and contending that the defendant had a sufficient interest to justify the making of the orders and the court in confirming them. The case of Cragg v. Taylor (15 L. T. Rep. N. S. 584; 36 L. J. 63, Ex.; L. Rep. 2 Ex. 131), was at one with the present case, and an authority for the plaintiffs. The defendant's interest here, though contingent and remote was attachable under the statute. Mr. Day for the defendant supported his rule, and distinguished the case from that of Cragg v. Taylor. In that case the defendant had an interest though contingent in the property itself, but here he had no interest in the specific property. The court (Chief Baron Kelly, and Barons Bramwell and Cleasby) were of opinion that the present case was quite distinguishable from the case cited on the ground mentioned by Mr. Day, and that the stock and shares in question were not an "interest which was chargeable under either 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 14, or 3 & 4 Vict. c. 82, s. 1, and they therefore made the defendant's rule absolute.

In Baker v. Astley, a nice question as to the authority of a wife to bind her husband arose under the following circumstances:—The defendant and his wife had been tenants of a house or lodgings at Brighton, at a rent of 10 guineas a week. The husband left, and the wife continued on in possession. Being pressed by the landlord for the rent, she wrote to the plaintiff, a house agent, the following letter: "Mr. Baker,—I hope you understand I have a private fortune of my own, nothing to do with Mr. Astley. I promise to pay you the rent if you will advance it to Mr. D. (the landlord). "I can pay you in July, if you will settle with Mr. D. Can you do this for me? I know I can rely on you to relieve me and help me." (Signed) "Mrs. Astley." Thereupon the plaintiff paid some 70l. odd. The husband (the defendant) had previously to such payment been made a bankrupt. The plaintiff sued the husband to recover the amount so paid, and as evidence of a confirmation by him of the wife's letter, he proved that he subsequently met the defendant, who said, "I am very sorry I have not been able to pay you, but I have not yet had the money to do so." At the trial before Baron Pigott, at Guildhall, in February last, the plaintiff had a verdict, and now, Mr. Archibald, for the defendant, moved pursuant to leave reserved for a rule to enter the verdict for the defendant, or to reduce the verdict by the sum of 10 guineas (being for the week during which the wife occupied the house after her husband had left), on the ground that the act of the wife did not bind her husband; and the court, (Chief Baron Kelly, and Barons Bramwell, Pigott, and Cleasby), granted a rule to show cause.

In Pullen v. Williams a rule was applied for by Mr. Gibbons on the part of the plaintiff to set aside the verdict found for the defendant at the trial, and to enter it for the plaintiff for an agreed sum of four guineas. It was an action of replevin, and the question was as to the defendant's right to distrain. The plaintiff had entered into possession of the premises under an agreement which it was conceded and admitted by both parties in itself gave no right of distress, and so it became necessary to give evidence of a tenancy. By the agreement a lease for twenty-one years from Christmas 1867, was to be prepared; the rent was to be 100l. a year, commencing on the 25th March 1868, and was to contain the usual covenants. Nothing was said in the agreement as to when the rent was to be paid. The plaintiff went in under that agreement, and after occupying for half a year was called on to pay rent, whereupon he wrote a letter to the following effect: "Under the copy of the agreement which I hold, the rent is payable yearly, and so no rent would accrue till 25th next March, on which day I will take care a cheque is sent for the amount." In November a distress was put in for the half year's rent to Michaelmas, and the above letter was relied on as evidence of a new agreement, under which the defendant was entitled to distrain. Mr. Gibbons, in moving for the above rule, cited the case of Regan v. Porter, in 7 Bing. 451, and contended it was clear that it could only be by treating the letter as evidence of a new agreement that there was any right to distrain in the present instance, but the letter was not, he contended, either a new agreement or anything from which such a new agreement could be implied—it was a proposal merely to pay rent which was not accepted by the other side. It was not agreed to, but if it were, on if it were evidence of anything but a proposal, it was to pay rent on the 25th March 1869, and there was no right to distrain till that period arrived. The court (Chief Baron Kelly, and Barons Bramwell and Cleasby) were of opinion that the effect of the plaintiff's letter was an admission by him that he was tenant from year to year, at a rent payable according to the provisions of the lease which was thereafter to be executed, and they accordingly refused to grant a rule.

ESTATE AND INVESTMENT JOURNAL.

STOCK AND SHARE MARKET.

THERE has been a slight advance in all securities with an improving tendency; and the continued rise in the Paris Bourse indicates that confidence is felt in the maintenance of tranquillity on the Continent. Ugly rumours from America sent prices back last week; but more recent reports much modify them, and confidence has returned.

The following are the fluctuations of the week:

ENGLISH FUNDS.	Fri.	Sat.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thu.
Bank of England Stock	239	241	...	241	241	241
3 7/8 Cent. Red. Ann. ...	91	91	91	91	92	92
3 7/8 Cent. Cons. Ann. ...	93	93	93	93	92	93
New 2 1/2 Cent. Ann.
Do. do. Jan. 1894.
New 3 7/8 Cent. Ann. ...	91	91	92	92	92	92
5 7/8 Cent. Annuities
5 7/8 Cent. Jan. 1873.
Ann. 30 years exp.
April 5, 1885
Do. exp. Jan. 5, 1880
Do. exp. July 1880	...	114	114
Rad Sea Tele. Ann. 1908	20	...
Consols, for Acc.	93	93	93	...
India 5 7/8 Cent. for Acc.
Do. 5 7/8 Cents. July 1880	114	115	114	...
India Stock, July 1880
India Stock, 1874	212	210	211	...
India 5 7/8 Cent.
India 4 7/8 Cents. 1888	100	100	100	100
India 5 7/8 Cent. 1870
India Bonds (1000l.)	106	136	136	148	...	144
Do. (under 1000l.)	124
Ex. Bills, 1000l.	84
Do. 500l.
Do. 100l. and 200l.
3 7/8 Cent.

a 2 1/2 and 2 3/4 per cent., 3s.	c 2 1/2 and 2 3/4 per cent., 7s.
premium.	premium.
b Premium.	d 2 1/2 and 2 3/4 per cent., 2s.
	premium.

PUBLIC COMPANIES.

RAILWAY COMPANIES.

Cape.—A dividend at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum.
Carlisle and Silloth Bay.—A dividend at the rate of 1 1/2 per cent. per annum on the preference shares.
South Australian, Lombard-Venetian, and Central Italian.—A dividend of 33 francs has been decided upon for the year 1868; 20 francs were paid in November.
West Flanders.—A dividend of 5s. 6d. per share.

BANKS.

Chartered of India, Australia, and China.—A dividend at 6 per cent. per annum.
Oriental.—A dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum declared.
Standard of British South Africa.—A dividend for the half-year of 10s. per share on the shares with 25l. paid, and of 4s. per share on the shares with 10l. paid.

FINANCE, CREDIT, AND DISCOUNT COMPANY.

Australian Mortgage, Land, and Finance.—A dividend at the rate of 10 per cent.

ASSURANCE COMPANY.

At the annual general meeting of the London and Provincial Law Assurance Society, held on Saturday the 17th ult., the report of the directors was read. It stated that the new policies issued were 220 in number, assuring 306,625l., and producing in new premiums the sum of 10,067l. 19s. 9d. The total premiums received in the year were 77,237l. 9s. 6d., and the income from all sources amounted to 97,937l. 12s. 1d. The charges of management 3478l. 12s. 7d., have, notwithstanding the increased business, scarcely exceeded those of 1867. The assets of the society amounted to 405,183l. 14s. 9d., and the average rate of interest at which they were invested, on the 31st Dec., was 4 1/4 per cent. This calculation excludes the sum which represents the value of the society's house, but estimates the amount invested in the purchase of reversions as producing 5 per cent. The increase in the assets during the year exceeded 50,000l., being more than half the total income. Adding to the above sum the amount of premiums which were actually due at the closing of the account, and which were paid before the expiration of the usual days of grace, viz., 5426l. 3s. 8d., the assets exceeded half a million sterling. The exact figures being 500,600l. 18s. 5d.

MISCELLANEOUS COMPANIES.

Bahia Gas.—A dividend at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum.
City of Moscow Gas (Limited).—Creditors' claims must be forwarded to the liquidators by the 1st June.
Clarence Hotel of Dover (Limited).—Mr. F. B. Smart is appointed official liquidator.
Rio de Janeiro Gas.—A dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum declared.
Seaford Pier.—Mr. Arthur Cooper, of Cooper Brothers, official liquidator.
Singapore Gas.—A dividend at the rate of 7 1/2 per cent. per annum.

MINING COMPANIES.

Great Bethos Llanthwit Colliery (Limited).—Capital 60,000l. in 5l. shares. The company is to work coal deposits near Bridgend, Glamorganshire.
Great North Rock Lead Mining (Limited).—Capital 75,000l. in 5l. shares. Object: to acquire and develop the Clegir Mawr mine in North Wales. The lease has about thirty-four years to run, and the property is satisfactorily reported on.

Orinoco Gold Mining (Limited).—Capital 150,000l. in 2l. shares. The object is to work gold fields in Venezuela, and the purchase price of the concession is in paid-up shares, upon which the dividend is deferred, until 10 per cent. has been annually paid to the other proprietors.

Port Philip and Colonial.—A distribution of 1s. per share has been declared on account.

REPORTS OF SALES.

(NOTE.—The reports of the Estate Exchange are officially supplied in the following list. Auctioneers whose names are registered there will oblige by reports of their own sales.)

Friday, April 23.

By Messrs. E. and H. LYNLEY, at the Guildhall Coffee House.
Leasehold premises known as the Battersea Soap Works, Battersea, together with plant, &c., term 80 years from 1865, at 80l. per annum—sold for 500l.
Leasehold premises, No. 121, Regent-street, term 54 years unexpired, at 247l. 15s. 3d. per annum—sold for 142,000l.

Monday, April 26.

By Mr. WHITTINGHAM, at the Mart.
Freehold building land, situate at Hadley, Middlesex, lot 20—sold for 100l.
Freehold residence, situate in Summerhill-road, West-green, Tottenham—sold for 380l.
Freehold residence, situate as above—sold for 390l.

Tuesday, April 27.

By Messrs. DEBENHAM, TEWSON, and FARMER, at the Mart.
Freehold estate, known as Leigh Marsh, Essex, comprising about 318a. 6r. 17p. of grassland; also some oyster beds, cottage, &c.—sold for 5700l.
Freehold, 2r. 10p. of land, situate at Bromley, Kent—sold for 280l.
Freehold, 2r. 10p. of land, situate at Bromley, Kent—sold for 280l.
Freehold, 2a. 1r. 18p. of land, situate in the Staines-road, Ashford, Middlesex—sold for 670l.

By Messrs. BROAD, PRITCHARD, and WILTSHIRE.
Leasehold, two residences, Nos. 17 and 19, Mayland-road, New-road, Hammersmith, term 80 years from 1864, at 6l. each per annum—sold for 700l.
Leasehold, house and shop, No. 2, Great Earl-street, Seven Dials, annual value 25l. per annum, term 1939 years from 1794, at 3l. per annum—sold for 255l.
Leasehold house, No. 4, Great Earl-street, term and ground-rent similar to above—sold for 400l.

By Messrs. E. FOX and BOTFIELD, at the Mart.
Copyhold residence with stable and gardens, situate at Finchley-common, and known as Colbrook-villa, also a freehold orchard and paddock fronting the main road—sold for 1200l.
Leasehold cottage and villa with stable, situate as above and known Holly-cottage, let on lease at 42l. per annum, term 96 years unexpired, at 21l. 10s. per annum—sold for 260l.
Copyhold five residences, Nos. 1 to 5, Lonsdale-cottages, Finchley—sold for 815l.
Leasehold house and shop, with stable, No. 120, Edgeware-road, let on lease at 120l. per annum, term 64 years unexpired, at 8l. 2s. per annum—sold for 2120l.
Leasehold improved ground-rent of 5l. per annum (for 37 years, arising from 40 and 41, Nightingale-street, Lisson Grove)—sold for 36l.

LEGISLATION AND JURISPRUDENCE.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

COUNTY TREASURERS.

Mr. ROUNDEL asked the Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department when the abstract of accounts of county treasurers for the past year would be laid upon the table of the House.—Mr. KNATCHBULL-HUGHESSEN said there had been some delay in certain counties forwarding their accounts; but all the counties had now sent them with the exception of Anglesea, and he hoped the abstract would be laid on the table on an early day.

BANKRUPTCY BILL.

The House went into committee on this Bill, when certain amendments were inserted, and the Chairman was ordered to report it, and the House resumed.

IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT BILL.

This Bill passed through committee with amendments.

GRAVESEND COUNTY COURT.

Sir C. WINGFIELD asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when it was intended to commence the construction of the county court-house at Gravesend, as the site for this building was purchased two years ago.—Mr. AYRTON said a sum was placed in the estimates of the present year for this building, and if it were voted by the House the building would be commenced at once.

EVIDENCE AMENDMENT BILL.

Mr. DENMAN, in moving the second reading of this Bill, admitted that, in the course of the last twenty years, the Legislature had done much to remove anomalies in the law of evidence; but he nevertheless contended that the law, even as now improved, was still mischievous, irrational, and absurd. Much testimony was still excluded which might in every case be fairly admitted, and taken for what it was worth. For instance, in suits or proceedings instituted on account of adultery, the husband and wife are excluded from giving evidence; but, since the establishment of the Divorce Court, cases have arisen in which, because of the form of the suit, the husband or wife, as it may be, is allowed to give evidence of the adultery. So anomalous a state of things ought not to be allowed to continue. The present Judge Ordinary, Lord Penzance, repeatedly expressed himself to that effect, and the Bill, as drawn, under which the parties to the marriage made admissible as witnesses in all suits in the court had met with his Lordship's approval. Again, in actions for breach of promise the parties are excluded, while in an action for seduction, and in cases of affiliation, the woman is competent to enter the witness-box and give evidence. He therefore proposed to make the parties in actions for breach of promise admissible as witnesses, and in criminal cases to allow husband and wife to give evidence for or against each other, but not to be compelled to disclose the communications which may pass between them during the marriage. That was the first object of the Bill; its second would probably encounter more serious objection. At present, before witnesses could be examined they had to take an oath or make an affirmation under certain terms; but there were many cases in which persons could not say that it was contrary to their religious belief to take an oath, and who yet had a conscientious objection to it; and there were others who did not believe in the doctrine of future reward and punishment. In both these cases the evidence of such witnesses was excluded; and thus it happened that the conscientious and honest man was distrusted, while the dishonest man, who was troubled with no scruple, was allowed to enter the witness-box and be examined in the case. As to the second class of witnesses, a singular instance had fallen within his own professional experience. It was his duty, some years ago, to prosecute a soldier at Maidstone for the barbarous murder of two young girls, of the ages of sixteen and eighteen. They were found weltering in their blood by a baker, who came up immediately after the murder, and saw the murderer walking away from the spot. He was therefore the best witness to identify. He was accordingly called, for the purpose; but when questioned as to his religious belief, he at once admitted that he did not believe in future reward and punishment, and his evidence, though he was in every way a respectable man, was, in consequence, excluded. The bill, therefore, proposed to make all testimony admissible without the sanction of an oath or affirmation, and to allow the judge or jury, as the case may be, to decide on its trustworthiness. He did not want to abolish oaths by the Bill. His object was to put an end to inquiries as to the religious belief of witnesses, and that when parties objected to taking an oath a form of affirmation should be presented to them, to which he would attach the penalty of perjury. He should reserve any further observations until he heard the arguments that were to be urged against the Bill.—MR. S. HILL, in moving that the Bill be read the second time that day six months, observed that his objections to the Bill referred principally to those clauses which released witnesses from the responsibility of swearing under the high and solemn sanction of an oath. He also objected to the Bill because it seemed to him not to be the right way of dealing with the subject. In his opinion there was only one way of doing so, and that was by embodying in one measure all the statutory enactments relating to oaths and the law of evidence. If the House was prepared to change the law so as to allow prisoners to be examined as witnesses, he thought there should be a fuller inquiry before so important a step was taken. There was a wide distinction between admitting as witnesses the respondent and co-respondent in divorce cases and examining parties in civil cases; and, if this were so, what was the use of making parties to the suit compellable to give evidence? The ground for doing so was to elicit the truth; but he thought it would tend to degrade the law of evidence, and render the testimony of witnesses less weighty and reliable. The hon. and learned gentleman having touched upon some of the clauses which appeared to him to be most objectionable, concluded by moving the rejection of the Bill.—MR. WHEELHOUSE thought it most undesirable that persons, if competent as witnesses, should be compellable to give evidence.—THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL said there had been a time when parties supposed to be interested in a case were debarred from giving evidence, but they did away with that when the late Lord Denman introduced an Act admitting interested parties as witnesses. He thought they might go further, and leave to the judge and jury to sift the truth of the evidence by cross-examination, instead of making the law declare such evidence to be inadmissible. (Hear, hear.) Upon the whole, then, he was in favour of the principle of the Bill, and he owned it did not appear to him that the hon. and learned gentleman opposite showed sufficient reasons for opposing the second reading.—MR. LOPES felt bound to give his cordial support to the Bill of the hon. and learned member for Tiverton, and thought it would form a most valuable addition to the Act of 1851.—MR. SERJEANT DOWSE supported the Bill, and related some of his forensic experience in order to show the great importance of the change which it proposed to make in the law of evidence. Many cases which now baffled judges and juries might be settled in a few minutes by allowing the parties themselves to be examined as witnesses.—MR. V. HARCOURT said that all the arguments used in favour of the Bill went to the full extent of examining and cross-examining a prisoner on his trial. Persons accused of adultery have been exempted from giving evidence, because it is thought that a case of this kind has a closer analogy to a criminal than to a civil proceeding. It is, no doubt, a matter for grave consideration whether a prisoner shall not be allowed to give evidence; but that is not the question now, and whenever any legislation takes place with respect to it, it will require most careful and deliberate consideration.—MR. AMPHLETT was in favour of this Bill, although he admitted that, if it passed, it would be necessary to go much further. For his own part, he could see no reason why a prisoner should not be allowed to give evidence on his own behalf. It is said that a guilty man may commit perjury in order to save himself; but he did not think we ought for this reason to deprive an innocent man of the advantage of giving evidence which may lead to his acquittal.—MR. DENMAN having briefly replied.—The amendment was negatived, and the Bill was read a second time.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

RESTITUTION SUIT—PROCEEDINGS IN FORMER SUIT—PLEADING.—In a wife's petition for restitution of conjugal rights the husband's answer alleged all the circumstances, and the evidence in a former suit for judicial separation, on the ground of his wife's cruelty. It also alleged that the husband allowed his wife 200*l.* a year to live separately from him, and it set out at great length a series of subsequent acts tending to show his wife's insanity. The court on motion to reform the answer, directed all the particulars of the cruelty and the former suit to be struck out, and the fact of the suit simply to be pleaded. It also struck out the allegation of the allowance; and, as to the insanity, directed that only such facts should be pleaded as tended to show that it was unsafe for the husband to live with his wife: (Radford v. Radford, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 279. Div. & M.)

DISSOLUTION SUIT—CRUELTY AND ADULTERY—CONDONATION—PERMISSION TO CALL FRESH EVIDENCE REFUSED.—In a wife's suit for dissolution, the evidence of cruelty was limited to two or three isolated acts of violence very slight in their character, which had been condoned by a cohabitation of nearly a year after the acts alleged. The evidence of the adultery charged with a servant girl, was that the husband had been seen to kiss her once, and that a neighbour had heard noises at night in the servant's room. On the other side a witness who had lived in the same house some time stated that the respondent and the servant always slept in their own rooms. The court held the adultery to be not proved, and the cruelty, therefore, to be condoned. The court refused to hear further evidence offered at the close of the case of cruelty subsequent to the latest act alleged in the petition, and which the petitioner in her evidence had sworn to be the last committed: (Topper v. Topper, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 279. Div. & M.)

HEARING IN CAMERA.—The power of the court to hear cases in camera being derived from the Ecclesiastical Courts through the 22nd section of the Divorce Act, does not apply to the dissolution of marriage. The court, therefore, ordered a wife's petition for dissolution on the ground of her husband's sodomy, to be heard in open court, though parties were willing that it should be heard in private: (C. v. C., 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 280. Div. & M.)

ALIMONY WIFE'S INCOME.—In allotting a permanent alimony in cases of judicial separation the court is bound to follow the principles of the ecclesiastical courts: (Haigh v. Haigh, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 281. Div. & M.)

LIABILITY OF SOLICITORS—SOLICITORS ACTING AS TRUSTEES.—Lord D. wishing in the year 1864 to have professional advice and assistance in arranging with various creditors as against his father's estate, to whom he was sole executor, and also with reference to his own affairs, was introduced to a firm of solicitors (A. B. and C.) to carry out various special arrangements, and the general settlement of his affairs. B. was the partner to whom the more active part in the business was allotted. Lord D. was recommended by them to execute certain trust-deeds with a view of facilitating these arrangements, of which A. and B. were the trustees. These deeds contained the usual powers of attorney. On Lord D. leaving this country for the Brazils in 1865, he executed a very full power of attorney, appointing Lady D. and B. his attorneys to receive moneys, settle accounts, and do all necessary acts during his absence. He remitted from the Brazils a bill for 5000*l.* odd payable to the joint order of Lady D. and B. Lady D. indorsed this bill to B., who received the proceeds. B. subsequently absconded from this country, having misappropriated a considerable portion of the plaintiff's moneys. The firm had charged in their general bill of costs for all the transactions and business done for the plaintiff, either as trustees under the deed of trust, or for negotiating the bill for 5000*l.*, and for all the attendances, &c. &c. of their partner B. On bill filed by Lord D. for discovery, and an account seeking to make all three partners in the firm liable for the moneys due to him: Held, that all the three partners were equally liable to account for the general moneys received by them, or either of them, and the usual accounts against them directed. A separate account directed as to those transactions in which the two partners were the trustees of the deed: (Dundonald v. Masterman and others, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 271. V. C. J.)

INTESTACY—GRANT AD COLLIGENDA BONA TO A CREDITOR.—The estate of an intestate consisted chiefly of a number of small debts. It was important that they should be collected at once, and that the deceased's business should be carried on without interruption. The next of kin resident in this country renounced administration, and the court made a grant ad colligenda to a creditor, but ordered the next of kin abroad to be cited, and the debts collected to be paid into the registry: (In the goods of Stewart 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 279. Prob.)

PORTSMOUTH COUNTY COURT.

Tuesday, April 27.
(Before C. J. GALE, Esq., Judge.)
COUSINS v. WHEELER.
Action by a solicitor.

Wallis appeared for the plaintiff.
Field for the defendant.

From the plaintiff's statement it appeared that the account was for law costs and payments, the chief portion of which related to the conveyance to the defendant of some property at Brighton. The reasonableness of the charges was not disputed. The defence was, that Mr. Wheeler had, in March last, executed a deed of composition for the benefit of his creditors, which had been assented to by the necessary proportion of such creditors.

Field produced the deed and the protection under the Bankruptcy Act in support of the defence. Wallis said that Mr. Cousins would have accepted the composition with the other creditors, had he not considered that Mr. Wheeler had acted fraudulently towards him. He therefore declined to be bound by Mr. Wheeler's arrangement with his other creditors. He quoted the case of Bramble v. Moss, L. Rep. 3 C. P. 458; 18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 241, to show that the affidavit and accounts filed, with the deed or office copies of them, and the Gazette and other particulars must be produced. He also contended that by the Bankruptcy Amendment Act 1868, the defendant's attorney should have produced the list and statement required to be filed, or office copies, and the original assents of the creditors and their proofs, or office copies, with the local daily paper containing the advertisement required by the General Orders to be inserted in it. He also made several other objections.

His Honour ruled that Mr. Wallis's objections were fatal, and said that Mr. Field could appeal against his decision if he pleased.

Judgment for the plaintiff, with costs on the higher scale, to be paid in a week.

Field applied for stay of execution to give time to appeal, but his Honour refused the application.

ADMISSION OF SOLICITORS.

Easter Term 1869.

The Master of the Rolls has appointed Saturday, the 8th May 1869, at the Rolls Court, Chancery-lane, at half-past two o'clock in the afternoon, for swearing-in solicitors.

Every person desirous of being sworn in on the above day must leave his common law admission, or his certificate of practice for the current year, at the secretary's office, Rolls-yard, Chancery-lane, on or before Friday, the 7th May 1869.

N.B. The papers of those gentlemen who cannot be admitted at common law till the last day of term, will be received at the secretary's office up to twelve o'clock at noon on that day, after which time no papers can be received.

HEIR-AT-LAW AND NEXT OF KIN.

ECKFORD (Robert), Jersey. heir-at-law to come in by Nov. 4. Dec. 3; V.C.J., at twelve.

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY. LAST DAY OF PROOF.

BATTYE (George), Brown-hill, Cartworth, Kirkburton. May 19; W. Armistage, solicitor, Holmfirth. May 31; V.C.S., at one.
BIRCH (George), Halses Owen, Worcester. May 12; J. Smallwood, solicitor, Birmingham. May 25; V.C.M., at twelve.
BIRDSEY (William), Goodge-street, Tottenham-court-road. May 31; Morten and Meadows, solicitors, 2, Bond-court, Wall oak; June 7; V.C.S., at twelve.
BOWMAN (Joseph), Micklethorp-street. May 13; Van Sandan and Co., solicitors, 13, King-street, Cheapside. May 24; V.C.S., at one.
BRIDGE (A.C.), Middle Temple, London. May 28; Messrs. Paterson, Snow, and Co., solicitors, 40, Chancery-lane. June 11; V.C.S., at twelve.
BROCAS (Bernard), Beauparc, Hants. May 21; Messrs. Brandon, solicitors, 15, Essex-street, Strand. May 28; M.R., at eleven.
CAPPIER (Chas.), Upton, Westham, Essex. June 16; F.H. Taylor, solicitor, 159, Fenchurch-street, E.C. July 9; V.C.J., at one.
DOVETON (V.), 5, Sussex-square, Hyde-park. May 24; H.S. Russell, solicitor, 1 and 2, Mitre-court-chambers, Temple. May 31; M.R., at eleven.
FREEMAN (Edith), Long Buckley, Northampton. May 22; C. Britten, solicitor, Northampton. June 3; V.C.M., at twelve.
HANDLEY (Samson), Cotton Mills, Stafford. May 19; C. Adderley, solicitor, Longton. June 3; M.R., at eleven.
LITTLE (W.J.), Anderton-house, Maker, Cornwall. May 19; Sole, Turner, and Co., solicitors, 68, Aldermanbury. May 27; V.C.M., at twelve.
MINNELL (Edward), Wolferton, Norfolk. May 24; J. Nurse, solicitor, Lynn. June 4; V.C.J., at twelve.
PERRIN (John), 85, Strand. May 19; J.B.C. Huxham, solicitor, 4, Hare-court, Temple. May 27; V.C.M., at twelve.
SPICKETT (William), 127, Stow-hill, Newport Mon. May 20; R. J. Cathcart, solicitor, Newport. June 3; M.R., at eleven.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. C. 35.

Last day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.

ATTWOOD (Edward M.), South-square, Gray's-inn. May 15; C. Wilkin, solicitor, 10, Tokenhouse-yard.
BAX (Henry B.), Charlton, Kent. June 24; Comyns and Berkeley, solicitors, 6, South-square, Gray's-inn.
BELL (Chas. M. P.), Terrace-house, Richmond, Surrey. May 31; W. and H. P. Sharp, solicitors, 92, Gresham-house, Old Broad-street.
BILLING (J.C.), Devonport. May 15; Gresh and Gill, solicitor, 3, St. Aubyn-street, Devonport.
BOOTH (George), Gorton, Lancaster. June 1; Messrs. Potter and Knight, solicitors, 88, Morley-street, Manchester.
BRISTY (Wm.), Marston, Bedford. May 1; W. Browne, solicitor, Bank-chambers, Nottingham.
COLE (Thos. H.), The Green, Wick and Abson, Gloucester. July 1; Gill and Bush, solicitors, 3, Miles-buildings, Bath.
EDWARDS (William), Calthorpe-street, Edgbaston, Warwick. May 29; Alcock and Millward, solicitors, 5, Union-street, Birmingham.
EDWARDS (Geo. N.), 29, Finsbury-square. June 15; Brooks and Co., solicitors, 7, Goddard-street, Doctors'-commons.
FORTESCUE (Hon. and Rev. John), Poltimore, Devon. June 19; H. and B. J. Ford, solicitors, 23, Southernhay, Exeter.
GREEN (Elizabeth), North-crescent, Hertford. June 24; E. R. Spence, solicitor, Hertford.
HARE (William O.), 28, Berkeley-square, Bristol. June 1; J. D. Wadham, solicitor, 3, Small-street, Bristol.
HARDING (J.C.), Priory, Compton Gifford, Devon. June 1; Bultee and Rowe, solicitors, 16, Lookyer-street, Plymouth.
HARVEY (Mrs. Charlotte), 2, Vase-villa, Hereford. June 1; Humphreys and son, solicitors, Hereford.
HYATT (Charles J.), East-street, Chichester. May 31; J. Richardson, solicitor, 15, George-street, Mansion House.
JONES (Chas. W.), York-town, Frimley, Ash, Surrey. June 30; Cook and Holmes, solicitors, Wokingham.
KINDRED (Frances), 56, Clyn-ton-road, Mile End-road. June 1; Young and Sons, solicitors, 29, Mark-lane.
LEWIS (Thomas), Sutton St. Nicholas, Hereford. June 1; Humphreys and Son, solicitors, Hereford.
LUDLAM (Jeffery), 16, Sussex-place, Regent's-park. June 1; J. Parkin and Paden, solicitors, 5, New-inn.
MARCHANT (John, jun.), Hertford, solicitor. Aug. 15; Spence and Hawkes, solicitors, Hertford.
MORDAN (Francis), Albion-lodge, Holloway, and 326, City-road. June 14; Jno. Mills, solicitor, 2, Brunswick-place, City-road.
OSBORN (Samuel), 19, Manor-terrace Brixton. June 14; Ellis and Crossfield, solicitors, 16, Mark-lane.
PACKHAM (Ann), 18, Duke-street, Brighton. June 1; Chas. Lamb, solicitor, Ship-street, Brighton.
REDHEAD (Lawrence), 70, Lower Thames-street. June 1; Young, Jones, Roberts, and Co., solicitors, 2, St. Mildred's-court, Poultry.
RIMMER (Elizabeth), Wallgate, Wigan. July 24; E. T. Whitaker, solicitor, Duchy of Lancaster office, London.
SAUNDERS (Mrs. Sarah), 31, Great Coram-street, Russell-square. June 30; Messrs. Borgoyne, Milnes, and Co., solicitors, 160, Oxford-street.
SCARLETT (John), Tuxford, Nottingham. June 7; H. M. Burt, solicitor, Charlton-on-Trent, Newark.
STEWELL (Francis H.), Barmoor Castle, Northumberland. July 1; Nicholson and Herbert, solicitors, 23, Spring-gardens.
SMITH (Joseph), Fence House, Darton, near Barnsley, York. June 24; S. Simpson, solicitor, 33, South King-street, Manchester.
SWINFORD (J.S.), Nash-court, Margate. May 22; Kingsford and Dorman, solicitors, 23, Essex-street, Strand.
VIGERS (John), Pries, Salop. June 28; H. M. Barker, solicitor, Wem, Salop.
VINE (Frederick), Silver-hill, St. Leonard's-on-Sea, Sussex. June 24; G. Meadows, solicitor, Hastings.
WALLER (Henry E.), Farlington Lodge, Gloucester. June 24; Messrs. Coverdale, Lee, and Co., solicitors, 4, Bedford-row.
WOOD (Robert), 132, New Bond-street. June 1; F. Taylor, solicitor, 19, Old Burlington-street.
YOUNG (Henry), Moira-house, Addiscombe, Sussex. June 14; W. B. Young, solicitor, Bank-buildings, Hastings.

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDENDS IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

[Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each, in three months, unless other claimants sooner appear.]

ELLIS (William), Minorities, auctioneer. Dividend on 250l. Reduced 3 per Cents. Claimants, Jno. C. Walton and Robert Ellis.

LUCAS (Rudd), Long Ashton, Somerset. Dividend on 712l. 9s. 2d. Reduced 3 per Cent. Annuities. Claimants, Harriette Lucas.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland has been appointed a member of the Scotch Law Courts Commission.

ADMISSION OF ATTORNEYS.—The number of original applications to be admitted as attorneys during the present term is 99, in addition to many renewed applications.

Mr. Adam Thom, the prosecutor of Overend, Gurney, and Co., announces that he will personally conduct the prosecution at the approaching trial. Against the leaders said to be retained on the other side of all the branches of the Bar, Mr. Thom says he confidently pits his case in all the simplicity of its undeniable strength; while the technical question of guilt or innocence, avowedly the only matter at issue, he calmly leaves to the judicial representatives of God and the country. In the meantime, as Mr. Thom will have all the trouble, he invites the public to pay the costs.

THE CASE OF MADAME RACHEL.—The writ of error obtained in the case of Reg. v. Sarah Rachel Leveson, to reverse the judgment of five years' penal servitude, is to be argued in the Court of Queen's Bench to-day. Mr. Mellish, Q.C., and Mr. Gibbon will appear for the defendant; the Attorney-General, Solicitor-General, and Mr. Poland will represent the Crown. The Act under which bail was given is the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 68, and it provides in all cases where judgment is affirmed that the time during which a defendant is at large should not be reckoned. The error assigned is whether the court pronouncing judgment was properly constituted.

BOWNESS—RETIREMENT OF MR. J. H. TAYLOR.—The public, throughout the large district in and around Windermere, over which his extensive practice extended, will regret to hear that Mr. J. H. Taylor, solicitor, of Bowness, is compelled through ill-health, to retire from the fatigues of business. During the whole of his career, Mr. Taylor has identified himself with the general interests of the beautiful neighbourhood in which he resides, and has been an active promoter of everything for the advancement and improvement of Bowness in particular. To him, more than to any other man, may be attributed the introduction into Bowness of that needful piece of sanitary and improving machinery, the Local Board of Health, whose operation has been productive of so much good to the scene of its application. He is also one of the promoters of the new Windermere Water Works Company. In addition to his private practice, Mr. Taylor officiated as magistrates' clerk of the local and Ambleside Petty Sessions, and he also held a number of important public offices in connection with the administration of justice in all its varied and numerous ramifications. Altogether, he has practised, in Bowness, some twenty-five years; and his retirement, especially the motives which have impelled it, will be regretted by all those whose affairs brought them into connection with him. We cannot but hope, however, that under the influence of repose, the gentleman may long continue to pursue a life of public utility, relieved of the harassing cares incident to close confinement to a naturally trying and fatiguing profession. We may add that Mr. Taylor will be succeeded in his practice and appointments by Mr. John Fisher, late of Masham, who, we understand, was formerly under-sheriff to Admiral Harcourt, for the court of York; having held the office of chairman to a local board, and a board of guardians, besides other public offices. He has contributed largely to topographical and archaeological literature, and is the author of a valuable work on the history and antiquities of Mashamshire.

LIABILITIES OF A SOLICITOR.—A novel and rather serious question, involving a constitutional principle, has been raised in the Court of Common Pleas in connection with the last election petition for Youghal. Mr. Barry, a solicitor, made some strong observations upon the judgment of the Court declaring the election void. The attention of their Lordships was attracted by a report in the Cork Examiner of a speech delivered by Mr. Barry, and he was directed to attend and explain the following passage:—

But while he deplored the loss of Mr. Weguelin, he should complain publicly, through the press of the country, of the manner in which that gentleman had been treated by the hon. judge who tried the case. In doing so he did not speak from himself; he appealed to the judgment of the learned judge, delivered by him at the close of the Youghal election petition. (Mr. Barry then read that part of the decision of Judge O'Brien, as reported by the reporter of the House of Commons, in which the learned judge stated his intention to submit the meaning of the word 'corrupt' to the Court of Common Pleas, and said what he complained of was that the learned judge, having expressed his intention of so reserving the application of the term, yet, in the case subsequently made by him for the consideration of the Court of Common Pleas, decided himself on the meaning of the word, contrary to the intention he had previously expressed.) Was that just, fair, or honest? Did that maintain law in the country? No judge should have done so. Was it not a sad thing to think that, because of the pusillanimity—he could call it nothing else—of that man, they should be deprived of such a man as Christopher Weguelin? All he could say was that, while he deplored his weakness, he still more deplored the Court to which the matter was afterwards referred. He could tell them more. When Mr. Justice Keogh made use of the words, "it was treating made easy," and wanted to laugh them out of court, Mr. Isaac Butt stood up like a man, and reasoned and argued and fought, but all to no use, for the Court had been well trained beforehand.

Mr. Barry attended and read a statement to the effect that he did not admit the accuracy of the report, but at the same time offered an apology for anything which he might have said of an offensive or disrespectful nature. He was then required to make an affidavit setting forth the passages in the report which he repudiated and those which he admitted to be correct. This measure on the part of the Court was regarded by many professional gentlemen as an unconstitutional stretch of authority, which put Mr. Barry in the position of a self-accuser, ignoring the established principle of British justice that no man is bound to criminate himself. Some curiosity was felt as to the course which Mr. Barry would be advised to take. It was thought that possibly he would decline to make any affidavit at all, and so at once bring the question to an issue; but subsequently he filed an affidavit, and the Court allowed the matter to stand over. At another sitting of their Lordships Mr. Barry and his counsel, Messrs. Butt, Q.C., Pallas, Q.C., and Crean, were in attendance, and the court was densely crowded, the point having excited no little interest in "the Hall." By direction of the Chief Justice, Mr. Greene, the officer of the court, read the affidavit which had been filed by Mr. Barry. It was in the following terms:—

I make this affidavit from my desire in every possible way to manifest my respect for this honourable court, and for any order which the court shall be pleased to make. I am advised, and believe, that the speaking of the words read to me by the Right Hon. Judge Keogh from the report in the Cork Examiner newspaper would amount to an offence for which, if established against me, I should be liable to penal consequences. I therefore humbly submit to this honourable court that I ought not to be compelled to answer anything as to that report, or to meet any charge connected with the same until a charge is preferred against me in a specific form, and supported by evidence such as I can meet. For any disrespect to this court, or to any member of it, or to Judge O'Brien, into which I might have been unguardedly betrayed, I should be ready to express the deepest contrition, and humbly to ask the pardon of the court. I am deeply conscious that any such disrespect would be an offence requiring from me the fullest atonement; but I am advised that, consistently with my position as an elector of Youghal, and as an attorney, I ought not now to consent to answer as to matters which are calculated to involve me in penal consequences without any evidence before the court to call on me to answer. I therefore humbly pray that this honourable court may be pleased to dispense with my making any further or other answer in reference to the said matter.

Their Lordships then retired from the Bench, taking with them a copy of the affidavit in order to deliberate upon its contents. After an absence of half an hour they returned, and the Chief Justice informed Mr. Butt that they had made a conditional order, which they would allow Mr. Barry to show cause against on Tuesday. Mr. Justice Morris read the order, which, after reciting the facts, pronounced the affidavit unsatisfactory, and required Mr. Barry, an attorney of this court, to show cause "why he should not be declared guilty of misconduct as an officer of this court, and be suspended from practising in this court for such period of time as the court may think fit." The glove is now thrown down, and an interesting encounter is expected. A recent judgment pronounced by Lord Westbury in the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, affirming an appeal from Nova Scotia in a case where the judges suspended a professional suitor for writing a letter to the Court, is regarded as an authority against the Common Pleas in imposing the penalty of suspension, instead of the ordinary punishment of fine or imprisonment for a contempt of court. There being nothing alleged against the moral character of the attorney which disentitles him to retain his professional status, it is believed that the court have not the power to suspend him. The proceeding has produced some commotion among the attorneys and solicitors, and it is stated that they intend to hold a meeting to consider the case.

BREAKFAST—EPPS'S COCOA—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Epps attained by his homeopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by the Trade only in 4lb. 4lb., and 1lb. tin-lined packets, labelled "JAMES EPPS and Co., Homeopathic Chemists, London."

THE BENCH AND THE BAR.

Mr. Serjeant Barry, Solicitor-General for Ireland, and late M. P. for Dungarvan, has accepted the vacant judgeship of the Landed Estates Court, Ireland.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. Charles Cavendish, which occurred at her residence at Ryde, Isle of Wight, after a lingering illness of several weeks. The deceased lady was the only daughter of the Right Hon. Sir Alexander Cockburn, and was married in June 1863, to Mr. Charles William Cavendish, son of Gen. the Hon. Henry Frederick Compton Cavendish.

TESTIMONIAL TO THE LORD CHANCELLOR.—Lord Hatherley has property connections with the village of Hatherley, near Gloucester. A testimonial fund is being raised, and has already reached the sum of 800*l.*, contributed by 450 subscribers, whose subscriptions varied from sixpence to three guineas, the maximum receivable. The testimonial is to take the form of a portrait of the Lord Chancellor, to be painted by G. Richmond, R.A., and which will be presented with a suitable address to Lady Hatherley.

MAGISTRATE AND PARISH LAWYER.

NORWICH CITY JUSTICES.

Friday, April 16.

(Before the Right Worshipful the MAYOR and other Justices.)

Public-houses Closing Act 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 64, s. 5.)

On an information for keeping open house for the sale or consumption of excisable liquors and beer between the hours of one and four as prohibited by this section:

Held, that the fact of the door being open at half-past one, and several persons found in the house with spirits in glasses before them, was not sufficient proof that the defendant was a licensed victualler, and that he was keeping open his house contrary to the statute.

Charles Andrews, landlord of a public-house called the "Cinque Unique," was summoned for having, on the 9th inst., his house open for the sale or consumption of excisable liquors and beer between one and four o'clock, contrary to the statute.

Linay (managing clerk to Sadd, solicitor), appeared for defendant.

P. C. Pilch stated that on the morning in question, about half-past one, he saw the door of the house open and walked in, and found six men and one woman standing near a counter on which were two glasses with gin in them, one rum and one ale, and on calling the attention of the landlady to the time she replied it was the fault of the customers. Did not see anything sold or consumed.

This was all the evidence offered in support of the information.

Linay submitted that there was no legal evidence before the Bench that the defendant was a licensed victualler; and secondly, that there was no evidence that any spirits or beer had been sold or consumed after one o'clock, which was necessary to constitute the offence charged, and that view was borne out to some extent by the decision in Cates v. South, 1 L. T. Rep. N. S. 365, and other cases.

The BENCH did not consider there was sufficient legal evidence to convict.

Summons dismissed accordingly.

FEMALE CONVICTS.—Orders have been given by the Government that the whole of the women confined in the Parkhurst prison, Isle of Wight, shall be removed to the new convict establishment just finished at Woking. The first batch—100 in number—left the Isle of Wight on Friday.

A motion in the case of Henry Walsh v. E. Meadows Dunne, justice of the peace for the Queen's County, has, from its peculiarity, caused some interest in the Irish Court of Queen's Bench. On the 24th Dec. last Walsh was imprisoned for seven days, "with hard labour," by Mr. Dunne for contempt of court in having "licked" instead of kissing the book when being sworn. He was cautioned, but nevertheless "licked" the book three times. The Lord Chief Justice decided that the magistrate had no power to add hard labour to the sentence. The Legislature did not even confer upon him (the Chief Justice) the power to do so.

THE BETTING WORLD AND THE INTENTIONS OF THE POLICE.—It may, perhaps, be interesting to betting men and others to know the nature of the next move of the police authorities with regard to the "business of betting." An order has been privately issued to prosecute all persons found dealing in "specs" or showing "spec" bills. The detectives are hard at work getting up information, and when they have got the names and addresses of persons who have sinned against the law, the police intend to institute a whole series of prosecutions. None of those concerned in the traffic of spec tickets are to be allowed to escape, and several hundred persons will be prosecuted. The police have resolved to put down the traffic with a strong hand. In about three weeks' time another series of prosecutions will be commenced, and the parties then assailed will be the agents on commission and the owners of betting exchanges. These prosecutions will cause considerable commotion amongst thousands of persons.

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

MORTGAGE—COVENANT RUNNING WITH THE LAND—SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.—S., being possessed of lands conveyed to him subject to a covenant not to carry on any nuisance, except brickmaking, sold two plots of them in 1842 to L., and thereby covenanted to complete certain roads, L. covenanting for himself, his heirs, and assigns, for the subdivision of the plots sold, and the erection thereon only of houses, which were described. In this conveyance S. covenanted to produce the deed of conveyance to himself. S. afterwards conveyed to numerous persons other portions of the lands comprised in the last-mentioned conveyance, notices of the conveyances to whom were indorsed thereon. By a deed dated in Feb. 1846, after reciting that S. had agreed to repurchase from L. the lands sold to him, and that Messrs. L. and R. had agreed to pay the purchase-money on behalf of S., L. conveyed the said lands to L. and R. in fee, upon trusts of an indenture, executed a few days before, by which S. had mortgaged property to L. and R. to secure advances to him, which included the purchase-money which they were to pay to L. These trusts were, for sale of the mortgaged property, to the usual effect. L. and R. foreclosed S., and puisne incumbrancers, and the mortgaged premises were conveyed by them to the plaintiffs in the present suit (which was instituted for the administration of the estate of J. L., for whom they were trustees) by an order in which they were directed to be sold. The appellant became the purchaser of these lots which had been conveyed to L., and reconveyed by him, which were sold under conditions which stated the restrictions in the conveyance to S., and mentioned that other lots were liable to other restrictions, but did not refer to the restrictive covenants as to buildings in the conveyance to L. The appellant, therefore, objected to the title on the ground that those restrictions were in force; but their Lordships held (affirming the decision of the Vice-Chancellor of Lancaster), that, as S. was bound only by the covenants in the conveyance to himself, and those relating to the roads, and might, after his conveyance to L., have dealt with his other property as he thought fit, and agree with L. to put an end to, or vary, the covenants as to building; he had not deprived himself of any rights in these lots by the intermediate sales to other parties; that the restrictive stipulations as to buildings were only between S. and L., and the benefit thereof was not attached to the other property which S. reserved to himself when he sold to L.; that a vendor in the position of S. will not be assumed to have intended to limit his power of dealing with his estate; that there was no distinction between his rights over the lands which he possessed throughout and those which were vested in him by the repurchase from L., and, therefore, that the appellant's objection to the title failed, and the plaintiffs alone could make a good title without the concurrence of other parties: (Keates v. Lyon, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 255. L. J.J.)

LEASE—AGREEMENT—SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.—In three letters B. agreed to take the lease of a house of C. on terms which C. accepted. Afterwards C. refused to grant the lease on those terms, on the ground that there was a verbal understanding that B. should expend 1000*l.* in repairs, and now objected to such a covenant. A decree was made for specific performance. (Dear v. Verity, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 268. V.C. Stuart.)

TWO WILLS—SOLE EXECUTORS.—A testator made a will and codicil in 1856, in both of which he appointed his son W. H. B. and his daughter P. B., his executors. In a subsequent will, executed in 1860, confirming the two preceding papers, he appointed W. H. B. and another daughter, M. J. B., his "sole executors." The court held that the use of the words "sole executors" in the last will implied the revocation of the appointment of executors in the former will, and granted probate of the three papers as together forming the will of the deceased, to W. H. B. and M. J. B., the executors named in the will of 1860. (Re Baley, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 278. Prob. Ct.)

WILL—REVOCATION.—B. made two wills just before her death, and destroyed the second. It was held that as the act of destruction was not accompanied by a simultaneous declaration of intention, the first will was not thereby revived: (Re Weston, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 330. Prob.)

ELEMENTARY PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING. (a)

A Collection of practical Forms designed for professional Use, and suited to the Emergencies of actual Practice, with Notes.

(Continued from page 473.)

PRECEDENTS.

NOTICES.

95. Notice demanding possession of goods.

To A. B., of &c.

As attorney for Mr. C. D., of &c. [claimant], and duly authorised by him in this behalf, I hereby give you notice and require you forthwith to deliver to the said C. D. the several articles of household furniture and effects now in your possession, belonging to him, that is to say:—[here insert inventory of goods]. And I give you further notice that, unless you forthwith deliver possession thereof, an action will be commenced against you for their recovery and for damages for the conversion and detention thereof.

Dated the day of 18 . (b)

Y. Z. [attorney].

96. Notice of claim to goods seized under bill of sale, or writ of execution.

To A. B., of &c., Mr. C. D., his attorney, E. F., officer in possession, his assistants, and others.

I hereby give you, and each of you, notice as attorney for Y. Z., of &c., that the goods, chattels, and effects, seized by you under colour or pretence of a bill of sale, alleged to have been given by one G. H. to the said A. B. [or if seized under writ say:—"pretence of an execution issued at the suit of the said A. B."], belonging to the said Y. Z., and not to the said A. B.; and as such attorney I give you, and each of you, further notice that, unless you forthwith deliver up possession to the said Y. Z., of the said goods, chattels, and effects, so seized by you, or some or one of you, an action at law will immediately be commenced against you for recovery thereof and for redress.

Dated the day of 18 .

M. N. [attorney].

97. Notice of claim to goods seized by County Court bailiff from trustee under deed of assignment.

To the High Bailiff of the County Court of , to his bailiffs making the levy hereinafter mentioned, and to all others whom it may concern.

I beg to give you notice that by deed dated &c., and made between A. B., of &c., of the one part, and me, the undersigned C. D., of &c., on behalf and with the assent of the therein mentioned undersigned creditors, of the said A. B., the said A. B. thereby conveyed all his estate and effects to me absolutely, to be applied and administered for the benefit of his creditors, in like manner as if he had been at the date thereof adjudged bankrupt. And I further give you notice that in execution of the trust thereby reposed in me, I am in possession under the said deed, and that the goods seized by you under execution, against the said A. B., are not the goods of the said A. B., but the property of me as aforesaid, and you are hereby required forthwith to withdraw from possession of the same.

Dated the day of 18 .

C. D. [trustee].

98. Notice to builder to proceed according to contract (c).

To A. B., of &c. [builder].

I hereby give you notice and require you forthwith to proceed diligently, and in a proper and workmanlike manner, with the erection and completion, pursuant to your contract with me, dated &c., of the dwelling-houses, situate &c. And that in case you shall neglect or refuse to proceed with the erection and completion thereof, in manner aforesaid for days after the service hereof that I shall then enter into and upon the said premises, and employ such other builders and workmen as may be necessary to complete and finish the said buildings, at your risk and expense, or sell the same either finished or unfinished, as I may be advised. And that I shall take all such proceedings by sale, or otherwise, as may be requisite for the purpose of completing the said contract, and obtaining payment of all such moneys as shall be owing to me under the said contract, without any further notice.

(a) By THOMAS WILKINSON, Esq., Liverpool.

(b) Some such notice as this is usually made before commencing an action of trover in order to prove the conversion; for if the defendant is in possession of the goods, and refuses to deliver them up when demanded, such refusal is evidence to induce a jury to presume a conversion (Scheepers v. Nisi Prius 1375); but there is no absolute necessity to make the demand.

(c) The contract to which this notice has reference is Precedent 51.

Dated the day of 18. C. D. [proprietor].

99. Notice to determine partnership. (a) To A. B., of &c.

I hereby give you notice, pursuant to the provision in this behalf, contained in our partnership articles, that it is my intention to determine our co-partnership on the expiration of calendar months from the time of your being served with this notice.

Dated the day of 18. C. D.

100. Notice to carriers (b) by vendor of goods not to deliver same to purchaser.

To the Railway Company and to A. B., their goods manager, at

I beg to give you notice that cases of which were delivered by me to you, at for carriage to, and now in your possession, and lying at your station, in street, undelivered, addressed by me to Messrs. C. D. and Co., of &c., for shipment, at the request of Messrs. E. F. and Co., of &c. [purchasers], are my own property, and that I am the vendor thereof, and that the said goods are now in transit, and were purchased from me by the said E. F. and Co., by whose direction I forwarded the same for shipment to the said C. D. and Co., and that the said E. F. and Co. have since become insolvent and suspended payment, and that the said C. D. and Co. have no claim to or interest whatever in the said goods. And I further give you notice not to deliver the said cases, or any of them, to the said C. D. and Co., or to any other persons or person, but to hold the same to my order and for my use. And I hereby undertake to indemnify you from all loss, damages, and expenses, to be sustained by you, by reason or in consequence of your retaining the said goods, in pursuance of this notice, and that if you deliver the same contrary thereto I shall hold you responsible for all loss or expenses I may sustain by reason thereof.

Dated the day of 18. G. H. [vendor].

101. Notice of transfer of mortgage debt by marriage settlement.

To A. B., of &c. [mortgagor]. Please to take notice that by an indenture dated &c., and made between C. D., of &c., of the first part, E. F., of &c., of the second part, and G. H. and J. K., of &c., of the third part, in consideration of the intended marriage between the said C. D. and E. F., and for other considerations therein mentioned, the said E. F., with the privity and consent of the said C. D., did grant and assign unto the said G. H. and J. K., their executors, administrators, and assigns, all that sum of £ invested with other moneys in the names of the said E. F., and her sisters F. F. and G. F., on security of a mortgage, dated &c., of hereditaments and premises, situated in street, from you and all interest then due, or thereafter to accrue due, upon the same, together with full power to sue for, recover, and receive and give effectual leases and discharges for the same, to hold the said moneys unto the said G. H. and J. K., their executors, administrators, and assigns, upon certain trusts therein mentioned.

Dated the day of 18. Y. Z. [trustees' solicitor].

102. Notice to trustee of appointment by married woman of share and all interest under will.

To A. B., of &c. [trustee].

I beg to give you notice that by indenture dated &c., and made between B. B., wife of A. B., of &c., of the one part, and me the undersigned C. D., of &c., of the other part, for the considerations therein mentioned, the said B. B. did thereby direct and appoint that you or other the trustee or trustees for the time being of the said will should thenceforth during the life of her the said B. B. pay unto me, my executors, administrators, and assigns, the interest, dividends, and annual produce of the share of the personal estate of the said B. B., bequeathed to her and her children, and of the investments, in which the same might be laid out, whether such share were the original share of the said B. B., or any accruing share on the death of &c., and all other (if any) the estate and interest of her the said B. B., under the said will, and the said B. B. thereby constituted me her attorney in her name to demand, sue for, recover, and give valid receipts for the interest, dividends, and annual produce of her share, both original and accruing, under the said will.

Dated the day of 18. C. D. [purchaser].

103. Notice to vendors of land contracted to be sold by them of further charge by purchaser.

To A. B. and C. D., of &c. [vendors].

I beg to give you notice that by an agreement dated &c., and signed by E. F., of &c. [purchaser] the said E. F., for the consideration therein mentioned, did thereby further charge for securing to me, the undersigned G. H., of &c., certain sums of money therein mentioned, all the interest of him, the said E. F., in a certain contract, dated &c., and made between yourselves of the one part, and the said E. F. of the other part, and all the benefit and advantage derivable from such contract, and all the interest of him, the said E. F., in the piece of land therein described, and thereby contracted to be sold by you to the said E. F., and together with all buildings since erected thereon by the said E. F.

Dated the day of 18. G. H. [mortgagee].

(To be continued.)

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

WINDING-UP.—PRACTICE.—PRODUCTION OF BOOKS.—The liquidators of a company desired to summon for examination the secretary of a banking company with whom the account of G., who had acted as attesting witness to a transfer of shares in the company in liquidation; and as agent between the transferor and transferee, had been kept. The transfer was suspected to be collusive, and it was alleged that G. had, after the transfer was executed, paid on behalf of the transferor various sums of money to the transferee to enable him to pay calls on the shares. It was desired to require the secretary of the banking company to bring with him and produce the books of the banking company containing the private account of G., in order that the liquidators might inspect that account with the view of tracing the payments alleged to have been made by G. to the transferee. Held, that a summons under sect. 115 of the Companies Act 1862 might issue for these purposes, but that when the witness attended and produced the books, every objection as to the right of inspecting them would still be open to him and to the judge. A witness so summoned, and required to produce books, stands in the same position as an ordinary witness served with a subpoena duces tecum: (Re Smith, Knight, and Co., 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 206. L.J.J.)

PRIVATE BILL PRACTICE.—LOCUS STANDI.—The B. company promoted a bill for a short line to avoid a curve on its existing line, which was worked by the C. company, to whom the D. company had paid a large sum for running powers over its entire system. The C. company was held to have no locus standi to oppose the bill: (Crystal Palace and South London Junction Railway Company, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 249. Court of Referees.)

A railway was proposed to run near a chapel and schools beyond the limit of deviation. The trustees were held to have no locus standi to oppose it on the ground of inconvenience which would prevent the religious services from being carried on: (Ibid. p. 250.)

WINDING-UP.—PRACTICE.—A petition was presented to wind-up a company for working mines in Australia on the ground of their having produced no profit for four years, and the work having been suspended for the last six months. The liabilities were much less than the required capital, but could not be discharged until further calls. A majority of the shareholders opposed the petition. The court made the usual order: (Re Great Northern Copper Mining Company, &c., 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 264. M. R.)

A SUCCESS UNPRECEDENTED.—MARAVILLA COCOA IS PERFECTION.—The Globe says "Taylor Brothers' Maravilla Cocoa has achieved a thorough success, and supersedes every other cocoa in the market. For homeopaths and invalids we could not recommend a more agreeable or valuable beverage." Sold in packets only, by all Grocers.—[ADVT.]

ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.

THE IRISH CHURCH ABOLITION BILL.

STEADY majorities, rarely falling short of 100, carry this great measure rapidly through committee, and it is now certain that it will go to the Lords almost as it was introduced to the Commons. Every amendment of importance has been rejected.

There is great and real alarm in some quarters at the result, which is now scarcely disputed, the immediate supremacy and speedy establishment of Romanism in Ireland. But, after all, is there anything so very terrible in this? Romanism in these days is not what it was; is it not better than the "no religion at all," which is the condition of the masses of our own population? Protestantism has failed to make converts in Ireland, and in England it has not penetrated to the hearts of the multitude. Even with the Dissenters in England, and the Presbyterians in Scotland, hatred of the Established Church has been more powerful than love for Protestantism, inasmuch that they have not scrupled to sacrifice the latter to the former. Roman Catholicism has adhered steadily to its principles, and is now reaping its reward in a triumph which will go far to redeem its reverses at the Reformation. In eighteen months its great rival in Ireland will be swept away. In ten years its greater English rival will fall before it also. May it wisely and temperately use the victory it has won.

Correspondence.

THE IRISH CHURCH.—The interests of the laity appear to be lost sight of in the present Bill before Parliament, for prior to the Reformation the poor had an interest to the extent of one quarter in the revenue of all church property and poor rates, and church-rates were unknown. Hence the term the poor man's church. If disendowment takes place, why not allow some of the property to return to ancient Roman Catholic uses, namely, the relief of the poor, by funding some of the property to reduce local poor rates? Again, prior to the Reformation the parish churches had free sittings to all parishioners, and are they now to be handed over to become Congregational property, to the prejudice of the laity? The glorious Reformation has cost us something in blood and money, and great wars, hence our National Debt; but do not let us be put under further disabilities.

A LAYMAN.

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.

QUESTIONS FOR THE FINAL EXAMINATION.

EASTER TERM 1869.—FIRST DAY.

QUESTIONS 1 TO 5 INCLUSIVE.

II. COMMON AND STATUTE LAW AND PRACTICE OF THE COURTS.

6. A. buys a horse of B. and pays for it by a bill of exchange; the horse proves unsound, and is resold at a less price by A. Is this any defence to an action on the bill of exchange brought by B. against A.?

7. What essential right must the plaintiff in ejectment possess as to the land sought to be recovered, and what step must be taken before action in the cases respectively of a tenancy from year to year and a tenancy at will?

8. What fixtures may a tenant (under no special covenant) remove, and at what time?

9. Under what circumstances may actions for malicious prosecutions, &c., brought in the Superior Court, be remitted to the County Court? (30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 10.)

10. What is the meaning of "costs in the cause," and of "costs in any event?"

11. What is the limit of the jurisdiction of the County Courts where title comes in question?

12. How are the costs of the cause apportioned when the plaintiff takes out of court money paid in by the defendant, in respect of a particular sum or cause of action, but who goes on for more, and is defeated as to the residue of his claim?

13. What is the rule as to allowing applications to set aside process or proceedings on the ground of irregularity?

14. State the cases in which a defendant has the right of set-off, and when not.

15. Define a simple contract, and state its essentials at common law.

16. X., Y., and Z. are sued jointly on a promissory note, and judgment recovered against X. alone. They are also sued with the like result, for breaking and entering a close; has X. a right to contribution from his co-defendants in either case?

17. What is the rule at common law as to inte-

(a) As to death of partner giving such a notice before it expires, see Bell v. Nevill, 15 W. R. 85.

(b) See hereon Litt. v. Cowley, 7 Taunt. 168; Stokes v. La Rivière, cited 3 East, 397; and Jackson v. Nichol, 5 Bing. N. C. 518.

rest on a debt, in the absence of any agreement to pay interest?

18. Smith obtains judgment against Brown, to whom Hobbs is indebted. How can Smith obtain the benefit of this debt?

19. When does distress for rent lie?

20. What is the rule for reckoning days not expressed to be clear days?

21. Some kinds of personal estate may, and some may not be bequeathed to endow a hospital. Mention one which may, and one which may not, be so bequeathed.

22. Land held for an estate in fee-simple is devised to A. for life, and after his death to the heirs of his body, and he has a son who is a minor. Can the estate in fee during the life of A. and the minority of his son, be vested in a purchaser; and if so, how and by whom?

23. What is necessary to the validity of a conveyance of a fee-simple estate in land for the endowment of an almshouse?

24. Land held for an estate in fee-simple is devised to A. for life, with remainder to his first and other sons, successively in tail general. A. enters into possession and dies, and B. his eldest son succeeds him and dies, and B.'s eldest son C. succeeds. Do all, or any, and which of these persons A. B. and C. take by purchase or by descent?

25. Land is devised to the use of A. and his heirs in trust for B. and his heirs. A. disclaims the devise. In whom are the legal and equitable estates respectively vested?

26. An estate in fee-simple in land is conveyed in mortgage to A. who dies intestate. How can the land be vested again in the mortgagor discharged from the mortgage?

27. A woman, owner of an estate in fee-simple in land, marries and has children. What estate or interest in the land has the husband during her life, and after her death?

28. A. having purchased land for an estate in fee-simple, dies intestate, leaving a son B., and a daughter C. by his first wife, and a son D. by his second wife. B. dies intestate and unmarried. Who is entitled to the land on the death of B., and why?

29. A., an only child, became possessed of land for an estate in fee-simple, as the heir at law of his mother—B., also an only child, became possessed of land for an estate in fee-simple under his mother's will. A. and B. both die intestate and unmarried, each leaving an only brother of his father, and an only brother of his mother surviving him. To whom will the lands of A. and B. respectively go, and why?

30. A testator bequeaths a legacy to a son and a legacy to a nephew. The son and nephew both die before the testator, and both have children. Do the legacies lapse, or, if not, to whom are they payable?

31. Land is limited by settlement to A. for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail male, and is charged with a jointure to his wife for her life, if she should become his widow, and with portions for younger children. The settlement contains no power of sale. Can the land be sold in the lifetime of A., and during the minority of his sons? And, if so, by what means, and with whose concurrence?

32. A. being possessed of an estate in fee-simple in land, mortgages the estate to B. to secure repayment of a loan—should A. afterwards die intestate possessed of ample personal estate, then, as between the land and the personal estate, which is ultimately liable to the repayment of the loan, and why?

33. A. and B. are joint tenants in fee-simple. C. and D. are tenants in common in fee-simple. A. dies in the lifetime of B., having devised all his real estate to E. C. dies in the lifetime of D., having devised all his real estate to F. What interests do E. and F. respectively take under the devise to them?

34. Can the owner of an estate in fee-simple in land convey the land to A., a bachelor, for life, with remainder to his son for life, and if not, why?

35. A testator devised land to A. and his heirs, but if A. should die under age, to B. and his heirs. Can B. during A.'s minority vest his expectancy in a purchaser? If so, how, and under what authority?

QUESTIONS FOR THE INTERMEDIATE EXAMINATION.

EASTER TERM, 1869.

I. Preliminary.

Questions 1 to 5 inclusive.

II. From Chitty on Contracts.

6. Describe shortly the three descriptions of contracts known in English law.

7. When it is sought to establish an agreement by letters between the parties, what must be the terms of the answer relied on to complete the contract?

8. By what law is a contract, made in a foreign country, to be expounded, if it comes before an English court?

9. What is a del-credere commission, and how does it affect the responsibility of an agent acting under it?

10. What is the general rule by which the existence of a partnership may be tested?

11. Define a sale of goods.

12. How does the 17th section of the Statute of Frauds affect contracts for the sale of goods?

III. From Williams on the Principles of the Law of Real Property.

[All the following questions are framed with reference to Williams on the Principles of the Law of Real Property, 8th edition. The first 150 pages.]

13. What, according to Williams, was one of the simplest and most natural divisions of property in times of but partial civilisation; and how did the two great classes of property begin to acquire two other names, more characteristic of their difference, and what were those other names? (pp. 6, 7.)

14. In which of the two classes are leases for terms of years placed, and for what reason? (pp. 8, 9.)

15. Besides the division of property before alluded to, Williams mentions another classification which deserves to be mentioned. What is that classification? (pp. 10, 11.)

16. Williams says that no man is, in law, the absolute owner of land. What, then, can he hold in land? (p. 17.)

17. A joint tenancy is said to be distinguished by certain unities. What are those unities? (p. 128.)

18. Do any of these unities, and, if so, which of them exist in a tenancy in common? (p. 133.)

19. By what words can you, by one deed, give to A. a legal estate in fee-simple in land, and to B. an equitable estate in fee-simple in the same land?

IV. From J. W. Smith's Manual of Equity Jurisprudence.

20. Give a short general definition of equity jurisprudence. Is it synonymous with natural justice?

21. State two of the general maxims of equity jurisprudence, and give an instance of the application of each.

22. Define actual fraud, and constructive fraud, and give instances of each.

23. If a vendor conveys real estate to a purchaser, and in the conveyance acknowledges the payment of the purchase-money, and also signs a receipt indorsed upon the conveyance for it, but does not in fact receive payment, what remedies has he, and against whom?

24. How can an equitable mortgage be created, and in what cases is an equitable mortgagee entitled to priority over a subsequent legal mortgagee?

25. Under what circumstances may a bill of interpleader be filed, and what is required of the plaintiff in such a suit?

26. If a man marries a ward in Chancery, with the consent of her guardian, and not knowing that she is a ward, is he deemed guilty of a contempt?

V. Bookkeeping.

27. Give a general description of the system of book-keeping by single entry.

28. What is a day book, and what is a ledger? and describe the process of posting from the former to the latter.

29. What is the difference between a day book and an invoice book?

30. What is a profit and loss account, and how is it made out?

31. Give specimens of entries in the book for bills receivable and payable.

COUNTY COURTS.

ROMFORD COUNTY COURT.

(Before Mr. LEONARD, the Deputy of WILLIAM GURDON, Esq.)

SOLOMON v. WOOD.

The right to shoot dogs in pursuit of game.

Semble, there is no such right unless there is immediate danger that the game will be killed.

Bush Cooper, instructed by Rawlings, of Bishopsgate and Romford, appeared as counsel for the plaintiff, a farmer, at Lambourne, in Essex, and tenant of Gen. Wood, Lord of the manor of Lambourne, and Lord, instructed by Hicks and Son, of Gray's-inn, for the defendant, the son of Gen. Wood.

The particulars, as set forth in the plaint were as follows:

This action is brought to recover the sum of 20*l.* as and for damages by reason of the defendant having, on or about the 3rd Nov. 1868, shot and killed a Scotch terrier dog, of the plaintiff.

His Honour delivered judgment as follows: This was an action to recover the sum of 20*l.* for damages by reason of the defendant having, on the 3rd Nov. 1868, shot and killed a dog of the Scotch terrier breed, the property of the plaintiff. The facts that the defendant did then shoot the plaintiff's dog (which was known by the name of Rags), and in a wood called Asses Grove, and that that grove was the property of the defendant's father, Gen. Wood, were admitted. With those admissions, the evidence adduced at the hearing was as to the value of the dog, and the circumstances which led to its destruction. That evidence on the part of the plaintiff, so far as it is material, may be summed up as follows: The plaintiff, and two of his witnesses, concur in describing the dog as good for shooting purposes, finding game, and destroying vermin. The plaintiff stated that he would not take 10*l.* for the dog, that money would not replace it to him, but he would not swear that the dog was actually worth that or any other exact sum. One of the plaintiff's witnesses stated that if he wanted such a dog he would gladly give 10*l.* for it; but, as he did not want such a dog he declined to say what he thought it was actually worth. The other witnesses whom the plaintiff called declined to say what they thought the dog was worth. The evidence on the part of the defendant is as follows: The defendant stated that he and a friend were out shooting, and that he was attracted towards the wood by the yelping of a dog, which he knew, from the cry, to be in pursuit of either a rabbit or a hare, but that when he got to the wood he saw nothing. He then sat down to luncheon. While at luncheon he kept on the look out for the dog. Eventually the dog came in sight in pursuit of a rabbit. The defendant said he was naturally irritated at what he saw. He then shot the dog. He swore that he firmly believed the dog would have killed the rabbit if he had not shot it. The rabbit was at the time about ten yards from the dog. He said that at the time when he fired the shot he did know whose dog it was. He, however, knew Rags, and afterwards recognised the dog. He said he had frequently seen Rags hunting alone. The defendant also said he was a good judge of dogs, and he believed Rags had no breeding points. He considered 5*s.* a good price for it. He afterwards was sorry for the dog. The witness Smith (who is in the employment of the defendant's father), and was out with the defendant and his friend on the occasion), in his evidence corroborates that of the defendant as to the dog being in pursuit of a rabbit. He deposes to the distance between the dog and the rabbit as being ten yards, and says that the rabbit could not have escaped if the dog had not been shot. In his cross-examination, however, two very material facts were elicited, namely, that the rabbit was within five yards of a hedge, and that the hedge was not full of holes. From the latter of these two statements I infer there were at all events some holes in the hedge. The witness designated the dog as a desperate poacher, and valued it at 5*d.* There were four other witnesses examined on the part of the defendant each of whom also spoke of the dog as a desperate poacher, but none of them said that they had ever seen the dog kill or catch anything. One of the four valued it at 2*s.* 6*d.*, and another at a glass of beer. To these facts it should be added that General Wood ratifies and adopts the act of the defendant. In that state of facts, Mr. Lord, for the defendant, relied upon the following cases, namely, Deane v. Clayton, 7 Taunt. 489; Gordin v. Crump, 8 Mees. 782; Wadhurst v. Dawne, Cro. Jac. J. 45; Protheroe v. Matthews, 5 Car. & T. 581; Reads v. Edwards, 34 L. J., N. S., 182; Sutton v. Moody, Ld. Raym. 250; and Vere v. Lord Caudor, and King, 11 East, 568, as authority for the right of a landowner to kill a dog in pursuit of his game on his land. Deane v. Clayton was an action upon the case against the defendant to recover compensation for the loss of his dog. The defendant pleaded not guilty. In that case it appeared that the defendant, for the purpose of injuring dogs and foxes which might come in search of hares into his wood, caused several spikes called dog spears, with two sharp ends, to be screwed and fastened into several trees in the wood, so that each end might point along the course of some of the tracks which were frequented by hares. Those engines were placed at such a height from the ground as to allow a hare to pass under them without injury; but so as to wound and kill any dog that might happen to run against one of the sharp ends. In that case the judges were not agreed. Burrough and Park, J.J., considered that the acts of the defendant were unlawful, that if the plaintiff had been a trespasser the defendant could not have justified the direct killing of the dog, and that he could not justify doing that indirectly, which he could not have done directly. Dallas, J., on the other hand, in giving judgment for the defendant, said, "It is allowed to place spikes or glass on a wall, and if a party climbing over be thereby wounded or cut can he bring an action? And yet if I were to see a trespasser coming down my area, I could not drive the spikes into his hands, or cut him with the glass. Suppose that in order to separate his property from his neighbour's, the defendant had erected a wall, and put spikes or glass upon it, and the plaintiff had been wounded in attempting to get over, could this action have been maintained? No decision that a trap placed by a man in his own land, and not calculated so as to allure beyond, or even within the circuit of such land, would be a trap unlawfully placed. Gibbs, C. J., observed, "the defendant's act in laying the dog spears was harmless until the plaintiff's dog wrongfully intruded upon him. The hurt which he received is, therefore, to be referred to his own wrongful intrusion, which was the immediate cause of it. If the dog had no right to be there, as he certainly had not, his owner cannot complain that he was injured by the defence set up against all dogs in general. Joudin v. Crump was also an action upon the case. The marginal note in that case states that the defendant wrongfully and unlawfully set and concealed a dog spear, the same being an engine calculated to do grievous bodily harm, as well to the liege subjects of the Queen as to their dogs, happening to run upon the same, among the bushes near a public footway running through a close of the defendant's; by means whereof a dog of the plaintiff with which he was going on foot along the said footway, and which by reason of a rabbit having crossed the footway in his view, had then against the will of the plaintiff began to pursue, and was in pursuit of the said rabbit, ran upon the dog spear and was wounded. Plea, that defendant set and concealed the said engine for the purpose of preserving his game and of disabling and killing dogs that might come upon his close, lest they should pursue and destroy the game: Held, that the plea was a good answer to the action. Alderson, B., in his judgment, observed "that the court took the same view of the law on the subject as was taken by Gibbs, C. J., in Deane v. Clayton. From those cases it was argued that if the owner of the land was justified in erecting such engines on it for such a purpose he would have an equal right to shoot a dog in pursuit of his game on his ground. The two cases are, however, widely different. In the one case, as Gibbs, C. J., observes in the same case of Deane v. Clayton, at page 534, "I make an immediate and direct attack on the animals with no object in view but their destruction, which I have no right to effect if they can be removed from my land by less violent means. In the other I merely set up a guard against all wrong doers generally. The primary object of this guard was protection to my property, not mischief to them." The case of Wadhurst v. Dammey, Cro. Jac. 45, was an action of trespass for killing a dog. The defendant pleaded that Sir Francis Willoughby was seised of a free warren of which the defendant was warrenor, and that the dog was divers times killing conies there; and that finding him there tempore que, &c., therefore he shot him. The court held the justification good because, it being alleged that the dog used to be there killing conies, it is good cause for the killing him in salvation of his conies, for having used to haunt the warren he cannot otherwise be restrained. Protheroe v. Matthews, was an action of trespass for shooting a dog. The second plea was in substance that Sir C. Morgan was the owner of an ancient park, and that the dog was hunting and chasing divers deer in the park, and that the defendant, as the servant of Sir C. Morgan and by his command, for the preservation of the deer and to prevent the dog from continuing to hunt and chase the same respectively, shot the dog. The fifth plea was to the effect that the dog could not be restrained or hindered from hunting and killing the deer, and would otherwise have killed the same. In that case Taunton, J. thus laid down the law, "It is not essential that the dog should have been at that very moment engaged in chasing the deer. It is sufficient if the chasing the deer and the killing of the dog were all one and the same transaction." And, at the end of his summing up, he said to the jury, "If you think that before and at the time of the shooting the dog was chasing the deer, the defendant is entitled to a verdict; but if you think the chasing was at an end, and that the dog would not have recommenced, you ought to find a verdict for the plaintiff;" which the jury did of that case and the preceding one which I have mentioned. It is only necessary for me to observe that Wadhurst v. Dunne was the case of a free warren, and the latter one of an ancient and lawful park. One of the privileges of such places is that the owner or his servant may kill dogs which enter the warren or park and chase the owner's game there. In those cases, as Topham, J. said in Wadhurst v. Dunne, the common usage of England is to kill dogs and cats in warrens as well as any other vermin, which shows that the law hath always been taken to be that they may well kill them. If, then, the element of the warren or park is withdrawn from the case, the destruction of the dog in pursuit of the game becomes unjustifiable, unless the game is in such peril as to induce the unavoidable necessity of killing the dog in order to save it. The cases of Sutton v. Moody, Read v. Edwards, and Blades v. Higgs, merely establish the right of an owner of land to rabbits started on it and killed there. Vere v. Lord Caudor and King was an action for trespass for killing the plaintiff's dog. The general issue was pleaded, and a special plea to the effect that the possession of the locus in quo (which was part of the manor of Kidwelly, of which Lord Caudor was the lord) was in Lord Caudor; that the defendant King was the gamekeeper of the manor; that the plaintiff's dog was in the locus in quo running after, chasing, and hunting down hares there, and that the defendant, as gamekeeper for the preservation of the hares, shot and killed the dog. Lord Ellenborough, in giving judgment, said: "The question is whether the plaintiff's dog incurred the penalty of death for running after a hare in another's ground—and if there be any precedent of that sort, which outrages all reason and sense, it is of no authority to govern other cases—the gamekeeper had no right to kill the plaintiff's dog for following it. The plea does not even state that the hare was put in peril so as to induce any necessity for killing the dog in order to save the hare." I may here remark that the case relied upon in the present one by the counsel on each side. The defendants insisted that, from the latter part of the judgment, it was to be inferred that when the hare is put in peril, so as to induce a necessity for killing the dog in order to save it, the killing of the dog is justifiable. Mr. Cooper, for the plaintiff, relied upon the decision itself. He also contended that none of the other cases referred to on behalf of the defendant, applied to the present one. That the adoption by Gen. Wood of the defendant's act would be no justification for the defendant, inasmuch as Gen. Wood could not have authorised or justified even his gamekeeper in shooting the dog while trespassing, unless such gamekeeper were legally appointed, and the appointment registered in accordance with sect. 16 of the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32. Moreover, that even if he could have justified the shooting of a dog in pursuit of a hare, he could not justify the shooting of a dog in pursuit of a rabbit. Without saying whether those arguments are sound or not, I am of opinion that as the wood in which the dog was shot was not a free warren or a park, all to which plea alone is attached the privilege that the owner or his servants may kill dogs that enter into them and there chase the game, neither General Wood nor the defendant would have been justified in shooting the dog, unless they could have shown it was the only way to save the life of the rabbit. Vere v. Lord Caudor is a direct authority for that, and that such is the law is still more clear from the case of Janson v. Brown, Camp. 41. In that case the action was for shooting a dog. Plea: that the dog was worrying and attempting to kill a fowl of the defendant's, and could not have otherwise been restrained from so doing; replication, that the defendant did it out of his own wrong without any such cause. It was proved by the defendant that just before the dog was shot, being accustomed to chase the defendant's poultry, he was worrying the fowl in question, and that he had not dropped it from his mouth above an instant when the gun was fired. Lord Ellenborough said that that would not make out the justification to establish which it was necessary that when the dog was shot he was in the very act of killing the fowl, and could not be prevented from effecting his purpose by any other means. Upon these authorities, and having regard to the evidence to which I have already adverted, the relative position of the dog and the rabbit in this case do not show that the destruction of the former was absolutely necessary for the preservation of the latter. Under those circumstances my judgment must be in favour of the plaintiff. As to the amount of damages, I consider 30s. sufficient, and award the same accordingly. With respect to the costs, inasmuch as the plaintiff knew the habits and character of his dog, and did not take any proper steps to prevent its hunting or otherwise trespassing on the grounds of others, as the dog itself had no sort of right to be on the grounds of the defendants, and as the plaintiff did not, before action brought, make any application to the defendant with reference to the case, I consider that the plaintiff is not entitled to any costs of the action, and there will, therefore, be no order as to them.

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

BANKRUPTCY IN IRELAND—CERTIFICATE—DETENTION IN COURT OF CERTIFICATE—PROTECTION FROM ARREST IN ENGLAND—COSTS OF ACTION COMMENCED BEFORE BANKRUPTCY—IRISH BANKRUPTCY ACT (20 & 21 VICT. c. 60).—An action on a promissory note was commenced on the 2nd Oct. 1868, against the defendant, who pleaded, but did not appear at the trial on the 10th Dec., when a verdict was obtained by the plaintiff for the amount of his claim, and the costs were taxed on the 8th Jan. 1869. The defendant was adjudicated a bankrupt by the Irish Court of Bankruptcy on the 20th Nov. 1868 (the amount of the promissory note being included in his schedule of debts), and his certificate was signed on the 12th Jan. 1869, but was detained in court for a month in order that any creditor might appeal against its being granted. The defendant on the same day obtained an order of protection from arrest, which he produced on his arrest on the 13th Jan. for the amount of the verdict and costs: Held, that the certificate operated from the date of its execution, notwithstanding its detention in court for a month subsequently: Held, also, that the certificate operated as a discharge from arrest from the costs of the action as well as for the amount of the debt. Maughan v. Vinesberg, L. Rep. 3 C. P. 318, dissented from: (Simpson v. Maravita, 20 L. T. Rep. 275. Q. B.)

PAROCHIAL RATES.—The provisions of sect. 156 of the B. A. 1861, relating to parochial rates, apply to deeds of composition as well as to bankruptcy: (Ex parte the parish of St. Andrew's Holborn, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 281. Bank.)

BANKRUPTCY ACT 1861—SCHEDULE D.—ASSIGNMENT—TRUST—DEED—SOLICITOR.—Where a debtor is joined as co-plaintiff in a suit by a trustee of a creditors' deed under Schedule D. to the Bankruptcy Act 1861, he is entitled to have his name struck out, with costs against the solicitor, even though he may have given the solicitor an authority to take all such steps as might be necessary to enforce the contract: (Fenton v. The Queen's Ferry Wire Rope Company, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 297. V. C. M.)

Among the funds belonging to the different courts proposed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer to be transferred to the Consolidated Fund is the Bankruptcy Fund, called in technical language "The Account of the Accountant in Bankruptcy—Chief Registrar's Account." This consists of accumulations of unclaimed and undivided dividends and the funds of the late Insolvent Debtors' Court, which were transferred to the Court of Bankruptcy by the Act of 1861. The amount of this fund is, according to the last return made to Parliament, Oct. 11, 1868, 1,193,128l. 4s. The Bankruptcy Bill now before Parliament contains a provision by which all unclaimed dividends after five years shall be transferred to the Treasury. It is believed that provision will be made for the capitalisation of retiring pensions and annuities, subject to existing charges. The Chancellor of the Exchequer will from the Court of Bankruptcy alone receive an enormous sum, which will leave him a large margin to deal, or rather to play, with in future budgets.

THE GOVERNMENT BANKRUPTCY BILL.—A number of gentlemen connected with the Associated Chambers of Commerce had an interview with Sir E. P. Collier, the Attorney-General, at his rooms in the Court of Common Pleas, Westminster, on the subject of the Bill brought into the House by the hon. and learned gentleman to amend the law of bankruptcy. The deputation comprised Mr. Norwood, M.P., Mr. Morley, M.P., Mr. Whitwell, M.P., Mr. Sampson Lloyd, of Birmingham (chairman of the Associated Chambers); Mr. Hirst, of Leeds; Mr. Wills and Mr. Bruton, of Bristol; Mr. Russell (secretary of the Mercantile Law Amendment Society), Mr. Hole, and Mr. Hollins. They submitted a number of amendments which they proposed should be introduced into the Bill, with the view of assimilating the law of England with that of Scotland in the matter of bankruptcy. They pointed out to the honourable and learned gentleman that the effect of sect. 7 of clause 76, which gives the Bankruptcy Court power to annul bankruptcy in all cases where the assets do not reach 50l., would be that fraudulent bankrupts would commit all the offences mentioned in the penal clauses in order to reduce the value of their estate to a sum below the amount specified. The Attorney-General was so impressed with the representations made to him on this point that he agreed to strike out the clause. The deputation objected to the abolition of imprisonment for debt, which is one of the propositions of the Bill. The Attorney-General admitted that there was a good deal to be said on both sides of the question, and promised to reconsider the matter generally with regard to the recommendations of the deputation. The hon. and learned gentleman acknowledged the force of the arguments with which they were supported, and said he would carefully consider them before again bringing the Bill under the consideration of the House. The deputation thanked the hon. and learned gentleman and withdrew.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

[NOTE.—This department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editor is not responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it.]

MESSES. LOCKWOOD AND CO.'S LEGAL WORK: "EVERY LAWYER'S OWN BOOK."—Messrs. Lockwood and Co.'s letter reminds me of the old rule, "Hang every man who cannot make an excuse." A more lame and unsatisfactory apology I never read. I fear your correspondent "M. E. S." will scarcely survive the attack made upon him for saying that the two books are identical; the fact being that the prefaces and introductions are different. That is to say, the publishers admit that the actual book itself, the legal work, is the same under both titles. Can it affect the question of fair dealing that what is not part of the book though bound up with it, but prefatory or introductory thereto, is made to correspond with the title? I am sorry to learn that so many members of the Profession have purchased this "Old Face with a new Mask." As to the "expressions of satisfaction," if any, it is a fact well known to many that such expressions are valueless unless they come from persons of competent judgment. The publishers, however, carefully avoid saying that they have had any such expressions of satisfaction; but leave it to be inferred. Very green would be the man who would draw the inference after reading Messrs. Lockwood's quibbling and disingenuous epistle. A MANAGING CLERK. Norwich, 24th April, 1869.

A RESPECTABLE COMMISSION AGENT.—I am unwilling to do any harm to your advertising columns, but I feel desirous of warning those not so old and experienced as myself against the traps laid by commission agents for a per centage in transacting partnership and other matters. In January last I answered an advertisement which seemed to me bona fide, although I could not find the person's name in the Law List; but when the reply came I saw at once who he was, and took no notice of it, the more so as I was asked to sign my name over a sixpenny stamp upon the form sent, to pay 5 per cent. for any business transacted. Afterwards came another letter offering a partnership on the previous terms, and then the following, to neither of which did I make any reply:—"Will you please to explain why you have drawn me into a correspondence and withdrawn in the unbusiness-like manner you have. I expect a satisfactory reply, as my time is of too much value to be trifled with. I act bona fide myself, and expect other men to reciprocate in a similar spirit." Not being satisfied with my silence, there came a fourth letter, to which I made the following reply:—"Mr. W. was not aware he was addressing a mere commission agent in January last, or he would not then have wasted a penny, and he only wastes another to let Mr. J. know that in any change he may make he will only deal with respectable principals." This came back by return of post, crossed as follows, in respect of which neither to young nor old, inexperienced or unwary, need any comment. I think, be added:—"Insolent, narrow-minded enob, for none but a snob would presume to act the ass and blackguard as this dirty lawyer has; but he must be senseless, and that pleads pity for the poor devil." W.

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.

[N.B.—None are inserted unless the name and address of the writers are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.]

Queries.

1. DECREE IN ABSENCE.—Can any of your numerous readers inform me if a "decree in absence" obtained under sect. 6 of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 96, can be carried into force in England, and if so what is the process? Ought not the action to have been brought where the defendant resides (and not the plaintiff), seeing that defendant has no effects in Scotland? Sect. 19 (which is incorporated in the above Act) of 1 Vict. c. 41, says "that any decree obtained under that Act may be enforced, where competent against the person or effects of any party in any other county, as well as in the county where the decree is issued." Does not this mean county in Scotland only? I think neither of the above Acts are applicable to England, and a decree in absence obtained in Scotland cannot be carried out here. If any of your correspondents would oblige me with their opinions I should be glad. DUBUIS.

2. COVENANT TO REPAIR IN LEASE.—Will any of your readers inform me what repairs A. B. is liable to make, under the following covenant. "And the said A. B. doth hereby for himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, covenant, promise and agree, with the said C. D., his heirs, and assigns, that he the said A. B. his executors, administrators, and assigns, shall and will at his and their own costs and charges, from time to time, and at all times hereafter, during the continuance of the term hereby created, keep all and every, the exterior and interior parts of the said demised messuage or dwelling-house, buildings, hereditaments and premises, in as good, substantial and tenantable order, repair, and condition, in all respects as the same are now in, damage by accidental fire alone excepted. And excepting always that under this covenant the said A. B. shall not be or be held liable to repair or make good any damage or injury (if any) that may happen or arise to the said demised premises, from the natural decay thereof, or the original imperfect or bad building, or construction thereof." There is no clause empowering the lessor to view the state of repairs, the roof however appears in a very bad plight. The lease was made in 1852 for twenty-one years, and it is presumed that very few (if any) repairs have been done during that time. H. B.

Answers.

(Q. 109.) TRANSFER OF MORTGAGE.—If the legal estate be in the infant heir, which may not be the case, it cannot of course, be transferred to C, without the assistance of the Court of Chancery. Whether C. may be advised to leave the legal estate outstanding, until the heir come of age, I cannot tell without knowing all the circumstances of the case; but it is not unlikely that such a course, which would save considerable expense, would be feasible. I presume that one effect of the probable passing of Mr. Locke King's Bill for distribution of the real estate of intestates will be, that mortgagors redeeming, or transferees, will be saved the expense of applying to the Court of Chancery for vesting orders where there are infant heirs, as both the legal and equitable estate will for the future be vested in the executor or administrator. M. E. S.

(Q. 110.) POWER OF LEASING.—I assume that the contract for a lease was within the power, and that D. has not been guilty of laches. In that case, if D. files a bill against A. his mortgagee, and the purchasers of the equity of redemption of his life estate, specific performance will be decreed, and the lease thus obtained will be binding on the remainderman. It appears to be now settled, though the point was long undecided, that during the existence of a mortgage, a tenant for life may, with the concurrence of the mortgagee, exercise a power of leasing; and the rule that a power to lease is destroyed by a conveyance of the whole life estate, on the principle that a man cannot derogate from his own grant, does not apply here, for the contract was in itself a defective execution of the power, of which the purchaser had notice, and after which a conveyance of the whole estate does not place the remainderman in a better position than if the life estate had been determined by A.'s death. See Sugden on Powers, 57, 58, 6th edit.; Coote on Mortgages, 562, 572; Shannon v. Bradstreet, 1 Sch. & Lf. 52. M. E. S.

(Q. 111.) CONVEYANCE—NUISANCE.—C. cannot cut off B.'s sewerage. (Ewart v. Cochrane, 7 Jur. N.S., 925; Pier v. Carter, 1 H. & N., 922. See also Moreland v. Cook, 37 L. J. 825, Ch. in which Pier v. Carter was followed in spite of Lord Westbury's judgment in Suffield v. Brown, 9 L. T. Rep. N.S. 627.) But B. must contribute to the expense of maintaining the drain and cesspool, as the burden of repair is imposed upon the owner of the dominant, and not of the servient tenement. I do not, however, think that B. can be called upon to help in the cleansing of the cesspool. The case would not have been affected had the clause in B.'s conveyance been merely "to use all drains." I presume that the expression "a simple conveyance" in contradistinction to the conveyance to B. means that in C.'s case there were no reservations from the grant, and that the existence of B.'s easement was not alluded to. M. E. S.

(Q. 113.) TRUSTEES.—Did not C. covenant to surrender to D., E., and F. on their appointment as new trustees? If he did, as must have been the case if the appointment was properly made, cadet questio. But in any case, if C. choose to surrender to any other than the new trustees (why should he? who would take a surrender from him under the circumstances?) It would certainly be a breach of trust, and he would be answerable for the consequences. If C. die without having surrendered his heirs will be admitted, and will have to surrender to the new trustees. There will be no escheat. See as to this Lewin on Trusts, 200; and 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, s. 15. M. E. S.

LEGAL OBITUARY.

THOMAS CHUBB, ESQ.

We have to record the death of Mr. Thomas Chubb, solicitor and deputy high steward of the borough of Malmesbury. Mr. Chubb commenced his career in Malmesbury in 1819, just half a century ago, and during a long and successful professional life (in fact until from failing health he was obliged, some three years ago, to relinquish active practice) he has sustained a reputation for skill and integrity second to none in the county. In addition to the important public offices above mentioned, he was Steward of the Hundreds and Registrar of the County Courts, which latter office he held by virtue of his original position as judge of the old Court of Payments. In all these, and various minor offices, Mr. Chubb has long been a valuable public servant, and his genial, kindly disposition has endeared him to a very large circle of friends, who will greatly deplore his loss. Among his professional brethren he was a universal favourite, and in matters of litigation his name was always a guarantee for fair and honourable conduct as well as consummate skill. Mr. Chubb belonged to a class of men peculiar to a by-gone age, and was an admirable representative of the able, genial, kind-hearted country attorney, with silver snuff-box and spotless shirt-frill, and equally spotless character. Most of his contemporaries have gone before him, but the few who remain will have a pleasing recollection of professional intercourse long gone by, for few legal firms of eminence in either of the two counties had not at some time had occasion to bear testimony to his ability and kindness of heart. He was buried in the family vault in Malmesbury Abbey. He was followed to the grave by a large procession, the coffin being preceded by Dr. Salter, the physician of the deceased, the Rev. W. Coles, the clergyman of the parish of Westport, in which the deceased's house was situated, and others. The pall was borne by Thomas Luce, Esq., late M.P. for the borough, and Messrs. Handy, Jones, and Forrester, solicitors of the town, and the mourners were his two sons, Thomas Henry Chubb, Esq., churchwarden of the abbey, Malmesbury, William Chubb Esq., the newly elected churchwarden of St. Mary-lebone, several grandchildren, and other relatives, including John Messent, Esq., Hinde-street, and Joseph Reynolds, Esq., Mayor of Gloucester, and the aldermen and twelve capital burgesses of the borough.

LAW SOCIETIES.

METROPOLITAN AND PROVINCIAL LAW ASSOCIATION.

Proceedings at the Twenty-second Annual General Meeting, held at the Incorporated Law Society's Hall, on Wednesday, April 21, 1869.

The chair was taken by Mr. Edward Lawrance.

The secretary read the report and the annual balance sheet.

1. Resolved, on the motion of the chairman, "That this association extremely regrets to observe the announcement of the Chancellor of the Exchequer in last night's debate of his intention to recommend the Government to suspend all further proceedings towards the erection of the Courts of Justice on the Carey-street site. That this association deprecates the threatened recall of the Royal Commission, thus depriving the public, at this juncture, of the services of the eminent members of that body; and also deprecates the great delay which a change of site would involve in providing proper courts and offices for the transaction of the legal business of the nation. That the report of the committee of management be adopted, and that it be printed and circulated in the usual way.

2. Resolved, on the motion of Mr. N. Gedyo, seconded by Mr. W. J. Fraser, "That the cordial thanks of the association be presented to the committee of management for their labours during the past year."

3. Resolved, on the motion of Mr. Avison, of Liverpool, seconded by Mr. Stephen Williams, "That the following members of the association be elected chairman, deputy chairman, and members of the committee of management for the ensuing year, viz.:

Chairman.—Mr. Edward Lawrance. Deputy-Chairmen.—Mr. J. F. Beever, Manchester; Mr. E. Benham, Metropolitan Solicitors.—Mr. E. S. Bailey, Mr. J. Beaumont, Mr. E. Benham, Mr. E. Bromley, Mr. E. F. Burton, Mr. Henry C. Chilton, Mr. J. M. Clabon, Mr. W. S. Cookson, Mr. W. Crossman, Mr. J. G. Dobinson, Mr. Charles Druce, Mr. E. W. Field, Mr. H. J. Francis, Mr. A. Hemsley, Mr. John Hopgood, Mr. T. Kennedy, Mr. Edward Lawrance, Mr. C. E. Lewis, Mr. C. H. Lovell, Mr. J. A. Rose, Mr. W. Shaen, M.A., Mr. C. F. Tagart, Mr. J. S. Torr, Mr. C. R. Williams, Mr. S. Williams, Mr. John Young.

Provincial Solicitors.—Mr. E. T. Payne, Bath; Mr. T. F. Champney, Beverley; Mr. Arthur Ryland, Birmingham; Mr. J. Rawlins, Birmingham; Mr. G. J. Johnson, Birmingham; Mr. G. P. Hill, Brighton; Mr. R. Upperton, Brighton; Mr. A. Cox, Bristol; Mr. L. Fry, Bristol; Mr. H. S. Wasbrough, Bristol; Mr. T. Wilkinson, Canterbury; Mr. H. T. Sankey, Canterbury; Mr. John Nanson, Carlisle; Mr. T. Coombs, Dorchester; Mr. Herbert New, Evesham; Mr. H. W. Hooper, Exeter; Mr. R. T. Brockman, Folkestone; Mr. John Burrup, Gloucester; Mr. William Henry Moss, Hull; Mr. R. E. Wells, Hull; Mr. S. B. Jackaman, Ipswich; Mr. H. Saunders, Kidderminster; Mr. John Sharp, Lancaster; Mr. A. S. Field, Leamington; Mr. Robert Barr, Leeds; Mr. John Bulmer, Leeds; Mr. J. W. H. Richardson, Leeds; Mr. T. Ingram, Leicester; Mr. S. Stone, Leicester; Mr. G. Toller, Leicester; Mr. T. Avison, Liverpool; Mr. E. Banner, Liverpool; Mr. R. A. Payne, Liverpool; Mr. W. Radcliffe, Liverpool; Mr. J. Rayner, Liverpool; Mr. F. D. Lownds, Liverpool; Mr. J. Case, Maidstone; Mr. J. P. Aston, Manchester; Mr. J. F. Beever, Manchester; Mr. J. Crossly, Manchester; Mr. S. Heelis, Manchester; Mr. J. Janion, Manchester; Mr. W. H. Partington, Manchester; Mr. James Street, Manchester; Mr. G. Thorley, Manchester; Mr. John Clayton, Newcastle-upon-Tyne; Mr. R. R. Dees, Newcastle-upon-Tyne; Mr. G. W. Hodge, Newcastle-upon-Tyne; Mr. T. Scriven, Northampton; Sir W. Foster, Bart., Norwich; Mr. William Skipper, Norwich; Mr. R.

Enfield, Nottingham; Mr. W. Hunt, Nottingham; Mr. Joseph Peers, Ruthin; Mr. E. P. Kelsey, Salisbury; Mr. J. Broughall, Shrewsbury; Mr. C. E. Deacon, Southampton; Mr. S. Alcock, Jun., Sunderland; Mr. E. J. Hayes, Wolverhampton; Mr. T. M. Whitehouse, Wolverhampton; Mr. C. Pidcock, Worcester; Mr. J. Stallard, Worcester; Mr. W. Beaumont, Warrington; Mr. G. Lewis, Wrexham; Mr. George Leeman, M.P. York; Mr. G. H. Seymour, York; Mr. W. Walker, York.

4. Resolved, on the motion of Mr. E. Benham, seconded by Mr. C. F. Tagart, "That the best thanks of the association be presented to Mr. J. Morris and Mr. C. A. W. Smith, of Greenwich, for their services as auditors, and that they may be requested to accept the same office for the ensuing year."

5. Resolved, on the motion of Mr. J. S. Torr, seconded by Mr. W. J. Fraser, "That the best thanks of the association be presented to the Council of the Incorporated Law Society, for the corlial co-operation they have afforded to the committee of management during the past year, and for their courtesy in lending one of their rooms for the purpose of this meeting."

6. Resolved, on the motion of Mr. Street, of Manchester, seconded by Mr. Avison, "That the best thanks of this meeting be presented to Mr. Edward Lawrence for his services during the past year, and for his able conduct in the chair this day."

The meeting concluded with a vote of thanks to the secretary, which was moved by the chairman and seconded by Mr. Street.

PHILIP RICKMAN, Secretary.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

At the meeting of this society at the Law Institution, Chancery-lane, on Tuesday evening last, Mr. Austin in the chair, the question discussed was, "A bill of exchange was drawn in France upon, and accepted by, A. in London. The bill was indorsed in France, but not so as to convey to the indorsee according to the French law, any property in or right to, sue upon, the bill there in his own name. Is A. liable to an action in this country at the suit of the indorsee?" Mr. Hargreaves opened in the affirmative, and the society so decided, by a majority of eight. Two new members were elected.

LIVERPOOL LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

The eighth meeting of the session was held on the 16th April, Mr. Temple presiding. The subject for discussion was No. 24, legal. A. contracted with B. to supply and erect machinery in B.'s warehouse, for a fixed price, payable when the contract should be completed. After part had been supplied and erected, the warehouse and machinery were destroyed by fire. Is A. entitled to recover anything from B.? Mr. S. B. Smith opened in the affirmative; but the question was ultimately carried in the negative by a large majority. A committee of five members was appointed to consider the rules.

WILLIAM APPLETON, Hon. Sec.

ARTICLED CLERKS' SOCIETY.

At a meeting of this society, held on Wednesday last, in the hall of the Honourable Society of Clement's-inn, with Mr. J. C. Barnard in the chair, Mr. J. Horton Dyer moved, "That if the disestablishment and disendowment of the Irish Church be desirable, there is nothing in the Act of Union or in the Coronation oath that can fairly stand in the way." After an animated and lengthy discussion the motion was carried by a majority of four.

PROMOTIONS & APPOINTMENTS

[N.B.—Announcements of appointments being in the nature of advertisements, are charged 2s. 6d. each for which postage stamps should be inclosed.]

The Lord Chief Justice Bovill has appointed Mr. Charles Colyer, of No. 8, Furnival's-inn, London, and of Blackheath, to be a Perpetual Commissioner for taking the Acknowledgments of Deeds by Married Women for the City of London, the counties of Middlesex and Kent, and the City and Liberties of Westminster.

The Right Honourable Sir Wm. Bovill, Chief Justice of Her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, has appointed Edwin Force, of the city of Exeter, gentleman, to be a Perpetual Commissioner for taking Acknowledgments of Deeds of Married Women in and for the county of Devon and city of Exeter.

Mr. John Fisher, late of Masham, Yorkshire, but now of Windermere, has been appointed to the offices of Registrar of the County Court of Westmoreland, holden at Ambleside, Clerk to the Magistrates, Clerk to the Bowness Local Board, Clerk to the Ambleside Sewer Authority, and Clerk to the Bowness Burial Board, in the place and stead of Mr. John Hirst Taylor, resigned.

THE COURTS & COURT PAPERS.

CHANCERY ORDER.

April 20, 1869.

Whereas, by the 5th of the Consolidated Orders of this court, rule 6, it is provided that the Lord Chancellor may, from time to time, by special order, direct the offices to be closed on days other than those mentioned in the 1st rule of the said order; and whereas Wednesday, the 2nd June next, has been appointed for the celebration of Her Majesty's birthday; and such event has been heretofore observed as a general holiday in the several offices of this court, His Lordship, doth therefore order, that the several offices of this court be closed on Wednesday, the 2nd June next; and that this order be entered and set up in the several offices of this court.

HATHERLEY, C.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURTS.

Friday, April 23.

(Before Vice-Chancellor MALINS.
BUSINESS OF THE COURT.)

In consequence of several unopposed petitions having been called and not responded to, and such petitions being afterwards mentioned,

His Honour observed upon the inconvenience to the court thereby occasioned, and upon the suggestion of Mr. Glasse, Q.C., and Mr. Cole, Q.C., said that, in future, after the petition list had been gone through, and the unopposed petitions called, he should ask if there were any others unopposed, and then take them; but when, after that, the opposed list was once commenced, no petition would be taken out of its turn on the ground that it was unopposed.

THE GAZETTES.

Professional Partnership Dissolved.

BRIGGS, WILLIAM, and CRANCH, RICHARD, attorneys, Nottingham, April 13.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, April 23.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

BARNARD, HANNAH, baker, Leigh. Pet. April 17. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Medcalf, Gresham-bldgs. Sur. May 10.

BOTTOMLEY, ALBERT DAVID, hatterman, Gracechurch-st. Pet. April 20. Reg. Brougham. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Kimberley, Scott's-yd, Bush-la. Sur. May 10.

BRANT, REUBEN, grocer's assistant, Fenge. Pet. April 2. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Vant, Leadenhall-st. Sur. May 7.

CATTELL, R. RALPH, baker, Bromley. Pet. April 13. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Rasthedge, Carter's-lane, Doctors' commons. Sur. May 5.

CHARIG, SAMUEL, tailor, Somerset-st. Pet. April 19. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Lewis Hackney-rd. Sur. May 10.

CHURCH, JOHN, A. PATERSON, travelling draper, Great Yarmouth. Pet. April 16. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sur. May 24.

DAWSON, JOSEPH, builder, Fulham New-town. Pet. April 20. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Godden, Fenchurch-st. Sur. May 5.

DEAN, JOSEPH, fruit dealer, Farringdon-market. Pet. April 17. Reg. Brougham. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Watson, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 10.

FENNEL, NOAH, stonemason, Round-rd, Bermondsey. Pet. April 19. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Hewitt, Nicholas-la. Sur. May 10.

FITCH, WILLIAM, brawn manufacturer, Bridge-st, Regent-st, Mile-end-rd. Pet. April 19. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Grout, Suffolk-la, Cannon-st. Sur. May 10.

FORBES, ARCHIBALD, printer, Charleswood-st, Fimlico, and Clyde-house, Burslem. Pet. April 19. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sol. Butterfield, Carey-la, General Post office. Sur. May 7.

FRANCIS, JOSEPH THOMAS, bootmaker, Tottenham. Pet. April 16. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sur. May 24.

GARKE, JOHN, estate agent, Grosvenor, and Abchurch-lane, Commercial-rd east. Pet. April 19. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Widdowby and Cox, Clifford's-inn. Sur. May 10.

GARNER, JOSEPH, publican, Halifax-st, Mile-end New-town. Pet. April 21. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Halgh, Jun., King's-lane, Mile-end. Sur. May 7.

GLADSTONE, THOMAS MURRAY, consulting engineer, York-chambers, Adelphi. Pet. April 14. Reg. Brougham. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Watson, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 3.

JOURNET, JULES, cabinet maker, Westcott-pl west, Hammer-smith. Pet. April 16. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sur. May 24.

KENT, EDWARD HENRY, baker, High-st, Homerton. Pet. April 19. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sol. Dobson, Coleman-st, Mile-end. Sur. May 7.

KING, GEORGE, formerly victualler, Blackstone-rd, Dalston. Pet. April 21. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Eagleton and Co., Newgate-st. Sur. May 10.

MAIR, WILLIAM HUGH, salesman, Stockwell. Pet. April 15. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sol. Schultz, Dyer's-bldgs, Holborn. Sur. May 7.

MEPSTEAD, WILLIAM HENRY (trading as Brown, Brown, and Co.), wine merchant, Chatham. Pet. April 19. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sol. Weatherhead, Coleman-st. Sur. May 7.

MOORE, NATHANIEL, clerk, Sultan-st, Camberwell. Pet. April 16. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sol. Ratier, Synmond's-inn, Chancery-lane. Sur. May 7.

MOSES, ZACHARIAH, general dealer, Cutler-st. Pet. April 19. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Halgh, Jun., King-st, Cheap-side. Sur. May 7.

NOYCE, THOMAS, carrier, Shoreditch. Pet. April 16. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sur. May 24.

O'DONOHUE, JOHN, general shopkeeper, Stanhope-st, Clare-market. Pet. April 20. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sol. Kimberley, Scott's-yd, Bush-la. Sur. May 7.

PAOR, WILLIAM BRIDGEWATER, jun., corn merchant, Southampton. Pet. April 21. O. A. Stansfeld. Sols. Stoken and Jupp, Leadenhall-st. Sur. May 10.

PARKER, ROBERT, woollen draper, late Sarbiton and Bishopsgate-st. Pet. April 16. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sur. May 24.

PATMORE, WILLIAM, beer-shop keeper, Gun-la, Limehouse. Pet. April 20. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Kimberley, Scott's-yd, Bush-la, Cannon-st. Sur. May 5.

ROBINSON, FREDERICK WILLIAM, auctioneer, Jewry-st, and Winchester. Pet. April 15. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sols. Paterson, Sons, and Garner, Bouvierie-st, Fleet-st, agents for Mackey, Southampton. Sur. May 3.

ROBINSON, WILLIAM HENRY, esquire, Dover. Pet. Nov. 23. O. A. Stansfeld. Sols. Ellis and Kimber, Gresham-house, Old Broad-st. Sur. May 12.

SMITH, EDWARD SPENCER (known as Edward Swanborough), refreshment-room keeper, Brompton-rd, and Strand. Pet. April 19. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Kent, Cannon-st. Sur. May 3.

SUTTER, HENRY WILLIAM, baker, Stockwell. Pet. April 21. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Weatherhead, Coleman-st. Sur. May 5.

TITTERTON, WILLIAM JOSEPH, out of business, Witney. Pet. April 20. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sols. Shaw and Co., Gray's-inn, 40, for Lee, Witney. Sur. May 5.

WHALE, RICHARD, foreman to a builder, Christchurch-st, Chelsea. Pet. April 20. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sols. Miller and Stubbs, Eastcheap. Sur. May 5.

WHITEMAN, WILLIAM, builder, Cemetery-rd, Queen's-rd, Peckham. Pet. April 17. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sol. Watson, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 7.

WIGG, GEORGE, leather dealer, Colchester. Pet. April 21. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sols. Lewis, Munns, and Co., Old Jewry, agents for Smythies, Goody, and Son, Colchester. Sur. May 5.

YEO, RICHARD WILLIAM, supernumerated clerk, late West-st, Battersea. Pet. April 15. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sur. May 10.

To surrender in the Country.

APPLETON, JAMES, moulder, Widnes. Pet. April 20. Reg. O. A. Ansell. Sol. Swift, St. Helen's. Sur. May 5.

ARMSTRONG, JOSEPH, tailor, Cook-st, Pet. April 5. Reg. Gibson. O. A. Laidman. Sols. Hoyle, Shipley, and Hoyle, Newcastle. Sur. May 3.

ASHWORTH, GEORGE, cotton dealer, Levenshulme. Pet. April 14. Reg. Fardell. O. A. McNeill. Sur. May 12.

BAB, RICHARD, hotel dealer, Col. Sur. May 12.

BAGNALL, RICHARD, huckster, Burton-on-Trent. Pet. April 19. Reg. O. A. Hubbersty. Sol. Wilson, Burton-on-Trent. Sur. May 3.

BECKINGHAM, GEORGE, railway contractor, Bodfarry. Pet. April 13. Reg. O. A. Edwards. Sol. Davies, Holywell. Sur. April 25.

BELK, VINCENT, beer-house keeper, Westwoodside. Pet. April 17. Reg. O. A. Burton. Sol. Bladen, Gainsborough. Sur. May 11.

BUTTON, EDMUND GELB, labourer, Winterton. Pet. April 19. Reg. O. A. Brown. Sols. Nowell and Priestley, Barton-on-Humber. Sur. May 7.

CARTER, H. ANNE, labourer, Shillington. Pet. April 16. Reg. O. A. Willoughby. Sol. White, Northampton. Sur. May 5.

CLARKE, DAVID MOORE, baker, Lincoln. Pet. April 19. Reg. O. A. Uppeley. Sol. Dale, Lincoln. Sur. May 5.

CLARKE, EDWARD, beer-house keeper, Manchester. Pet. April 14. Reg. O. A. McNeill. Sur. May 12.

CLOUGH, ROBERT, omnibus driver, Manchester. Pet. April 14. Reg. O. A. Marshall. Sol. Pullan, Leeds. Sur. May 6.

CRIGHTON, JOHN SHAW, draper, Bishopwearmouth. Pet. April 20. Reg. Gibson. O. A. Laidman. Sol. Robinson, Sunderland. Sur. May 12.

CRISP, WILLIAM HENRY, farm steward, Sedgford. Pet. April 19. O. A. Partridge. Sol. Nurse, King's Lynn. Sur. May 4.

DAMONEY, JOHN, cattle dealer, Ingleton. Pet. April 16. Reg. O. A. Roper. Sol. Robinson, Settle. Sur. May 4.

DANIEL, GEORGE DANIEL, journeyman fishmonger, Ipswich. Pet. April 17. Reg. O. A. Pretzman. Sol. Jennings, Ipswich. Sur. May 11.

DAVIES, REES, iron merchant, Merthyr Tydfil. Pet. April 21. Reg. O. A. Russell. Sol. Rosser, Aberdare. Sur. May 3.

DENNIS, DANIEL, fancy box maker, Birmingham. Pet. April 16. Reg. Guest. Sur. May 14.

DUGDALE, THOMAS, accountant, Darlington. Pet. April 19. Sol. Stevenson, Darlington. Sur. May 5.

EACHUS, GEORGE, butcher, Northwich. Pet. April 14. O. A. Turner. Sur. May 5.

EDWARDS, RICHARD, farmer, Gwyndy. Pet. April 21. O. A. Turner. Sol. Grimmer, Liverpool. Sur. May 5.

ELWOOD, GEORGE HENRY, publican, Cambridge. Pet. April 20. Reg. O. A. Elwood. Sol. Ellison, Cambridge. Sur. May 5.

EYANS, JOHN, grocer, Aberystwyth. Pet. March 18. Reg. O. A. Lloyd. Sur. May 12.

EVERSFIELD, EDWARD, grocer, Tonbridge. Pet. April 19. Reg. O. A. Aloyne. Sol. Palmer, Tonbridge. Sur. May 1.

GODFREY, JOHN, grocer, Wolverhampton. Pet. April 30. Reg. O. A. Brown. Sol. Ward, Wolverhampton. Sur. May 10.

GOULD, JOHN, sinker, Kingswinford. Pet. April 19. Reg. O. A. Harward. Sol. Clulow, Brierley-hill. Sur. May 7.

GREEN, ALFRED, out of business, Birmingham. Pet. April 16. Reg. O. A. Green. Sur. May 14.

HAIN, THOMAS, beer-seller, Linsley. Pet. April 17. Reg. O. A. Jones. Sol. Sykes, Huddersfield. Sur. May 7.

HARDY, JOHN, out of business, Tow Law, Co. Durham. Pet. April 21. Reg. O. A. Greenwell. Sol. Salkeld, Durham. Sur. May 5.

HARPER, ROBERT, provision dealer, Sheffield and Newcastle. Pet. April 19. Reg. Gibson. O. A. Laidman. Sols. Keenlyside and Forster, Newcastle. Sur. May 3.

HARRIS, CHARLES, baker, late Birkdale and Tramere. Pet. April 21. Reg. O. A. Ward. Sol. Downham, Birmingham. Sur. May 7.

HARWOOD, EDWIN, groom, Bridgewater. Pet. April 20. Reg. O. A. Lovibond. Sol. Vessey, Bridgewater. Sur. May 3.

HAYES, JOHN, corn factor, Leeds. Pet. April 20. O. A. Young. Sol. Simpson, Leeds. Sur. May 3.

HAZLEWOOD, JAMES, blacksmith, Birmingham. Pet. April 19. Reg. O. A. Guest. Sol. Gem, Birmingham. Sur. May 14.

HERBOD, THOMAS, and FLETCHER, JAMES, wheelwrights, Somerset. Pet. April 19. Reg. O. A. Hubbersty. Sol. Cursham, Mansfield. Sur. May 6.

HICKIN, HENRY, baker, Tipton. Pet. April 19. Reg. O. A. Walker. Sol. Bowen, Bilston. Sur. May 6.

HORTON, ALFRED, machine cooper, Sheffield. Pet. April 19. Reg. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. James and Griffin, Birmingham. Sur. May 5.

HUGHES, ROBERT, grocer, Denbigh. Pet. April 20. Reg. O. A. Edwards. Sol. Becham, Denbigh. Sur. May 6.

JAMES, JOHN, printer, Norwich. Pet. April 20. Reg. O. A. Fick. Sol. Eccles, Sur. May 5.

JAMES, THOMAS, wood sawyer, Nottingham. Pet. April 19. Reg. O. A. Patchett. Sol. Belk, Nottingham. Sur. May 19.

JONES, JOHN, innkeeper, Tynnewydd. Pet. April 19. Reg. Wilde. O. A. Acraman. Sols. Dalton and Spencer, Cardiff, and Henderson and Salomon, Bristol. Sur. May 3.

JONES, LEWIS, grocer, Treherbert. Pet. April 20. Reg. Wilde. O. A. Acraman. Sols. Thomas, Neath, and Abbott and Leonard, Bristol. Sur. May 3.

JONES, THEOPHILUS, retailer of beer, Pontypool. Pet. April 16. Reg. O. A. Edwards. Sols. Greenway and Bytheway, Pontypool. Sur. May 3.

KESSELRING, ALBERT, commission merchant, Manchester. Pet. April 20. Reg. Fardell. O. A. McNeill. Sol. Worsley, Manchester. Sur. May 4.

LUCAE, MARY ANN, grocer, Pool. Pet. April 12. O. A. Carrick. Sols. Messrs. Roscorla, Penzance; and Terrell and Petherick, Exeter. Sur. May 4.

METTERS, HENRY, butcher, Everton. Pet. April 15. Reg. O. A. Hine. Sur. May 3.

MOSLEY, GEORGE, beer-house keeper, Sheffield. Pet. April 22. Reg. O. A. Wake and Rodgers. Sol. Micklethwaite Sheffield. Sur. May 12.

MOULE, ISAAC, blacksmith, Chulmeich. Pet. April 17. Reg. O. A. Cross. Sol. Shapland, South Molton. Sur. May 15.

NICHOLLS, EDWARD, grocer, Sittingbourne. Pet. April 17. Reg. O. A. Hills. Sol. Willis, Sittingbourne. Sur. May 5.

NICHOLSON, JOSEPH, corn dealer, Barrow-in-Furness. Pet. April 19. Reg. Fardell. O. A. McNeill. Sols. Cobbett, Wheeler, and Co., Manchester. Sur. May 5.

POTTER, WILLIAM, tailor, Middlesbrough. Pet. April 20. O. A. Young. Sols. Brewster and Stubbs, Middlesbrough; and Simpson, Leeds. Sur. May 3.

RATCLIFFE, JAMES, and RATCLIFFE, JOHN, machine makers, Leeds. Sur. May 3.

REES, THOMAS, chemist, Merthyr Tydfil. Pet. April 10. Reg. Wilde. O. A. Acraman. Sols. Fussell and Pritchard, Bristol. Sur. May 3.

ROW, HENRY, butcher, Reading. Pet. April 20. Reg. O. A. Collins. Sol. Smith, Reading. Sur. May 8.

SCANLON, CHARLES, managing barman, Leek. Pet. April 19. Reg. O. A. Allen. Sols. Higginbotham and Barclay, Macclesfield. Sur. May 3.

SHOTTON, WILLIAM JOHN, architect, Sunderland. Pet. April 21. Reg. Gibson. O. A. Laidman. Sol. Steel, Sunderland. Sur. May 3.

SMITH, WADE HAMPTON, and SMITH, WILLIAM HAMILTON, ironmasters, Tipton. Pet. April 21. Reg. Tudor. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. James and Griffin, Birmingham. Sur. May 7.

SOLOMON, MARY ANN, and SOLOMON, JOSEPH GEORGE, stationers, Birmingham. Pet. April 14. Reg. Hill. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. James and Griffin, Birmingham. Sur. May 4.

SPOON, WILLIAM, plumber, Manchester. Pet. March 17. Reg. O. A. Kay. Sur. May 5.

STEEL, RICHARD, draper, Little Bytham. Pet. April 20. Reg. O. A. Bell. Sol. Law, Stamford. Sur. May 11.

STEVENSON, WILLIAM, victualler, Wednesday, Pet. April 21. Reg. Hill. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. James and Griffin, Birmingham. Sur. May 5.

STUBBS, JOHN WATERS, butcher, North Somercotes. Pet. April 21. Reg. O. A. Waite. Sol. Summers, Hull. Sur. April 30.

SWAIN, JOHN, cooper, Brierley, Boston. Pet. April 19. Reg. O. A. Standford. Sol. Rex, Lincoln. Sur. May 5.

SWINDELLS, JOSEPH, innkeeper, Buxworth. Pet. April 20. Reg. Macne. O. A. McNeill. Sol. Fox, Manchester. Sur. May 7.

TILLY, WILLIAM, bookkeeper, Newark. Pet. April 20. Reg. O. A. Newton. Sol. Ashley, Newark. Sur. May 5.

TUNSTALL, RICHARD, bootmaker, Liverpool. Pet. April 15. Reg. O. A. Hime. Sur. May 8.

VALENTINE, THOMAS, basket maker, Little Bolton. Pet. April 20. Reg. O. A. Holden. Sols. Edge and Dawson, Bolton. Sur. May 12.

VERNON, THOMAS, journeyman ivory button toolmaker, Birmingham. Pet. April 14. Reg. O. A. Guest. Sol. East, Birmingham. Sur. May 14.

WALSTER, JEREMIAH, draper, Mansfield. Pet. April 20. Reg. Tudor. O. A. Harris. Sol. Micklethwaite, Sheffield. Sur. May 11.

WARREN, GEORGE JAMES, victualler, Penryn. Pet. April 20. Reg. O. A. Launing. Sol. Hulme, Pembroke. Sur. May 5.

WHITE, RICHARD OWEN, staff commander R. N. Dover. Pet. April 15. Reg. O. A. Greenwood. Sol. De La Saux, Canterbury. Sur. May 5.

WHITE, HANNAH, widow, Middlesbrough. Pet. April 21. Reg. O. A. Crosby. Sol. Stubbs, Middlesbrough. Sur. May 3.

WILCOX, EDWIN, tailor, Leigh Simon. Pet. April 20. Reg. Tudor. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. James and Griffin, Birmingham. Sur. May 7.

WILLS, JOHN, soap boiler, Manchester. Pet. April 20. Reg. Fardell. O. A. McNeill. Sol. Maples, Nottingham. Sur. May 5.

WROBE, ALBERT, out of business, Horton. Pet. April 23. Reg. O. A. Robinson. Sol. Hargreaves, Bradford. Sur. May 4.

Gazette, April 27.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

AYERS, GEORGE NUTTON, soda-water manufacturer, late Chatham. Pet. April 19. O. A. Standford. Sur. May 12.

BAILY, HENRY, butcher, Ealing. Pet. April 23. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Olive, Portsmouth-st., Lincoln's-inn-fields. Sur. May 10.

BODEN, GEORGE, commercial traveller, George-st., Deptford. Pet. April 22. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Dobie, Gresham-st. Sur. May 21.

BONNET, GEORGE SCHROEDER, ship broker, Rood-lane, Fenchurch-st. Pet. April 22. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Spicer, Staple-inn, Holborn. Sur. May 10.

BRISTOW, PETER, publisher, Maidstone. Pet. April 16. O. A. Standford. Sur. May 12.

BROATCH, WILLIAM JOHNSON, commission agent in woollen and silk goods, Great Portland-st. Pet. April 16. O. A. Standford. Sur. May 12.

BROWNE, GEORGE, grocer, late King's-rd, Chelsea, and High-st., Fulham. Pet. April 16. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sur. May 21.

BRUCE, JAMES, tea-dealer, East-rd, City-rd., and Arlington-st., Islington. Pet. April 21. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Dobie, Gresham-st. Sur. May 10.

CATTANEO, VINCENT, commission agent, North-bank, Regent's-park. Pet. April 16. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sur. May 21.

CHAMBERLAIN, NEMEMIAH, coal merchant, Southampton. Pet. April 22. O. A. Standford. Sols. Stocken and Jupp, Leadenhall-st. Sur. May 10.

CREED, HENRY HERRIES, mining agent, late Strand, and Bruton-st., Berkeley-sq. Pet. April 16. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sur. May 21.

EDMONDS, JOHN WILLIAM, timber dealer, late Harrogate-rd, South Hackney. Pet. April 16. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sur. May 21.

EDWARDS, WILLIAM, Iver, and WICHES, FREDERICK, Wiedenbach, West Drayton, paper manufacturers. Pet. April 22. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Price, Sergeant's-inn, Fleet-st. Sur. May 7.

EVENS, CHARLES ALBION, bootmaker, Pierpoint-row, Islington. Pet. April 23. O. A. Standford. Sol. Hunt, Gray's-inn-sq. Sur. May 12.

EVERARD, WILLIAM, baker, Southall. Pet. April 19. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Weedon, Uxbridge. Sur. May 10.

FISH, GEORGE, farmer, Campsey Ashe. Pet. April 21. O. A. Standford. Sol. Mackeson and Co., Lincoln's-inn-fields. Sur. May 12.

FRANCIS, HENRY, beer-shop keeper, Sands End, Fulham. Pet. April 23. O. A. Standford. Sol. Begbie, Essex-st., Strand. Sur. May 12.

FROST, CHARLES, hotel keeper, Harrow. Pet. April 21. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Ward, Tottenham. Sur. May 7.

HALES, RICHARD WILLIAM, out of employment, Rectory-sq., Stepping-green. Pet. April 23. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Beetholme, Great Ormond-st., Brunswick-sq. Sur. May 10.

HARRIS, WILLIAM, beer-seller, Blackwall-lane, East Greenwich. Pet. April 19. Reg. Murray. O. A. Graham. Sur. May 21.

HAYWARD, JOSEPH, East India merchant, Coleman-st. Pet. April 21. O. A. Standford. Sols. Linklaters and Co., Walbrook. Sur. May 10.

HILL, GEORGE, greengrocer, James-st., St. George's-in-the-East. Pet. April 16. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sur. May 10.

KING, FREDERICK AUGUSTUS, cattle dealer, Great Bedford-rd. Pet. April 22. O. A. Standford. Sol. Evans, John-st., Bedford-row. Sur. May 10.

KING, WILLIAM ALEXANDER, out of business, Great Bedford-rd. Pet. April 22. O. A. Standford. Sol. Evans, John-st., Bedford-row. Sur. May 10.

LARKIN, GEORGE, dealer in sand, King-st., Deptford. Pet. April 19. O. A. Standford. Sur. May 12.

LION, MICHAEL, shoe manufacturer, Fort-st., Spitalfields. Pet. April 16. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sols. Turner and Turner, Aldermanbury. Sur. May 10.

MORRIS, MARY ANN, spinster, general shopkeeper, late Colloger, Chelsea. Pet. April 16. O. A. Standford. Sur. May 12.

NECK, THOMAS, commercial traveller, Cusick-st. and Silver-st. Pet. April 21. Reg. Broadbent. O. A. Standford. Sol. Dobie, Gresham-st. Sur. May 10.

NIXON, JAMES, provision merchant, Minorities, and Stainby-rd., Poplar. Pet. April 21. O. A. Standford. Sol. Kelchley, Ironmonger-lane. Sur. May 10.

OUTRED, BENJAMIN WILLIAM, collector, Milton-road, Gravesend. Pet. April 24. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Pullen, Queen-sq., Bloomsbury. Sur. May 10.

PALMER, CHARLES HENRY, marine store dealer, Upper Park-rd., Dorset-sq. Pet. April 23. O. A. Standford. Sol. Dobson, Colmar-st., Mile-end. Sur. May 12.

PROSSER, EVAN, builder, Highest, Poplar. Pet. April 16. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sur. May 21.

REDWOOD, HENRY ROBERT, upholsterer, Sloane-st., Chelsea. Pet. April 21. O. A. Standford. Sol. Peckley, Gresham-bldgs., Basinghall-st. Sur. May 10.

ROBINS, JOHN, wheelwright, Easton-rd. Pet. April 16. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sur. May 21.

ROOKES, FREDERICK THOMAS, and ROGERS, WILLIAM, cabinet makers, Great Cambridge-rd., Hackney-rd. Pet. April 23. O. A. Standford. Sol. Howell, Cheapside. Sur. May 12.

SOLOMONS, HANNAH, spinster, fruiterer, Bethnal-green-rd. Pet. April 23. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Watson, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 12.

SPEIRLING, JAMES, out of business, North-st., Cambridge-house. Pet. April 21. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Kinnerley, Scott's-yd., Cannon-st. Sur. May 21.

STAPLETON, CANNON, attorney-at-law, late Fish-st.-hill, and Camden-rd. Pet. April 20. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Harrison, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 12.

STUART, ROBERT, out of business, Tottenham-cr.-rd. Pet. April 19. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sols. Mathews and Co., Leadenhall-st. Sur. May 7.

WILKIN, JOHN, tobacco dealer, Walmer-creech, Notting-hill. Pet. April 16. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sur. May 21.

WYATT, JOHN, greengrocer, St. Ann's-cr., Soho. Pet. April 23. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Hudson, Margaretta-ter, Hammer-smith. Sur. May 10.

To surrender in the Country.

ABRAHAM, ISAAC, pawnbroker, East Harrogate. Pet. March 27. Reg. Gibson. O. A. Laidman. Sols. Ingledew and Doggett, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Sur. May 11.

ASH, CHRISTOPHER, grocer, Torquay. Pet. April 22. Reg. O. A. Fidler. Sol. Carter, Torquay. Sur. May 10.

BAGGOT, SAMUEL, grocer, Weymouth. Pet. April 22. Reg. Hill. O. A. Kinnear. Sol. Fitter, Birmingham. Sur. May 12.

BARNES, GEORGE, butcher, Bath. Pet. April 21. Reg. O. A. Smith. Sol. Bartrum, Bath. Sur. May 11.

BARNY, JONATHAN, lodging house keeper, late Kingston-upon-Hull. Pet. April 14. Reg. O. A. Phillips. Sur. May 10.

BENDALL, GEORGE, cabinetmaker, Cheltenham. Pet. April 22. Reg. O. A. Gale. Sol. Skipper, Cheltenham. Sur. May 11.

BLAKE, SAMUEL, blacksmith, King's Cliffe. Pet. April 16. Reg. O. A. Sherratt. Sol. Law, Stamford. Sur. May 8.

BOWER, CHARLES, builder, Spalding. Pet. April 22. Reg. Tudor. O. A. Harris. Sols. Messrs. Maples, Spalding, and Messrs. Hodgson, Birmingham. Sur. May 11.

BREID, ISRAEL, agricultural implement maker, Whitehaven. Pet. March 18. Reg. Gibson. O. A. Laidman. Sol. Hoyle, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Sur. May 11.

BROWN, JOHN, wine merchant, Wetherby. Pet. April 24. O. A. Young. Sols. Lumley, Boston Spa and Simpson, Leeds. Sur. May 10.

BROWN, THOMAS, out of business, Stranton. Pet. April 23. Reg. Gibson. O. A. Laidman. Sols. Turnbull and Bell, West Hartlepool. Sur. May 11.

BROWN, EDMUND WATSON, out of business, Sunderland. Pet. April 23. Reg. O. A. Ellis. Sol. Dixon, Sunderland. Sur. May 10.

BURLAUX, JOHN NICHOLAUS, toweller, Brighton. Pet. April 23. Reg. O. A. Evershed. Sol. Mills, Brighton. Sur. May 12.

BUTLER, EPHRAIM, umbrella manufacturer, Bristol. Pet. April 23. Reg. Wilde. O. A. Acreman. Sol. Dix, Bristol. Sur. May 7.

CLANCY, STEPHEN, licensed victualler, Bristol. Pet. April 23. Reg. O. A. Harley and Gibbs. Sols. Press and Inskip. Sur. May 10.

COLLINS, JAMES, journeyman gardener, Portwick. Pet. April 23. Reg. O. A. Crisp. Sol. Tree, Worcester. Sur. May 13.

COUSSENS, HENRY, out of business, Boston. Pet. April 22. Reg. O. A. Standford. Sol. Bean, Boston. Sur. May 12.

COT, GEORGE, out of business, commission agent, Manchester. Pet. April 23. Reg. Wilde. O. A. Acreman. Sol. Clifton, Bristol. Sur. May 7.

CROSS, JOHN, out of business, Bristol. Pet. April 21. Reg. Wilde. O. A. Acreman. Sols. Benson and Elleson, Bristol. Sur. May 8.

DALLISON, GEORGE, gim maker, Derby. Pet. April 12. Reg. O. A. Weller. Sur. May 12.

DRYSDALE, THOMAS TWIDLE, licensed victualler, Swansea. Pet. April 23. Reg. Wilde. O. A. Acreman. Sol. Clifton, Bristol. Sur. May 7.

EDWARDS, EDMUND, builder, Bray. Pet. April 19. Reg. O. A. Davill. Sol. Spicer, Staple-inn. Sur. May 8.

EDWARDS, HENRY, farmer, Malsylan, near Llangefni. Pet. April 24. O. A. Turner. Sol. Grimmer, Liverpool. Sur. May 11.

FLEMING, THOMAS, out of business, late Birmingham. Pet. April 22. Reg. Guest. Sur. May 14.

FRANK, JOHN THOMAS, carver, Barnsley. Pet. April 20. Reg. O. A. Dibbs. Sol. Fradd, Barnsley. Sur. May 11.

GARDNER, RICHARD, cloth manufacturer, Pudsey. Pet. April 17. Reg. O. A. Robinson. Sur. May 13.

GOODIER, JAMES, insurance agent, Manchester. Pet. April 24. Reg. O. A. Hulton. Sol. Striner, Manchester. Sur. May 8.

GREGORY, WILLIAM HENRY, milliner, late Birmingham. Pet. April 23. Reg. Hill. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. James and Griffin, Birmingham. Sur. May 10.

GRODDITER, HARRIS, jeweller, Kingston-upon-Hull. Pet. April 22. Reg. O. A. Phillips. Sol. Summers, Hull. Sur. May 10.

HALL, THOMAS, coal dealer, Kingston-upon-Hull. Pet. April 14. Reg. O. A. Phillips. Sur. May 10.

HALE, HENRY, mason, Bristol. Pet. April 20. Reg. O. A. Harley and Gibbs. Sur. May 7.

HARPER, WILLIAM, licensed victualler, late Scholes, Wigan. Pet. April 15. Reg. Fardell. O. A. McNeill. Sur. May 11.

HARVEY, JOSEPH, innkeeper, Dudley. Pet. April 21. Reg. O. A. Walker. Sol. Clulow, Brerley-hill. Sur. May 10.

HAYSON, WILLIAM, clothes dealer, late Sunderland. Pet. April 15. Reg. O. A. Ellis. Sol. Steel, Sunderland. Sur. May 10.

HEAPS, GEORGE, miner, Whittington Moor. Pet. April 22. Reg. O. A. Wake and Waller. Sol. Gee, Chesterfield. Sur. May 11.

HIRST, THOMAS, flannel weaver, Clockcheater and General. Pet. April 17. Reg. O. A. Robinson. Sol. Harle, Leeds. Sur. May 8.

HODGES, FREDERICK, builder, Kingsnorton. Pet. April 23. Reg. Hill. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. James and Griffin, Birmingham. Sur. May 12.

HOLDS, JOHN, blacksmith, Mayfield. Pet. April 21. Reg. O. A. Phillips. Sol. Heaton, Hulton. Sur. May 11.

JOHNSON, FREDERICK JOHN, out of business, late Cheltenham. Pet. April 22. Reg. Tudor. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. James and Griffin, Birmingham. Sur. May 14.

JONES, DANIEL, boot-maker, Bristol. Pet. April 20. Reg. O. A. Harley and Gibbs. Sur. May 7.

JONES, DAVID, blacksmith, Treherbert, near Pontypridd. Pet. April 12. Reg. O. A. Spickett. Sol. Yorath, Cardiff. Sur. May 10.

LASTETTER, ROBERT, commission agent, late Liverpool. Pet. April 15. Reg. O. A. Hime. Sur. May 3.

LUCAS, MARY ANN, grocer, Illogan. Pet. April 12. O. A. Carriek. Sols. Messrs. Roscorla, Penzance, and Terrell and Petherick, Exeter. Sur. May 8.

MILN, MARK, engine fitter, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Pet. April 24. Reg. O. A. Clayton. Sol. Josi, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Sur. May 12.

MORRELL, GEORGE, coach-builder, Knaresborough. Pet. April 23. O. A. Young. Sols. Richardson, Harrogate, and Messrs. North, Leeds. Sur. May 10.

MOSS, THOMAS, glass merchant, Liverpool. Pet. April 21. Reg. O. A. Hime. Sol. Nordon, Liverpool. Sur. May 10.

NEEDLER, WILLIAM, fish merchant, Kingston-upon-Hull. Pet. April 24. Reg. O. A. Young. Sol. Spurr, Hull. Sur. May 12.

OTYS, RICHARD PHILLIP, superannuated clerk from H.M.'s War Department, Tamerton Foliot. Pet. April 21. Reg. O. A. Pearce. Sols. Beer and Randle, Devonport. Sur. May 8.

PARISH, JAMES, basketmaker, Bolton. Pet. April 22. Reg. O. A. Harris. Sols. Hall and Butler, Bolton. Sur. May 12.

PARKER, WILLIAM, miller, The British, near Wombourne. Pet. April 24. Reg. O. A. Brown. Sol. Ward, Wolverhampton. Sur. May 10.

PARKINSON, JAMES, butcher, Leeds. Pet. April 23. Reg. O. A. Harris. Sol. Col. Leeds. Sur. May 8.

PARRY, THOMAS, farmer, Aberffraw. Pet. April 24. O. A. Turner. Sol. Grimmer, Liverpool. Sur. May 11.

PEARSON, CHARLES FREDERICK, out of business, Bury St. Edmunds. Pet. April 21. Reg. O. A. Collins. Sol. Walpole, Bury. Sur. May 13.

PEPPER, JOHN, painter, Liverpool. Pet. April 21. Reg. O. A. Hime. Sol. Williams, Liverpool. Sur. May 7.

PETE BRACEGRIDE, commission agent, Manchester. Pet. April 21. Reg. Fardell. O. A. McNeill. Sur. May 11.

POPE, ESSAU, baker, Shirley, near Southampton. Pet. March 17. Reg. O. A. Thorndike. Sur. May 5.

ROBERTS, EDWARD, licensed victualler, Ludlow. Pet. April 8. Reg. Hill. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. James and Griffin, Birmingham. Sur. May 12.

RUDDARD, ALFRED THOMAS, dealer of medicine, Macclesfield. Pet. April 20. Reg. O. A. Challinor. Sol. Stevenson, Stoke-upon-Trent. Sur. May 15.

SCOTT, DENNY, harness maker, Bradford. Pet. April 23. Reg. O. A. Harris. Sol. Harle, Leeds. Sur. May 7.

SLEMAN, WILLIAM, baker, The British, near Wombourne. Pet. April 24. Reg. O. A. Pearce. Sols. Sol and Gill, Devonport. Sur. May 8.

SINCERE, JAMES, beer-seller, Halifax. Pet. April 24. Reg. O. A. Standford. Sur. May 14.

TEASDALE, JOHN, tobacco dealer, New York. Pet. April 22. Reg. O. A. Perkins. Sol. Graystone, York. Sur. May 15.

THOMAS, EDWARD NEVILLE, draper, South Liverpool. Pet. April 21. Reg. O. A. Hime. Sol. Hughes, Liverpool. Sur. May 10.

THORPE, WILLIAM, confectioner, Sheffield. Pet. April 21. Reg. O. A. Wake and Rodgers. Sols. Binney and Son, Sheffield. Sur. May 12.

VOYLES, WILLIAM, clockmaker, Halifax. Pet. April 22. Reg. O. A. Standford. Sol. Storey, Halifax. Sur. May 14.

WARD, MARGARET, spinster, beer-seller, Exeter, near Bolton. Pet. April 21. Reg. O. A. Holden. Sol. Ramwell, Bolton. Sur. May 12.

WELLS, WILLIAM, farmer, Normanton. Pet. April 24. Reg. O. A. Newton. Sol. Ashby, Newark. Sur. May 8.

WHITEHEAD, WILLIAM, watchmaker, Bedale. Pet. April 21. Reg. O. A. Jefferson. Sol. Waislett, Northallerton. Sur. May 4.

WILSON, HENRY, mungo manufacturer, Ossett. Pet. April 23. Reg. O. A. Young. Sols. Mitchell, Ossett; Harrison and Smith, Wakefield; and Simpson, Leeds. Sur. May 10.

WILLS, JOSEPH, sen., and WILLS, JOSEPH, jun., soda-water manufacturers, Exeter. Pet. April 19. O. A. Carriek. Sols. Messrs. Rogers, Exeter. Sur. May 11.

WILSON, JOSHUA, jun., cloth manufacturer, Ossett. Pet. April 25. O. A. Young. Sols. Mitchell, Ossett; Harrison and Smith, Wakefield; and Simpson, Leeds. Sur. May 10.

WINDSON, JOHN, grocer, Wrenbury-heath, near Nantwich. Pet. April 22. Reg. O. A. Broughton. Sol. Cooke, Crewe. Sur. May 7.

WISTERNOFF, WILLIAM, book-keeper, Whittington Moor. Pet. April 19. Reg. O. A. Wake and Waller. Sol. Gee, Chesterfield. Sur. May 11.

WRIGLEY, LIES, out of business, Hollinwood, near Oldham. Pet. March 15. Reg. O. A. Tweedale. Sur. May 12.

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

Gazette, April 20.

STEVENS, ALFRED, prestidigitator, Milbank-st., Westminster. March 20, 1869.

Gazette, April 23.

BROOKS, EDGAR, gun manufacturer, Birmingham. March 1, 1869.

DALE, SAMUEL, ironmaster, Newchapel. Oct. 30, 1867.

MAREES, HENRY, carpenter, Port-rd., Bermondsey. Jan. 26, 1860.

Dividends.

BANKRUPT'S ESTATES.

The Official Assignees are given, to whom apply for the Official Assignees are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Harris, L. tailor, first, 104, Kinnear, Birmingham.—Hawkins, J. coaldealer, on new proofs, 5s. (portion of first div. of 7s. 4d.) Kinnear, Birmingham.—Leal, J. hosier, first, 3s. 7d. Kinnear, Birmingham.—Ridgway, J. coaldealer, on new proofs, first rep. of D. Ridgway, 2s. 10d. Kinnear, Birmingham.—Stringer, S. bootdealer, first, 2s. 2d. Kinnear, Birmingham.

Assignment, Composition, Inspectorship, and Trust Deeds.

Gazette, April 23.

ANDREWS, BENJAMIN, cabinet maker, Wootton-under-Edge. April 3. Trusts, J. Matthews, brushmaker, and F. Hewlett, clockmaker, both Gloucester.

BECK, EDWIN, baker, Worcester. March 27. 5s. on demand.

BECKETT, CHARLES, machine printer, Marylebone-lane. April 12. 2s. 6d. by two equal instalments, in 3 and 6 mos.

BERWICK, THOMAS, blacksmith, Tredington. April 7. 5s. on demand.

BODDIE, JOHN W. Parker, gardener, Twynning. March 20. 4s. forthwith.

BOYS, HORACE, farmer, Northfleet. April 2. Trust, P. S. Punnett, gentleman, Southwark-st.

BROWN, JAMES, painter, Liverpool. April 5. 10s. 6d. by three equal instalments, in 1, 3, and 6 mos.—secured.

CHASE, WILLIAM, grocer, Petersfield. March 27. Trusts, J. Shaw, corn factor, Water-lane; P. Bell, miller, Southsea; and H. Sheppard, provision merchant, Portsmouth.

CHISHAM, HENRY WILLIAM, surveyor, Liverpool. March 18. 5s. on demand.

EAST, FREDERICK HYLAND, cheesemonger, St. Matthias-pl. Hornsey New-town. April 1. 3s. 4d. by two equal instalments, in 1 and 2 mos.

FAIRMAN, GEORGE DEAN, bagmaker, Church-passage, Gresham-st. April 20. 1s. in 1 mo.

FOSTER, THOMAS, innkeeper, Newcastle. March 23. 6s. 8d. by two instalments of 2s. 6d. in 3 and 6 mos. and 1s. 8d. in 12 mos. Trust, R. J. McKenzie, wine merchant, Newcastle.

FRANKS, FORDHAM, milliner, New Bond-st. and Brighton (trading as Madame Frank). March 12. by three equal instalments, in 4, 8, and 12 mos. from April 1. Trust, N. Humphrys, accountant, King-st., Cheapside.

GARDNER, WILLIAM HENRY, builder, Mitcham. April 7. 5s. by two instalments, on May 7 and July 7.

GERISH, SAMUEL, butcher, Bristol. April 1. Trusts, H. Fisher, yeoman, Almondsbury and G. Richards, hide broker, Bristol.

GOODELL, THOMAS WILSON, provision merchant, Merthyr Tydfil. March 25. 5s. by three equal instalments of 1s. 8d. in 2, 4, and 6 mos. Trust, W. Jones, fruiterer, and J. Smith, saw mills, and J. Price, butter merchant, both Merthyr Tydfil.

GREEN, CHARLES CASE, gentleman, Queen-st., Cheapside. Feb. 20. 5s. in 7 days. Trust, C. J. S. Whitburn, gentleman, St. Clement's-lane, London.

GREENWOOD, THOMAS, greengrocer, Western-ter, Stoke Newington. April 19. 1s. 6d. in 1 mo.

GREGORY, WILLIAM HENRY, milliner, Birmingham. April 15. Trusts, A. Simpson, and D. Carrill, warehousemen, both Birmingham.

HARRIS, GEORGE, draper, Cheltenham. April 7. 5s. immediately.

HARRISON, HORATIO, goldsmith, Birmingham. April 21. 3s. 6d. 2s. 6d. and 1s. in 1 and 3 mos.—secured.

HENRY, HENRY JOHN, confectioner, Liverpool. March 23. 5s. by two equal instalments, on Jan. 1 and Sept. 1.—guaranteed.

HERTZEL, GEORGE OTTO, tobacconist, Brentwood. April 7. 2s. 6d. on May 1.—secured. Trust, B. Whitby, farmer, Ingrave.

HORNE, THOMAS JOHN, grocer, Gilbert-ter, Haverstock-hill. April 6. 5s. 6d. on May 3, 2s. 6d. on June 3, and 2s. 6d. on July 3.

HOWDEN, ALEXANDER, gentleman, Pembroke. March 25. Trust, A. Howden, gentleman, Kirk.

JAYNE, GEORGE, shoemaker, Abberdare. April 2. 6s. 8d. by two equal instalments, in 12 and 4 mos.—secured. Trusts, S. Jenkins, moulder, and J. Evans, tailor, both Abberdare.

JAY, FRANCIS, paint manufacturer, South Lambeth-rd. April 2. 2s. on April 30.

JOHNSON, WILLIAM ALEXANDER, tailor, Manchester. March 18. Trust, J. Johnson, joiner, Stoke-upon-Trent. March 11. 15s.—7s. 4d. and 4s. in 1 week, and 3 and 6 mos.—guaranteed. Trusts, T. Nicholls, and R. Nicholls, timber merchants, Stoke-upon-Trent.

LANCASTER, THOMAS, grocer, Paddinton, and Liverpool. April 15. 4s. by two equal instalments, on April 30 and June 30, guaranteed. Trust, T. D. Adams, book-keeper, West Dorset.

LITTLE, WILLIAM, farmer, Paddinton. April 11. Arrangement for the sale of the property, and the proceeds of the sale to be retained by assignee, and 20d. paid to assignee. Assignee—C. Judge, banker's clerk, Hull.

MARRS, SAMUEL, builder, Orchard-st., Portman-sq. March 15. Trusts, S. Hart, carriage builder, New Bond-st.; H. Hart, victualler, Maria Hall, Theobalds-rd.; and T. R. Apps, gentleman, South-sq., Gray's-inn.

MOSLEY, MARY ELIZA, boot retailer, Walhall. March 23. 5s.—2s. 2d. and 1s. in 2, 4, and 6 mos.

MUSCHAM, GEORGE, linen-draper, Batley. March 30. Trusts, J. Nicholls, J. Fox, linen-draper, both Huddersfield.

NICHOLS, JAMES, common brewer, Burton-on-Trent. March 24. Trust, W. Nicholls, cooper, Smith, Burton-on-Trent.

PALEY, WILLIAM, yeast importer, Sunderland. April 3. 2s. 6d. in 14 days.

PATTON, JOHN, woollen manufacturer, Hull-whistle. March 29. 6s. by two equal instalments, in 3 and 6 mos.—secured.

PHILLIPS, GEORGE, jun., out of business, Cleverley-villa, Ealing. March 20. 10s. 6d. in 6 weeks.

POWELL, BENJAMIN, carpenter, yarn manufacturer, Littleton. March 15. Trusts, J. P. Oates, iron and tin hanger, Heckmondwike; B. Crowther, manufacturing chemist, and A. Cowburn, coverlet manufacturer, Millbridge.

POWYS, ROBERT HORACE, agent, Water-lane, Great Tower-st. April 8. Trusts, J. Allan, Cheapside, and R. Spence, Love-lane, Aldermanbury.

QUIGGIN, THOMAS, boot dealer, Birkenhead. March 25. 10s. by three equal instalments, in 3, 6, and 9 mos. Trust, J. Stewart, hatter, Birkenhead.

RICHARDS, JOHN ALLPRESS, accountant, Burlington-rd. Paddinton, and Castle-st., Holborn. April 15. 1s. on Oct. 17.

ROBERTS, JOHN, draper, Bangor. April 6. In full, by three equal instalments, in 3, 6, and 9 mos. from April 17.

ROBSON, JOHN MALDON, commission merchant, Godliman-st. and Faversham, Kent. March 22. Trust, B. Nicholson, accountant, Gresham-st.

ROBINSON, GEORGE, baker, Choppington Guide Post. April 3. Trusts, R. Armer, miller, Stannington, and C. B. Reid, brewer, Newcastle.

SECRETARY—Edward S. Barnes, Esq.

THE NEW LAW COURTS.

The statement that bankers have a general lien is easily made; but a recent case, before Mr. Justice Miller, in the Dublin Court of Bankruptcy, shows that difficulties may arise in discussing the question to what that lien extends. A banker, who has advanced money to a customer, has been determined by express decision to have a lien for his general balance upon securities belonging to such customer, which come into his hands, but not on muniments pledged for a specific sum, or left casually at his shop, after his own refusal to advance money on them, or negotiable instruments belonging to a third person, left in the banker's hands by his customers. In the Dublin case (20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 282), it appeared that the bankrupt was a customer dealing with the Royal Bank of Ireland from 1860 to 1868, when he became bankrupt. Shortly before his bankruptcy he wrote a note to the manager of the bank stating that he would require to overdraw his account about 180*l.*, which he stated should be refunded within a week. The promise of refunding the money not having been fulfilled, the manager required a second interview with his customer, and upon that occasion it appeared that 187*l.* had been overdrawn, and the banker required a security for these overdrafts. At that time the bank were the holders of indorsements which had been discounted for, or at the instance of, the bankrupt to the amount of upwards of 1100*l.* The bankrupt on that occasion lodged with the bank the title-deeds of certain property, and on the back of the deed was indorsed, "lodged with the Royal Bank to cover overdrafts, on 26th Jan, 1868." The acceptances of the parties primarily liable that were then current not having been paid, they were, according to the course of banking, charged to the debit of the customer, and the question before the court was whether the lien of the bank extended to those endorsements of the customer as well as to the amount drawn out on the overdrafts of the customer.

VOL. XLVII.—No. 1362.

The learned Judge held, that the unpaid endorsements of the bankrupt should be treated as overdrafts, and that the lien on the deed lodged extended to the entire sum due by the bankrupt upon the whole of his account. This probably is as great an extension of the doctrine of lien respecting bankers as it will ever receive.

Now as to advances made by bankers upon security given to them. The great danger in these transactions is, that which was just avoided in Martin v. Williams, namely, allowing the advances to exceed the value of the security, and to cause them, therefore, to stand in the relation of a pre-existing debt to any security subsequently given. But it is clear that there may be an element in dealings with bankers, which in all probability would not exist in the majority of cases of disputed conveyance by a bankrupt; namely, that the conveyance attacked may be, as in Martin v. Williams, one of a series of bona fide transactions. As remarked by the Vice-Chancellor, it was a most important circumstance that the challenged security was not the first security granted by the bankrupt to the defendant bankers. The previous transactions resulted in the danger we have named—the security given had not covered all the moneys advanced; and it was attempted to put a construction on the deed which was impeached, showing that on the face of it it was a security for the pre-existing debt. But this was denounced by the Vice-Chancellor as an unfair view. The prior securities existed in full force when the last deed was executed, a circumstance which his Honour regarded as material, and which, he added, had not occurred in any of the cases cited.

And at this point in the case we come upon an exposition of the peculiarities attaching to the business of a banker. "It is also," said the Vice-Chancellor, "an important feature in this case that the defendants, who took the securities, are bankers. From the nature of transactions with bankers, and the securities taken by them, it is obvious that a trader, by obtaining from them advances upon a security, is enabled to go on with the management of his business for the benefit of himself and his creditors. That is perfectly plain. Cases where an individual creditor is dealt with (I mean a creditor from whom advances in the nature of transactions with bankers are not contemplated), stand, to my mind on a very different footing altogether." To this view of the question universal assent must be given. The accommodation allowed by bankers to their customers is a most important element of mercantile credit, and if it is to be restricted in the manner in which the plaintiff in Martin v. Williams wished to restrict it, namely, by rendering bankers timid of advancing any new loan where a shilling of old debt remained, the effect would be most undesirable.

But it is still to be remembered that without absolute bona fides, bankers will not be entitled to any more consideration than ordinary persons. The recent case of Ex parte Foxley, re Nurse, 18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 862, was an instance of advance by a bank upon the security of the bankrupt's solicitor, to whom the bankrupt gave a bill of sale. The question there did not arise with the bank, but from the tenor of the decision there is no reason to suppose it would have been altered had this been otherwise. The great question there was whether a reservation of the bankrupt's furniture and book debts was a substantial reservation so as to make the deed good. "In judging of the effect of these reservations," said Sir W. P. Wood, "it is convenient to consider, in the first place, how the case would have been as to the validity of the instrument if it had stood alone, before considering the effect of the antecedent circumstances." This is equivalent to saying that the reservations are of little avail if the deed standing alone is calculated to defraud creditors. The Lord Justice cited with approval Baron Parke in Smith v. Cannan, 2 E. & B. 35, where he says, "The test is not whether its necessary effect is to stop the trade, but whether its necessary effect is to delay the creditors of the trader." The same learned Baron said in Siebert v. Spooner, 1 M. & W. 708,

"I take it to be perfectly well settled that where a trader makes an assignment of all his effects, or of all except a very small portion, it is necessarily an act of bankruptcy without any actual fraud."

MR. OSGOOD'S PETITION TO PARLIAMENT.

WE regret that we are unable to print in extenso the petition which Mr. LOCKE, Q.C., M.P., has presented to Parliament on behalf of Mr. Osgood, who is known to the legal world as the plaintiff in Osgood v. Nelson. And we regret it for this reason,—that the petition reveals an act of arbitrary injustice on the part of the corporation towards a faithful officer of twelve years' standing, and who moreover was an officer of the public, which, as far as we are aware, has no parallel in modern times.

Those who have read the special case submitted to the Court of Queen's Bench will be aware of the acts, which, however, may be shortly recapitulated. Mr. Osgood was in practice as an attorney from 1842 to 1856, when he was elected by the Common Council to the office of chief clerk of the Sheriffs' Court, at a salary of 400*l.*, which in two years was increased to 500*l.* Ample evidence is stated in the petition to show that Mr. Osgood, as registrar of the court, which he was when he was suspended, possessed the good opinion of a very large section of the legal profession, and more particularly of those who had business in his court. In the year 1866, in the words of the petition, "the high bailiff of the said court suddenly objected to hand up to the Judge certain notices which theretofore he had been accustomed to hand up with the plaintiffs, and in consequence of his making such objection the Judge of the said court made an order dispensing with his attendance in court, and ordering an inferior bailiff to attend and perform the said duty." The high bailiff appealed to the LORD MAYOR, and the matter was referred by the Common Council to the Officers' and Clerks' Committee. Mr. Osgood frequently attended before this committee to make explanations, and was as frequently told there were no charges against him. The committee, however, took evidence not upon oath and when Mr. Osgood was not present, and consequently had not the privilege of cross-examining the witnesses. When he applied to know the specific charges made against him, he was referred to this evidence. In May 1867, he was heard by counsel, and a resolution was passed removing him from his office. He then obtained a quo warranto information in the Queen's Bench, but the points were ultimately submitted to the court in the form of a special case.

Now we arrive at the astounding consummation. The court were with Mr. Osgood on the merits, and they decided that the office was a freehold office; but felt themselves bound to give judgment against him, because the Corporation of London obtained a private Act in the fifteenth of the present reign, giving them power to remove the petitioner, amongst other officers, for inability, misbehaviour, "or any other cause which may appear reasonable to the mayor, aldermen, and commons." In delivering judgment the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE said that he believed the decision of the Court of Common Council to have been a most mistaken one; that if it had been the verdict of a jury it could not have stood; that if he had tried the case at Nisi Prius and a verdict had been found against the plaintiff, so far as his (the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE's) influence could avail, that verdict should not have stood; that he regretted exceedingly that as jurisdiction had been given to the Court of Common Council, they could not interfere upon the merits; he wished that they could, because certainly he should say that the result of the inquiry had not been, as regarded the justice of the case, satisfactory, that the judgment of the Court of Common Council was not one which they the Judges of the Court of Queen's Bench should have pronounced, and certainly was not one which they could then approve, and that neither that court nor any other judicial tribunal would have so dealt with one of its own judicial officers.

Upon this state of things Mr. Osgood very justly asks Parliament to take away the arbitrary power given by the private Act of 16 Vict. "It is manifestly for the public advantage," he says, "and for the proper and impartial administration of justice that the registrar of the said City of London Court as a public legal officer, should be rendered independent of all private or party influences, prejudices, intrigues, and cabals, which alternately govern the movements of a body constituted like the said Common Council of London, consisting of 232 members (of whom 40 form a quorum), and your petitioner conceives that no good or sufficient reason exists why the powers of appointment and removal given by the said private statute should not be taken away from the said Common Council of London, and be vested in the said Lord High Chancellor, and exercised as in the case of all the other County Courts, and the registrar of the said City of London Court placed now and from time to time in all other respects upon the same footing as the registrars of the other Metropolitan County Courts." He points out that, as the law stands he is absolutely without remedy, having addressed a letter to the corporation, bringing before them the terms of the decision of the Court of Queen's Bench, which letter has been directed simply to lie upon the table. And Mr. Osgood prays that so much of the private Act may be repealed as relates to the salary of and to the powers of appointing and removing the registrar of the said City of London Court, and that Parliament will enact "that the powers of appointment and removal of the registrar of the said City of London Court shall be and be vested in the Lord High Chancellor, and exercised by him as in the case of the metropolitan County Courts, and that the registrar of the said City of London Court shall be placed now and from time to time in all other respects upon the same footing as the registrars of the metropolitan County Courts; and that your Honourable House will pass such measures to restore your petitioner to his said office, or to grant such other relief to your petitioner as your Honourable House may deem expedient."

As a matter of justice to Mr. Osgood, and as a matter of expediency as affecting the public, it is to be sincerely desired that Mr. LOCKE may bring the petition to a successful issue. The corporation of the City of London, in its legal aspect, stands self-condemned. Supposing the authority of the aldermen on criminal trials to be that contended for by Mr. MELLISH in Leverson v. The Queen, it is quite clear that the aldermen themselves knew nothing about it, and regarded their functions as purely decorative. This is a glaring instance of corporate absurdity. But there a scandal on the administration of the law is the sole result, which may be remedied without injury to individuals, and assuredly will be remedied if found necessary. In Mr. Osgood's case, however, the incapacity of weighing evidence impartially manifested by the shifting quorum of the corporation, inflicts a mortal wound on the prosperity of an exemplary officer. This condemns them as unworthy to exercise the power which Parliament injudiciously conferred. The registrar of the city court should be placed on the same footing with registrars of county courts; and by doing this, and by reinstating Mr. Osgood, Parliament will confer a benefit on a public court, and repair the effects of a crying injustice.

HABEAS CORPUS IN AMERICA.

A QUESTION affecting the liberty of the subject in America is causing not only considerable discussion, but a conflict of jurisdiction between a Federal court and the States Courts, which illustrates the inconvenience arising from the numerous jurisdictions. The actions giving rise to these proceedings were brought upon certain railway coupons given by the officers of the county of Lee. These actions were begun in the United States Circuit Court of Iowa, but were transferred to the Circuit Court of Illinois. Certain tax payers of the Lee county obtained an injunction from the Supreme Court of the State to restrain perpetually the collection of any taxes for the purpose of satisfying the judgments against the officers of Lee county. A peremptory writ of mandamus was obtained upon the judgments, obedience to which was refused, reliance being placed on the protection afforded by the Supreme Court of Iowa. Thereupon the Circuit Court of the United States issued a writ of attachment, directed to the United States' marshal of Iowa, commanding him to seize the officers and bring them before the court to answer their contempt. They were accordingly arrested, but immediately had recourse to a writ of habeas corpus. The marshal, to whom it was addressed, refused to surrender his prisoners to the jurisdiction of the Judge issuing the writ, or to the jurisdiction of the State courts. A motion for an attachment was then made, and the question of jurisdiction arose—should the writ of a State Judge be obeyed by a Federal officer.

Judge BECK said, "I have examined all the cases accessible, and I have not found one in which the exercise of power, called for by the writ of habeas corpus, by a State court or Judge, has been resisted by a Federal officer, or where they refused, save in one instance, to produce the body of plaintiff, and in that instance the jurisdiction was not questioned." Whilst noticing the conflict of jurisdiction, it is satisfactory to know that it is not likely to prove of very great importance, Judge BECK being of opinion "that whatever conflict there may be, apparent or real, between the courts of the United States and of the State, it can, and will be peaceably, speedily, and finally settled by the adjudication of the courts, in a manner not to provoke violence and in accordance with the law."

As to the writ itself it appears that the existence of this remedy as a right of the people is recognised by the constitution of the United States, and provision is made that the writ shall never be suspended, except in cases of rebellion or invasion: (Art. 1, sect. 9.) The ordinance of 1787, for the government of the territory northwest of the Ohio river, Art. 2, provides that "the inhabitants of said territory shall always be entitled to the benefits of the writ of habeas corpus," and by the Act of Congress of Jan. 11, 1805, sect. 2, the provisions of this Act were extended to the territory of Michigan. By the Act of Congress of April 20, 1836, sect. 12, the provisions of the ordinance of 1787, and all the rights, privileges, and immunities granted to the territory of Michigan, were conferred upon the territory of Wisconsin, of which the territory now constituting the State of Iowa formed a part. By sect. 12 of the Act of June 12, 1838, organising the territory of Iowa, all the rights, privileges, and immunities granted to the inhabitants of Wisconsin, were extended to the territory of Iowa. The constitution of Iowa of 1846, sect. 13, of Bill of Rights, under which the State was admitted into the Union, secures to the people the benefits of the writ of habeas corpus and a like provision is embodied in the constitution of 1857.

But Judge BECK is of opinion that while the State cannot abridge or deny the right, she may regulate it; and that she has jurisdiction to regulate it notwithstanding a decision of a Federal court. His views upon the constitution of the Federal Government and the States are interesting. He says: "The Federal Government is one of limited and express powers. The State possesses all attributes of sovereignty, except those conferred upon the Federal Government. If this limitation upon State authority be necessary in order to enable the Federal Government to discharge fully its constitutional powers, I concede that it must be held to exist. But I conclude it is not necessary, and that there are express provisions of the constitution of the Union conferring power upon the Federal Supreme Court which secures the due administration of the laws of the United States quite effectually, though no such limitation exists. It is not contemplated by the constitution that the Federal Government may attempt to discharge its powers by the illegal imprisonment of the citizens of a State, but it is presumed that all of its authority will be exercised in a legal manner. It has the power, in the proper cases, to imprison the citizen. Now, the power to discharge from imprisonment can only be exercised by the State courts when the citizen is illegally imprisoned. If he be legally imprisoned, under Federal authority, the State court cannot discharge, and it is not to be presumed that a State court will attempt to discharge, one so rightfully deprived of his liberty. The presumption must be exercised that both Federal and State courts, in such cases, will honestly, faithfully, and truly administer the law. But should the State court fail so to do, the Federal Supreme Court can exercise corrective jurisdiction over it. This corrective jurisdiction is conferred upon the United States Supreme Court by express constitutional provision and Congressional enactment. I am justified, therefore, in holding that the limitation upon the power of the State court under this writ, as claimed, is not necessary in order to enable the United States Government to discharge fully all powers conferred upon it by the constitution. The argument therefore based upon the implied limitation of State power ex necessitate fails."

This opinion is, however, in direct conflict with a decision in Ableman v. Booth, 2 Howard 516, where the CHIEF JUSTICE said, "The powers of the general government and of the States, although both exist and are exercised within the same territorial limits, are yet separate and distinct sovereignties acting separately and independently of each other, within their respective spheres. And the sphere of action appropriated to the United States is as far beyond the reach of the judicial process issued by a State Judge or a State court, as if the line of division was traced by landmarks and monuments visible to the eye." But whether Judge BECK be right or whether the decision in Ableman v. Booth be right, it would appear that every American citizen is liable at times to have his right to his writ of habeas corpus rendered doubtful by a conflict of jurisdiction, unless Congress alters matters by legislation. The mode of so doing is pointed out by the Judge in the case under notice, for he says, "Admitting that Congress may assume exclusive jurisdiction in cases under this writ arising out of the exercise of authority of the Federal Government, it has in no manner attempted to do so."

We may congratulate ourselves that we have not within us the elements of conflict in the jurisdictions of our courts.

MARRIAGE WITH A DECEASED WIFE'S SISTER.

A MAJORITY of ninety-nine has expressed unmistakably the opinion of the new House of Commons on this question, and it will, we hope, suffice to carry the Bill through the Lords. Many years ago the LAW TIMES expressed a very decided opinion in favour of the repeal of an unjust and unnatural restriction, and all the arguments to which the question has been subjected since have served only to strengthen the conviction then formed. Setting aside the ecclesiastical view of it, which cannot, or ought not, in any manner to influence action as legislators, the reasons in favour of it are overwhelming. The Times contends, indeed, that the burden of proof is upon those who would change the existing law; but this maxim, true enough in certain cases, is fallacious in others, as in the instance of a law that restricts natural liberty. It cannot be denied that Lord LYNCHBURST'S Act (for it is not older than the existing generation) is an interference with liberty, and, as such, they who maintain must justify it. If two persons agree to marry, they have clearly a natural right to do so, and although society may interfere to prohibit certain marriages, as being injurious to itself, society is bound to show sufficient reasons for the restraint. Now what are the reasons put forward in this case? That the marriage of a deceased wife's sister might (for no proof is adduced) operate to restrain the freedom of family intercourse with the unmarried sisters of a wife, and cause jealousies and dissensions. Against this bare imagination of a possible evil we must set the certain fact that such an alliance is deemed, not merely innocent, but positively advantageous by great numbers, of persons; that it is contracted in defiance of the law and in spite of the formidable consequences to the offspring; that dying mothers prefer to confide their children to the care of a sister, and that widowers, especially among the poor, choose the dead wife's sister because they believe that the relationship will make them fonder and more considerate stepmothers. The decisive proof that it is an arrangement much desired by those whom alone it concerns is found in the fact, that it is so largely adopted in face of the formidable consequences attending it.

But there is one sufficient answer to all the sentimental and prophetic arguments urged on the other side. It has been actually tried and no such consequences as are anticipated were found to arise from it. For many years the law practically permitted such a marriage; for it was voidable only, and not void. It was a good legal marriage unless set aside during the lives of the parties. In practice this was never done, and therefore, as a matter of fact, such marriages were for all purposes lawful marriages, and were contracted very extensively. Inasmuch as they have existed among us for so long a time, what need is there of conjecture and prophecy of possible ills to arise from them? If they are dangerous to domestic peace, that danger would have been discovered when they were lawfully contracted. But no such objection was then made to them. The law was not changed at the request of jealous wives, or ill-treated nephews and nieces, or upon petitions of philanthropists witnessing human crime or sorrow as the consequences of such an alliance. The change was made with the basest motives, to prevent a solitary marriage, by which an influential family would be deprived of an anticipated fortune. The law that has brought so much misery to thousands of homes, bastardised so many innocent children, and caused enormous prostitution among the poor, who could not afford to go to a foreign country to be wedded in the sight of Heaven, though not according to English law, can boast of no better origin than a gross job for private advantage; and we trust that one of the first acts of the Reformed Parliament will be to sweep it from the statute book.

CRIME IN IRELAND.

THE condition of Ireland is not a new question; it has been the subject of endless debate; it has troubled statesmen and perplexed Parliaments for more years than the oldest living man can remember; numberless remedies have been proposed, many have been tried, and more are promised. But all have failed to cure, or even to relieve, the malady that has afflicted her. The rational conclusion is, either that the source of suffering has not been discovered, or that the disease is incurable.

Crime in Ireland, with the exception of one class of crimes, is far below the average of English criminality. That exception is important, for it indicates the direction in which the causes of the disorder are to be sought. These two exceptional classes of Irish crime are agricultural and political; the assassination of landlords and faction fights. What are the motives that stimulate these offences, and invest them with a halo that changes their character in the eyes of the Irish people?

Until we obtain a clear notion of the causes, it will be impossible to deal practically with the problem that presents itself for solution to the British Government and Parliament.

It is strange that the truth should not be more readily recognised, that Irish discontent has not its origin in hostility with any existing law, or objection to a Protestant Church, but has its source in a sentiment that lies beyond—the passion for a national existence. This is the key to Irish discontent.

England conquered Ireland. The land of Ireland was in great part taken from its owners and parcelled out among Protestant Englishmen and Scotchmen.

Centuries have elapsed, but this conquest and confiscation have not been forgotten. The Irish still look upon the British as their conquerors; still refuse to acknowledge their title; still remain firm in the conviction that time can give no title to the proceeds of a robbery. Therefore it is that in their consciences they believe it to be their right, and even their duty, to vex their conquerors on every possible opportunity; to oust them when they can, and regain the land of which their ancestors were, as they assert, dispossessed by force or fraud. They desire to be a nation. They have heard other peoples, such as the Italians, the Poles, and the Hungarians, lauded by the English papers for striving to recover their nationalities, and the Irish have concluded, not unnaturally, that what was virtue in those other peoples would be virtue also in them.

This is the true cause of Irish discontent and of the outrages that have alarmed the whole country, and therefore it is that the proposed abolition of the Protestant Church, the promises of compensation to tenants for improvements, and the general declaration of good feeling to Ireland and the Irish in Parliament and in the Press, have failed, and will fail, to bring about that union in fact which now exists in name only. The Irish mind is bent upon national independence, and nothing less will content it.

But England cannot sanction an independent Ireland. At any price Ireland must be possessed by England, if not as an ally, as a subject, held by force, if necessary. Does any person doubt that the time will come, and probably soon, when England will be obliged to employ that force, or that when the hour arrives the British garrison that has grown up in Ireland will be the mainstay of our power there, and that our safety will depend upon its fidelity?

THE LEGAL QUARTERLY.

WE regard a quarterly publication as of value, because it gives more mature views than can be looked for in weekly publications, and upon subjects in which maturity of thought is so desirable. It is not possible to say, however, that the three months' interval between the periods of publication are used by writers in the legal quarterly to the best advantage. More than one of the articles in this number may be regarded either as purposeless or insufficient. To take an example, we turned with considerable interest to the title "The Election Inquiries," hoping to find what we contemplate supplying, namely, a digest of the decisions, with a display of the discrepancies and inconsistencies, as contrasted with the principles agreed upon and adopted. Instead of this we find that the "Election Inquiries" are not dealt with at all, except to ventilate the discontent of Baron MARTIN with his present position, and the grumbings of the Press. The shortcomings of the new tribunal have been obvious to everyone, and it was a work of supererogation to elaborate the proof. However, the learned author has a suggestion, and that is, that all questions affecting the validity of an election should be disposed of before the return is made, by means of an investigation, supervision, or scrutiny by the returning officer, with the aid of competent assessors. With all deference, we venture to think that this plan could not work. Conceive the immense amount of labour which would be expended to no purpose. Frequently questions do not arise until after the return, and to secure thorough justice, all elections would have to be investigated to discover the two or three score cases of corruption. We do not see why the present tribunal should not be rendered efficient by the time the next batch of petitions presents itself.

Another article which might have been dispensed with is the first, on the well-worn subject of a Law Digest, and the operations of the Law Digest Commissioners. Considering that the matter is now as it were sub judice, and considering moreover that the selected men are now engaged in the labour of digesting, the publication of such a paper is quite purposeless. It is remarkable, however, for one feature. The writer was a competitor for a portion of the Digest, and he modestly refrains from criticising as we did very freely the three specimens which were published. But the publication of those specimens suggests to him "that in all cases of competitive examination it would be exceedingly desirable that the examiners would (sic) issue after each examination a book, at cost price, containing all the answers, as well of the rejected as of the successful candidates." This appears to us to be about the most unreasonable proposition, to use the mildest term, ever made in a legal publication. The object which the writer wishes to secure is, that the general public shall have the opportunity of doing that which they certainly never would do, namely, of going over the work of the defeated candidates to ascertain whether they ought not to have been successful. This remarkable suggestion is clinched by a very striking passage which will we anticipate be as new to our readers as it was edifying to ourselves—"though it is the province of a court to deem everyone innocent prior to his conviction, it is on the other hand a postulate of law and legislation that even the highest star may fall." Because the highest star may fall, therefore examiners should publish all answers at cost price. And the writer takes the trouble to expound this theory, although he admits that it can have nothing to do with the Law Digest Commissioners.

There is a quaint article on LORD WENSLEYDALE, which appears to have been written by some one well acquainted with him. We have called it quaint, because no other word could properly describe the style. We are told that Mr. PARKE never "rose to be a leader, or obtained the distinction of a silk gown." What is the difference? We are further told (p. 17) that "his narrative became both perspicuous and easy to follow; and his exposition of the law applicable to the case was both lucid and logical." Yet, on page 18, it is written, "he was, perhaps, occasionally unsuccessful in making himself quite intelligible to a common jury. . . . We know that he has expressed regret at the number of cases tried before him where the verdict was wrong, which was, we suppose, mainly owing to this circumstance." On the next page, we are told that, although not partial to poachers he tried them fairly. We notice these features in the article because it deals solely and very superficially with Lord WENSLEYDALE's personal character. Much more might have been done for so sound a lawyer.

The fourth article in this number of the magazine is a pleasant reference to "an old circuit leader," to wit, JOHN JOHNES, of the "Old Carmarthen," who, although famous little more than a quarter of a century ago, is now forgotten. His life is taken as illustrating the text "It is difficult to believe how short lived is the fame of a favourite barrister on circuit." "Such a man," the writer observes, "within the limits of his circuit, is as famous as a man well can be. But should it happen that he never attained a judgeship or other signal official dignity, but 'died a Nisi Prius leader,' it is marvellous how rapidly and completely the recollection of him fades from the memory of the public, and how soon his name is utterly forgotten, even in the fields of his former glory."

About the best article in the volume is that on Coroners' Election Law, which fully summarises the statutory provisions, and concludes with the recommendation that a Bill should be introduced to assimilate the right of voting at elections of county coroners to the right now exercised under the Representation of the People Act 1867. "After reciting the inconvenience to which the present law respecting the qualification of voters at elections for county coroners has given rise, it should provide that the qualification of such voters should be in future the same as that of freeholders at Parliamentary elections, and disqualify all other persons. It should confine its operation to election for county coroners under the writ de coronatore eligendo, and save from its purview coroners virtute officii, as also all appointed by charter, commission, or privilege, or in accordance with any prescription or custom. It should also reenact the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 92, except as to the single point of electoral qualification, and the Bill should be exclusively confined to England. Its set effect would be to limit the coroner's franchise to those freeholders whose names are on the Parliamentary register, but not to extend the coroner's franchise to any one not at present entitled to vote at such elections."

Articles on "indexing and digesting," "Campbell's lives of Lord Lyndhurst and Lord Brougham," and on the Site of the new Law Courts (written before Mr. Lowe's announcement), complete a number of the Law Magazine, which if not extremely useful, is entertaining.

ELECTION LAW.

AN EXPLANATION.

MR. COOK, of Bridgwater, the local solicitor for the petition against Mr. Serjeant Cox, has again written to complain of an expression in the letter of "TAUNTONIENSIS," in the correspondence of last week, that he had "compelled" Mr. Cook to speak out. The term was not well chosen, certainly, but its meaning manifestly was not that which Mr. Cook supposes. Mr. Cook reads it as implying that pressure had been put upon something like reluctance on his part to speak out; whereas, in truth, he was most anxious to have it known to all the world that he was in no way concerned in the unprecedented breach of good faith that had been practised in the case of which, though he had the local management, he had not the controlling conduct. We said before, and we repeat, that it redounds greatly to the honour of Mr. Cook that he should be thus eager to relieve himself even from the suspicion of complicity in such a transaction. As a solicitor, and as a gentleman, he is anxious to repudiate all knowledge of or connection with so discreditable an affair and we are glad that he has given us the opportunity thus to exonerate him with the Profession. Our correspondent has really done him the most important service by enabling him to contradict publicly what might otherwise have been the natural conclusion of those who have read the story of the petitions. Mr. Cook must remember that where a dishonourable act has been done, and the parties by whom alone it could have been done were few in number, it is of the greatest interest and importance if one or more of those parties should press forward anxiously, to say in effect, "It was none of my doing; I had neither art nor part in it; I was not present; it had not my concurrence nor sanction;" for thus, as our correspondent truly stated, by the process of exhaustion the real offenders may be discovered.

"TAUNTONIENSIS" wrongly used the term "compelled," when he intended only to say that he had "caused" Mr. Cook to speak out. We are perfectly satisfied that Mr. Cook needed no "compulsion;" that, on the contrary, he was anxious and eager to clear himself. It had been asserted again and again that the petition was entirely that of the local people, and that no other person or persons were concerned in it. The assertion was believed, and until Mr. Cook declared that he, as the local solicitor, had nothing to do with the transaction in question, he might not unreasonably be supposed to have had some knowledge of it.

Thus, then, it stands now. By an unprecedented breach of professional faith, or of personal honour, or of both, the petitioners against Mr. BARCLAY were tricked out of their petition, and Mr. Serjeant Cox was unseated. Mr. Cook, the country solicitor on the other side, has eagerly vindicated himself by declaring that he was not a party to that breach of faith, and the Profession is looking for other disclaimers.

We hasten to express our regret that a word should have been admitted here calculated to convey a wrong impression of the character of Mr. Cook's denial. It was certainly not "compelled;" it was not even reluctantly offered; it was immediate and unequivocal, as became a gentleman anxious to relieve himself from all connection with a transaction which he cannot justify. "TAUNTONIENSIS" could have meant only that he had "caused" Mr. Cook so to write, and for whatever annoyance the use of the term "compelled" instead of the word "caused" may have given him, we repeat our regret.

THE THIRD TAUNTON PETITION.

THE Court of Common Pleas has decided, not that the petition against the return of Mr. JAMES would not lie, and must be taken off the file, but that the proceedings thereon must be stayed, inasmuch as the charges contained in it had been adjudicated on the trial of the petition against the return of Mr. Serjeant Cox. In the course of the matter of that petition, the question whether Mr. JAMES was duly qualified was indirectly raised by the notice given by the respondent of recriminatory charges and by the cross-examination of the witnesses for the petitioners with a view to such recrimination, and although the respondent did not call witnesses to support his charges still, as he might have done so, the Judge, in fact, decided upon them by deciding that Mr. JAMES ought to have been returned. In this point of view, which is a new one not suggested until the hearing, no fault can be found with the decision. The points put forward by the newspapers as invalidating the petition, were scarcely touched upon in the arguments, and did not enter into the judgment.

ELECTION PETITIONS.

HORSHAM.—At the Judges' Chambers of the Common Pleas on Monday, Mr. Lumley Smith and Mr. Goldney attended Mr. Justice Willes in reference to the double return in the Horsham election. There had been two petitions. Mr. Hurst and Major Aldridge claimed the seat. The first petition, Dickins and another v. Hurst, had been withdrawn, and in the other petition, Hurst v. Aldridge, the respondent had given notice that he did not claim the seat, and the usual notice had been given, and Mr. Hurst could now take his seat as a member for Horsham. Mr. Lumley Smith asked for costs against Major Aldridge. Mr. Goldney, for Major Aldridge, said it was a case of double return, and the Major was obliged to go on until he was satisfied that he should fail on a scrutiny, and he then withdrew from claiming the seat. Mr. Buok (Baxter and Co.) said Major Aldridge was in attendance. Mr. Durrant Cooper, for Mr. Hurst, asked for the costs, as bribery had been imputed. Mr. Justice Willes, as the point was of some importance, said he would consult the other judges as to the question of costs. He had nothing to ask Major Aldridge on the case.

NORTH NORFOLK.—On Wednesday at the Judges' Chambers, an application was made in the North Norfolk election petition, Colman v. Sir E. H. K. Lacon and F. Walpole, on the part of the sitting members, for "particulars" as to the charges alleged by the petition. An order was given by consent. The case is to be heard on Tuesday next, the 11th instant, at the Castle, Norwich, when Mr. Serjeant Ballantine will appear for the petitioner, and Mr. Rodwell, Q.C., Mr. O'Malley, Q.C., and Mr. Bloomfield, for the sitting members.

ELECTION PETITIONS—SCALE OF COSTS.

The following is the scale of costs under Parliamentary Elections Act 1868 and Rules of Instructions:

	£	s.	d.
For petition, { Under special circumstances ...	3	3	0
Or, at master's discretion to ...	5	5	0
For list of votes intended to be objected to and heads of objection, pursuant to Rule VII. or VIII., at the rate for each vote objected to ...	0	6	8
But not to exceed in the whole guineas, unless under special circumstances the master shall think fit to allow more.
For special case ...	1	1	0
For case on evidence ...	2	2	0
To act for respondents ...	1	1	0
For notice of application for leave to withdraw ...	1	1	0
To make any interlocutory application ...	0	13	4
For brief on the trial at master's discretion having regard to the number of witnesses, the necessary attendance of witnesses, perusal of documents, and other work done in preparation for the trial for which no other charge is allowed ...	0	6	8
For special affidavits ...	0	6	8
In lieu of the fixed fees for instructions for and drawing affidavits, the master is to be at liberty to take into his consideration the special circumstances of each case, and at his discretion to make such allowances for work, labour, and expenses properly performed and incurred in or about the preparation of the affidavit as shall appear to him to be just, having regard to the length of the affidavit and the nature of the question involved.
Drawing.
Petition ...	2	2	0
Or if properly exceeding 42 folios, at per folio ...	0	1	0
Special case ...	0	0	0
Or if properly exceeding folios, at per folio ...	0	1	0
Case on evidence and brief on hearing per folio ...	0	1	0
Lists of votes intended to be objected to and grounds of objection, affidavits, and all other documents for which no other charge provided, at per folio ...	0	1	0
Copies.
Impressing and copying all documents, at per folio ...	0	0	4
The same charge to be allowed for every necessary copy if printed, and in that case a copy for the printer is to be allowed at the same rate.
Perusals.
Of petition by opposite party ...	1	1	0
Or, if exceeding 63 folios, at per folio ...	0	0	4
Of list of votes and heads of objections by opposite party ...	1	1	0
Or if exceeding 63 folios, at per folio ...	0	0	4
Of affidavits by opposite party, at per folio ...	0	0	4
Oaths and Exhibits.
To commissioner for oath, in London ...	0	1	6
In the country ...	0	2	6
To attorney or agent for preparing each exhibit in town or country ...	0	1	0
The commissioner for marking same ...	0	1	0
Notices and Services, including Drawing and Copies.
Notice of the presentation of a petition and service of petition ...	0	5	0
Notice of the nature of security ...	0	10	0
Notice of objections to security ...	0	10	0
Copy and service of subpoena or summons ...	0	5	0
Service of list of votes objected to ...	0	5	0
Dues taken. ...	0	7	0
Notice of application for leave to withdraw a petition, or of abatement, and leaving same at master's office ...	0	10	0
Notice of same to respondent ...	0	10	0
Notice of same to returning officer ...	0	5	0
Notice of intention to apply for leave to be substituted as a petitioner ...	0	10	0
Notice under Rule LI. by advertisement in newspaper ...	0	10	0
Attending each printer, in addition to payment ...	0	6	8
Notice under same rule to returning officer ...	0	5	0
Notice under same to master ...	0	5	0
Notice of not intending to oppose petition ...	0	10	0
Notice to be given to the master of application to be admitted respondent under 38th section of Act ...	0	10	0
Notice of appointment to act as agent for petitioner or respondent ...	0	10	0
For services and endeavouring to effect service on respondent or petitioner, when no agent named or address given, and upon witnesses, such reasonable charges and expenses as may be properly incurred, having regard to distance or employment of an agent Attendances.
To search—each search, where necessary ...	0	6	8
On each counsel, with papers or briefs, or to fix consultation when a fee is paid not amounting to five guineas ...	0	6	8
When it amounts to five guineas ...	0	13	4
When it amounts to twenty guineas ...	1	1	0
When it amounts to forty guineas ...	2	2	0
To leave petition with master and obtain receipt ...	0	6	8
On each petitioner to get petition signed ...	0	6	8
To leave list of voters objected to and heads of objections ...	0	6	8
To deposit money by way of security, and to leave bank receipt or certificate with the master to include all charges connected therewith ...	1	1	0
When the same shall amount to 1000l. ...	2	2	0
To obtain payment of money deposited, or any part thereof ...	1	1	0
To inspect any document left at the master's office, and if required to bespeak and procure office copy ...	0	6	8
On printer, with papers to be printed in lieu of written copies, and with proof ...	0	6	8

To enter appearance for respondents ...	£	s.	d.
On application before the master ...	0	6	8
On application before the judge at chambers ...
At master's office, to inspect notice of trial ...	0	6	8
On trial of petition, each day ...	3	3	0
Including all attendances except one to deliver briefs to each counsel.
If the master shall consider it necessary that the attorney or agent's clerk should also attend, a further fee for his attendance each day ...	1	1	0
If the attorney or agent and clerk are not residing in the place where the trial is held, a further allowance for expenses each day he is necessarily detained from home, of ...	1	1	0
And travelling expenses properly incurred.
Term Fees and Miscellaneous.
For term fees, &c. ...	5	5	0
When there is a country attorney and town agent, the further fee for letters of ...
And if it shown to the satisfaction of the master that the agency correspondence has been special and extensive, he is to be at liberty to make a special allowance in respect thereof.
For any work and labour properly performed, and not herein provided for, such allowance to be made as may be analogous to the above fees, as are usual and customary in the Court of Common Pleas for similar work and labour.
Where a solicitor in the country is concerned for a petitioner or respondent, the same principle as to costs shall apply if he employs a London agent entitled to practise in cases of election petitions, as are applicable if he employs a London attorney to act as his agent.

The following Fees to Counsel are to be allowed to Attorneys and Agents.

Retainer—
Leading counsel ...
Junior counsel ...
For settling petition—List of voters objected to, and heads of objection, special case, and special affidavits, when necessary, such fees as the master shall think proper and reasonable.
On hearing of petition—Leading and junior counsel with brief, according to circumstances.
If it is necessary to take counsel to attend the hearing specially, a special fee in addition to the above—
Leading counsel ...
Junior counsel ...
Per day, while the case is in hearing—
Leading counsel ...
Junior counsel ...
If the counsel is detained through case not in hearing, per day—
Leading counsel ...
Junior counsel ...
Two counsel only to be allowed, unless the circumstances of the case justify the employment of three, but no more than three are in any case to be allowed except by agreement of parties.

SAYINGS AND DOINGS OF THE COURTS.

[CONTRIBUTED BY THE REPORTERS OF THE SEVERAL COURTS.]

ROLLS COURT.

The past week has produced the following cases worthy of notice:—

The Blakely Ordnance Company v. Blakely was a suit to set aside a voluntary gift of ten debentures of the company for 1000l. each, which were given by Captain Blakely, shortly after the formation of the company, to his sister, who was the defendant in the present suit. The company was incorporated in June 1865 for the purpose of acquiring and working the business of gun and ordnance manufacturers, formerly the business of Captain Blakely and Mr. John Dent, for whose goodwill, &c. they were to pay 375,000l., of which 150,000l. was to be paid by the issue to Blakely and Dent, of debentures to that amount payable to bearer, the capital of which was to be repayable at the end of three years, and to bear interest payable half yearly at the rate of 6l. per cent. per annum in the mean time. These debentures, which were for 1000l. each, were accordingly issued, and were made payable to Blakely and Dent, their executors, administrators, or assigns, or to the bearer thereof. On the 8th Aug. 1865, within two months after the incorporation of the company, Captain Blakely gave ten of these debentures to his sister as a birthday gift. At that time he was the registered owner of over 1800 shares in the company, on which 20l. per share was payable, but no call had been made; he also owed 35,000l. to the Agra and Masterman's Bank, but this debt had been taken over by the company, who were liable for it in the first instance. On the winding-up of the company in July 1866, Miss Blakely was admitted to prove as a creditor in respect of the ten debentures. In accordance with the decision of Lord Justice Rolt in Re The Blakely Ordnance Company (Limited), 18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 132; where it was held that the holder of the debentures of the company, payable to bearer, was entitled to prove apart from all regard to the equities subsisting between the original debtor and creditor upon them. This suit was then, with his Lordship's permission, instituted to set aside the gift as void under the 13 Eliz. c. 5. In support of the bill it was urged that the gift was purely voluntary, and was made with the intention that the defendant might be entitled to prove against the company for the whole amount of the debentures, without setting off the calls which might be due from Capt. Blakely in respect of his shares, which the company would have been entitled to do if Capt. Blakely had retained the debentures. They contended that the effect of the gift had been to delay the creditors of Capt. Blakely, and that therefore the court should, in accordance with recent decisions, infer that the intention was to delay the creditors; they asked that the gift might be declared void, or that at least an inquiry might be directed into the circumstances of Capt. Blakely at the date of the gift. His Lordship said that there was nothing in the evidence to bring the case within the statute of Elizabeth. Though this company had turned out unfortunate, it had started with fair prospects of success. The shares were at a premium at the date of the gift, and Capt. Blakely's retention of the shares, at a time when he might easily have disposed of them, was a proof of his confidence in the stability of the company. He was of opinion that there was no ground upon the evidence for assuming that Capt. Blakely made the gift with the intention of delaying and defrauding his creditors, and he would not direct an inquiry into Capt. Blakely's circumstances at the date of the gift in order to obtain evidence which should have been produced now if it existed. The bill must be dismissed with costs.

Re Lush's Trust was a petition by the Law Reversionary Interest Society for the payment out of court of a fund which had been paid in in this matter under the Trustee Relief Act. The circumstances of the case were as follows:—A Mrs. Bowren having become entitled under her grandfather's will to a reversionary interest in a sum of money, her husband, wishing to get it into his possession, induced her, by threats, to sign her maiden name to a document which was dated and purported to be executed before her marriage; by this document she assigned her interest in the money to her husband. In order to procure a marketable title to the interest thus acquired, Bowren entered into an agreement with a solicitor's clerk, named Collins, to sell it to him for 450l., and the clerk filed a bill for specific performance of the agreement. Collins, having obtained a decree for specific performance, which Bowren, of course, did not resist, abandoned the agreement, and Bowren, having strengthened his title by a judicial decision, put up the reversion for sale by auction, and it was purchased by the Law Reversionary Interest Society. The reversion having fallen in, the Society now presented their petition for the payment of the fund out of court. This was opposed by Mrs. Bowren. It was contended, in support of the petition, that no written document can be upset by the uncorroborated evidence of an interested party, and that the date appearing on the face of the written document ought to be assumed to be the true date, rather than that now given by Mrs. Bowren, whose evidence was unsupported; and that even supposing the document to have been executed after her marriage, she had deprived herself of her equity to a settlement by her fraud in concealing the facts. His Lordship was of opinion that the petitioner's case failed. He believed Mrs. Bowren's evidence to be true; he believed that she had signed the document under pressure; she had committed a fraud, but she was not to suffer for it, as she had done so under her husband's coercion. The Chancery proceedings were evidently intended to give an appearance of validity to the transaction. He deeply regretted that the court had thus been made an instrument of fraud; but the registrar would never have drawn up the decree if he had suspected the true state of the case. It was one of the functions of the court to protect married women from the undue influence of their husbands, and this appeared to him a case in which the court ought to extend its protection. He was of opinion that her signature had been extorted from her by her husband, and that she was not bound by it. The Law Reversionary Interest Society were perfectly innocent in the matter; but they had made no inquiry, and were satisfied with the decree of the court; they might have required a declaration before a magistrate as to the validity of the document. He would order that the dividends on the fund be paid to Mrs. Bowren till further order. If Bowren should survive his wife, the society would then take the whole fund; but if the wife survived, they would take nothing.

In Re The Accidental Assurance Company was a petition that the voluntary winding-up of this company, under the supervision of the court, might be superseded by a compulsory order, and that Mr. Whiffen, the present official liquidator, might be removed, and another appointed in his stead. The grounds of the application were that the resolution which had been passed to wind-up the company voluntarily was invalid by reason of certain of the members, who took part in passing the resolution, being disqualified, and that Mr. Whiffen, in making out the list of contributories, had omitted the names of certain directors, who ought, it was alleged, to have been placed on the list. The petition was supported by sixty-one shareholders, holding 980 shares, and by creditors to the amount of about 10,000*l.*, of which about 3000*l.* had been proved. It was opposed by creditors to the amount of about 23,000*l.*, of which about 13,000*l.* had been proved. His Lordship said that he was of opinion that it would be beneficial for the company that the present official liquidator should be removed; he had been a clerk of the company, and his previous relation to the company rendered him unfitted to discharge the duties of official liquidator to this company. His Lordship would not make an order for a compulsory winding-up, unless all parties wished it; he would refer it to chambers to appoint a new official liquidator instead of Mr. Whiffen. The shareholders and creditors who supported the petition should have one set of costs between them, and the petitioners should have one set of costs, but the opposing creditors could not be allowed any costs.

V.C. MALINS' COURT.

One or two cases deserving of record have occurred during the past week. The first was Re The Land Shipping Colliery Company (Limited), being a question as to the liability of Messrs. Harwood, Gull, Geary, and Stafford as contributories, their names having been placed on the list in the winding-up. These cases greatly resemble Crawley's and Robinson's cases, in The Peruvian Railways Company, inasmuch as they had most of them taken shares at the request of another person, and had done little more than apply for shares. In Harwood's case, he applied for twenty shares, at the request of William Sparrow, auditor, and a shareholder who had been absolved from liability, chiefly on the ground of the lax mode in which the company had been managed: (vide 18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 786.) Crosse, the secretary, being told of the application by Dr. Sutton, lessee of the Land-Shipping Colliery, filled up a letter of allotment, and deposed to sending it by post, and, not receiving a reply, sent another letter of reminder, asking for 60*l.* Harwood then repudiated liability; but the application was not forthcoming, nor was there evidence of the actual posting of the letter of allotment. Harwood's case was that he had signed (with others) a paper agreeing to take shares at the request of Sparrow, but conditional on the company being successfully floated, and two-thirds of the shares bona fide taken, whereas the company never was successful, and out of two-thirds of the shares taken (1350) 640 were paid up, and given, as part of the purchase-money, to Sutton for the colliery. On this state of facts the Vice-Chancellor held that Mr. Harwood's name must be taken off the list; but, as he was evidently playing fast and loose, he must pay his own costs. In Mr. Gull's case the application was in evidence, for twenty shares, taken at the request of Dr. Sutton, and he (Gull) stated his belief that an allotment of shares was made, but it was not until the eve of the winding-up that an application was made for the 60*l.* The Vice-Chancellor said that to make a man liable as a contributory it must be proved that he had applied for and received an allotment of shares, and the fact communicated, provable actually or by his subsequent conduct. In Re The Peruvian Railways case, Re Crawley, he executed a blank transfer, there being no evidence of his reception of the letter of allotment, and he was held liable, and also on appeal. Here the evidence of the allotment was very loose, and Mr. Gull's name must be taken off the list, with costs. The official liquidator then gave up the other cases, but asked for costs, which were refused, but his costs given out of the estate in the usual way.

The next case was that The Cheltenham and Swansea Railway Carriage and Wagon Company (Limited), which was chiefly peculiar for the gross and reiterated charges made against the directors and the Gloucestershire bank in the ordinary petition to wind-up, with the usual statutory affidavit, and a great mass of cross-examination taken before a special examination. It appeared that for nearly eighty years the firm of Shackleford, Ford, and Co. had carried on business as carriage makers at Swansea, and in 1866 transferred their business to a company called "Shackleford, Ford, and Co. (Limited)," in the next year changed to the present title under the sanction of the Board of Trade. A meeting of shareholders then took place, and the result was a committee of investigation. This committee made a report stating that the concern was insolvent at the time of the transfer, was kept up by accommodation bills; that it would have been better if the parties conducting it had had a direct pecuniary interest, and setting forth large figures of loss, chiefly as to a sum of 24,000*l.*, and recommending a winding-up, a sale or reconstruction, if it appeared that there was the nucleus of a good business. To this the directors published a reply (both being printed), denying the insolvency, insisting that everything was bona fide, and that in the management (or mismanagement) they were the victims and not the cause. The petitioner was chaplain of Brislington House, the well-known lunatic asylum, the holder of ten shares on which he was liable for 20*l.*, having paid 80*l.*, and had an opportunity of retiring when the company was reconstructed, but had not availed himself of it. It will be remembered that when the petition was presented it was published in the Bristol papers in extenso, and a motion to commit the proprietors of those journals for contempt was made, and they were ordered to pay the costs. After the hearing of the petition had proceeded as far as the conclusion of the opening, and the reading of evidence in support of the petition, there being affidavits in opposition, entirely denying the charges made, the Vice-Chancellor, in an elaborate consideration of the petition and evidence, made some very strong observations on the subject. It was evident, he said, that the petitioner was actuated by most malevolent motives, and probably at the bottom of the publication of the petition in the newspapers. The affidavits in opposition to the petition were express in their denial of all the gross charges made in it; and it appeared clear that the company was carrying on a good business, with 250 workmen, at an expense of 1000*l.* a month, with a contract for 37,000*l.* with the Russian Government, and was perfectly able to meet its liabilities. It was, therefore, neither unable to pay its debts, nor was it just or equitable that there should be a winding-up order, and therefore the petition must be dismissed with costs, including the costs of the directors and the bank.

Another singular case was that of Cornish v. Hall, raising the question how far sub-purchasers are bound under a restrictive covenant introduced in conditions of sale and conveyances with respect to building land. In this particular case two clergymen were the owners of land near Norwood, called Dagnall's Park, and it was laid out in a great many lots, and some of them sold by auction. In the conditions of sale on this occasion, which was in 1851, there was a stipulation that the covenants should run with the land, and that the houses to be built should not be placed nearer than twenty-five feet to a certain road, should be of the value of 300*l.*, to be used as a private residence, and not used as a shop or public-house. In pursuance of this condition, in the conveyance to two of the purchasers, there was a covenant extending the restriction to "any trade or business whatsoever." In 1854 there was another sale, and the condition then introduced the words "beer-house," and the value of the house was put at 200*l.* The Brighton Railway Company took a portion of the property, through which the railway was constructed, with an embankment and a station, and, not requiring eventually all that was taken, they sold it as surplus land, and the defendant purchased it. The plaintiff was the purchaser of seven lots, and on two of them he had built a house, and a school and gymnasium, and, the defendant proceeding to erect three houses, two of which appeared to be intended for shops and the other as a public house, this bill was filed on the ground that it was in contravention of the covenant. The defendant called in question the plaintiff's right to sue, contending that the school was not a private residence, that the railway having taken the land, the covenant was thereby discharged, and that one of the conveyances was in fee, without restriction. After an elaborate argument, the Vice-Chancellor said that if the defendant's contention was correct, no man in this great country, where privacy was so important, could be safe from the noise and nuisance of shops or public-houses; the cases were numerous, and he must carefully consider them before giving judgment.

The next case was that of the Mid-Wales Railway Company v. The Cambrian Railways Company, which was a demurrer to a bill filed to restrain an unequal use of the Llandloes Station, which by the Act was to be enjoyed by the three companies (the plaintiffs and defendants and the Llandloes and Newton) equally, giving joint power to appoint officers, make bye-laws, &c., by a committee, which had not been appointed. It was objected by the defendants that the committee was the proper tribunal, and until that had been tried the plaintiffs had no right to come into the court, which had no power or sufficient means to adjudicate between the parties. His Honour, however, was of opinion that the bill was one which must be answered, the principle being that it was a defendant's duty to demur only in a case where it was perfectly clear that no relief could be had. That was not the case here, and he was not aware that the fact of there being another tribunal ousted the jurisdiction of this court. The demurrer must be overruled in the usual way.

Catling v. The Great Northern Railway Company occupied a considerable portion of the sittings of the court during Tuesday and Wednesday.

day, and was a bill filed by a builder at Holloway for the specific performance of a very special contract to take about five acres of land near the Seven Sisters-road. The plaintiff having opposed a Bill which the company were promoting in Parliament, under which the land in question would be taken in consideration of the withdrawal of that opposition, it was agreed that if the Bill passed in any shape the company should take the land at a price to be ascertained upon an apporportioned rent, and to pay compensation as after mentioned, also cost of drainage, and the purchase to be completed in six months after the passing of the Act. The value of the land, compensation, and costs to be referred to a surveyor in the usual way in case of difference. The price of the ground to be twenty-five years' purchase, subject to the deductions of the time occupied in making the improved rents, and the plaintiff to cease building. The plaintiff sent in a claim of 40,000*l.*; the parties differed, and the matter was referred to Mr. Clutton, the well-known land agent, who awarded 16,675*l.* in all. The company gave a cheque for that sum to their solicitors, and the plaintiff offered to take it if other matters were left open, which was refused, and this bill was filed, claiming against the company interest on the purchase-money in the usual way, costs of reference, and costs of suit. The Vice-Chancellor was of opinion that the interest must be paid on the usual principle, from the date of the contract; that the whole proceeding, if not technically, was substantially under the Lands Clauses Act; and that was proved, partly by Mr. Clutton having annexed a declaration to the award that he so acted, and being aware of its provisions, he would no doubt have given a much larger sum, had he not acted under it. It was true that the company were not in possession; but under the clauses in the contract, the plaintiff was deprived of it, although it was also true that it produced no rent. Moreover, they purchased the reversion, and therefore if the plaintiff had paid anything for rent since the date of the contract, he must be reimbursed, and have the costs of reference and the costs of suit. The interest must be 4 per cent.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

The Chief Justice announced that on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, the 10th, 11th, and 12th of May, the court will sit in banco, and will take the new trial rules in cases tried before himself and Mr. Justice Mellor. In the case of Levenson v. The Queen (better known as Madame Rachel's case), which was a writ of error brought up on a conviction of the plaintiff in error at the Central Criminal Court for obtaining money by false pretences, whereupon she was sentenced to a term of penal servitude, Mr. Mellish, Q. C. appeared and argued that the conviction was erroneous. Three grounds of error were alleged: First, that under the 2nd section of the Central Criminal Court Act (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36), it is necessary that two at least of the judges of the Central Criminal Court should be present at the trial of the parties charged, and that they should be the same two; and that upon the trial of the plaintiff in error which extended over three days, the two same judges were not present on all the days; secondly, that the Central Criminal Court cannot be divided into distinct courts, and that it was so divided upon the trial in question; thirdly, that Mr. Commissioner Kerr before whom the prisoner was tried had no legal authority to sit as judge. The court held that the two last grounds of error were untenable, but as regarded the first, they took time to consider their judgment.

In Francis v. Cockerell a special case which came on for argument on the 30th of the last month, an entirely new point came before the court for decision. A number of persons acted together as a committee for the purpose of getting up races in a country town, and one of them, the defendant, undertook the duty of getting a stand erected for the accommodation of the public on the race-ground. The profits, if any, were to go in aid of the race fund. The case found that the defendant employed, to erect the stand, competent contractors; but that there was negligence in the manner in which it was erected, owing to which it gave way, and the plaintiff, amongst others, sustained personal injury. Should the defendant be held liable under such circumstances? Mr. Mellish, Q. C. (with him were Mr. H. James and Mr. Harington) argued that he should, as somebody must be answerable to the plaintiff for the injury suffered by him, and there was no privity between him and the contractors, whilst the defendant, if held liable, had his remedy over against them. Mr. Matthews, Q. C. (with whom was Mr. Huddleston, Q. C.) contended that from the position occupied by the defendant the only duty cast upon him was to employ competent persons to erect the stand, and the case found that he had done so. The court reserved its judgment.

On the same day Mr. Mellish, Q. C. (with him

Mr. Hawkins, Q.C. and Mr. Charles Russell) obtained a rule nisi on all the points reserved on the part of the defendants in the famous Saurin v. Starr case. The court, however, intimated an opinion that a new trial would not be granted, on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of evidence, as the issues determined by the verdict were matters for the jury, and the jury had throughout the long trial discharged its duties with the greatest care and patience. The points to be argued will be whether there was any contract between Miss Saurin and the sisterhood at Hull which the law will recognise and aid; whether the contract is not illegal, as (in addition to the ground of its repugnance to certain statutes), in restraint of marriage, and by its obligation of poverty opposed to industry, and void also as a contract of unconditional service to the end of life; and whether, if the original contract is so, the count for a conspiracy to deprive Miss Saurin of the benefit of that contract can be sustained. As to the count for libel, it will be argued that there was no evidence of publication on the part of the defendant, Mrs. Kennedy; that there was no evidence of the libel to go to the jury at the end of the plaintiff's case, as the depositions had not then been put in by the defendants, and the plaintiff's counsel had refused to put them in; and, finally, that there was such a variance between the libels contained in the declaration and those contained in the depositions, that the count for libel in the declaration cannot be sustained.

The power of the Consistory Court to authorise by a faculty the use for secular purposes of ground once consecrated for burial, was argued on Monday last in the case of Reg. v. Travers Twiss. A piece of ground attached to the old workhouse of Shoreditch, had been consecrated in 1778, and some persons were buried there, but for the last forty-five years there has been no one buried in the place. It having been found necessary to remove the old workhouse and build a larger one, a portion of the new buildings, the chapel amongst them, was erected on part of the old consecrated ground. A faculty to authorise the use of the ground was applied for and obtained from the Consistory Court. The Solicitor-General applied for a rule for a prohibition to the judge of the Consistory Court, on the ground that this was a desecration of the consecrated ground, and an act which it was not competent for that court to authorise. Mr. Barnard, Mr. Taylor, and Dr. Pritchard now showed cause against the rule, and contended that the matter was one exclusively for the cognisance of the Ecclesiastical Court; that it was competent for that court to grant a faculty which did not interfere with any secular rights; that where there is anything of ecclesiastical cognisance in the subject matter of the faculty, the Court of Queen's Bench should not interfere, but presume that the inferior court would not exceed the limits of its jurisdiction; that here the authorisation of the erection of the chapel, at any rate, on part of the old consecrated ground, was within the jurisdiction of the Consistory Court. The erection has already taken place, and the faculty is asked for only to indemnify against possible ecclesiastical consequences; and finally, the promoter of the present proceedings is not a parishioner, or in any way directly interested in the matter, but a perfect stranger. The Solicitor-General based his argument in support of the rule for a prohibition on the broad ground that it is not competent to any court to alter the character of ground once formally consecrated for the purposes of burial, or to apply it to any secular purpose; that nothing short of an Act of Parliament can do so. He referred to many cases in support of his contention, and especially to the language of Dr. Lushington in 2 Robertson's Reps. 559, "When ground is once consecrated, no judge has power to grant a faculty to sanction the use of such ground for secular purposes." The court (consisting of Chief Justice Cockburn, and Justices Hannen and Hayes) adopted and approved the language of Dr. Lushington as to the inviolable character of ground once consecrated, but discharged the rule for a prohibition in this case on other grounds, viz., that the relator was an entire stranger; that the use of a portion of the ground for the erection of a chapel was a thing which the Consistory Court could authorise, and, therefore, that this court, on the principle laid down in the case of Halleck v. The University of Cambridge, 1 Q. B. 593, would, where several distinct things are comprised in the faculty, some of which might be lawfully granted, presume that the Ecclesiastical Court would not exceed its jurisdiction.

The irrepressible Miss Fay made another appearance in court on this day, and resumed her complaint about some very old affidavits which had been burnt as no longer useful. The court could only tell her that the Master of the Rolls having complained of the enormous mass of useless papers which were collected in the record offices, it had been found necessary to burn a large number of them.

On Thursday last Mr. Manley Smith, the Master of the Queen's Bench, to whom the charges brought by Madame Rachel (otherwise Sarah Leveson) against her attorney, Mr. Haynes, were referred for investigation, read to the court a long report on the various matters inquired into by him. The report completely exonerated Mr. Haynes from the charges brought against him, but slightly censured the manner in which his accounts had been kept, and the master was of opinion that nothing existed which called for the exercise of the summary jurisdiction of the court. The court (consisting of the Lord Chief Justice, and Justices Lush and Hayes) were clearly of opinion that the rule which had been obtained (calling on Mr. Haynes to show cause why he should not be struck off the rolls) should be discharged, and that if any money were due by Mr. Haynes to Mrs. Leveson, it must be recovered by action. The rule was discharged with costs.

Mr. Denman, Q. C. (with Mr. Bridge), moved on behalf of Mr. Henry Munster, for a rule calling on the publisher of the Sheffield and Rotherham Independent, to show cause why a criminal information should not be filed against him for an alleged libel contained in articles published in that paper. Mr. Munster had unsuccessfully contested Cashel against Mr. O'Beirne, who was elected. Mr. O'Beirne was afterwards unseated on the ground of personal bribery and bribery by his agents; the judge who tried the petition reported also that Mr. Munster had been guilty of bribery by his agents, but not personally. The articles complained of spoke of his having been pronounced guilty of bribery, without adding, through his agents, and commented on the fact of his having expended about 6000*l.* in the borough of Cashel in the space of three months. The Lord Chief Justice thought it competent to a public journalist to say that where 6000*l.* was expended within three months in such a borough as Cashel, the finding of the judge that the candidate who expended it was not guilty of bribery, is not satisfactory to the public, and also to comment on the evidence; and the court being of opinion that the affidavit of Mr. Munster did not with sufficient particularity deny the main charges contained in the articles, refused, without a further affidavit, to grant a rule.

Mr. Lopes moved, on behalf of Mr. Wood, an articled clerk, that the court should grant a fiat for his admission as an attorney, notwithstanding that his articles had, by inadvertence, been registered in the Court of Common Pleas. The court were of opinion that the Incorporated Law Society should know of the matter before a precedent of this kind should be set, and doubted their own power to grant the application. They advised that application should be made to the Court of Common Pleas, in which the articles had been registered.

In Doust v. Slater, the defendant had received an order from the Metropolitan Board of Works to connect the sewage of his house with the main drainage, and, in carrying out the order, committed a trespass on the land of another, under the bona fide belief that the land was his own; for which trespass this action was brought. The question was argued whether he was entitled to notice of action under sect. 106 of the Metropolitan Local Management Acts Amendment Act (25 & 26 Vict. c. 106) which provides that "no writ or process shall be sued out against or served upon, and no proceeding shall be instituted against, the Metropolitan Board of Works, or any vestry or district board, or their clerk, or any clerks, surveyor, contractor, officer, or person whomsoever, acting under their or any of their directions, for anything done or intended to be done under the powers of such board or vestry under the said Acts, or this act, until the expiration of one calendar month next after notice in writing shall have been served upon" the person intended to be proceeded against. Mr. Edmund Thomas argued in support of the necessity of notice of action; Mr. Weston on the other side. The court held that the defendant was not acting under the direction of the board within the meaning of the Act of Parliament, but was only performing a duty cast on him by statute, which if not performed by him, the board could call on him to perform, and therefore, that notice of action was not necessary.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

On Tuesday this court was occupied during the greater portion of the day with the Taunton election petition, which came before the court on a rule calling on the petitioners to show cause why the petition should not be taken off the file of the court, on the ground that the judgment of Mr. Justice Blackburn, on the former petition against Mr. Serjeant Cox, was final, and that no new petition could be presented. It appeared from the affidavits that at the last election for Taunton there were three candidates, Mr. Serjeant Cox, Mr. Barclay, and Mr. Henry James. The two former gentlemen were returned as duly elected, upon which a petition was presented against the return of Mr. Serjeant Cox by two voters, who claimed the seat for Mr. James. Upon this Mr. Serjeant Cox gave notice of a recriminatory case against Mr. James, alleging bribery, treating, and undue influence. At the hearing before Mr. Justice Blackburn, the witnesses for the petitioners were cross-examined in support of the recriminatory case, but no evidence was adduced on the part of the respondent. Mr. Justice Blackburn on the 5th March certified that Mr. Serjeant Cox was not duly elected, and that Mr. Henry James was duly elected, and upon this the present petition was presented by two voters, and alleged bribery, treating, and undue influence on the part of Mr. James and his agents. The court held that the judgment of the election judge was a judgment as to the status of the parties, and final, and made the rule absolute to stay all proceedings on the petition, thinking that course preferable to taking the petition off the file of the court.

Late in the day Mr. Justice Byles came into court, and the court delivered judgment in the case of Bridges v. Garret, which is a case of considerable interest to stewards of manors. The facts were shortly as follows: The steward of a manor, of which the plaintiff is lord, wrote to the solicitor of the defendant, who was a purchaser of some copyholds of the manor, telling him that he could take the admission as his (the steward's) deputy, forwarding him a form of admission, which stated, in the usual way, that the person admitted paid his fine. The defendant's solicitor accordingly took the admission, and informed the steward that the defendant had not paid his fine and fees, but would do so shortly; upon which the steward replied, expressing a hope that the defendant would soon remit a cheque for fine and fees. Subsequently the defendant handed his solicitor a cheque for an amount including the fine, fees, and the solicitor's own charges. This cheque was crossed with the names of the solicitor's bankers, and presented by them and duly paid; but the solicitor's account being overdrawn they refused to hand over the money to him, and the solicitor subsequently wrote to the steward of the manor, stating that he had received the fine and fees, but that his circumstances were such that he could not pay them over. This action was then commenced by the lord to recover the fine; and the question was, whether the payment to the deputy steward was a good payment to the lord. The court were divided; Chief Justice Bovill and Justice Smith holding that it was not, mainly on the ground that the authority to the deputy steward, if any, was only to receive the money in cash and not mixed up with other moneys in a cheque; Justice Byles thought that there was evidence to justify the finding of the jury that the deputy steward had authority to receive the money in the manner above described; and therefore that the payment to him was a good payment against the lord. The majority of the court being in favour of the plaintiff, the rule to enter the verdict for him was made absolute. It is understood that the case will be taken up to the Exchequer Chambers on appeal.

On Wednesday, the two election petitions which have been turned into special cases were heard by the full court, consisting of the Lord Chief Justice Willes, and Justices M. Smith and Brett. In the first, that of Salisbury, which turned upon the validity of a number of votes given by occupiers of tenements of small value, who had not been in their own name rated to the poor-rates, was decided in favour of the sitting member, Mr. Hamilton; in the other, the Manchester case, the arguments were concluded just at four o'clock, and judgment was deferred. The votes disputed in the Salisbury petition numbered 472, of which the respondent polled a majority of 122 over the petitioner, who was an unsuccessful candidate. Mr. Hamilton's majority over Mr. Ryder on the whole election was 56; the consequence, therefore, of these votes being upset, would have been to give the petitioner the seat. Their validity, however, was not considered, because the petitioner's case broke down on the preliminary question whether, as no objection was taken to them before the revising barrister, the court, upon a scrutiny, could interfere with these votes or not. The 3rd section of the Representation of the People Act 1867, requires, as part of the qualification to entitle a man to the occupation franchise for boroughs that he shall be rated and pay rates for a year; and the 56th section applies the provisions of the previous Acts on the subject to the new one. The 79th section of the Registration Act 1843, provided that the register of voters shall be taken to be conclusive evidence that the persons therein named continue to have the qualification annexed to their names respectively in the register in force at such election subject to a qualification as to residence. Section 98 enacts that it shall be lawful for an election committee to inquire into and decide upon the right to vote of any person who, being upon the register of voters at the time of such election, shall have voted at such election, or not being upon such register shall have tendered his vote at such election in case the name of such person shall have been specially retained upon such register, or inserted therein, or expunged or omitted therefrom by the express decision of the revising barrister, who shall have revised the list of voters from which such register shall have been found; and also that it shall and may be lawful for such committee to inquire into and decide upon the right to vote of any person who, being upon such register, shall have voted in such election so far as the same may be disputed on the ground of legal incapacity at the time of his voting under and by virtue of any statute now or hereafter to be in force, or on the ground of any other legal incapacity at the time of his voting, which may have arisen subsequently to the expiration of the time allowed for making out the list of voters from which the register of voters in force at the time of such election shall have been formed; but that except in such cases, or on such grounds as aforesaid, the register of voters in force at the time of such election shall, so far as regards the proceedings before such committee, be final and conclusive to all intents and purposes as to the right to vote at such election of every person who shall be upon such register. It was contended for the petitioner by Mr. Quain, Q.C., that this nonpayment of rates was a legal incapacity under this section, if (as he also contended was not the case) the words in the new Act were broad enough to include this section. Mr. Mellish, Q.C. argued for the respondent, and the court held with him that they had no jurisdiction upon a scrutiny to enter into a consideration of this point, which was finally decided by the revision of voters.

In the Manchester case, Mr. Manisty, Q.C., argued for the petitioner, and Mr. Mellish, Q.C., appeared on behalf of the sitting member, Mr. Birley. The objection to the validity of the election of the respondent was based on contracts between the firm of Messrs. Macintosh and Co., of which Mr. Birley was a member, and the Secretary of State in Council for India, and also another contract between the same firm and the Broadmoor Lunatic Asylum. It was contended that these were contracts for, or on account of the public service, within the 1st section of 22 Geo. 3, c. 45. The words are very general: "Any person who shall, directly or indirectly, himself or by any person whatsoever in trust for him, or for his use or benefit or on his account, undertake, execute, hold, or enjoy, in the whole or in part any contract, agreement, or commission made or entered into with, under, or from the commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury . . . Or with any other person or persons whatsoever, for or on account of the public service . . . shall be incapable of being elected, or of sitting or voting as a member of the House of Commons during the time that he shall execute, hold, or enjoy, any such contract, agreement, or commission, or any part or share thereof, or any benefit or emolument arising from the same." In defence it was argued that as to the Indian contracts the money was not paid by the House of Commons, therefore the Act did not apply; and further, as a matter of fact, the contracts were completed before the election, the only thing left to be done being payment. As to the asylum contract, the case found that neither the respondent nor his agents knew that Broadmoor was a Government establishment, and in a penal statute of this kind a guilty knowledge must be established. As has been intimated, the court took time to consider.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

On Tuesday, April 27th, an important question arose in the Court of Exchequer in the case of Craven v. Smith, with reference to the effect of the 5th section of the new County Courts Act of 1867 on actions of slander in cases where damages not exceeding 10*l.* are recovered, and also as to how far the court are at liberty to take cognisance of the record when not in court nor brought before them by affidavit. The action was for slander; and the declaration complained of words imputing a felony to the plaintiff in very strong and offensive terms. The judgment passed by default, and a writ of inquiry was executed before Mr. Under-sheriff Burchell. The jury gave 5*l.* damages; and the under-sheriff expressed his opinion that the plaintiff ought to have his costs, but declined to certify on the ground that he had no power to do so. The plaintiff thereupon applied to the court for an order for costs, under the 5th section of the County Courts Act 1867. The affidavits upon which the motion was made mentioned the facts that occurred on the execution of the writ of inquiry, but did not state the cause of action or the circumstances under which the slanderous words had been spoken. It was contended for the defendant, that under these circumstances the court could not take cognisance of the nature of the action, the record not being in court nor being brought before the court by affidavit. The damages, therefore, being only 5*l.*, the plaintiff prima facie was deprived of his costs under sect. 5, and had not brought before the court any sufficient materials to enable them to say that there was sufficient reason for bringing the action in the Superior Court. It was strongly urged that even if the court could take cognisance of the fact that the action was for slander, and therefore one which could not have been brought in the County Court, it was the intention of the Legislature to discourage trumpery and trivial actions altogether, and they therefore had fixed the limit of 10*l.* by the 5th section; it lay upon the plaintiff in all cases to show special reason why he should recover costs if he did not recover damages above that sum. The mere fact of the action being for slander, and therefore one that could not be brought in the County Court, was not a sufficient reason, inasmuch as it might be that the action ought not to have been brought at all. The court thought that they could look at the record, which must be taken for this purpose to be in court, to ascertain the nature of the action. They referred to the practice on motions for new trials in the Queen's Bench and Exchequer, where reference was made to the record, though the rule did not refer to it. With respect to the general question, they thought that this was a case for allowing the plaintiff his costs. They would not be understood as meaning to say that in all cases the fact that the action could not be brought in the County Court was a sufficient reason for bringing it in the Superior Court, for it might be that it was not an action proper to be brought at all. The fact that an action could not be brought in the County Court was prima facie of great weight to show that there was sufficient reason for bringing it in the Superior Court, especially in a case like the present, where the declaration imputed a felony in strong terms. The jury had given more than nominal damages, and the sheriff had expressed an opinion that the plaintiff ought to have his costs. They therefore made absolute the rule for allowing plaintiff his costs. The court were clearly of opinion that sect. 5 applied to slander and other actions which could be brought in the County Court, and Kelly, C.B., expressed an opinion that the under-sheriff might have certified on the execution of the writ of inquiry. Cleasby, B., seemed to have some doubt whether the record ought not to be in court, in order to enable the court to refer to it; but concluded upon the analogy of rules for new trials, and motions in arrest of judgment, that there were cases, among which was the present, where the record must be taken to be in court. With reference to the question mooted by the learned judge, as to the necessity of the record being in court to enable the court to refer to it, may not the true principle be that the roll must be made up and carried in only where the contents of the record are in issue in some other cause, or are required in some other court? The court must be taken to have in its remembrance and cognisance all the proceedings in an action until fully determined; and it will be remembered that pleadings were formerly oral, and, until comparatively recent times, continuances had to be entered from time to time to keep the suit alive. (See Reports of the week.)

In Haddocks v. Haddocks, an application was made that the master should tax the plaintiff's costs. It appeared that the action had been commenced between the date of the passing and the coming into operation of the new County Courts Act 1867. The action was for goods sold and delivered, and the plaintiff recovered 15*l.* 17*s.* 2*d.* after the Act came into operation. It was contended that under these circumstances the plaintiff was entitled to his costs under the Statute of Gloucester. Some members of the court seemed disposed to think that the words of the 5th section of the County Courts Act must receive their natural interpretation, and that "after the passing of this Act" was not to be read as meaning "after the coming into operation of this Act." It appearing, however, that this was a decision in a case of Wood v. Riley, L. Rep. 4 C. P. 26, to the contrary, the court granted a rule nisi, which has since been made absolute, no cause being shown.

In the case of Collins v. Phillips, the question arose whether articles supplied and work done in fitting up and furnishing a shop for the defendant when a minor could be recovered for as necessities. The unfortunate plaintiff appeared in person to show cause against a rule which had been obtained for a new trial, the jury having found that the articles supplied were necessities. It seemed, however, on inquiry that he had not much cause to show, except that it was very hard that he should be kept out of his money, and the court being clearly of opinion that the articles supplied for the purpose of fitting-up a shop were not necessities, made the rule absolute.

In the case of Smith v. The Brighton Railway Company, decided on Thursday, the 29th April, a point arose which bore great similarity to that involved in the recent case of Siner v. The Great Western Railway Company, decided in the Exchequer Chamber. It appeared that the plaintiff had been a traveller to Peckham Station. At this station there is a platform on either side, and seven large lamps overhead, lighting each platform. When the train came to the station, just one carriage overshot the platform. In this carriage the plaintiff and a man named Bagot were riding. It was sworn by one of the company's servants that as the train passed into the station he called out loudly, "Keep your seats;" he acknowledged, however, that this was not intended as any warning as to the train's overshooting the platform, but only to prevent people descending before the train had fairly stopped. The carriage had the usual means of descent, a step a few inches lower than the floor of the carriage, and a footboard just under the step, about fifteen inches lower. Bagot got down, and said to the plaintiff, "Mind," the plaintiff then got on to the step and jumped down. The place was dark; it was rather doubtful whether the plaintiff jumped on to an incline leading from the platform to the level of the ground, or on to the level ground itself; at any rate he fell, and sustained severe injuries. The jury found for the defendants. It was now sought to have a new trial on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of the evidence. The rule was also obtained on affidavits, from which it appeared that after the verdict had been returned for the defendants, upon the jury grumbling at the smallness of the remuneration afforded to them by the law, a clerk to the defendants' attorney gave a sovereign to be distributed amongst them. It was contended that this was an act of so improper a character, and so calculated to throw suspicion on the administration of justice, that the court would not let a verdict stand under these circumstances. The affidavits on the other side represented that this was an isolated act done on the spur of the moment without any corrupt motive, and that it being done after the verdict had been returned could not have influenced it in any way. The court thought that the act was extremely improper, and one which, if repeated, might amount to a contempt, and call for most severe measures; but, under the circumstances, they were disposed to think that it was an isolated occurrence, and had not in any way influenced the jury in the conclusion to which they came. With respect to the question of negligence, it was urged that the plaintiff was entitled to expect a platform at the place when the carriage stopped, and as it was dark he could not see that there was none, and there was therefore no negligence on his part. The court, however, was of opinion that the rule should be discharged. Chief Baron Kelly intimated an opinion, speaking for himself, that a railway company had no right to expose a passenger to the alternative of getting down in an inconvenient place, or being carried on to some place to which he did not want to go. But after the decision of the Exchequer Chamber in Siner v. The Great Western Railway Company, by which he felt bound, he could not come to the conclusion that there was sufficient evidence of negligence to justify a verdict against the company. There were, moreover, circumstances pointing to contributory negligence on plaintiff's part. It was in evidence that the plaintiff was well acquainted with the Peckham Station; he must, therefore, have known that he had been carried beyond the platform, inasmuch as the platform was well lighted, whereas the place where he got out was dark. He had been warned by his fellow passenger; he had not made use of the footboard, but had jumped down in the dark. Baron Bramwell said that he was of opinion that there was no sufficient case of negligence made out against the defendants. Even supposing that there was evidence of negligence against the defendants, there was nothing to show that the accident occurred by reason of the alleged negligence. By way of illustration, the learned judge suggested the following case: Suppose the overshooting of the platform had been the wilful act of the engine driver, to spite the plaintiff, and the plaintiff had then jumped out. Could the accident have been said to have arisen through the engine driver's wilful act? if not, could it then be said to have arisen through the company's negligence? The truth was, that it occurred through the plaintiff's own act in jumping down in the dark, taking his chance of what might happen. The rest of the court concurring, the rule was discharged.

In the case of Leney and another v. Taplin, in which the question of whether certain letters constituted a complete contract for the sale of goods, the learned barons being divided in opinion gave judgment seriatim. It was an action for breach of contract, for non-delivery of some sixty tons of hay, which the plaintiffs alleged the defendant had agreed to sell to them. At the trial before Baron Martin, the plaintiffs were nonsuited, with leave to move to enter a verdict for 30*l.*, and a rule was moved for and obtained by the plaintiffs to that effect, on the ground that there was evidence of a contract, and that the letters produced amounted to a contract. The plaintiffs were dealers in hay, and the defendant was a farmer and the owner of certain ricks of hay. The correspondence on which the question hinged consisted of four letters, to the following effect—the first letter was from the defendant to the plaintiffs, dated 14th July, as follows: "Since I saw you, I have been offered 4l. 12s. 6d. a ton for the ricks of hay fetched from my farm. If you like to take them, containing at a rough estimation sixty tons, at 4l. 15s. a ton, to be delivered at Wycombe, you to give me a cheque for 270l. on account, and to have an agreement drawn up in writing to what we agree to." To this letter the defendant replied by letter of the 15th July, "We will take the ricks of hay at 4l. 15s. a ton (say sixty tons), to be delivered at Wycombe, as per your letter. We have deferred sending you a cheque, as your name is not written clear enough. Please send name." On the 19th July the plaintiffs wrote to defendant, inclosing a cheque for 270l., in the following terms: "We now send cheque for 270l., and should have sent it before but could not make out your name." In this letter was enclosed a receipt or agreement in the following form: "Received of Mr. S. Leney 270l. on account of four ricks of hay containing sixty tons (as seen by Mr. E. Leney), at 4l. 15s. a ton, to be delivered, &c., Mr. Leney to take only such as is fit for market." On the 20th the defendant wrote returning the cheque, and saying that "not having heard as he expected from the plaintiffs on the 17th, he had sold the hay to another person at 4l. 12s. 6d., to be fetched, &c." The plaintiffs then brought the above action. The arguments on the rule were partly heard in Hilary Term last, and again in the present Term, when the court delayed giving judgment in the hope that a settlement would be effected. Mr. Powell, Q.C., Mr. Codd, and Mr. F. Turner, for the defendant, showing cause, and Mr. O'Malley, Q.C. and Mr. J. O. Griffiths for the plaintiffs supporting their rule. No settlement having been arrived at, and the parties desiring to have judgment, the court now proceeded to give judgment accordingly, Barons Martin and Cleasby being of opinion that the letters relied on formed no complete contract, and that there was no acceptance of the contract. The Lord Chief Baron and Baron Bramwell, on the other hand, being of opinion that the proposal contained in plaintiff's letter of the 14th July was accepted by the defendant in his letter of the 15th, and that the contract being then complete, an action lay for nonperformance; and therefore the plaintiff's rule to enter a verdict should be made absolute. In giving their judgments, both Barons Martin and Bramwell expressed their opinion that there was no difference on the point of law between the members of the court, but only on the construction that was to be put upon the language of the letters that passed between the parties; and Baron Bramwell observed that the case would perhaps be cited as an instance of the "glorious uncertainty of the law," but it was not so, for there was not the least difference on the Bench as to the law. The result was, that it was understood that Baron Cleasby would withdraw his judgment, in order to give the defendant an opportunity of appealing, if he elected so to do, and the rule to enter a verdict for the plaintiff was made absolute.

The well used up question of the validity of a composition-deed under the Bankruptcy Act 1861, as a defence to an action by a non-assenting creditor, was again discussed in the case of Cairncross (P. O.) v. Wills, which came on upon demurrer to a plea. It was an action by the plaintiff, as public officer of a joint stock bank, to recover the amount of a banking debt, to which the defendant pleaded a deed under sect. 192 of the Bankruptcy Act 1861, made between the defendant, of the first part, and certain other persons, creditors, &c., of the defendant (thereinafter called the said creditors) of the second part, and Alice Avery, widow, and J. M. Drew, A. H. Limmington, and T. D. Wills, trustees of the marriage settlement of the defendant (thereinafter called the said parties) of the third part, whereby, after reciting that a meeting of the defendant's creditors had been convened, at which it was resolved that a composition of 13s. in the pound, payable by instalments, at three, six, and ten months, should be accepted in discharge of the said debtor's debts, the family cash creditors, namely, Avery's trustees, and Wills' trustees agreeing that payment of their dividends should be deferred until the other creditors were paid the above instalments, and reciting that a majority in number, representing three-fourths in value, &c. of the creditors, had agreed to carry out the said resolution and to execute the said deed, it was witnessed that in pursuance of the said agreement said resolution, and in consideration of the premises, the said debtor covenanted with the said creditors, parties of the second part, that he would pay to the said creditors of the second part, the said composition on their respective debts by three instalments at the expiration of the said three, six, and ten calendar months from the 5th March 1869. And the said debtor covenanted with the said parties of the third part to pay the said composition on their debts after the expiration of the said ten months, and in pursuance of agreement, and in consideration of the premises they, the said creditors, thereby released the said debtor and his estate and effects from the several debts due to or claimed by them respectively. The declaration contained the usual averments of compliance with all the statutory requisites necessary to make the deed valid under sect. 192 of the Bankruptcy Act 1861, and also of the performance of all conditions, &c., and that the plaintiffs and the said banking company had become and were bound by the said deed as if the said banking company had been parties thereto, and had executed the same, and to this plea the plaintiff demurred on the ground that the deed was unequal. The plea it was contended, failed to show that all the creditors were either parties to or enabled to take the benefit of the deed, which was in fact only for the benefit of the "under-signed creditors." The plaintiff was not a party, and had not executed, and the plea showed no release to him, nor did it show that the trustees who were placed in a worse position than other creditors had either executed or assented to the deed. The defendant, on the other hand, contended that there was no inequality in the deed, and that no non-assenting creditor was prejudiced by its provisions. Mr. Kingdon, Q.C. (with whom was Mr. March) argued for the plaintiff, and was stopped by the court, who called on Mr. R. E. Turner (with whom was Mr. M. Bere) to support the defendant's plea. After a long argument, in which the cases of Walter v. Adcock, Iderton v. Castrigue, Ez parte Cockburn, Clapham v. Atkinson (in the Exchequer Chamber) Benham v. Broadhurst, Brooks v. Jennings, Gresty v. Gibson, and Sowry v. Law, were cited, the court gave judgment for the plaintiffs in favour of the demurrer and overruling the plea, and holding, on the authority of Benham v. Broadhurst, that the deed was invalid as a defence to the action, on the ground of inequality; and also on the ground that the plea was bad for not alleging that the creditors (the trustees) who were postponed to the other creditors, had either executed or assented to the deed.

A matter of some interest as regards the legal question involved, no less than the social and personal bearings of the case itself, came on for discussion in the case of Douglas v. Douglas. It was an action of detinue for a sword; to which the defendant pleaded—1. Non detinet; 2. Not the plaintiff's property; 3. The Statute of Limitations. The question in the case was whether the property in the sword in question had passed to the plaintiff so as to entitle him to maintain the present action. The facts were as follows. The sword which was the subject of the action originally belonged to the late Gen. Sir Wm. Douglas, having been presented to him many years ago by the officers of his regiment. At his death it passed into the possession and ownership of his eldest son, George Douglas, formerly an officer in the army. George Douglas having left the army, and being separated from his wife, went in 1850 to Australia, where he died in the month of Dec. 1865, having, by his will, made in that country in 1864, appointed another brother, W. A. Douglas, and a Mr. McDonald his executors, which will was proved in Australia by W. A. Douglas alone, the other executor having renounced probate. Upon George Douglas leaving England in 1850 the sword was left behind, and was kept, together with a will made by him at that date (but which will was revoked by the subsequent will of 1864). The sword remained, therefore, in the charge of his wife, the defendant. An only son of George Douglas having died, he wrote a letter from Australia to his brother, Henry Douglas, the plaintiff in 1863, in which he expressed a desire for him to have possession of the sword, as follows: "14th Sept. 1863.—You only anticipate my wish that you should have charge of our father's sword, which of course you will keep in our family, if I should not have a son to inherit, which does not now seem very probable." And he added, "I have inclosed an order, unsealed, to Mary" (the defendant) "to hand it over to you." The order was as follows: "On the receipt of this letter you will be so good as to deliver our father's sword to my brother Henry." And in a subsequent letter from George Douglas to his brother Henry (the plaintiff), dated the 28th Sept. 1863, he said, "I shall expect a long letter in reply from you. Tell me how the old sword looks." The above was communicated to the wife (the defendant), and several applications were from time to time made to her by the plaintiff for the delivery to him of the sword; but without success. George Douglas died in Dec. 1865, and in a letter from W. A. Douglas (George Douglas's executor, in Australia) to his brother, the plaintiff, announcing the death of their brother George, after stating that he could have no objection to the defendant or her daughter taking any little thing which they might like to keep, he says, with reference to the sword, "but she is not the proper custodian of our father's sword," and at the same time the executor wrote an order to the defendant directing her to deliver up the sword to the plaintiff. The defendant still declining to deliver up the sword, and claiming to keep it as belonging to her daughter, the plaintiff brought the present action of detinue, claiming a return of it from the defendant, or 200l. its value, and 20l. for its detention, to which the defendant pleaded as above mentioned. The plaintiff having, at the trial before Cleasby, B., obtained a verdict, a rule to set it aside and enter a nonsuit, or a verdict for the defendant was moved for and obtained on the ground that there was no evidence that the sword was the plaintiff's property as alleged, and no evidence to show that the property in the sword passed from the defendant's late husband to the plaintiff. Mr. Denman, Q. C., and Mr. Thrupp, for the plaintiff, showed cause, and contended that the words of the letter of 14th Sept., accompanied by the order on the defendant to deliver up, constituted an actual gift of the sword from George Douglas to his brother the plaintiff, or at all events that it was so as against the defendant, who was a wrong doer, and could not, as against the plaintiff, set up any right as custodian of the sword. They cited many ancient and modern authorities. The court (The Lord Chief Baron, and Barons Martin, Bramwell, and Pigott) however, without calling on Mr. Prentice, Q. C., and Mr. G. Shaw, for the defendant, to support their rule, gave judgment for the defendant, on the ground that the words of the letter of 14th Sept. 1863 were not words of gift at all, but amounted merely to a desire that the plaintiff should have charge of the sword, a charge which was revocable at the pleasure of George Douglas, and was not an out and out gift. The rule, therefore, though with an expression of regret on the part of the Bench that it should be so, was made absolute.

The case of Evans v. Davis was an action against the defendant by a father for the seduction of his daughter, at the trial of which, before the Lord Chief Baron at the last Spring Assizes at Carmarthen, the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff with 350l. damages, and a rule having been subsequently obtained to reduce the damages on the ground of their being excessive, Mr. Bowen, for the plaintiff, to day showed cause, and contended that, under the circumstances, the damages were reasonable and proper. The defendant was a young man, the squire of the parish, with a property of 2000l. a year. The plaintiff was a village carpenter in a small way of business, living in a cottage which he rented of the defendant, and was in the habit of being employed in doing the rough carpentering work on the defendant's estate. He had brought up a large family of sons and daughters very respectably. His youngest daughter, the subject of this action, was still living at home with her parents. In the year 1864, when she was sixteen years old, an intimacy commenced between her and the defendant, who was then about nineteen or twenty years old and the defendant was in the habit of walking about with her in the fields near her cottage in the evenings. This continued for a period of three years, and the result was that the girl gave birth to a child, which was now living. The defendant not paying properly for its support, an affiliation order was obtained, but the defendant became in arrear with his weekly payment. The present action was then brought. At the trial the defendant alleged that the plaintiff and his wife were cognizant of the intimacy between him and their daughter, and connived at it; but the plaintiff indignantly denied that that was so. As a consequence of the affiliation order and this action, the defendant had not since been employed by the plaintiff, and on the whole, looking at the plaintiff's respectability and the conduct of the defendant, it was urged that there was no ground for saying that the damages were excessive, and the case of Terry v. Hutchinson, 18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 521; L. Rep. 3 Q. B. 599; 37 L. J. 257, Q. B., was cited to show that the court would not interfere in such a case. Mr. H. Allen, on the other hand, for the defendant, supported his rule, and urged that 350l. was a preposterously large sum, and that 150l. would be a fortune to a small Welsh hedge carpenter, and that the circumstances showed negligence on the part of the parents, if not actual connivance. The court (Chief Baron Kelly and Barons Martin, Bramwell, and Pigott) unanimously declined to interfere with the amount assessed by the jury, and gave judgment to discharge the defendant's rule, the Lord Chief Baron observing that, though 350l. might, perhaps, be too much for the plaintiff to receive, and that he himself should have been better satisfied with a verdict for a smaller amount, such as 250l.; still it was not at all too much for the defendant to pay, having regard to his conduct. He (the Lord Chief Baron) had told the jury, that if they thought there was the least truth in the assertion that the parents had connived at the defendant's intimacy with their daughter, then the damages should be very moderate indeed. The jury had evidently disbelieved the charge of connivance, and, as juries generally do in such cases, probably gave larger damages in consequence of what they considered to be an unfounded charge. And Baron Bramwell said that he was not going to preach against persons doing what the defendant had done in the present case, but he would observe that it was very well that such people should know that it was for their interest to behave well to the woman in such cases, and then less would be heard of cases of concealment of birth, and other such like matters, with which our courts of justice were now unhappily, only too familiar.

LEGISLATION AND JURISPRUDENCE.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

NIGHT-HOUSES IN THE METROPOLIS.

VISCOUNT ENFIELD asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his attention had been called to the different opinions as to the state of the law recently expressed by the Middlesex magistrates and by the police magistrate, Mr. Knox, on the subject of night-houses in the metropolis; and, if so, whether he was prepared to introduce any measure to render the law clearer and more definite on this point.—Mr. BRUCE.—The difference of opinion between Sir W. Bodkin, on the one hand, and Mr. Knox and the police magistrates generally on the other, is not so much a question of law as on the amount of evidence necessary to justify a conviction under the Refreshment-houses Act. That Act imposes certain penalties on persons licensed to keep refreshment-houses who shall "knowingly suffer prostitutes, thieves, or drunken and disorderly persons to assemble at or continue on their premises." The Court of Queen's Bench held that the mere assemblage of prostitutes for no immoral purpose was not within the Act. They might be there for the purpose of obtaining refreshment. Mr. Justice Blackburn, in the ruling judgment on this subject, said: "I do not think the mere fact that the persons happen to be prostitutes or thieves would cause their meeting to be an assembling of prostitutes and thieves within the Act. It may be well that a number of thieves and prostitutes may meet, and yet they may not assemble as thieves or prostitutes; but as soon as it is shown that they meet in the capacity of prostitutes or thieves, to the knowledge of the keeper of the house, then the case comes within the provisions of the Act. It is not necessary that prostitution or some act of thieving should be shown to have actually planned on the premises, but if the assembling is a sort of thieves' club, or the house used as a house of call for prostitutes to meet men, that is sufficient to bring the keeper of the house under the provisions of the Act." In this opinion Mr. Knox and Sir W. Bodkin agree; they differ as to the amount and nature of the evidence necessary to prove the immoral purpose of the assemblage. Mr. Knox thinks that the presence of several known prostitutes in a night-house in the Haymarket for half-an-hour continuously in the company of men, between midnight and one o'clock, was sufficient evidence that they were there for the purposes of their miserable calling. Sir W. Bodkin thinks these circumstances not inconsistent with their being there for purposes of refreshment, and demands more positive proof of immoral intention. I have received a letter from Mr. Serjeant Payne, informing me that two appeals on the same point will be heard to-morrow at the Session-house Westminster. It will be well to await the result of those decisions. Should they coincide with that of Sir W. Bodkin, it will be necessary to consider whether it is possible so to amend the Act as to facilitate uniformity of decision, and give effect to its obvious intention.

THE NEW LAW COURTS.

Mr. GREGORY asked the First Commissioner of Works whether the Government had decided finally on the site for the new Law Courts suggested in his speech on Tuesday, the 20th, by the Chancellor of the Exchequer; and if so, whether the proposed site could be acquired without delay; and in what manner and how soon would the subject be again brought before the House of Commons. Perhaps the right hon. gentleman would be able to state the precise spot mentioned by the Chancellor of the Exchequer as a desirable site for the new Law Courts.—Mr. LAYARD.—In answer to the question of my hon. friend, I beg to state that the Government have finally decided to propose to the House a plan for the erection of the new Law Courts on the site mentioned by my right hon. friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on Tuesday last. As much apprehension appears to exist in the House and out of doors as to the nature of the scheme suggested by my right hon. friend, I may take this opportunity of stating that the site proposed to be acquired by the Government is that comprised between Somerset-house and the Temple bounded on the south by the Thames Embankment, and on the north by Howard-street, and several small alleys and passages connecting that street with the Temple and King's College. This site will furnish six acres of building ground. Mr. Street, who is now occupied in adapting the plans which he has already prepared for the Carey-street site to this new site, informs me that he will be able to erect all the Law Courts, and every office necessarily dependent thereon, upon these six acres. It is my intention to introduce very shortly—if possible, before Witsundide—a Bill which, should the House think fit to pass it, would enable the Government to proceed without delay to acquire the proposed site, and to commence the erection of the Law Courts upon it. I shall be prepared, on the introduction of that Bill, to give a full explanation to the House of the plan contemplated by the Government, and to point out its great advantages over all other plans hitherto suggested. At the same time I shall be able to give such assurances to the House as will, I hope, convince them that it may be carried out, including numerous and most convenient approaches, for the sum mentioned by my hon. friend—viz., 1,600,000*l.*, or at a much less cost than any other scheme. Mr. Street is now preparing detailed plans, which I shall be able to submit to the House before the second reading of the Bill. Before sitting down I may state to the House, what I had not the opportunity of stating the other evening, that I have received a communication from the Chief Baron of the Exchequer, Sir Fitzroy Kelly, stating that he and all the Judges with whom he has communicated, except one, are of opinion that upon every ground, as regards the Bench, the Bar, the solicitors, the suitors, and the public—I quote his own words—the Thames Embankment should be preferred for the site of the Law Courts.—Mr. HUNT asked what was to be done with the Carey-street site, and whether notice had been given to those persons whose property would be required for the new site.—Mr. LAYARD promised to explain this when introducing the Bill.—Lord J. MANNERS hoped full opportunity would be given for discussion upon the Bill. Mr. LAYARD said he had reason to believe it would be a public Bill, and therefore every opportunity would be given for discussing it.—On a subsequent day, Mr. PEMBERTON asked the First Commissioner of Works whether the particular attention of the Lord Chancellor had been called to the new site for the Law Courts selected by the Government, and whether his Lordship approved the selection.—Mr. LAYARD observed that the Bill relating to this matter was a Government Bill, and the hon. member would perhaps excuse him from answering an inquiry as to the opinion of an individual member of the Government in such a case.—Lord H. LENNOX asked whether the right hon. gentleman would insure that members were supplied with plans before the Bill came on for discussion, and whether he would place a model of the new building in the library for the information of members.—Mr. LAYARD said he hoped to have lithographed plans in the hands of members perhaps before Witsundide; they were now being prepared by Mr. Street. As a model entailed an elevation it would be a longer affair, but nothing would be settled until the House and the public had full opportunity of criticising the whole plan.

STAMP DUTIES EXEMPTIONS.

Mr. Alderman SALOMONS asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if his attention had been drawn to the exemption from stamp duties on mortgages and other instruments, extending even to checks on their bankers, permitted to cities, towns, and places adopting the Local Government Act 1858; and how this privilege arose, as it formed no part of the Local Government Act 1858; and, if such exemptions are allowed, why the principle was not extended to all towns and to all persons that aid public improvements.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER.—The manner in which this exemption arose may be easily explained. It appeared first in the Public Health Act of 1848, by which it was enacted that all the instruments under that Act should be exempt from stamp duty. In 1858 the Local Government Act was passed, which enacted that that and the former Act should be read together, and thus the claims of exemption were imported into the second Act. When the hon. gentleman asks why the principle of these exemptions should not be extended, I reply, for the reason that they ought not to exist at all; and that, therefore, I am not willing to extend them. This is an instance of the levity with which large exemptions are inserted in Acts, to the injury of the taxpayer in general and the loss of the revenue.

PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.

Lord ROMILLY laid on the table a Bill for facilitating the incorporation of educational, scientific, and charitable institutions and reducing the expense of electing new trustees. The Bill was read a first time.

TURNPIKE TRUSTS.

Mr. WHALLEY asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he was prepared to support the Bill now before the House for affording facilities for the voluntary abolition of turnpike tolls on roads and bridges; and, if not, whether he was prepared to introduce a bill for otherwise dealing with the question.—Mr. BRUCE regretted he could not support the Bill in question, inasmuch as it dealt with turnpikes in a fragmentary manner. He could not promise to introduce a Bill upon the subject himself this session, but would do so as soon as there was a reasonable chance of its receiving due consideration.

RECORDERS' DEPUTIES.

Mr. DENMAN obtained leave to bring in a Bill to extend to recorders the power to appoint deputies in certain cases, and the Bill was subsequently brought up and read a first time.

LIBEL BILL.

The House went into committee on this Bill pro forma, and its clauses were amended.

MUNICIPAL FRANCHISE BILL.

Mr. HIBBERT moved the second reading of this Bill, by which it was proposed to reduce the qualification term of three years' residence to one year, and thus make the Parliamentary and municipal qualification in respect of residence similar.

TRADE COMBINATIONS AND TRADE UNIONS.

The following is the text of the bill to amend the law relating to trade combinations and trade unions, introduced by Mr. Hughes and Mr. Mundella:—

Whereas it is expedient to amend and to declare the law relating to combinations and associations of workmen and employers: Be it enacted by the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:—

1. From and after the passing of this Act the following Acts shall be repealed: the 6 Geo. 4, c. 126, and the Act 22 Vict. c. 34.
2. It shall be lawful for any number of persons engaged in any work or employment whatsoever, whether workmen or employers, to make any agreement with respect to the wages to be paid or the hours to be worked therein, and with respect to the persons by whom or the mode in which any work is to be or is not to be done, and with respect to any terms or conditions whatsoever under which any work or employment shall or shall not be done or carried on.
3. No combination made by any number of persons engaged in any work or employment, whether workmen or employers, with the intent merely of giving effect to any such agreement as in the foregoing section is mentioned, or of obtaining the conditions stated in any such agreement, shall subject any person who shall have been a party thereto to criminal prosecution.
4. Provided always, and be it enacted that, save and except so far as a combination is hereby exempted from liability to criminal prosecution, nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to affect the liability of every person to prosecution and punishment for and in respect of any offence under any statute or rule of law for the time being in force; and provided also that nothing herein contained shall affect the liability of any person to be sued at law or in equity for or in respect of any damage or loss which may have been occasioned to any other person through any act or default of the person so sued.
5. It shall be lawful for any number of persons, whether workmen or employers, to form themselves into associations for the purpose of mutual support and assistance in any trade or employment whatsoever, and to subscribe funds, and to offer assurances, and to make rules and regulations, and impose penalties upon the members thereof voluntarily, and for the management of such associations; provided that no such association be formed or maintained with any intent to procure the commission of any offence which, for the time being, shall subject the person so offending to prosecution, or with any intent to procure any object whatever by means of such offence.
6. Every such lawful association shall be capable of obtaining the benefit of those parts of the Friendly Societies Act as apply to the societies mentioned in sect. 11 of the Act 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63.
7. The secretary or other authorised officer or agent of any such association shall, for the purpose of the enrolment of such association, and afterwards annually, deposit with the registrar of friendly societies a copy of all the rules and bye-laws, whether written or printed, for the time being and in force in such association, or in any branch of such association, and shall make declaration, to be supported by similar declaration on behalf of the branches, that no other rules or bye-laws are in force or are capable of being put in force in such association or branch.
8. Once in the course of every year the secretary or other officer or agent of such association shall forward to the registrar an account of the expenditure of such association for the preceding year, showing the amount expended in benefits, to be distinguished from the amount expended in relief of members when out of work; and the registrar shall have power to call for detailed statements of the accounts, and for books, ledgers and other documents of the association.

9. Within one month after such deposit the registrar shall give a certificate that the said association has rules in accordance with law, and has been duly enrolled.

10. The registrar shall have no power to refuse such certificate on any other ground, except that some rule of such association or some item of expenditure has been improperly withheld, or that some rule or item discloses an intent to procure the commission of some offence which for the time being would subject the person so offending to criminal prosecution.

11. In all cases an appeal from any decision of the registrar in giving or withholding such certificate, and in making or refusing such enrolment, shall lie to the Superior Courts of law.

12. No such association as is mentioned in the 5th section hereto, whether enrolled or not enrolled, shall be capable of suing or proceeding either at law or in equity as a corporate body unless it be otherwise duly incorporated; and no such association shall be capable, either in its own name or in that of its trustees or officers, of enforcing against any member of such association, either at law or in equity, payment of any contribution, fine, or other due whatsoever, whether owing by such member under any rule or not, or of obtaining as against any member the benefit of any agreement made with such member.

13. Provided always that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect the power of the trustees of such association in prosecuting any person for any offence committed in respect of the property of such association, whether any person so offending shall be a member of such association or not, or of recovering at law or in equity from any person, whether a member thereof or not, any property of the said association, not being a contribution, fine, or due owing from such person as such member.

14. No such association shall be capable of being sued as a corporate body in its own name or in that of its trustees or officers (unless it be otherwise incorporated), nor shall it be capable of being dissolved or wound-up under any winding-up Act, and shall not be liable at law or in equity to any of its members for or in respect of any agreement or assurance made between such society and its members.

15. Provided always that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect the trustees or any member of any such enrolled association in the exercise of all the rights and powers conferred by the said Friendly Societies Acts, and that nothing herein contained shall affect the right of every actual member of any such association to a share of the joint property on dissolution.

16. Upon any proceedings in respect of any criminal prosecution, and upon any action, suit, or proceedings for the recovery of any property which shall have been deposited with or which shall have come into the hands of any person, it shall not be pleaded or shown in stay of such proceedings that such criminal prosecution or such suit or action is brought or promoted in respect of some matter or thing which is contrary to public policy, as being in restraint of trade; provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed to require any court of law or equity to give specific performance of or to enforce any penalty, or give damages for the nonperformance of any agreement which shall be considered by such court to be contrary to public policy as being in restraint of trade, due regard being had by such court to the amount of the restriction thereby imposed on the party restrained, together with the adequacy of the consideration to the party restraining.

ESTATE AND INVESTMENT JOURNAL.

STOCK AND SHARE MARKET.

COMPARING May with January, and remembering that we are now at what is usually the busiest and most prosperous season of the year, it is painful to note how very trifling is the improvement in the money market. When there is a slight advance there immediately follows something to disturb confidence and send quotations down again. Now the cause of uneasiness is Mr. Sumner's speech on the Alabama claims. It is believed to mean mischief. The truth is beginning gradually to dawn upon us that America is alarmed at the formation of a great power in the dominion of Canada; that the people are resolved to possess themselves per fas aut nefas of Canada and the West Indies, and that the bill sent in on account of the Alabama is purposely swollen to be made the ground of a bargain by which all our possessions on the American Continent and in its seas are to be the price of peace; or, should we refuse, they are to be taken by force. This "little bill" of Mr. Sumner offers a plausible excuse for such a transaction.

The following are the fluctuations of the week:

ENGLISH FUNDS.	Fri.	Sat.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thu.
Bank of England Stock	241	242	242	242
3 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. Red. Ann. ...	92	...	91 $\frac{1}{2}$	91 $\frac{1}{2}$	91 $\frac{1}{2}$	91 $\frac{1}{2}$
3 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. Cons. Ann. ...	93 $\frac{1}{2}$...	93 $\frac{1}{2}$	93 $\frac{1}{2}$	93 $\frac{1}{2}$	93
New 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. Ann.
Do. do. Jan. 1894.	76	76
New 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. Ann. ...	92	...	91 $\frac{1}{2}$	91 $\frac{1}{2}$	91 $\frac{1}{2}$	91 $\frac{1}{2}$
5 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. Annuities
5 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cents. $\frac{1}{2}$ Jan. 1873
Ann. 30 years exp.
April 5, 1885
Do. exp. Jan. 5, 1880
Do. exp. July 1880	115
Rail Sea Tele. Ann. 1908	19 $\frac{1}{2}$
Consols. for Acc.	93 $\frac{1}{2}$...	93 $\frac{1}{2}$	93 $\frac{1}{2}$	93 $\frac{1}{2}$	93
India 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. for Acc.
Do. 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cents. July 1880	115	114 $\frac{1}{2}$
India Stock, July 1880	114 $\frac{1}{2}$...
India Stock, 1874	212 $\frac{1}{2}$...	212 $\frac{1}{2}$...	213	...
India 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent.
India 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cents. 1888	100 $\frac{1}{2}$...	100 $\frac{1}{2}$	100 $\frac{1}{2}$	100 $\frac{1}{2}$...
India 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. 1870	13s. d
India Bonds (1000l.)
Do. (under 1000l.)	a	...	b	c	...	e
Ex. Bills, 1000l.	a	...	b	c	...	e
Do. 500l.	a	...	b	c	...	e
Do. 100l. and 200l.	a	...	b	c	...	e
3 $\frac{1}{2}$ c.	a	...	b	c	...	e a 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ and 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., 7s. premium.

b 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ and 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., 2s. premium.
c 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ and 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., 5s. premium.
d Premium.
e 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ and 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. par.

PUBLIC COMPANIES.

RAILWAY COMPANIES.

Antwerp and Rotterdam.—Dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum.

Great Luxembourg.—Dividend at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum.

Smyrna and Cassaba.—Preference dividend, and an ordinary distribution at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum.

Stafford and Uttoxeter Railway.—Creditor's claims must be forwarded to the receiver by the 20th May, the 3rd June being appointed for their adjudication.

BANK.

Standard of British South Africa.—Four per cent. per annum dividend declared.

ASSURANCE COMPANY.

English Assurance.—Five per cent. interest was declared as payable to the shareholders.

MISCELLANEOUS COMPANIES.

Aberdare and Merthyr Steam Coal Company (Limited).—Mr. H. Dever is official liquidator.

Animal Charcoal.—Dividend at the rate of 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. per annum has been declared.

Bahia Gas.—Three per cent. per annum ordinary dividend declared.

Civil Service Supply Association.—The goods sold during the year ended 27th Feb. 1869 amounted to 219,032l. The gross profit was 13,961l., and the expenses 13,289l. Profits and interest in hand, 7585l.; and the sum received on tickets and shares remains intact. New premises have been taken in Long Acre.

Fairbairn Engineering.—The report states that the net earnings barely suffice to pay a 5 per cent. dividend.

Singapore Gas.—A dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum.

REPORTS OF SALES.

NOTE.—The reports of the Estate Exchange are officially supplied in the following list. Auctioneers whose names are registered there will oblige by reports of their own sales.]

Monday, May 3.

By Mr. WHITTINGHAM, at the Mart.

Freehold building land, situate at Lower Tooting, Surrey. Lots 1 to 124 have been sold. Lot 142—sold for 62l. Lot 148—sold for 70l. Lot 177—sold for 80l. Lot 178—sold for 80l.

Tuesday, May 4.

By Messrs. DEBENHAM, TEWSON, and FARMER, at the Mart.
Leasehold residence, No. 14, Highbury-crescent; term, 97 $\frac{1}{2}$ years from 1846, at 20l. per annum—sold for 2200l.

By Messrs. DRIVER.

Freehold ground-rents, amounting to 112l. 10s. per annum, secured on twenty-two houses, shops, yards, &c., in Brunel-street and Glyn-street, Vauxhall—sold for 2470l.
Freehold ground-rents, amounting to 72l. 10s. per annum, secured on eight houses, shops, yards, and premises, in Upper Kennington-lane, Vauxhall—sold for 1610l.
Freehold ground-rents, amounting to 57l. 10s. per annum, secured on twelve houses, shops, and premises in Glyn-street and Auckland-street, Vauxhall—sold for 1270l.
Freehold ground-rents, amounting to 30l. per annum, secured on three houses, shops, and premises, situate in New Bridge-street, Vauxhall—sold for 710l.
Freehold ground-rents amounting to 274l. per annum, secured on twenty-six houses, shops, and premises in Goding-street, Italian-walk, and Auckland-street, Vauxhall—sold for 6350l.
Freehold ground-rents, amounting to 30l. per annum, secured on six houses in Goding-street, Vauxhall—sold for 600l.
Freehold ground-rents, amounting to 20l. per annum secured on five houses and premises in Garden-terrace, Goding-street, Vauxhall—sold for 625l.
Freehold ground-rents, amounting to 40l. per annum, secured on four houses and shops in Upper Kennington-lane, Vauxhall—sold for 950l.

Wednesday, May 5th.

By Messrs. CHINNOCK, GALSWORDY, and CHINNOCK, at the Mart.

Leasehold, two residences, Nos. 5, Hurley-street, and 2, Wymore-street, Cavendish-square, producing 412l. per annum, term 50 years from 1854, at 135l. per annum—sold for 3300l.
Leasehold, four shops and five houses, Nos. 26 to 33, Artillery-row, Westminster, producing 430l. per annum, term 37 years from 1868, at 2l. per annum—sold for 3820l.
Leasehold house, No. 18, Duke-street, also No. 28, Thomas-street, Oxford-street, producing 370l. per annum, term 11 years unexpired, at 132l. 10s. per annum—sold for 1050l.
Freehold ground-rent of 10l. per annum, arising from Nos. 73 and 75, Princes-road, Notting-hill, and 1, St. John's-place adjoining—sold for 250l.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

HUSBAND AND WIFE—POST-NUPTIAL SETTLEMENT—HUSBAND BANKRUPT.—In 1861 a lady, entitled to an annuity, was married, but no settlement or agreement for a settlement was then made. Both she and her husband were then largely in debt. After marriage the annuity was assigned to trustees for the lady for her separate use, and subsequently to this the husband became bankrupt. Under the bankruptcy considerable debts were proved, including many debts due from the wife at the time of her marriage. Held (affirming the decree of the Master of the Rolls), that so long as any of her own debts remained unsatisfied, she had no equity to a settlement of the annuity, or any part thereof, and an enquiry was directed to ascertain the amount of her property and her debts: (Barnard v. Ford, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 289. L.J.J.)

TITLE OF ASSIGNEE.—In the above case no creditors' assignee of the husband's estate was chosen, but the proceedings were had in a district court where there was but one official assignee. By leave of the Court of Bankruptcy he filed a bill to set aside the settlement; but when he did so, he had not been actually appointed official assignee of the estate. Held, that as, before the cause was heard, an order duly appointing him had been made, he was entitled to maintain the suit: (Ibid.)

PRACTICE—PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS—EXAMINATIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.—Office copies of examinations before the Bankruptcy Court, alleged by the plaintiff to have been obtained with a view of enabling him to take the opinion of counsel in reference to the institution of the suit, were: Held to be privileged: (Fenton v. The Queen's Ferry Ware Company, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 29. V.C.M.)

PRACTICE—INTERPLEADER—AFFIDAVIT OF NO COLLUSION—PAYMENT OF MONEY INTO COURT.—Where a plaintiff, alleging that he did not know to which of two partners (between whom a suit for dissolution had been instituted) to pay a debt due to their firm, filed an interpleader bill, and moved to pay the sum in question into court with the usual affidavit of no collusion. The court, upon a suspicion of collusion, refused the motion and ordered the sum to be paid to the partner who alleged collusion, unless on or before a given day an injunction was moved for and obtained in the suit between the partners: (Manby v. Robinson, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 298. V.C.M.)

PRACTICE—ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF MARRIED WOMAN ABROAD—LEASES AND SALES OF SETTLED ESTATES ACT.—Where a petition is presented to authorise a sale of settled estates under the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, and a party interested, being a married woman, is abroad and served, the court will dispense with her acknowledgment: (Re Tibbett's Trusts, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 299. V.C.M.)

PRACTICE—AMENDMENT FOR WANT OF ANSWER.—Four days before a defendant's time for answering would have expired he obtained an order for four weeks' further time, and on the day after the four weeks from the date of the order expired a summons for further time was taken out by the defendant, and an attachment issued by the plaintiff. The chief clerk refused to entertain the summons in consequence of the attachment: Held, that the attachment must be discharged, without costs: (Weston v. Cohen, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 299. V.C.M.)

AFFIDAVITS NOT ENTITLED IN ANY MATTER—ORDER TO FILE.—Where affidavits are made abroad and sworn, but without any heading, showing in what cause or matter they are made, they will be ordered to be filed, on special application for that purpose: (Salvidge v. Tutton, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 300. V.C.M.)

REVIVOR BY EXECUTORS, SOME NOT HAVING PROVED—NEW ORDER.—Where a plaintiff dies

leaving a will and several executors, and the order refers to all, but only some of them prove, the order cannot be amended, but there must be a fresh order: (Crossley v. Elworthy, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 300. V.C. M.)

PRACTICE—ORDER X., RULE 4.—The defendant had been served with a copy of the bill on the 3rd Feb. On an application made on behalf of the plaintiff, under Order X., rule 4, on the 16th April, the court gave leave to enter an appearance for the defendant: (Herd v. Lupton, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 302. V.C. J.)

GENERAL ORDER OF THE HIGH COURT OF CHANCERY.

Thursday April 29, 1869.

The Right Honourable William Page Baron Hatherley, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, with the advice and assistance of the Right Honourable John Lord Romilly, Master of the Rolls, the Right Honourable the Lord Justice Sir Charles Jasper Selwyn, the Right Honourable the Lord Justice Sir George Markham Giffard, the Honourable the Vice-Chancellor Sir John Stuart, the Honourable the Vice-Chancellor Sir Richard Malins, and the Honourable the Vice-Chancellor Sir William Milbourne James, doth hereby, in exercise and execution of the powers given to him by the Liquidation Act 1868, and of all other powers and authorities enabling him in that behalf, order and direct in manner following:—

1. Every scheme to be filed in the Court of Chancery pursuant to the stat. 31 & 32 Vict. c. 68, and every declaration, affidavit, petition, summons, notice, or other proceeding relative thereto, shall be intitled in the matter of the Liquidation Act 1868, and in the matter of the debtor, bankrupt, or company, to whose assets the same relates, and if the same relates to the assets of a company which is being wound-up under the Companies Act 1862, and any Act amending the same, then such scheme shall also be intitled in the matter of the Companies Act 1862.

2. Every such scheme shall be marked either with the words "Lord Chancellor," and the name of one of the Vice-Chancellors, or with the words "Master of the Rolls," and the matter of such scheme (unless removed by some special order of the Lord Chancellor or the Lords Justices) shall accordingly be attached to the court of such Vice-Chancellor, or to the court of the Master of the Rolls, as the case may be, in like manner, and for the same purposes, as causes are attached to a particular court.

3. Where such scheme relates to assets of a company which is being wound-up under the Companies Act 1862, and any Act amending the same, by the Court of Chancery or under the supervision of the Court of Chancery, the scheme shall be marked so as to be attached to the court of the judge to whose court the matter of such winding-up is attached.

4. Every scheme to be filed as aforesaid, shall be printed on paper of the same size and description and in the same style and manner as bills in Chancery are required to be printed; and every fifth line of each page thereof shall be numbered.

5. Every such scheme shall be filed in the office of the Clerks of Records and Writs, and shall have indorsed thereon the name and address of the solicitor and London agent (if any) of the liquidators, and also the address for service of such solicitor in cases where an address for service is required by the general orders of the court.

6. At any time after the expiration of four days from the filing of any such scheme, any person claiming to be interested as a creditor or contributory in the affairs of the debtor, bankrupt, or company to whose assets the scheme relates may, by a requisition in writing, delivered at the office of the solicitor of the liquidators, or of his London agent (if any), and stating the nature of the interest which such person claims, demand any number, not exceeding ten, of printed copies of the scheme; and the copies so required shall, within twenty-four hours after such demand, and on payment for each such copy at the rate of one half-penny per folio, be delivered to the person so requiring the same, with a certificate thereon by such solicitor or his London agent, that they are true copies of the scheme filed.

7. Except in cases where an affidavit, verifying a list of creditors shall already have been filed, or a list of creditors shall have been made out under the direction of the court, the liquidators, on the day on which the scheme is filed, or within such further time as the judge shall allow, shall file, in the Office of the Clerks of Records and Writs, an affidavit, made by some person competent to make the same, verifying a list containing the names and addresses of the creditors, and the amounts due to them respectively, so far as the same can be ascertained, and leave the said list and an office copy of such affidavit, at the chambers of the judge.

8. Copies of the scheme, and copies of the list of creditors, containing the total amount due to them, but omitting the amounts due to them respectively, or (if the judge shall so direct), complete copies of such list, shall be kept at the offices of the solicitor of the liquidators and his London agent (if any); and any person claiming to be interested as creditor or contributory, may, at any time during the ordinary hours of business, inspect and take extracts from such scheme and copy list on payment of the sum of one shilling.

9. The liquidators shall, within seven days after the filing of the scheme, or within such further time as the judge may allow, send to each creditor whose name is entered in the said list, or to such of them as the judge shall think fit, and in cases of winding-up, to such of the contributories as the judge shall think fit, a notice of the filing of the scheme. Such notice shall state the time when the scheme was filed, and the place or places where the scheme may be inspected, and copies thereof obtained; and shall be sent through the post in a prepaid letter addressed to each of the persons to whom the same is to be sent at his last known address or place of abode.

10. Notice of the filing of the scheme may also, if the judge shall think fit, after the filing thereof, be published at such times and in such newspapers as the judge shall direct. Every such notice shall contain such particulars as are mentioned in the preceding rule.

11. After the expiration of one calendar month from the filing of the scheme, or at such earlier time as the judge shall think fit, the liquidators may present a petition for confirmation of the scheme. It shall not be necessary in such petition to set forth the scheme, but it shall be sufficient to refer thereto.

12. When any petition to confirm any such scheme is presented, the liquidators shall apply to the judge in chambers to appoint the day on which the same is to come into the paper for hearing, such day not to be before the expiration of three weeks from the time of such application, and shall cause a notice of such presentation to be inserted in such two newspapers as the judge in chambers shall direct. Such notice shall state the day on which the scheme was filed, and the day on which the petition was presented, and the day on which the same is directed to come into the paper for hearing, and the name and address of the solicitor and London agent (if any) of the liquidators.

13. The petition shall not come on to be heard until at least fourteen clear days after the first insertion of such notice as aforesaid. Such notice shall at least once in every entire week, reckoned from Sunday morning till Saturday evening, which shall have elapsed between the first insertion thereof and the day on which such petition is directed to come into the paper for hearing, be again inserted in such newspaper as aforesaid, on such day or days as the judge in chambers shall direct.

14. Any creditor, contributory, or other person whose rights or interests are affected by such scheme, and who shall be desirous to be heard in opposition to the confirmation thereof, shall, at least two clear days before the day on which the petition for confirmation is directed to come into the paper for hearing, enter an appearance in the office of the clerks of records and writs, and, in default of so doing, shall not be entitled to be heard, unless by the special leave of the court.

15. Any person so entering an appearance, shall be deemed to have submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the court as to payment of costs, and otherwise.

16. No order for confirming a scheme, whether with or without alteration or addition, shall be enrolled until the expiration of thirty days from the day of the same having been pronounced, exclusive of vacations.

17. No caveat shall be entered to stay the enrolment of any order for confirming a scheme, with or without alterations or additions; but every such order may be enrolled after the expiration of thirty days from the day of the same being pronounced, unless in the meantime a petition for a rehearing shall have been presented, and an order for setting down such petition obtained and served upon the liquidators, such thirty days to be exclusive of vacations.

18. No petition for a rehearing either before the same judge or before the Lord Chancellor or the Lords Justices, of the case on which any order confirming a scheme, with or without alterations or additions, or order refusing to confirm a scheme, has been made, shall, unless by special leave of the Lord Chancellor or the Lords Justices, be presented after the expiration of thirty days, exclusive of vacations, from the day on which such order was pronounced, notwithstanding that such order may not have been enrolled.

19. When an order has been made for confirming a scheme, with or without alterations or additions, no person who neither has entered an appearance as aforesaid, nor has by virtue of such special leave as aforesaid been heard in opposition to the confirmation of the scheme, nor is the legal personal representative of a person who has entered an appearance or been heard in opposition as aforesaid, shall be at liberty to present a petition for rehearing before the same judge, or before the Lord Chancellor or the Lords Justices, unless the Lord Chancellor or the Lords Justices shall, by special order, be applied for by motion on notice to the liquidators, to be served on their solicitor or London agent, give leave to such person to present a petition for a rehearing.

20. All orders made in chambers under the Liquidation Act 1868, shall be drawn up in chambers unless specially directed to be drawn up by the registrar, and shall be entered in the same manner, and in the same office, as other orders drawn up in chambers.

21. In cases not expressly provided for by the said Act, or by the rules of this order, the General Orders and practice of the court (including the course of proceeding and practice in the judges' chambers, and the course of proceeding and practice as to rehearings before the same judge, or before the Lord Chancellor or Lords Justices) shall, as far as such General Orders and practice are applicable, and not inconsistent with the said Act or this order, apply to all proceedings in the Court of Chancery under the said Act.

22. The power of the court and of the judge in chambers to enlarge or abridge the time for doing any act, or taking any proceeding, to adjourn or review any proceeding, and to give any directions as to the course of proceeding, shall be the same in proceedings in Chancery under the said Act, as in proceedings under the ordinary jurisdiction of the court.

23. Solicitors shall be entitled to charge, and be allowed for all duties performed under the Liquidation Act 1868, such of the fees on the higher scale, authorised by the 2nd Rule of the 38th of the Consolidated Orders and the regulations as to solicitors' fees subjoined thereto as are applicable, unless the court or judge shall otherwise specially direct.

24. The fees of court set forth or referred to in the schedule hereto shall be paid in relation to proceedings in Chancery under the said Act, and shall be collected by means of stamps in manner, provided by the General Orders of the court.

25. This order shall come into operation on the 1st May 1869.

26. The General Interpretation Clause in the Consolidated General Orders shall apply to the rules of this order; and in this order the term "liquidators" has the same meaning as in the Liquidation Act 1868, and the word "contributory" has the same meaning as in the Companies Act 1862.

HATHERLEY, C.
ROMILLY, M.R.
C. JASPER SELWYN, L.J.
G. M. GIFFARD, L.J.
JOHN STUART, V.C.
RICH'D. MALINS, V.C.
W. M. JAMES, V.C.

THE SCHEDULE.

Fees to be collected by means of Stamps.

In the judges' chambers and in the respective offices of the registrars, the examiners, and the taxing masters, such of the fees by the 2nd rule of the 39th of the Consolidated Orders, and the regulations subjoined thereto, directed to be collected and paid, as are applicable.

In the Record and Writ Clerks' Office.

For filing every scheme under the Liquidation Act 1868	s.	d.
For every certificate of filing a scheme	1	0
And such other fees by the 2nd rule of the 39th of the Consolidated Orders, and the regulations subjoined thereto directed to be paid and collected, as are applicable.	0	5

For every petition

In the Office of the Lord Chancellor's Principal Secretary.

For every petition

In the Office of the Secretary at the Rolls.

For every petition

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY.

LAST DAY OF PROOF.

BATTE (Geo.), Brown-hill, Cartworth, Kirkburton, York. May 19; W. Armitage, solicitor, Holmfirth. May 31; V.C. S., at one.
BRIDGE (John), Herne Bay, Kent. May 31; C. Baylis, solicitor, 30, Fenchurch. June 14; V.C. J., at twelve.
CASSIDY (Thos.), 22, Herne-street, Fenchurch. May 15; W. R. Harris, solicitor, 40, Chancery-lane. May 24; V.C. S., at two.
CROLEY (Wm.), Langford, near Biggleswade. May 27; Fox and Robinson, solicitors, 52, Green-hill, Old Broad-street. June 4; V.C. J., at twelve.
DYKE (Henry), Charlton Kings, Gloucester. May 29; White and Sons, solicitors, 11, Bedford-row. June 14; V.C. S., at one.
GARRETS (Thos.), Croydon, Surrey. May 26; J. M. Yatta, solicitor, Temple-chambers, Fleet-street. June 3; V.C. J., at twelve.
HARTSHORN (John), Ebury-street, Pimlico. May 31; J. Mackrell, solicitor, 21, Cannon-street. June 15; V.C. J., at two.
MOOY (Henry), Southwood-lawn, Highgate. May 26; J. Rae, solicitor, 9, Mincing-lane. June 15; V.C. M., at twelve.
MORRIS (Wm.), Bull-inn, East Sheen, Mortlake. June 10; Janson, Cobb, and Co., solicitors, 41, Finsbury-circus. June 25; V.C. S., at twelve.

NEWMAN (Chas.), New Windsor. May 24; J. H. Long, solicitor, New Windsor, Berks. June 10; M. R. at twelve.
SCHROEDER (Jno. F.), Northbrook House, Bentley, Southampton. May 17; A. Jackson, solicitor, 10, Billiter-square. May 25; V.C. J. at twelve.
SEALS (Robt.), Misterton, Nottingham. June 1; A. M. Sharp, solicitor, Epworth, Bawtry, Lincoln. June 15; V.C. S. at twelve.
SPENCER (James), Pottton, Bedford. June 15; Rhodes, Son, and Co., solicitors, 63, Chancery-lane. June 30; V.C. S. at twelve.
STEEPS (Robert), Nine Elms, Vauxhall, Surrey. May 24; Tippetts and Son, solicitors, 5, Great St. Thomas Apostle; Chapside. June 4; V.C. J. at one.
TREBLE (Geo.), Brandon-street, College-street, Bristol. May 24; Torr and Co., solicitors. June 3; V.C. M., at twelve.
TYARS (W. S.), Minorities. May 27; H. Earle, 39, Bedford-row. June 7; V.C. M., at twelve.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. c. 35.

Last day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.

BANKS (Jos. P.), 18, Fish-street-hill. June 1; W. H. Thompson, 37, New Cross-road, S.E.
CHURCHWARD (Samuel), Myrtle-villa, Hartfield-road, Wimbledon, Surrey. May 31; F. Kearsey, solicitor, 35, Old Jerry.
CLIFTON (Sir Arthur B.), K.G.C., Brighton. July 1; Bennett, Dawson, and Co., solicitors, 2, New-inn, Lincoln's-inn.
DAVIS (Sarah), 23, Cavendish-street, New North-road, Hoxton. June 30; Dowse and Darville, solicitors, Lime-street Chambers, 21, Lime-street, E.C.
DEXTON (A.), Allerton Bywater, Kippax, York. July 1; G. Bradley, solicitor, Castleford.
DORRINGTON (Chas.), Bride-hall, Leambridge, Hertford. June 30; Spence and Hawks, solicitors, Hertford.
FAIRBAIRN (Geo.), Ardwick, Manchester; Aug. 2; T. T. Harding, solicitor, 73, Princess-street, Manchester.
FAIRWEATHER (G. W.), Park-place, St. Catherine, Gloucester. July 1; D. Boomer, solicitor, Gloucester.
FURZE (Mrs. Anna), Singledodge, Teddington. June 4; G. Annesley, solicitor, 64, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
GORDARD (Sophia), Blue Post public-house, Tottenham-court-road, W.C. May 31; Hunter, Gwatkin and Co., solicitors, 9, New-square.
HARRISON (James), 6, Portland-place, Leamington Priors. June 1; E. and T. Fisher, solicitors, Ashby-de-la-Zouch.
LEWIS (Wm.), 9, Boundary-road, St. John's-wood. July 1; Valey and Led am, solicitors, 60, Carey-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
PAILLINS (Wm.), Chipping Norton, Oxford. June 24; London and Rawlinson, solicitors, Chipping Norton.
SCAMPTON (John), Coventry. June 24; Dewes and Son, solicitors, 10, Hay-lane, Coventry.
SMILEY (William), 16, Pembroke-square, Kensington. May 29; J. Macgregor, solicitor, 37, Bloomsbury-square.
TREAY (Capt. John), Cheltenham, Gloucester. Aug. 2; H. K. Hebb, solicitor, Lincoln.
TOMLINSON (John), Fountain Head Tavern, Thornton Heath, Surrey. July 1; G. T. Powell, solicitor, 33, King-street, Chapside.
WILD (Rev. Edward), the Vicarage, Hawleigh, Suffolk. June 10; Hayward and Sons, solicitors, Needham-market, Selby.
WILKIN (Capt. Richard H.), Crick Villa, Crick, Northampton. May 22; Dayman and Walsh, solicitors, Oxford.
WICK (Wm.), 9, Holland-Grove, Brixton. July 2; W. Jones, solicitor, 20, King's Arms-yard, Coleman-street.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—The Lord Chancellor has issued an order that Wednesday, the 2nd June, be observed as a holiday for the celebration of Her Majesty's birthday.

THE LAW'S DELAY.—Lamentable instances of the uncertainty and costliness of the administration of the law which, apparently, everywhere prevails under Anglo-Saxon rule, are not wanting in India. A Hindoo widow, who had been left the sum of 20,000*l.* by her husband, had her right to the bequest disputed by the other members of the family. In order to defend herself in the courts she was compelled to borrow money, and while the law proceedings dragged their tortuous length slowly on, she had to keep borrowing until, when the case was at length ripe for adjudication, it was found that the parties from whom the poor woman had borrowed, had become, through the extent to which they had advanced, lawful possessors of the widow's right to the 20,000*l.*—The Asiatic.

THE BENCH AND THE BAR.

CALLS TO THE BAR.

MIDDLE TEMPLE, April 30.—The under-mentioned gentlemen were this day called to the degree of the Utter Bar by the Hon. Society of the Middle Temple.—Thomas Tomlinson, Esq., B.A., Trinity College, Dublin; James Colquhoun Revel Roade, Esq., of Christ Church, Oxford; William Thurley Mainprize, Esq., of the University of London; Charles Archibald Samuels, Esq.; Frederic Taylor Payne, Esq., LL.B., Trinity Hall, Cambridge; the Hon. George Thomas Kenyon, B.A., Christ Church, Oxford; Francis Broxbolton Grey Jenkinson, Esq.; Aubrey St. John Clerke, Esq., B.A., Trinity College, Dublin; Francis Thorne Cole, Esq., Charles Haigh, Esq., Arthur Pawson, Esq., John Paddon Latimer, Esq., and Charles Woodin Law, Esq., Bachelor of Sciences.

INNER TEMPLE, April 30.—The under-mentioned gentlemen were this day called to the Bar by the Hon. Society of the Inner Temple, viz.:—John Tankerville Goldney, Esq., B.A., LL.B., Cambridge; Frederic Green, Esq., M.A., London; Edward Charles Russell Ross, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; William Francis Shaw, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Robert Collier, Esq., LL.B., Cambridge; Edward William Foss, Esq., B.A., Oxford; George James Duncan, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Uthred James Hay Dunbar, Esq., B.A., Oxford; Nathaniel Albert Hunt, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; William Russell Griffiths, Esq., LL.B., Cambridge; Philip Vernon, Smith, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Oliver Augustus Saunders, Esq., Cambridge, and Walter Lacy Rogers, Esq., M.A., Oxford.

LINCOLN'S INN, April 30.—The undermentioned gentlemen were this day called to the degree of barrister-at-law by the Honourable Society of Lincoln's Inn, viz.:—Charles Fuhr Jemmett, Esq., LL.B. and B.A., Cambridge, and B.C.L., Oxford; William George Gould, Esq., late of Oxford; Stephen James Taylor, Esq.; George De Butts, Esq., B.A., Dublin; Reginald Braunfield, Esq., Oxford; Robert Hill Pinhey, Esq.; and William Henry Craig, Esq., M.A., Dublin.

GRAY'S INN, April 30.—At a pension holden this day Henry Keeble, of No. 33, Braham-road, Brixton, gentleman, the eldest surviving son of Jabez Keeble, late of Thames Bank, Pimlico, Esq., was this day called to the degree of barrister-at-law by the Honourable Society of Gray's Inn.

BOROUGH OF YOUGHAL.—William Exham, Esq., Q. C., will, it is understood, contest Youghal. Mr. Exham will give an independent support to the Conservative party if returned.

The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal granting the dignity of a Knight of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland unto James Martin, Esq., late First Minister and Attorney-General in the colony of New South Wales; and unto Robert Officer, Esq., Speaker of the House of Assembly of the Colony of Tasmania.

MAGISTRATE AND PARISH LAWYER.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

POOR-RATE — RAILWAY — BRANCH LINE. — Where a branch line is leased to the owners of a main line, into which it runs, the assessment must be made without taking into consideration the value of the main line to the owners, in addition to the net profits derived from the line passing through the parish: (Reg. v. The Inhabitants of Llantrissant, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 364. Q. B.)

EVIDENCE—DYING DECLARATION.—A magistrates' clerk administered an oath to a dying person, and she made a statement. He asked her if she felt she was likely to die? She said, "I think so." He said, "Why?" She replied, "From the shortness of my breath." He said, "Is it with the fear of death before you that you make these statements?" and added, "Have you any present hope of your recovery?" She said, "None." He then proceeded to write out the deposition, and when finished read it to her, and asked her to correct any mistake that he might have made. She said, "No hope, at present, of my recovery," and he then inserted those words: Held, that the declaration was inadmissible, as the words "at present," introduced by the deceased, were a qualification of her previous statement that she had no hope of recovery: (Reg. v. Jenkins, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 372. Cr. Cas. Res.)

CITY OF WORCESTER.—The Quarter Sessions for this city are appointed to be holden on Thursday next, 13th May. Recorder, F. T. Streeten, Esq. Clerk of the Peace, R. T. Rea, Esq. Ten days' notice to be given.

A PRISON GOVERNOR ON PRISON DISCIPLINE.—The following letter has been addressed to the Howard Association, London, by the governor of one of the largest and best managed prisons in Great Britain:—"What can be more agreeable to the position of a governor than a situation where prison labour is discountenanced rather than otherwise? He has no anxieties as to profits, no trouble in the procuring of labour, or in the buying of the materials at the cheapest rates, and in the selling at the most profitable prices, nor any disagreeable duties in the coercion of the idle to do their work. The question then naturally arises, are prisoners to be kept in their cells, like canaries in a cage, merely to be looked at, to eat their meals, take their exercise, go to chapel, and do just as much work as is agreeable to themselves; or are they to be made to work for their living, and the habitually lazy (who half fill the gaols) to be taught habits of industry, which may turn to good account after their discharge? I, for one, say the latter should be enforced. Why should the refuse of society, who are in many respects the terror of the respectable part of the community, be pampered, while the honest labourer has to work hard for the support of his wife and family?"

A SUCCESS UNPRECEDENTED.—MARAVILLA COCOA IS PERFECTION.—The Globe says "Taylor Brothers' Maravilla Cocoa has achieved a thorough success, and supersedes every other cocoa in the market. For homeopaths and invalids we could not recommend a more agreeable or valuable beverage." Sold in packets only, by all Grocers.—[ADVT.]

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

WINDING-UP — CLAIM — PROOF — COLLATERAL SECURITY.—B. held acceptance of the company to a large amount, and as a collateral security a quantity of cotton, the sale of which did not produce enough to cover the debt. He was held to be enabled to prove for the whole amount of the debt, and not merely for the balance remaining due after giving credit for the proceeds of the security; the court, in such cases, adopting the rule of administration of assets, and not of bankruptcy: (Johnstone's case, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 266. M. R.)

WINDING-UP — PRACTICE — DIRECTORS — ULTRA VIRES — PURCHASE OF SHARES.—The L. Company was formed for the purpose of purchasing the business of a banker, who declined to complete the contract until 40,000 shares had been taken up in the company. The directors, therefore, arranged with the I. Company (through the intervention of the O. Company) that the I. Company should guarantee a subscription of 40,000 shares in the L. Company. The I. Company, being without funds for that purpose, arranged that their promissory notes for 200,000*l.* should be discounted by the N. Bank, and the directors of the L. Company gave a guarantee that they would leave in the N. Bank an amount equal to the sum which might remain on these notes until such notes should be paid, the I. Company being by these means enabled to take up the 40,000 shares. Upon bill filed by a shareholder in the L. Company against its directors and the N. Bank: Held, that the money deposited having been paid out of the funds of the Company, contrary to the articles of association, the directors had committed a breach of trust, and that N. Bank must restore to the L. Company the sums which they had received from them under this arrangement: (Gray v. Lewis, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 282. V.C. M.)

LANDS CLAUSES ACT—ARBITRATION.—A railway company requiring certain lands in which R. and R. were interested, the question of the amount of compensation was referred to two arbitrators and their umpire. R. and R., being dissatisfied with the umpire's award, moved the court to set it aside; and on the 9th July 1868, Giffard, V.C. ordered that the matter should be remitted to the umpire to reconsider and redetermine it. Nothing was done in pursuance of the order, and in Feb. 1869 R. and R. gave notice to the company, requiring the question of compensation to be settled by a jury, and they afterwards gave notice that if the company failed to issue their warrant an action would be brought to recover the whole amount of R. and R.'s claim. On a bill by the company to restrain R. and R. from commencing the threatened action, to which bill R. and R. demurred: Held, that the umpire was bound, under the 23rd section of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, to make his award within three months from the date of the order referring the matter back to him. Demurrer accordingly allowed: (Dare Valley Railway Company v. Rhys, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 291. M. R.)

BREACH OF TRUST BY DIRECTORS—MISAPPLICATION OF MONEY—LIABILITY TO REFUND.—The memorandum of association of the L. C. Company stated that one of the objects for which the company was established was "to buy, sell, or loan . . . on all descriptions of produce or merchandise, and of stocks, shares, including shares issued by the company . . . (not being purely speculative transactions for the rise or fall in prices . . .)" &c. The articles of association empowered the directors to invest any moneys of the company not immediately applicable for any payment, &c., "on such Government, or real, or personal, or other securities or investments as the board from time to time think proper; and where the board think fit, to make any such investments in the names of trustees." The committee of the Stock Exchange required the words "always excepting the shares of the company," to be added to this power of investment before they would grant the company a settling day. Immediately after the incorporation of the company the principal promoter began to buy shares at a premium on behalf of the company, and one of the directors soon afterwards bought more shares at a premium, also on behalf of the company: 535 shares were thus bought, at a cost of 3739*l.* Cheques for sums to that amount, signed by two of the directors, and countersigned by the secretary, were given in payment of these shares, and the drawing of these cheques was afterwards sanctioned at a meeting of the board of directors. The shares were transferred by the original purchasers to two nominees of the board of directors, and were afterwards by order of the board transferred to one of the directors, to whom a letter of indemnity, signed by the secretary, was given: Held, that the payment of this sum of 3739*l*. was not justified by the rules and principles on which the company was founded, and that all the directors who were present at the meeting of the board which sanctioned the cheques were liable jointly and severally to refund the amount of the payment thus sanctioned. It is the duty of a director to learn how the money, which is voted at a board when he is present, is intended to be applied; it is for this purpose that the office of director was created. He is elected to fill that office by the shareholders, by whom he is to be paid for his services. A plea of ignorance by a director in such a case, or that it was done by him for the sake of conformity, is merely a plea of guilty, and an admission of liability to account for the sums misapplied: (The Land Credit Company of Ireland v. Lord Fernoy, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 293. M. R.)

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.

QUESTIONS FOR THE FINAL EXAMINATION.

EASTER TERM 1869.—SECOND DAY.

IV. PRELIMINARY.

Questions 36 to 40 inclusive.

V. EQUITY AND PRACTICE OF THE COURTS.

41. Explain shortly the difference between a demurrer and a plea, and under what circumstances the defendant should demur or plead instead of answering a bill.

42. Give some instances in which a defendant may object to give discovery sought by the interrogatories.

43. Explain the mode in which evidence in chief is given, and how the witnesses are cross-examined when the plaintiff takes the cause to a hearing on motion for decree, and also when he files replication.

44. In what cases should a defendant file a cross bill?

45. Can a suit in Chancery be maintained under any, and, if any, what circumstances, for the specific delivery of a chattel?

46. If interest is by a mortgage-deed reserved at the rate of 5*l*. per cent. per annum, and the deed stipulates that in default of payment on stipulated half-yearly days, or within thirty days thereafter, the mortgagee shall be entitled to interest at 6*l*. per cent., is the mortgagee, after default in payment within the stipulated time, entitled to interest at 6*l*. per cent.? Give the reasons for your answer.

47. What is meant by "tacking"? Give an instance.

48. What is the difference between legal assets and equitable assets, and in the mode in which they are distributed in the administration of an insolvent estate?

49. What is the effect, as respects the remedies of creditors, of a statutory advertisement for creditors, issued by an executor or administrator?

50. Will an allowance for the maintenance of an infant be directed by the court during the lifetime of the father or mother of the child, and if so, under what circumstances; and how should the application be made?

51. A. agrees to purchase of B. an annuity on the life of C. C. dies the day after the contract, can B. enforce payment of the purchase-money? could he have done so had C. died the day before the contract? Give the reasons for your answer.

52. What is an ademption of a legacy? State instances of ademption.

53. Is there any distinction, and if so, what, between the mode in which Acts of Parliament are construed at law and in equity?

54. What is understood by equitable waste; and in what cases will the Court of Chancery interfere by injunction to restrain waste?

55. A. dies intestate, possessed of 20,000*l*. personal estate, leaving a widow, a son, and a daughter—upon the marriage of the daughter he had given her 2000*l*. as a marriage portion, and he had expended 3000*l*. in purchasing a partnership for his son. How should the 20,000*l*. be divided by the administrator?

VI. BANKRUPTCY AND PRACTICE OF THE COURTS.

56. What is the state of a trader's affairs with which the Bankrupt law has to deal, and what is the special object sought to be attained by that law?

57. How is that object effected in the case of a creditor holding security? State the general rule.

58. If the security held by the creditor is not on the property of the bankrupt, how does that circumstance affect the amount for which the creditor is entitled to prove?

59. The drawer and acceptor of a bill of exchange for 100*l*. become bankrupt. The holder proves against the estate of the one, and receives a dividend of 10*s*. in the pound, and afterwards seeks to prove against the estate of the other. For what sum is he entitled to prove?

60. Three persons carrying on business in partnership, give a joint and several promissory note, and become bankrupt. What are the holders' rights of proof as regards the joint and separate estates of the makers of the note?

61. A creditor omits to prove his debt against the estate of his principal debtor. What steps should the surety (who has not paid the debt) take for his own protection?

62. What is the limit of the landlord's remedy, by distress, after an act of bankruptcy of the tenant?

63. Under what circumstances are goods or chattels deemed to be in the reputed ownership, order, or disposition of a bankrupt? and what is the consequence to the true owner?

64. An agent, indebted to his principal, becomes bankrupt, with bills of exchange in his possession, which have been remitted to him by his principal for a specific purpose. What is the right of the principal with reference to such bills of exchange?

65. What are the facts material to be stated in a proof of debt for money lent and advanced to the bankrupt?

66. If any person is supposed to be in possession of property belonging to the bankrupt, or to be indebted to his estate, what steps should be taken by the assignees to ascertain the facts?

67. From what debts does the order of discharge operate as a release?

68. If the assignees decline to accept land held by the bankrupt on lease, what step must the bankrupt take to relieve himself from further liability under the lease?

69. From what time does after-acquired property of a bankrupt cease to be liable to the payment of his debts?

70. If the creditors of a bankrupt desires that his estate should be wound-up under a deed of arrangement or composition, how can that object be effected?

VII. CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEEDINGS BEFORE MAGISTRATES.

71. How is the crime of murder defined by Sir E. Coke?

72. How is the age of discretion, with reference to the commission of crime, determined?

73. What is larceny, and what are the circumstances necessary to constitute it?

74. What is the office of coroner, and how is he chosen?

75. How is the coroner's inquisition in case of death holden, and what are the necessary incidents?

76. What powers are conferred on a justice of the peace by his commission?

77. How is the constabulary established in a county under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 93, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 88?

78. What is the liability of a person intrusted with money, or security for money, with advice in writing as to the payment or delivery?

79. What is the position of accessories before the fact in cases of felony as regards indictment, their conviction, and punishment?

80. Under what definition of crime does robbery from the person fall?

81. How can the feloniously stealing and receiving of stolen goods be covered by one indictment?

82. Where may the receiver of stolen goods be tried and punished?

83. Of what species of crime are parties conspiring to murder guilty, and what is the punishment for it?

84. How is the punishment of death carried into effect under the Act of 1868, and who must be present at it?

85. What is the protection given to cheques crossed with the name of a banker, or with two transverse lines with the words "and Company?"

GENTLEMEN WHO PASSED THE FINAL EXAMINATION.

EASTER TERM 1869.

Almond, Edwin, articled to R. Bennett
Badham, Harry Alexander—G. Badham
Beedham, Thomas Claughton—R. E. Pannett; B. H. Beedham
Berkeley, Comyns William Lateward—C. R. Berkeley
Blake, Walter Scott—F. Blake
Bolton, Thomas Henry—Dyne and Harvey
Bosworth, Henry Wright—W. J. Woolley

Carder, Eugene—E. Elwin
Castle, Spencer—H. Thompson
Chamberlain, Reginald Storer—H. J. Davis; H. A. Owston

Chambers, James—J. Watson
Collins, Alexander—E. K. Bridger
Cooper, Frederick Bernard—S. H. Cooper
Craig, Charles James—A. S. Craig
Darlington, John Shaw—R. Darlington
Davis, Samuel Richard—J. Cooke
De Fivas, Alan Stevenson—F. Truefitt
Dupree, Theodore—J. J. Maberly
Edwards, Thomas—T. K. Edwards
Evans, John Albert Griffith—A. J. Evans; C. E. Abbott;
W. E. George

Farmer, Charles Edward—H. T. Young
Fleming, Albert—J. Heather
Fryer, Robert Hoskins—H. H. Fryer
Galloway, William Charles—J. M. Clabon
Garbutt, Charles James—J. A. Bush
Gard, William Snowden, jun.—J. Townley
Graves, John—R. Broatch
Griffin, Herbert John—G. Whitcombe
Hall, Samuel Alfred—W. Skilbeck
Hunt, Alfred—B. Hunt
Hutchinson, Edward—R. R. Dees; A. Lucas l'Anson, Philip Blakeway—H. S. Law
Jeffery, Herbert James—J. R. Jeffery
Jennings, George Joseph—J. W. Morris
Jones, Morris Paterson—M. C. Jones
Jones, William Charles—H. W. Nelson
Kewney, Stanley—G. Kewney
King, George Hall—J. C. Parnell
Langworthy, William Frederick—J. R. Bramble
Lind, Charles Henry—J. Guscott
Manby, George Frederick—W. Manby
Masters, Samuel Wheatley—A. F. Tweedie
Mirams, Edward—J. H. Kays
Moore, James Lord—F. Marriott
Morgan, William—G. Kenrick
Mote, John Hurden—J. M. Morris
Norris, William—G. Hollings; O. A. Ullithorne
Parker, John Thomas—L. J. Deacon
Payne, Frederick Fitzroy—F. A. Payne
Pyke, Edward George—F. S. Irving
Raven, John—C. Kendall; G. M. Wetherfield; B. Norton
Rawlings, Edward Bailey—C. T. Saunders
Reed, Henry—A. Besant
Saunders, Albert—H. G. Stokes
Shipman, John Greenwood—R. Metcalfe
Smith, Middleton—M. Gray
Tebbe, Henry—J. P. Piper
Watkins, Thomas William—W. Plummer
Wicks, Henry Philip—J. Brookbank
Williams, Arthur—W. Hunt
Wilson, Robert Bolton—J. Bolton
Winship, Lionel William—T. W. Keenleyside
Winterbotham, William Howard, B.A.—L. W. Winterbotham; T. Waterhouse, LL.B.
Woodall, William, jun.—F. Leach

COUNTY COURTS.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

POWER OF COUNTY COURT JUDGE TO APPOINT DEPUTY REGISTRAR—ABSENCE OF REGISTRAR FROM THE SITTING OF THE COURT.—By the 8th of the Common Law Rules 1867, framed upon the authority of the County Courts Act 1856, sect. 32, "whenever the registrar or his lawful deputy is absent from the sitting of a court, the judge shall appoint a deputy to act on behalf of the registrar." The judge of the City of London Court appointed the plaintiff, an attorney of long standing, as deputy to the registrar, the defendant (who was the registrar), being absent from his seat in the judge's court at the sitting of the court: the assistant registrar, who was not an attorney of five years' practice, was, however, ready to attend to the business required before the judge, and a few minutes afterwards the registrar commenced in another room the undefended business which is the most important part of his duties. The defendant protested against the appointment of the plaintiff, and also against his continuing to interfere in his work: Held (in an action for reasonable remuneration for his services upon an implied contract under the 8th rule), that these facts did not establish such an absence from the sitting of the court as to make the defendant liable to the plaintiff upon the judge's appointment. Quære, as to the validity of the said rule. The statute only gives power to the County Court judges "to frame rules and orders for regulating the practice of the courts, and forms of proceeding therein." (Wetherfield v. Nelson, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 366. C. P.)

COUNTY COURT REFORM.

The following is a petition on this subject proposed to be presented to Parliament by bankers, merchants, traders, and others residing and carrying on business in London and elsewhere within the United Kingdom.

Sheweth—"That your petitioners have watched with some anxiety, the working of the County Courts in England, and are greatly impressed by the difficulty, delay, and expence attendant on the procedure therein, and in many instances the utter uselessness of these tribunals in compelling fraudulent debtors to pay their creditors.

"The great objections to these courts are:—

First, that all plaints, orders, summonses and other proceedings have to be served by the bailiff of the court which often involves the plaintiff in additional expense, loss of time, and trouble.

"Secondly, that a plaintiff is compelled to issue his plaint out of the court in the district wherein the defendant resides, or in which the cause of action arose, and this is a hardship upon the plaintiff, as in many cases it entails the necessity of travelling many miles.

"Thirdly, the plaintiff has to attend the court on the day of trial and wait until the cause is called, whether the defendant appear or not.

"Fourthly, the plaintiff has no means of knowing until the cause is called on, whether the defendant intends to defend or not, consequently is compelled (often at a great expense) to have his witnesses, books, or other evidence necessary to prove his case in court.

"Lastly, when a plaintiff has obtained his judgment, if the defendant does not pay, and has no goods upon which to levy any execution he has then to summon the defendant to the court in the district in which he resides, and this often renders the plaintiff's judgment useless, and instead of benefiting by the process of the court, he finds he has only added to his loss.

"That, for the reasons above mentioned, your petitioners submit that the present practice of the County Courts is defective and a great hardship upon creditors, and that the same should be amended as follows:—

"First, by allowing plaints to be issued out of any County Court and served by the plaintiff, his solicitor, or agent, in any part of England or Wales.

"Secondly, by requiring the defendant to give notice if he intend to defend.

"Thirdly, by allowing the plaintiff to try his cause in the court out of which the plaint issued, or in the court in the district wherein the cause of action arose.

"Fourthly, by allowing the plaintiff to issue a judgment summons out of the court in which judgment was obtained, and serve the defendant therewith in any part of England or Wales.

"Lastly, by allowing the parties, their solicitors, or agents to serve all summonses, orders, rules, and other proceedings.

"Your petitioners therefore pray your Honourable House that leave may be given to bring in a Bill to amend the Law and Practice of the County Courts in England to the effect hereinbefore mentioned, or to such other extent or effect as your Honourable House may deem expedient and proper, or that your petitioners may have such other relief in the premises as to your Honourable House may seem meet.

"And your petitioners will ever pray," &c.

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

COMPOSITION-DEED—TRUTH OF AFFIDAVIT—NUMBER OF ASSENTS—BANKRUPTCY ACT 1861, s. 192.—The assents of the majority of creditors required by the 192nd section of the Bankruptcy Act 1861, must be given in writing to the particular deed executed, and before registration, in order to make the deed binding on non-assenting creditors. It is not sufficient that the required majority assented to a deed which it was intended should contain a different provision from that which was executed, nor that the required majority of assents were made up after registration, although the affidavit delivered with the deed upon registration contained the statements demanded by the Act: (Beddall v. King, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 325. C. P.)

CONVEYANCE TO BANKERS—PRE-EXISTING DEBT.—B., as a security for future advances to enable him to carry on his business, conveyed to his bankers (who already held other securities, as far as they would go, for any existing debt) all his stock in trade and the moneys to arise therefrom. B. subsequently became bankrupt, and the security was then impeached as being a voluntary conveyance, made in contemplation of bankruptcy, for the purpose of defeating creditors: Held, that the conveyance was good: (Martin v. Williams, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 350. V. C. S.)

REPORTED OWNERSHIP—SECRET POSSESSION.—B. A. 1845 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 106), s. 125.—The holder of a bill of sale of the household furniture and other effects of a trader (the inventory relating only to the household furniture and not to the stock-in-trade), by agreement with the trader sent to take and preserve possession of the furniture and effects for the holder, a young woman, who thenceforth lived with the trader in all respects as one of his family, the apparent possession of the trader continuing as before.

The trader shortly afterwards became bankrupt, and his assignees having brought an action against the holder of the bill of sale to recover the value of the goods assigned by it, the jury were directed to find a verdict for the defendant if they believed that the young woman actually and not merely colourably, took possession of the goods on the part of the holder of the bill of sale, and would not allow them to be dealt with without his instructions: Held, that this was not a misdirection, and (the jury having found for the defendant) that the furniture and effects were not in the "possession, order, or disposition" of the trader at the time of his bankruptcy: (Vicarino v. Hollingsworth, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 362. Q. B.)

FRAUDULENT DELIVERY OF GOODS.—A delivery of goods and chattels to be an act of bankruptcy within the meaning of the 67th section of the B. L. C. A. 1849, must be a delivery intended to pass title to or interest in the goods delivered: (Isitt v. Beeston, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 371. Ex.)

THE BANKRUPTCY BILL.

The following is a petition which Mr. George Osborne Morgan, M.P., is to present to Parliament on behalf of the Metropolitan and Provincial Law Association:—

"Sheweth, that your petitioners fully recognise the justice and the desirability of administering bankruptcy on the basis of allowing creditors (who in most cases are alone interested in the realisation of the assets) to have that administration left in their own hands unfettered, so far as is compatible with justice to the bankrupt, and the necessity of avoiding abuse by those in whom the power is delegated, and your petitioners therefore desire to testify their approval of so much of the Bill now before your Honourable House, as proposes to reduce official routine and restraint, and hand over the administration of the bankrupt's estate to the creditors, and those named by them. But your petitioners are nevertheless of opinion that in carrying out these views the framers of the present Bill have fallen into serious errors, to which your petitioners will hereafter call attention.

"But before adverting to the proposed enactments touching the administration of bankruptcy, your petitioners would desire to express their views on that most vital and important part of the proposed Bill, which relates to the proposed constitution of the Court of Bankruptcy, and representing as your petitioners do a large body of practising solicitors, they believe that they are above all other classes able to bring a large amount of experience and practical knowledge to bear on this subject.

"Your petitioners believe that the proposed plan of placing the whole of the London district under the sole jurisdiction of one chief judge of the common law courts, who is also to be the appellate judge in bankruptcy from all the County Courts, is open to most serious objections.

"In administering so large and important an amount of business as is transacted in the London district, it is absolutely essential that there should be a constant, ready, and summary access to the judge to decide questions constantly arising on adjudications, on examinations on proofs of debt, and otherwise at meetings, and which questions are readily determined under the present constitution of the court by an immediate adjournment to the commissioner, without counsel and without expense or delay; but such ready access would be incompatible with the duties and dignity of a chief judge sitting as an appellate judge.

"Again, it would be inconsistent if, on the one hand, in the country districts, embracing as they do large centres of commerce, and in which bankruptcies of a most important character occur, the business of such bankruptcies were to be conducted by attorneys before County Court judges, while on the other hand, in London, a large amount of precisely similar business necessarily in a large proportion of cases of a most unimportant character could only be transacted through the medium of counsel and before an appellate judge, such employment of counsel involving in every instance the expense of preparation of briefs and fees to counsel in addition to the fees for the solicitor's attendance.

"Your petitioners believe that the constitution of the Court of Bankruptcy that would be best suited to the administration of that peculiar class of business, and to the interests of the commercial community would be best attained if each one of the three present very able commissioners (and on the death or resignation of one then two) were to sit separately and exercise all original jurisdiction in the London district, which would certainly furnish an amount of business sufficient to occupy the time of two commissioners, and that the three commissioners or any two of them should form an appellate court to hear appeals as well from the decisions of any single London commissioners as from the decisions of the County Courts.

"And in order that all appeals may be speedy and economical, your petitioners attach great importance in the interests of the public (and certainly not of themselves) to the necessity of providing, whatever may be the constitution of the court, that solicitors may be entitled to appear and plead both in court and in chambers, and that it should not be necessary to employ counsel. This practice has existed in the Court of Bankruptcy from time immemorial. It was specially enacted in Lord Brougham's Act establishing the Court of Bankruptcy in 1831, by the Bankruptcy Law Consolidation Act 1849, by the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Bill in 1859, and by the Bankruptcy Act 1861. It should be understood that the questions arising in bankruptcy are ordinarily of a most practical character, involving questions of account, or otherwise of a character with which solicitors are familiar. They have generally been previously argued by the solicitors before the registrar or commissioner in chambers, and moreover they ultimately involve commonly a dividend of most uncertain amount, and the expenses attendant upon the discussion of them on one side at least are to be borne either by a creditor who has made a bad debt, or by a bankrupt who has no funds, and in either case it is most essential that the least possible expense should be incurred.

"Your petitioners desire to express their approval of the provisions introduced into the present Bill for enabling secured creditors to have their securities valued, and so prove for the deficiency, a measure which was introduced as regards deeds of arrangement, with good effect into the Bankruptcy Amendment Act 1868, and remedied an evil which was very much felt before. But your petitioners would call attention to the fact that by sect 15—sub sect. 5—of the present Bill, a 'secured creditor' is erroneously described as any creditor holding security of a third person, which would include creditors on bills of exchange, or creditors holding security from a third person or guarantees (none of them subjects of valuation), which could not be intended by the framers of the Bill.

"Your petitioners would also point out that the Bill proposes that the value of the security shall be determined by the trustee, in order to enable a creditor to vote in the choice of such trustee, which is an impossibility, and your petitioners would suggest, that until the choice of a trustee, the value shall be determined by the registrar, and after the choice of trustee by the trustee, subject to the revision of the court.

"Your petitioners would point out that a special resolution (that is to say, a resolution at a meeting of creditors called for a specific object) is made necessary for matters not of sufficient importance to justify such an expense; as, for example, by sect. 26, the trustee could not compromise a debt of 5*l.* either with a debtor or creditor of the estate without calling a special meeting.

"Your petitioners are also of opinion that in a very large number of bankruptcies it will be, as it constantly is, sufficiently difficult to get any trustee to act; but it will in a great number of cases, probably a majority, be quite impracticable to get any creditors to act as a committee of inspection. And your petitioners are of opinion that it would lead to much more beneficial results in facilitating the realisation of an estate on the one hand, and the prevention of abuse on the other, if such restrictions as it is thought necessary to impose upon trustees, should be imposed by making it necessary to obtain the leave of the court in all important matters, and giving the court authority where it shall think fit to take the opinion of the creditors by directing a meeting to be called.

"Your petitioners would also express their opinion, founded on actual practical experience that there is the greatest difficulty in a large number of cases in getting any respectable and eligible creditor to take upon himself the office of assignee, and if it be necessary that persons taking the office of trustee should give security, the effect would be very prejudicial, as in many cases it would exclude the most fit persons from accepting the office.

"Your petitioners would suggest, with regard to acts of bankruptcy, that it is most important, as regards traders in particular, that keeping out of the way, absconding, shutting up the place of business, and non-compliance with trader-debtor summons, should be retained as acts of bankruptcy, and that, as regards non-traders as well as traders, the seizure and sale of goods under an execution should be an act of bankruptcy; and your petitioners particularly suggest that it is most desirable to retain the act of bankruptcy, by filing a declaration of insolvency, as it is very important to have a ready means of obtaining a voluntary act of bankruptcy, both for the purpose, if necessary, of securing on emergencies an equal distribution of the bankrupt's property amongst his creditors; also for securing his good faith when bankruptcy is delayed by his creditors for the purpose of investigation, or for giving a trader an opportunity of making other arrangements with his creditors.

"Your petitioners would point out that the expression 'trader,' in the present Bill, is much too limited in its definition. For example, it would not include a banker, an underwriter, and many other persons now subject to the bankrupt laws, and they would suggest that the definitions heretofore in use in the Bankruptcy Acts by means of special enumerations of certain specified callings should be repeated."

"Your petitioners would point out that the proceeding provided in sect. 5, sub-section 4, to make a debtor bankrupt for nonpayment of a debt within seven days would be impracticable for want of certainty as to the amount of the debt being owing or the sufficiency of the security offered by the debtor. Your petitioners would suggest that the law and practice at present in force in these respects is wanting in none of these important details is thoroughly understood and works well, and should be retained.

"Your petitioners are of opinion that sections 110 and 136 of the Bankruptcy Act 1861, which enable creditors by resolution to take an estate out of bankruptcy after adjudication, and to realise and administer it in such manner as may be determined upon by the creditors, but reserving under sect. 136 the power of going to the court upon any points of difference arising in the administration of the estate have been largely resorted to, and have proved to be most valuable and beneficial, and they would urge the importance of introducing provisions of a similar character into the present Bill.

"That your petitioners believe that the provisions made for liquidation by arrangement in the proposed Bill are in no respect so well adapted for that object as the provisions contained in the 192nd and following section of the Bankruptcy Act 1861, as amended by the Bankruptcy Amendment Act 1868. The effect of those Acts has now been construed at great expense to the public by a large number of decisions of the Courts of Common Law and Bankruptcy; they are thoroughly understood, and fraud is effectually prevented by the Act of last session. Your petitioners are therefore of opinion that much mischief would result from repealing these provisions, and in particular your petitioners believe that composition-deeds, when guarded from abuse as they now are by the Act passed last session, are really beneficial to creditors, as they in many cases enable them to get a better dividend than they would get under a bankruptcy, as the debtor's friends are frequently induced to assist him in the payment of a larger composition than the estate would produce under a bankruptcy if the result is to be that his business is not to be broken up. But apart from the reasons above stated for retaining the law as it at present stands in respect to deeds of arrangement, your petitioners would point out the provisions proposed by the present Bill would not be found practicable in their present form, for in it is proposed that the debtor shall assign all his estate to trustees without getting any immediate discharge or other certain advantage in return, but that he should trust for any discharge to the resolution of a meeting of his creditors 'at such time, and in such manner, and upon such terms and conditions as the creditors think fit,' and as in the mean time there is no stay of actions there could be no inducement to any debtor to resort to this mode of liquidation. Your petitioners would moreover observe that as the trustee is not to have the power of disclaiming onerous leases, contracts, or shares, no creditor could be advised to act as trustee.

"That your petitioners consider the clauses of the present Bill, with regard to after acquired property, very harsh upon the bankrupt, and really destructive of their object. They would suggest that any provisions for making after acquired property of bankrupts liable for the debts under the bankruptcy, should be made subject in the first instance to after incurred debts, and, in the next place, that they should only operate for the general benefit of all the creditors under the bankruptcy, and not for the benefit of individual creditors, as proposed by this Bill. They consider, in fact, that it is contrary to sound policy, and to the express enactments of the law of bankruptcy up to this time, and tending to increase extortion and unfair conduct, to enable any creditor to obtain an individual advantage after bankruptcy; and they would point out that the proposed Bill is open to this objection in respect to the right given to creditors to enforce the unpaid portions of their claims against the bankrupt five years after the bankruptcy, by sect. 49, and as regards the authority to the bankrupt to purchase the debt of and stand in the shoes of his own creditor, by the same section.

"Your petitioners consider that great inconvenience would result from the proposed provision, that the accounts in all bankruptcies (whether in London or the country), should be audited by the comptroller in London only; and they believe that it would be impossible for one officer in London, however ably assisted, to get through such an amount of work, and that most serious delay and an inefficient performance of the duty would be the result, and they would recommend that, in cases in the County Courts, the registrar should act as comptroller, except where he, himself, holds the office of trustee.

"That your petitioners observe that, by sect. 10 it is proposed to abolish the title by relation back of the trustee (although from the language of sect. 91, this is not quite clear), your petitioners believe that the title by relation back is often productive of evil, and certainly, to a great extent, is founded upon a fiction of law; and your petitioners are of opinion that it would be better that it should be abolished. But in such case it will be important that very considerable additions should be made to the powers of assignees to set aside fraudulent conveyances, fraudulent preferences, and all other fraudulent transactions made within a limited time of the bankruptcy.

"Your petitioners therefore humbly pray that your honourable House will be pleased to amend the said Bill to Consolidate and Amend the Law of Bankruptcy, in the foregoing respects, and that the said Bill, when so amended, may pass your honourable House, and become law.

"And your petitioners will ever pray, &c., (Signed) "EDWARD LAWRENCE, Chairman.
"PHILIP RICKMAN, Secretary."

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

[NOTE.—This department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editor is not responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it.]

EVERY LAWYER'S OWN BOOK.—We would scarcely have noticed the letter of "A Managing Clerk," except to inquire what is the grievance of this gentleman, and the previous correspondents? The first, "J. T. S.," wrote to you to ask us (he might have adopted a less circuitous course) whether the two books were the same under different titles. This letter we did not see until a reply to it appeared from "M. E. S.," announcing the astounding discovery of the fact, which we believe was already known to nearly every bookseller, and most solicitors in the kingdom, that they were. We showed you by our prospectus, and reference to the book itself, that we had most emphatically pointed out that the work has been, and still continues to be, published under a popular title for popular circulation, so that anyone purchasing it under the impression that it was an entirely original work, must have wilfully closed his eyes to our assurances to the contrary. We further offered a remedy to those, if any, who have purchased the two issues under a misapprehension. With such precautions, and under such guarantee, we claim perfect right and liberty to publish this or any other work with different dresses and different title pages to suit different portions of the community.

LOCKWOOD AND CO.

SOLICITORS AS MAGISTRATES.—I hope the LAW TIMES will use all its influence to procure an alteration in the law on this matter, and the discussion re-opened a fortnight ago will be continued. It seems to me that the onus of proof against the propriety of making practising solicitors magistrates lies on those who oppose change. Why should not a practising solicitor be a magistrate? If a man possessing the qualification and a sound lawyer, in large practice, is it not ridiculous to suppose he would care for criminal practice in his county? Cannot a professional man's honour be trusted? And is not a solicitor of eminence entrusted with the weightiest matters of many families of position as fit a man to administer justice as a mere landowner who can know (and no blame to him) nothing of law? I cannot see why a barrister in practice may be a county magistrate and a solicitor in practice may not. The distinction is one which is illogical and insulting. A solicitor learned in his profession, of high character and of good local social status, is no more likely to be biased by the chance or prospect of criminal business than a barrister. If this suspicion be not the reason for the exception in the Act, what is? Perhaps some of your readers can inform me. I am sure the present exclusion of solicitors is not only unjust, but a very injudicious proceeding in many ways.

Ringwood, May 8.

LOCKE KING'S BILL.—WORDS OF LIMITATION IN CONVEYANCES.—Will not the effect of this Bill be that a grant to A., his executors and administrators, will in future pass the fee simple as well as a grant to A. and his heirs? At the present time "heirs" may be defined (sufficiently for my purpose) to be the class of persons who, upon the death of an intestate owner in fee simple, are pointed out by law to take the next legal estate in the property. Unless, therefore, the word "heirs" is inserted in a conveyance, an ambiguity at once arises, either as to the extent of the interest granted (e.g., in a grant to A. and his issue, what is to become of the estate if A. has no issue?), or as to the persons who are to be entitled in remainder (e.g., in a grant to A., his executors and administrators, are the executors and administrators to take in trust for the heirs, or to their exclusion). This ambiguity is contrary to the rule by which it is required that the form of the donation should be strictly pursued (see Steph. Com. 242; Wma. Real Prop. 31, 131), and in no way can the ambiguity be avoided, except by using the technical expression pointed out by the law. That this is the true reason for the present rule that the fee cannot pass unless it is limited to a man's heirs, appears from Co. Litt., lib. 1, c. 1, s. 1, 9a, where it is said that "the reason wherefore the law is so precise to prescribe certain words to create an estate of inheritance, is for avoiding of uncertainty, the mother of contention and confusion." Note also that in a grant to a sole body corporate, where the use of the word "heirs" would create an ambiguity, it is discarded, and the word "successors" inserted in its stead. Beyond this, there is no magic in the expression, "A. and his heirs." Let us now see what will happen in future. The law will point out a new class to take the next legal estate, or rather will give another name to and create a new technical expression for, that class. Instead of "heirs" it will be "executors and administrators;" and a grant to A. and his heirs will for the future be in effect a grant to A., his executors and administrators, and will be so construed. That being so, it is impossible that a special limitation to the class pointed out by law to take the next estate should have the effect of destroying the implied limitation in their favour, and that the rule should be laid down that in a grant to A. and his heirs, A. should take the fee simple, with remainder to his executors and administrators; but that in a grant to A., his executors and administrators, A. should take only a life estate, and no interest should pass to his executors and administrators. Such a state of things appears to be rather absurd. Of course I do not anticipate any change at present, at least in the universal practice, neither have I any desire to try the experiment myself. A case may, however, occur in which the point may be raised, and, at all events, if my theory be correct, some notice will have to be taken of the point in the text books. I hope, therefore, that I am not unnecessarily occupying valuable space in drawing attention to the subject.

M. E. S.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION, &c.—I should be obliged if one of your correspondents could inform me whether the Preliminary Examination is or can be dispensed with (and if so how) in the case of a clerk of ten years' standing being articulated under the three years' term of service; and also if it be necessary that the clerk should have been a managing clerk for ten years, or merely a managing clerk at the time of being articulated. X.

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.

[N.B.—None are inserted unless the name and address of the writers are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.]

Quirits.

3. EQUITY OF REDEMPTION—MORTGAGE.—A. being seized of lands in fee simple, by a deed, acknowledged under the Fines and Recoveries Act, joins with her husband in mortgaging the estate for securing a sum of money borrowed by the husband. There is a proviso for reconveyance, on payment of principal and interest, to such uses as A. shall, by deed or will whether covert or sole, appoint, and in default of appointment to A. in fee. The mortgage is still subsisting, and consequently the estate has not been reconveyed. A. is desirous of creating a mortgage upon her equity of redemption in the property. Can she do so by an unacknowledged deed? There is nothing on the face of the mortgage-deed showing an intention to give A. a separate estate in the equity of redemption beyond the above-mentioned proviso for reconveyance.

J. G.

Newport, Monmouth.

4. EXECUTORS.—Is there any and what course that an executor can take to obtain in a County Court a decree for the administration of the personal estate of his testator?

E. Y.

Answers.

(Q. 2.) COVENANT TO REPAIR IN LEASE.—Under the usual covenant to repair, a lessee is only liable for such dilapidations as result from the natural operation of time and weather. The age and general condition of the house must be taken into consideration in estimating this liability. "It is now perfectly well settled that a general covenant to repair must be construed to have reference to the condition of the premises at the time when the covenant begins to operate." (Walker v. Hutton, 10 M. & W. 249.) In the present case, the proviso appears to have been inserted from excess of caution, and it merely qualifies the covenant to the same extent as the law would have done had it been omitted. To give any more extended operation to the proviso, would be in effect to nullify the covenant altogether; for every imperfection, unless caused by violence, may be said to arise from natural decay.

M. E. S.

(Q. 112.) COURTS LEET.—With reference to "D.'s" query as to the steward's power to fine, I have looked at a black letter authority, Kitchen's "Le Court Leete et Court Baron," (edit. 1697), and find there: "Quant le seneschal mist un fine sur un sutor in court leete on sutor person pur son misdemeanur ces est appelle fine and nemy amerciamet et nest traversable." And he refers to Year-book, 7 Hen. 6, fol. 13. The power of the steward is very ancient; for instance, his power to fine heavily for contempt of his court—humble as the court seems—is undoubted: (See Lincoln (Earl) v. Fysher, Cro. El. 581.)

W. R.

LAW LIBRARY.

Addison on the Law of Contracts. Sixth edition. By LEWIS W. CAVE, Barrister-at-Law. London: Stevens and Sons.

We have before us the first and the last editions of this standard book, and turning to the notice with which the LAW TIMES welcomed its appearance, it is pleasant to see how completely all that was then said of it has been confirmed, and the prophecy of a great success fulfilled. At once it was received as a valuable addition to the law library, although it had been preceded not very long by a popular treatise on the same subject by Mr. Chitty. But Mr. Addison's book had the merit of a very scientific arrangement, and that which is still more important to a text book, and by which, indeed, it is to be distinguished from a mere digest, the accurate extraction and clear expression of the principles to be deduced from the collected cases.

With new editions the volume has grown in bulk. It contains now more than twice the number of pages than the book that stands by its side. But this is the lot of all successful law books; inevitable, but not desirable. It results from the manner in which new editions are constructed. The author, or editor, as it may be, notes up the subsequent statutes and decided cases upon their proper pages, and these are incorporated in the text with such corrections in the previous matter as the new law may require to be made. A chapter is rarely rewritten, so as to condense the whole into an essay on the law as it is. The trouble of noting up is infinitely less than the labour of rewriting, and the practice is consequently almost universal. It is the most profitable plan alike for author and publisher. But it is attended with the disadvantage, that it leaves the field open for a rival who, compelled to write the whole, condenses the whole, and gives the same knowledge in half the bulk. It was thus that Addison ousted Chitty, and perhaps some new man, treating the subject afresh, may, in his turn, oust Addison. At present this is by far the best book upon the Law of Contract possessed by the Profession.

And it is a thoroughly practical book. The subject is one upon which every solicitor is daily consulted. There is no book in his library so often resorted to as this. Nor is it to the practitioner only that it recommends itself. It should form a part of the course of reading by every law student. He should peruse it pen in hand, and extract the principles set forth in the text, for the purpose of committing them to memory. A small volume of "questions" on Addison on Contracts, similar to that we lately noticed upon Stephen's Blackstone would be extremely useful.

We have reviewed this work so often, as the successive editions appeared, and it so well known to all our readers, that there is no need to describe its plan or execution more particularly. The statement that a new edition has appeared, carefully edited by Mr. Cave, suffices of itself to secure for it a place in every law library.

PROMOTIONS & APPOINTMENTS

The Queen has been pleased to appoint Charles Augustus Cobbe, Esq., to be one of the inspectors under the Act to render more effectual the Police in Counties and Boroughs in England and Wales, in the room of Col. William Cartwright, resigned.

LAW SOCIETIES.

THE UNITED LAW CLERKS' SOCIETY.

The thirty-seventh annual festival of this society was held on Monday evening at the Freemasons' Tavern, the chair being occupied by the Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas.

The president was supported by Baron Pigott, Mr. Gregory, M.P., Mr. Forsyth, Q.C., Mr. C. Milward, Q.C., Mr. D. D. Keane, Q.C., Mr. Horace Lloyd, Q.C., Mr. J. Williams, Q.C., Mr. G. Pridaux, Q.C., and Messrs. Morgan Howard, Webster, Shires Will, Edwards, J. Shortt, Butler Rigby, Mellor, Rodwell; Dr. Sharp, Dr. Stallard.

The solicitors present were:—Messrs. Bolton, Bircham, Dalrymple, S. Bircham, Freshfield, Maynard, W. R. Maynard, Addison, White, Flavell, Tamplin, C. R. Williams, Wilson, Mozley, Powell, Webb, Tucker, Bromley, Teesdale, Lewin, Wyke Smith, Clulow.

The report stated:—

"The committee have much pleasure in stating, that after satisfying all claims, they have been able to make a considerable addition to the reserve fund. The income last year from all sources amounted to 4029l. 5s. 6d., and the expenditure to 1434l. 1s. 8d. The difference has been added to the invested capital or reserved fund, which has thus been increased from 40,554l. 4s. on the 6th April 1868, to 43,149l. 7s. 10d. on the 5th April 1869. The capital is all invested in Government or on real securities.

"The society has a Casual or Benevolent Fund formed for the purpose of meeting cases not provided for by the General or Principal Fund. Every member subscribes to this Benevolent Fund; and out of it the widows and orphan children of the members, and all law clerks, whether members or not, and their widows suffering from temporary and unavoidable misfortune, are from time to time assisted with small gifts of money not exceeding 5l. The case of every applicant not a member or the widow of a member must be recommended. It is then inquired into, and the society has special facilities for doing this, and if the applicant be found a distressed and deserving person, he or she is at once assisted. The committee have received 59 of these applications during the past year; and on investigation 43 were found worthy of assistance and relieved accordingly. The remaining applications did not come within the rules. Some members needing temporary pecuniary help in pressing emergency, and who would not accept it by way of gift, have received it by way of loan. These small loans are repayable by instalments without interest or any kind of charge. A sum of 373l. has been expended in these gifts and loans; the total relief afforded out of this fund to members and non-members, their widows and families, has now reached the sum of 12,027l. 15s.

"The amount in hand of the Casual Fund is very small. The balance on the 5th April 1848, amounted to 215l. 7s. 10d. The receipts of the year have been 485l. 16s. 11d., and the expenditure (including an investment of 200l.) 667l. 10s. 8d., leaving in hand on the 5th April 1869, 331l. 14s. 1d.

"Besides the benefits already given to the widows of members, it is proposed to form a fund in order to grant to those widows who may be in necessitous circumstances (and there are many) small pensions, and as a commencement of that fund, the committee have out of the casual fund set apart a sum of 911l. 10s. 7d. in the purchase of 1036l. 17s. 5d. reduced annuities. This sum represents the savings out of this fund of thirty-seven years.

"The committee have much pleasure in announcing the receipt of two legacies of 50l. each, one from the late Mr. Felix Slade, of Doctors' Commons, and the other from the estate of Mr. Marner, coach builder, of Oxford-street. Also they have pleasure in reporting that the contributions of the members during the year amounted to nearly 2000l.

"The present annual expenditure of the society in the assistance of its members and non-members is about 1600l.

"Since 1832, a sum of 37,284l. 14s. 11d. has been so dispensed in actual relief. Without the aid of the Profession this could not have been accomplished, nor could that fund have been accumulated, without which the society could not expect to have the confidence of those for whose benefit it was established.

"The committee in returning their sincere thanks to the Profession for the kind aid hitherto afforded, respectfully appeal for a continuance of that support which is essentially necessary to the permanent usefulness and prosperity of the society."

The chairman, in proposing the toast of the evening, "Prosperity to the United Law Clerks' Society," congratulated the members on the great success that had hitherto attended its course, and expressed the pleasure he felt at the large assembly of the friends and supporters of the institution that evening, which gave an ample guarantee of its continued well-doing. He could, from recent experience, sympathise with those who were laid on a bed of sickness—especially could he feel for those who were without the blessings and comforts which men in his position enjoyed. He knew not a scene more terrible to contemplate than that of a man who, after having devoted his whole energies to support his wife and children, was suddenly arrested in his industrious course by illness that at once deprived him of all means of rescuing himself and family from ruin. It was scenes like these which had stimulated some intelligent and good men, members of the Profession, to institute the present society, to which he heartily wished success, and concluded by making an earnest appeal to the legal profession, from the attorney's clerk to the judge on the bench, to join the society and give it their utmost support.

Several other toasts were given, but the pressure upon our space makes it impossible to report them.

LONDON AND PROVINCIAL LAW ASSURANCE COMPANY.

The annual general meeting of this Society was held on the 17th April. James R. Hope-Scott, Esq., Q.C., in the chair.

The report from the directors was read, by which it appeared that the new policies issued were 220 in number, assuring 306,625l. and producing in new premiums the sum 10,067l. 19s. 9d. The total premiums received in the year were 77,237l. 9s. 6d., and the income from all sources amounted to 97,937l. 12s. 1d.

The charges of management, 3478l. 12s. 7d. have, notwithstanding the increased business, scarcely exceeded those of the year 1867.

The claims by death which have been paid during the year amounted, including bonuses, to 24,174l. 11s. 11d., assured under 24 policies:—Of this sum, 12,184l. 8s. 8d. fell on the non-profit class, and 11,990l. 3s. 3d. on participating policies. These amounts are below what might have been anticipated, according to the society's tables, and are one-third less than the sum paid for claims in the year 1867.

The existing assurances exceed two millions and a half.

The assets of the society amounted to 495,183l. 14s. 9d., and the average rate of interest at which they were invested, on the 31st December, was 4½ per cent. This calculation excludes the sum which represents the value of the society's house, but estimates the amount invested in the purchase of reversions as producing 5 per cent. The increase in the assets during the year exceeded 50,000l., being more than half the total income.

Adding to the above sum the amount of premiums which were actually due at the closing of the account, and which were paid before the expiration of the usual days of grace, viz., 5426l. 3s. 8d., the assets exceeded half a million sterling. The exact figure being 500,600l. 18s. 5d.

The chairman, after referring to the facts mentioned in the report, said: Generally, the position of the society is briefly this. We have two and a half millions of sums assured; half a million of assets; an annual income of 100,000l. and I think if you take into account all that this company has gone through, its long period of forbearance as to dividends to shareholders, the long abstinence of directors to take anything like the amount which their services fairly entitled them to, you will see that these sacrifices have met with their reward, and that the early prudence and moderation which distinguished the management of this concern, are now bearing their fruit. The past management of the society entitles it to your fullest confidence, and to the confidence of all who shall learn from the reports which go forth from this company, the state of things which here exists. I hope this will encourage you to renewed exertions. Your efforts cannot but be very valuable, and I ask that both directors and shareholders will be good enough to renew their activity on behalf of the society. One word more, and that is to refer to a matter of public legislation. Mr. Cave, a member of the late Government, then holding the office of Vice-President of the Board of Trade, has introduced a Bill into Parliament to provide for the security of policy-holders, and he proposes to do that by compelling the publicity of assurance companies' accounts. The Bill, I am informed, has been read a second time in the House of Commons, and no doubt it will be prosecuted with all convenient dispatch. It requires the registration of accounts in a particular form; but I cannot believe it possible that any more stringent form of accounts can be required than that we have always adopted. We give in our accounts almost every possible detail, and are always ready at the meetings of shareholders to give every explanation that is needed. We have, therefore, nothing to fear from the publication of these accounts; but I mention the subject to the shareholders principally for this reason, that next year they may possibly find a difference in the form of the accounts. What will be required will, I believe, be less than is given now by this society; but if the shareholders should find less information in the accounts than they have been in the habit of having, they will at all times have access to this information, either at the office or when they come to these meetings. Therefore, while we are complying with the law, and thus giving the security which it is supposed the new form of accounts will afford, we shall continue to give such further details as the shareholders may require. With these few remarks I beg to move "that the report now read, together with the balance sheet therein referred to, be received and approved."

Mr. Law (deputy-chairman) said he had great pleasure in seconding the motion, and he thought he should be acting injudiciously if he attempted to add anything to what had been so well said by their esteemed chairman.

The report was put and carried unanimously. The retiring directors—Messrs. Abbott, Gwinnett, Jay, Lawrance, Loftus, Tilleard, Vizard, and Warter—were then re-elected; as were also the auditors, Mr. Taylor for the assured, and Mr. Westhorp for the proprietors.

After the usual complimentary votes the meeting separated.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

At the meeting of this society, held on Tuesday evening last at the Law Institution, Chancery-lane, the secretary announced the call to the Bar of Mr. William Hodson Lloyd, a member of this society, and who formerly filled the office of secretary.

The question for discussion was, "Is it desirable that the public museums and galleries of art should be open on Sundays?" which was opened by Mr. Austin, and decided by the society in the negative by a majority of eight votes.

THE COURTS & COURT PAPERS.

CHANCERY NOTICE.

During the Whitsun Vacation all applications necessary to be made at the Equity Judges' Chambers are to be made at the Chambers of the Master of the Rolls.

The Chambers of the Master of the Rolls will be open on the 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 18th, 19th, and 20th days of May 1869, from eleven to one.

Master of the Rolls' Chambers,
1st May 1869.

ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.

ECCLESIASTICAL FEES.—In pursuance of authority given to them by an Act passed in 1867, the two English Archbishops and the Lord Chancellor have settled the following table of fees, subject to the approval of the Privy Council:—The vicar-general, chancellor, archdeacon, or official is to have three guineas on the "consecration of a church and burial ground" (and, we presume, on the consecration of a church alone, but it is not so stated); two guineas on the consecration of a burial ground; the registrar seven guineas in the former case, and six guineas in the latter; the bishop's secretary a guinea and the apparitor a guinea on either occasion. On a visitation, episcopal, or archidiaconal, the chancellor is to have 2s., the registrar 12s. 6d., apparitor 3s. 6d. The table does not declare who are to pay these fees, or how many sums of 12s. 6d. the registrar is to receive from a clergyman cited, and the several outgoing and incoming churchwardens of the parish. On a faculty for alterations in churches or churchyards the chancellor is to have a guinea, the registrar 3l. 13s. 6d., and the apparitor 10s. 6d., besides 1s. a mile on personally serving a citation in the country. On ordination the registrar is to have 5s., and the bishop's secretary two guineas. On this occasion the new clergyman pays his first ecclesiastical fees, and as he may wish to know for what he is charged, we subjoin the following authoritative description:—"The secretary's fee is for correspondence with the candidates, the drawing of papers and instructions prior to examination, attendance at the ordination, preparing the letters of orders, and entering the names and titles of the candidates in the Bishops' Act Book. The registrar's fee is for registering the names and titles of the candidates in the register books of the diocese."

BREAKFAST—EPPE'S COCOA—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Eppe attained by his homoeopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Eppe has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by The Trade only in 1lb. tins, and 1lb. tin-lined packets, labelled "JAMES EPPE and Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London."

THE GAZETTES.

Professional Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, April 23.

FUTVOYE, EDWARD, and FLOWER, JOHN, attorneys and solicitors, John-st., Bedford-row. Jan. 1. Debita by Futvoys SLATER and BARLOW, JOHN RAWLINSON, attorneys and solicitors, Manchester. Debita by Slater. April 21
Gazette, April 27.

CLARKE, RICHARD EDWARD, and CHESTER, THOMAS, solicitors, attorneys, or advocates, Great Grimsby and Hull. April 13. By Decree of Order of County Court, Great Grimsby

Bankrupts.

Gazette, April 30.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

ABELL, ROBERT, innkeeper, Whitechurch. Pet. April 25. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Dobie, Gresham-st. Sur. May 24
BURCHMORE, WILLIAM, haydealer, Barnet. Pet. April 24. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Kimberley, Scott's-yd, Bush-la. Sur. May 21
CATT, EDWIN, butcher, Hastings. Pet. April 23. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Linklaters and Co., Walbrook. Sur. May 12
COLLISON, WILLIAM, straw bonnet blocker, Dunstable. Pet. April 24. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Edwards, Bush-la. Sur. May 24
COTTELL, ALFRED WILLIAM, tailor, Greenwich. Pet. April 27. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Drake, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 21
DABBS, ALFRED, and CLARK, ALFRED JOHN, importers of foreign goods, Castle-st. east, Oxford-st. Pet. April 25. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Godfrey, South-sea, Gray's-inn. Sur. May 19
DANIELS, NATHANIEL, late merchant, Brunswick-gdns, Kensington. Pet. April 26. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Morton, Newgate-st. Sur. May 24
DELEY, ZACHARIAH, wheelwright, Arncliffe, near Bicester. Pet. April 25. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Haynes, Banbury. Sur. May 24
GILES, MARIA, widow, baker, Cable-st., St. George's-east. Pet. April 27. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Wood, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 24
HOLMES, FRANCIS, baker, Robert-st., St. Luke's, Chelsea. Pet. April 27. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Rice, Symond's-inn, Chancery-la. Sur. May 24
HOUSTON, SHORE, auctioneer, Wimbledon, and Telegraph-st. chambers, Moorgate-st. Pet. April 25. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Solley, Trinity-st., Southwark. Sur. May 25
LACEY, HENRY RICHARD, lessee of the Royal Alfred Theatre, Spa-rd, Bermondsey. Pet. April 26. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Norman, Sackville-st., Regent-st. Sur. May 21
LLOYD, DAVID, ironmonger, Portland-rd., Notting-hill. Pet. April 26. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Buchanan, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 21
NORTHCOOT, EDWARD CHARLES, farmer, Marden. Pet. April 25. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Messrs. Thomson, Cornhill. Sur. May 25
ONERING, THEODORE, ironfounder, Burdett-house, Burdett-rd., Mile-end-rd. Pet. April 27. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Layton, jun., Navarino-cottage, Bow-rd. Sur. May 19
PERRY, WALTER THOMAS, greengrocer, Charles-st., Hatton-gdn. Pet. April 25. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Olive, Portsmouth-st., Lincoln's-inn-flds. Sur. May 15
SIMONS, VICTOR, bonnet milliner, Southampton-st., Pentonville. Pet. April 23. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Padmore, Westminster-bridge-rd., Sur. May 21
SINCLAIR, JOSEPH, victualler, Park-pl., Liverpool-rd., Islington. Pet. April 27. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Billing, Chapel-pl., Poultry. Sur. May 21
SNELL, FREDERICK, carpenter, Gordon-rd., Peckham. Pet. April 27. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Kimberley, Scott's-yd, Bush-la. Sur. May 25
THOMPSON, JOSEPH VALENTINE BECKETT, engineer R. N., Woolwich. Pet. April 24. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Godfrey, Hatton-gdn. Sur. May 12
THORNTON, HENRY, baker, Mile End-rd. Pet. April 27. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Lund, Castle-st., Holborn. Sur. May 24
WILLIAMS, ALBERT JOHN, baker, Dover. Pet. April 25. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Minter, Dover. Sur. May 21

To surrender in the Country.

BACKHOUSE, ELIZABETH, painter, Leeds. Pet. April 17. Reg. & O. A. Marshall. Sol. Whiteley, Leeds. Sur. May 24
BAINBRIDGE, GEORGE NATHAN, auctioneer, Liverpool. Pet. April 15. O. A. Turner. Sur. May 13
BRECKFOT, ELIJAH, formerly eating-house keeper, Derby. Pet. April 27. Reg. & O. A. Weller. Sol. Briggs, Derby. Sur. May 12
BEST, THOMAS HARRISON, commission agent, Newcastle. Pet. April 23. Reg. Gibson. O. A. Laidman. Sols. Harle and Co., Newcastle. Sur. May 12
BOWRING, ABEL, greengrocer, near Burton-upon-Trent. Pet. April 25. Reg. Hill. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. Messrs. Hodgson, Birmingham. Sur. May 12
BURNLEY, SAMUEL, jun., and HAMMOND, WALTER, wool merchants, Bailey Carr. Pet. April 23. O. A. Young. Sol. Simpson, Leeds. Sur. May 13
BURTON, JAMES, innkeeper, late Burton-upon-Trent. Pet. April 25. Reg. & O. A. Hubbersty. Sol. Wilson, Burton-upon-Trent. Sur. May 17
CHAPMAN, THOMAS, grocer, Dawley. Pet. April 25. Sol. Walker, Wellington. Sur. May 12
CLOTHIER, CHARLES, lodging-house keeper, Bath. Pet. April 24. Reg. & O. A. Smith. Sol. Bartrum, Bath. Sur. May 11
COATES, JESSE, confectioner, Burton-upon-Trent. Pet. April 25. Reg. & O. A. Hubbersty. Sol. Wilson, Burton-upon-Trent. Sur. May 17
COLE, GEORGE, grocer, Olveston, near Bristol. Pet. April 27. Reg. Wilde. O. A. Acraman. Sols. Messrs. Brittan, Bristol. Sur. May 25
COLLYER, WILLIAM, labourer, Sheffield. Pet. April 24. Reg. & O. A. Wake and Rodgers. Sol. Micklethwaite, Sheffield. Sur. May 12
COOPER, JAMES, gentleman's coachman, Handsworth. Pet. April 27. Reg. & O. A. Guest. Sol. Sargent, Birmingham. Sur. May 14
COUNSELL, ROBERT, contractor, Pontypool. Pet. April 25. Reg. Wilde. O. A. Acraman. Sol. Beckingham, Bristol. Sur. May 13
CROSS, BENJAMIN, publican, Stone. Pet. April 19. Reg. & O. A. Middleton. Sur. May 10
CROSS, JOHN ROWLAND, printer, Taunton. Pet. April 20. O. A. Carrick. Sols. Messrs. Rogers, Exeter. Sur. May 11
DALES, JAMES, master slater, Bishop Auckland. Pet. April 25. Reg. & O. A. Trotter. Sol. Thornton, Bishop Auckland. Sur. May 11
DELFER, ISER, EUGENE, tutor, Chard. Pet. April 27. O. A. Carrick. Sols. Tucker and Forward, Chard; and Hirtzel, Exeter. Sur. May 11
DENNIS, JOHN, brewer, keeper, Grantham. Pet. April 27. Reg. & O. A. Thompson. Sol. Mallin, Grantham. Sur. May 11
DICKSON, ANDREW, boot dealer, Wakefield. Pet. April 25. O. A. Young. Sols. Walwright, Mander, and Witham, Wakefield; and Bond and Barwick, Leeds. Sur. May 13
DOWD, WILLIAM, cloth manufacturer, Ouseby. Pet. April 23. Reg. Gibson. O. A. Laidman. Sols. Scollie and Britton, Newcastle. Sur. May 13
DYKE, EDWIN, journeyman tailor, Stour. Pet. April 27. Reg. & O. A. Anderson. Sol. Clutterbuck, Stour. Sur. May 11
ELIAS, JAMES, cloth manufacturer, Ouseby. Pet. April 23. Reg. Gibson. O. A. Laidman. Sols. Scollie and Britton, Newcastle. Sur. May 13
ELWORTH, THOMAS, commercial traveller, Carlisle. Pet. April 25. Reg. & O. A. Halton. Sol. Wannop, Carlisle. Sur. May 15
FARRAR, ROBERT POLLOCK, general merchant, Leeds. Pet. April 27. O. A. Young. Sol. Pullan, Leeds. Sur. May 13
FELIX, EVAN, butcher, Swansea. Pet. April 25. Reg. & O. A. Smith. Sol. Mitchell, Cardigan. Sur. May 14
GILL, JOSEPH, tailor, Bradford. Pet. April 27. Reg. & O. A. Robinson. Sol. Harle, Leeds. Sur. May 15
GORDON, CHARLES, bootmaker, Liverpool. Pet. April 27. Reg. & O. A. Hime. Sol. Blackhurst, Liverpool. Sur. May 11
GREGG, JOHN, dealer in glass, Bishop Auckland. Pet. April 25. Reg. & O. A. Trotter. Sol. Thornton, Bishop Auckland. Sur. May 11
HARDING, GEORGE DANIEL, surgeon, Burton Joyce and Ripley. Pet. April 27. Reg. Tudor. O. A. Harris. Sol. Bell, Nottingham. Sur. May 11
HEWITT, JAMES, grocer, Silvester. Pet. April 15. Reg. Hill. O. A. Kinnear. Sol. Mitchell, Newcastle-under-Lyme, and James and Griffin, Birmingham. Sur. May 12

HINDS, THOMAS FISHER, out of employ, Sittingbourne. Pet. April 13. Reg. & O. A. Callaway. Sol. Goodwin, Maidstone. Sur. May 15
HOBBS, THOMAS MIDDLEBROOK, clerk in his orders, Wadsworth. Pet. April 25. Reg. Gibson. O. A. Laidman. Sol. Eglington, Sunderland. Sur. May 13
HOWELL, HENRY, tailor, Shrewsbury. Pet. April 25. Reg. Tudor. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. James and Griffin, Birmingham. Sur. May 15
HUGHES, GEORGE, sen., machine maker, Bawtry. Pet. April 24. Reg. & O. A. Shirlley. Sol. Woodhead, Doncaster. Sur. May 14
JAKINS, WILLIAM, butcher, Luton. Pet. April 25. Reg. & O. A. Austin. Sol. Bailly, Luton. Sur. May 11
JOHN, ELIAS, grocer, Swansea. Pet. April 24. Reg. & O. A. Morris. Sol. Smith, Swansea. Sur. May 12
JOHNSON, JOHN, grocer, Leeds. Pet. April 25. O. A. Young. Sol. Pullan, Leeds. Sur. May 13
JONES, EDWARD, saddler, Mold. Pet. April 25. O. A. Turner. Sol. Bellinger, Liverpool. Sur. May 11
JONES, JOHN WHITLEY, chemist, Llangollen. Pet. April 25. Reg. & O. A. Reid. Sol. Sherratt, Wrexham. Sur. May 11
JONES, JOHN PHILIP, draper, Newport. Pet. April 23. Reg. Wilde. O. A. Acraman. Sur. May 10
LACROIX, WILLIAM, victualler, Droitwich. Pet. April 23. Reg. & O. A. Tombs. Sol. Corbridge, Droitwich. Sur. May 13
LYFORD, JOHN, publican, Abingdon. Pet. April 27. Reg. & O. A. Sedgfield. Sol. Thompson, Oxford. Sur. May 20
MCOSVILL, EDWARD, cork cutter, Liverpool. Pet. April 27. Reg. & O. A. Sol. Roche. Sol. Thumley, Liverpool. Sur. May 12
MEER, HENRY, grocer, Blouby, Birmingham. Pet. April 25. Reg. Farrell. O. A. McNeill. Sol. Gardner, Manchester. Sur. May 11
MEYER, WILLIAM, saddler, Harlestone. Pet. April 16. Reg. & O. A. Shaw. Sol. Argyle, Tamworth. Sur. May 3
MILLER, ABRAHAM, shoemaker, Sturton. Pet. April 25. Reg. & O. A. Crosby. Sol. Draper, Birmingham. Sur. May 12
MINTO, JAMES, grocer, Uxworth. Pet. April 23. Reg. & O. A. Ingledew. Sol. Joel, Newcastle. Sur. May 13
O'NEILL, PATRICK, victualler, Aberavon. Pet. April 27. Reg. & O. A. Sol. Tennant, Aberavon. Sur. May 12
OTTRELL, HENRY, painter, Derby. Pet. April 21. Reg. & O. A. Weller. Sol. Briggs, Derby. Sur. May 13
OWEN, ELIZABETH, innkeeper, Wiganstown. Pet. April 19. Reg. & O. A. Williams. Sol. Walker, Wellington. Sur. May 19
PACNEL, WILLIAM, butcher, Liverpool. Pet. April 23. Reg. Wilde. O. A. Acraman. Sur. May 10
PEACE, CHARLES, carpenter, Tinsell. Pet. April 23. Reg. & O. A. Shield and Hough. Sol. Laxton, Stamford. Sur. May 14
PEARCE, JOHN HILL, butcher, Worcester. Pet. April 25. Reg. Hill. O. A. Kinnear. Sol. Allen, Birmingham. Sur. May 15
PEAY, JOHN, buckle long maker, Wallall. Pet. April 23. O. A. Clarke. Sol. Crump, Wallall. Sur. May 13
PES, JOHN PHILLIP, grocer, Hirwain. Pet. April 25. Reg. & O. A. Sol. Ross, Aberdare. Sur. May 11
REEVES, CHARLES, sword cutler, Birmingham. Pet. April 24. Reg. Tudor. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. Barlow and Smith, Birmingham. Sur. May 14
RICKETTS, SAMUEL, general merchant, Liverpool. Pet. April 27. Reg. & O. A. Sol. Roche. Sol. Thumley, Liverpool. Sur. May 12
ROE, HENRY, draper, Sheffield. Pet. April 25. O. A. Turner. Sols. Steble and Jameson, Liverpool, agents for Chambers and Son, Sheffield. Sur. May 10
ROSEFIELD, JOSEPH, and STAFFORD, JOHN, cloth manufacturers, Charnock, Young, Messrs. Stringer, Ouseby, and Bond and Barwick, Leeds. Sur. May 13
SHARP, JOHN, wool dealer, Bradford. Pet. April 27. Reg. & O. A. Robinson. Sol. Hill, Bradford. Sur. May 11
SHORT, JOHN, weighing machine maker, Liverpool. Pet. April 25. Reg. & O. A. Sol. Thumley, Liverpool. Sur. May 11
SIMPSON, THOMAS, hairdresser, Darlington. Pet. April 22. Reg. & O. A. Bowes. Sol. Watell, Darlington. Sur. May 10
SMITH, CHARLES, retail cheese factor, Newcastle. Pet. April 24. Reg. Gibson. O. A. Laidman. Sols. Hoyle, Shipley, and Hoyle, Newcastle. Sur. May 13
SMITH, JOHN, cap manufacturer, Halifax. Pet. April 17. O. A. Young. Sur. May 10
SMITH, JOHN PHILLIPS, agricultural engineer, Wolverhampton. Pet. April 14. Reg. Tudor. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. Messrs. Underhill, Wolverhampton, and Green, Birmingham. Sur. May 14
STARBUCK, JOHN, butcher, Barlestone. Pet. April 23. Reg. & O. A. Loeley. Sol. Tippetts, Atherstone. Sur. May 12
STEVENS, GEORGE, coachbuilder, Norton. Pet. April 23. Reg. & O. A. Jackson. Sols. Walker and Langbourne, New Malden. Sur. May 15
TAYLOR, WILLIAM, boatman, late Wolverhampton. Pet. April 25. Reg. & O. A. Brown. Sol. Stratton, Wolverhampton. Sur. May 15
THOMAS, JAMES ROBERT, draper, Newport. Pet. April 20. Reg. Wilde. O. A. Acraman. Sur. May 10
THOMPSON, MARK, jun., attorney, Sunderland. Pet. April 25. Reg. & O. A. Ellis. Sol. Eglington, Sunderland. Sur. May 13
THOMSON, THOMAS, director and manager of the Swansea Zinc Company, Swansea. Pet. April 27. Reg. Wilde. O. A. Acraman. Sols. Lawrence, Plewa, and Boyer, Old Jewry-chmbs, and Press and Inskip, Bristol. Sur. May 13
WEARING, CHARLES, painter, Waterloo, near Liverpool. Pet. April 27. Reg. & O. A. Patchitt. Sol. Smith, Nottingham. Sur. May 19
WILSON, JOHN, innkeeper, formerly Bromyard. Pet. April 25. Reg. & O. A. Crisp. Sol. Clutterbuck, Worcester. Sur. May 13
WOLF, JOSEPH, miller, Skipton. Pet. April 25. Reg. & O. A. Varty. Sol. Graham, Penrith. Sur. May 12

Gazette, April 9.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

ARTHUR, WALTER, surgeon, Kennington-rd. Pet. May 1. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Norton, Clifford's-lan. Sur. May 24
BARNES, JOHN, bootmaker, 10, St. James's-st., Strand. Pet. April 30. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Strutt, Adelphi-ter, Strand. Sur. May 30
BUCKNALL, JAMES, goldbeater, Lower Charles-st., Clerkenwell. Pet. April 25. O. A. Stansfeld. Sols. Wedlake and Lettis, King's Bench-walk, Temple. Sur. May 19
BUTLER, HENRY, sen., jeweller, Richmond. Pet. May 1. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sols. Miller and Stubbs, East-cheap. Sur. May 25
BRAHAM, HENRY JAMES, rag merchant, Cannon-st. Pet. April 27. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Kynaston and Co., Kingsway. Sur. May 13
BROADBRIDGE, CHARLES, surveyor, Stanhope-st., Hampstead-rd. Pet. April 25. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Gossament, New Broad-st. Sur. May 31
BURNLEY, JAMES, commission agent, Mayes-villas, Wood-green. Pet. April 25. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Kimberley, Scott's-yd, Bush-la. Sur. May 27
COLTMAN, WILLIAM, china dealer, Southgate-rd., Kingsland. Pet. April 25. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sols. Ingle and Co., City, Bar-chmbs, Threadneedle-st. Sur. May 27
CRAMER, EDWARD, general warehouseman, Chesapeake. Pet. April 14. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Marsden, Friday-st. Sur. May 34
D'ALTYRAC, JUNIA MARIA, no occupation, Park-st., Grovenor-lane. Pet. April 20. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Geoghegan, Lincoln's-inn-flds. Sur. May 19
DAVIES, EDWIN, general shopkeeper, Waterloo-pl., Peckham. Pet. April 25. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Nash, Arlington-st., Islington. Sur. May 27
DUNN, WILLIAM, merchant, Camberwell New-rd. Pet. April 23. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sols. Roy and Cartwright, Lothbury. Sur. May 25
ELLIOTT, EDWARD, general agent, Brondesbury-villas, Kilburn. Pet. April 13. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Webb, Greenwich. Sur. May 27
GILL, JOHN, manager to a licensed victualler, Ilford. Pet. April 25. Reg. Brougham. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Goswamy, Bow-st. Covent-gdn. Sur. May 19
GILLING, JAMES, and TUBBY, JAMES, builders, Great Yarmouth. Pet. April 25. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sols. Rhodes and Co., Chancery-la. Sur. May 27
GUY, MARY ANN, widow, boarding house keeper, New Gloucester-st., Hoxton. Pet. April 30. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Lawrence, 25, St. James's-st., Strand. Sur. May 27
HARRISON, HENRY, out of business, Renfrew-rd., Kennington. Pet. April 25. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Cook
SPRATLEY, MICHAEL WILLIAM, Aldred-rd., Kennington, an BALDWIN, THOMAS, Williams-ter, Old Kent-rd., both advertised agents. Pet. April 25. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Cook
HIND, THOMAS, farmer, Sandy. Pet. May 1. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sols. Parker, Books, and Parkers, Bedford-row. Sur. May 25
HORNELL, FREDERICK JOHN, hairdresser, Belle Vue-ter, Hall-st., Islington. Pet. April 25. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Catte Bedford-row. Sur. May 21

HOY, JOHN, clothier, Queen's-ter, Battersea. Pet. April 27. O. A. Stanford. Sol. Wood, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 19.
 BURCHISON, GEORGE, JAMES, bootmaker, Upper-st, Islington. Pet. April 27. O. A. Stanford. Sol. Poole, Baltholomew-close. Sur. May 19.
 DODD, THOMAS BURREN, builder, late Clifton-ter, Battersea. Pet. April 27. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Heathfield, Lincoln's-inn-fields. Sur. May 23.
 LAMB, HENRY SAUNDERS, licensed victualler, Oxford-st, Westminster. Pet. April 26. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Frogatt, Argyle-st, Regent-st. Sur. May 21.
 LISTER, HENRY JAMES, tailor's foreman, West Smithfield. Pet. April 27. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Barron, Queen-st. Sur. May 21.
 MACKINTOSH, FRANCIS HENRY POTTINGER, merchant, Norris-st, Haymarket. Pet. April 27. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Reed, Phelps, and Co., Gresham-st, for Bateman and Co., Liverpool. Sur. May 21.
 MIDLER, JAMES, bootmaker, Waltham Abbey. Pet. April 29. Reg. Brougham. O. A. Stanford. Sol. Kimberley, Scott's-yd, Barb-la. Sur. May 24.
 PERRY, JOHN, horse hawk, Queen-st, Seven Dials. Pet. April 29. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Godfrey, Hattong-gn. Sur. May 23.
 RIVERS, ISMAEL, jun., boot manufacturer, High-st, Camden-row. Pet. April 29. O. A. Stanford. Sol. Payne, Bedford-row. Sur. May 23.
 SCHMIDT, ADOLPH, cabinet maker, Charlotte-st, Fitzroy-sq. Pet. April 29. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Godfrey, Hattong-gn. Sur. May 23.
 SIMONS, THOMAS, upholsterer, Craven-rd, Paddington. Pet. April 29. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sols. Davison, Carr, and Banister, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 24.
 SKE, JOHN, out of business, Lillington-st, Piccadilly. Pet. April 29. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Kimberley, Scott's-yd, Cannon-rd. Sur. May 23.
 STICKER, JOHN, watchmaker, Rathbone-pl, St. Pancras. Pet. April 29. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sols. Messrs. Boulton, Northampton-sq. Sur. May 27.
 TALLEY, AUGUSTE, commercial clerk, Lower East Smithfield. Pet. April 30. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Watson, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 27.
 WATKINS, CHARLES DEAN, grocer's assistant, Essex-rd, Islington. Pet. April 29. O. A. Stanford. Sol. Kane, Westbourne-church-est, Paddington. Sur. May 19.
 WATTS, JOHN, hat manufacturer, High-st, Poplar. Pet. April 29. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Brown, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 27.
 WORMAN, JOHN, miller, Ewell. Pet. April 29. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Michael, Gresham-bldgs, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 27.
 WOOD, FREDERICK, assistant to a butcher, Old Kent-rd. Pet. April 29. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Cooke, Gresham-bldgs, Guildhall. Sur. May 23.

To surrender in the Country.

ALFORD, ALFRED, confectioner, Landport. Pet. April 27. Reg. O. A. Howard. Sol. Champ, Portsea. Sur. May 14.
 BAKER, WILLIAM GEORGE, grocer, Stourbridge. Pet. April 30. Reg. Tabor. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. Bernard and King, Stourbridge, and James and Griffin, Birmingham. Sur. May 14.
 CHADWICK, JOHN, out of business, Huncote. Pet. April 28. Reg. O. A. Woodcock. Sol. Hartley, Burnley. Sur. May 15.
 CHILDS, HENRY, builder, Portlaid-by-the-Sea. Pet. April 30. Reg. O. A. Woodcock. Sol. Mills, Brighton. Sur. May 20.
 COOPER, ALFRED JOHN, general shopkeeper, Downham, Isle of Wight. Pet. April 29. Reg. O. A. Hall. Sol. Cross, Ely. Sur. May 19.
 CRYSTALTON, JAMES, grocer, Trimdon Colliery. Pet. April 29. Reg. O. A. Greenwell. Sol. Marshall, jun., Durham. Sur. May 19.
 DAST, JULIUS, bookseller, Eccleshill. Pet. April 28. Reg. O. A. Robinson. Sol. Hill, Bradford. Sur. May 14.
 DENNERT, THOMAS HOLBROOK, draper, Levenshulme. Pet. April 28. Reg. O. A. Kinnear. Sol. Kay, Sur. May 14.
 FORTER, THOMAS, beer retailer, Sheffield. Pet. April 21. Reg. O. A. Vake and Rodgers. Sol. Sugg, Sheffield. Sur. May 19.
 GOTT, JAMES FOX, agent, Manchester. Pet. April 23. Reg. O. A. McNeill. Sol. Robinson, Manchester. Sur. May 26.
 GUTT, THOMAS, painter, Windermer. Pet. April 28. Reg. O. A. Fisher. Sol. Nicholson, Ambleside. Sur. May 19.
 GRIMMER, JOHN, beerhouse keeper, Handsworth. Pet. April 27. Reg. O. A. Watson. Sol. Ebsworth, Wednesbury. Sur. May 14.
 HAINES, MARY, MARY ALICE, out of business, Oldbury. Pet. April 30. Reg. O. A. Walker. Sol. Lowe, Dudley. Sur. May 20.
 HARTY, JAMES, jun., builder, Bristol. Pet. April 30. Reg. Wile. O. A. Acranman. Sols. Messrs. Brittan, Bristol. Sur. May 19.
 HAWLEY, JOHN CARPENTER, of no business, Newquay. Pet. April 23. Reg. O. A. Collins. Sol. Nicholls, St. Columb Major. Sur. May 13.
 HENRIET, WILLIAM WALLACE, photographer, Liverpool. Pet. March 19. O. A. Turner. Sur. May 14.
 HERTON, JOSEPH, general commission agent, Aston, near Birmingham. Pet. April 22. Reg. O. A. Mitchell. Sur. May 10.
 KENT, FREDERICK JOSEPH, surgeon, Evercech. Pet. April 29. Reg. Wile. O. A. Acranman. Sols. Michael, Gresham-bldgs, Basinghall-st, and Abbott and Leonard, Bristol. Sur. May 14.
 KERRALL, RICHARD, publisher, Chester. Pet. April 30. O. A. Turner. Sol. Churton, Chester. Sur. May 20.
 KIRKMAN, GEORGE, tailor, Westbromwich. Pet. April 27. Reg. O. A. Watson. Sol. Jackson, Westbromwich. Sur. May 13.
 KIRKINGHAM, WILLIAM, out of business, St. Martin. Pet. April 23. Reg. O. A. Crisp. Sol. Tree, Worcester. Sur. May 15.
 LLOYD FRANCIS, builder, Liverpool. Pet. April 16. O. A. Turner. Sur. May 24.
 LOCKETT, JAMES, brickmaker, Hanley. Pet. April 29. Reg. Hill. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. Ward, Son, and Cooper, Newcastle-under-Lyme, and James and Griffin, Birmingham. Sur. May 19.
 MILES, DAVID, butcher, Battersea. Pet. April 30. Reg. O. A. Vake. Sol. O. A. Walker. Sol. Lowe, Dudley. Sur. May 20.
 MURKE, EDWARD, stone mason, Chester. Pet. April 29. Reg. O. A. Nelson. Sol. Stringer, Ossett. Sur. May 20.
 MUR, JOHN MALCOLMSON, draper, Liverpool. Pet. April 29. Reg. O. A. Turner. Sol. Nordon, Liverpool. Sur. May 20.
 NIS, BENJAMIN WOOLF, outfitter, Portsea. Pet. April 27. Reg. O. A. Howard. Sols. Messrs. Ford, Portsea. Sur. May 14.
 PARKET, JOHN, jun., out of business, Northampton. Pet. April 28. Reg. O. A. Dennis. Sol. White, Northampton. Sur. May 13.
 PETERS, THOMAS, licensed victualler, Brynmawr. Pet. April 29. Reg. Wile. O. A. Acranman. Sols. Jones, Abergavenny, and Press and Inskip, Bristol. Sur. May 15.
 REEDSON, WILLIAM CLARK, grocer, Titchmarsh. Pet. May 1. Reg. O. A. Hawkins. Sol. Henry, Wellingborough. Sur. May 20.
 REDDING, WALTER, journeyman blacksmith, Worcester. Pet. April 23. Reg. O. A. Crisp. Sol. Tree, Worcester. Sur. May 15.
 RAY, BENJAMIN, innkeeper, Hartlepool. Pet. April 30. Reg. O. A. Child. Sol. Todd, Hartlepool. Sur. May 17.
 REILLY, JAMES, charcoal merchant, Wolverhampton. Pet. April 29. Reg. Tudor. O. A. Kinnear. Sol. Barrow, Wolverhampton. Sur. May 14.
 RITA, WILLIAM, blacksmith, Kingswinford. Pet. April 30. Reg. O. A. Walker. Sol. Clulow, Brierley-hill. Sur. May 20.
 STANLEY, HARRY, EUGENE, out of business, Redditch. Pet. April 28. Reg. O. A. Browning. Sol. Simmons, Redditch. Sur. May 17.
 STAN, ENNA SOPHIA, innkeeper, Kingsbridge. Pet. April 23. Reg. O. A. Square. Sol. Davis, Kingsbridge. Sur. May 12.
 THOMPSON, ROBERT, bootmaker, Halesdend. Pet. April 30. Reg. O. A. Harris. Sol. Cardinal, Halesdend. Sur. May 19.
 WILSON, WILLIAM, cab proprietor, Birmingham. Pet. March 11. Reg. O. A. Guest. Sol. East, Birmingham. Sur. May 14.
 WILSON, WILLIAM, commission agent, Birmingham. Pet. April 30. Reg. Hill. O. A. Kinnear. Sol. Barnes, Lichfield, and Reece and Harris, Birmingham. Sur. May 19.
 WILSON, EDWARD, out of business, late Birmingham. Pet. April 28. Reg. Guest. Sur. May 14.
 WILSON, MATTHEW TODD, stuff merchant, Heatley. Pet. May 1. Reg. Macne. O. A. McNeill. Sol. Gardner, Manchester. Sur. May 14.

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

Gazette, April 27.
 BENJAMIN, BENJAMIN, boot manufacturer, Hackney-rd and Brompton. June 3, 1869.
 LITTLE, WILLIAM, farmer, Holderness. Jan. 5, 1869.
 RAYMOND, WILLIAM, farmer, Sheephead. March 8, 1869.
 RUSSELL, JOHN, late Manchester. March 18, 1869.
Gazette, April 30.
 WILSON, JOSEPH TIMOTHY, saw maker, Newington-causeway. March 25, 1869.

MILLER, MARK, land agent, Winchester. July 22, 1868.
 QUINLEY, WILLIAM, out of business, Canterbury-pl, Lambeth. July 11, 1863.

Assignment, Composition, Inspectorship, and Trust Deeds.

Gazette, April 30.

ALLMAN, EDWARD ALGERNON, publisher, Bedford-st, Covent-garden. April 19. 7s. 6d. in 7 days,—guaranteed.
 ARNOLD, SARAH ANNE, milliner, Brighton. April 1. Inspectors—J. Green, Cannon-st, and J. Rogers, Sackville-st, warehousemen.
 ASHBY, GEORGE, farmer, Marston-upon-Dove. March 24. 6s. Trusts: G. Rippin, Freeby; G. Hack, and A. Henson, both Ipswich.
 BENNETT, DANIEL, house decorator, Upper Berkeley-st, Edgware-rd. April 7. Trusts: D. Kitchen, gasfitter, Crawford-st, Marylebone, and H. D. Abercrombie, brassfounder, Whitcomb-st, Tottenham-cr-d.
 BIRCH, EDWARD, victualler, Liverpool. March 31. Trusts: R. Lumb, brewer, and E. Pearson, grocer, both Liverpool.
 BOLTON, CHARLES, furniture dealer, Moreton-st, Piccadilly, and Box-cottage, Battersea. April 27. 2s. 6d. in 12 mos.
 BOURNE, JACOB, general broker, Liverpool. April 23. Trusts: E. Ford, jun., accountant, Liverpool.
 BROOK, JOHN, jun., cotton spinner, Huddersfield. April 9. Trusts: L. W. Arncliffe, brewer, and W. Hick, tea-leaf merchant, both Huddersfield.
 BURRAGE, JOHN, tailor, Northwich. April 7. Trusts: W. Fraser, manufacturer of men's clothing, and W. Bantoft, woollen warehouseman, both Ipswich.
 BUSBY, JOHN, agent to the Navigation Company, Gravesend. April 5. 1s. on March 1, 1870.
 CHARTER, GEORGE, clothier, Chichester. 10s. by three equal instalments, in 3, 6, and 9 mos. from March 25,—secured. Trust: G. H. Ladbury, accountant, Chichester.
 CHANDLER, JOHN, and CHANDLER, JAMES, grocers, Brighton. April 2. Trusts: J. Lynn, wholesale grocer, and W. T. Evershed, soap and candle maker, both Brighton.
 CHESTER, THOMAS, jun., attorney, Barrow-on-Humber. March 28. 8s. by four equal instalments, in 4, 8, 12, and 16 mos. Trust: T. Chester, sen., gentleman, Doncaster.
 CLIFTON, JOHN MOORE, wine merchant, Tattenshall. April 1. Trusts: R. L. Clifton, gentleman, Newland, and L. Gash, farmer, Thorpe Tiney, near Sleaford.
 CLEWES, THOMAS MATTHEW, ironmonger, Bewdley. March 31. 4s. 6d. in 14 days from April 26.
 CROOKER, JOSEPH RODNEY, merchant, King William-st. April 26. 5s. in 40 mos.
 CRUTCHLEY, THOMAS CHARLES, contractor, Wolverhampton. March 30. 5s. by two equal instalments, on April 30 and July 30,—secured. Trust: E. Crapper, lime master, Walsall.
 CUSHION, JAMES CHARLES, baker, Old Kent-rd. April 19. 7s. 6d. by three equal instalments, in 14 days, and 3 and 6 mos.
 DALTON, WILLIAM JAMES, dealer in boots, Liverpool. April 10. 5s. by two equal instalments, in 3 and 6 mos.
 DAVIES, JOHN, grocer, Aberaman. April 1. 3s. in 14 days.
 DOLMAN, JOHN, victualler, Sunbury. April 12. In full, by July 1.
 EATON, SAMUEL, shoe manufacturer, Kettering. March 24. 5s. by two equal instalments, forthwith, and in 4 mos. Trust: J. Bailey, shoe manufacturer, Kettering.
 ECHES, JACOB, ironmonger, Walsfield. April 1. 8s.—2s. on April 1, 2s. on July 1, and 3s. on Oct. 1,—secured. Trust: J. J. Echtes, temperance hotel keeper, Walsfield.
 GEACH, WILLIAM FRANCIS, travelling draper, Penzance. April 10. 7s. 6d. by three equal instalments of 2s. 6d. on July 10, Oct. 10, and Jan. 10, next.
 HALL, EDWIN, builder, Madeley. April 16. 7s. 6d. on May 15. Trust: R. Bourne, farmer, Macclesfield.
 HALL, GEORGE LOWTHIAN, late artist, Elgin-rd, Malda-valle. March 29. 5s. in 2 mos.
 HARRIS, JAMES, grocer, Crawford-st, Bryanston-sq, and Hampstead. April 2. 5s. by two equal instalments, in 1 and 4 mos,—secured.
 HARTLEY, JAMES, grocer, Preston. March 30.
 HAYMAN, GEORGE, drayman, Bury. Jan. 18. Trusts: J. Bradbury, printer, High-st, Poplar; R. Burgess, gentleman, Adelaide-pl, London-bridge; and T. Clare, tailor, Leman-st, Whitechapel. Sols. Treherne and Wolferstan, Aldermanbury.
 HEDDERLEY, GEORGE, painter, Gateshead. April 14. Trust: J. A. Hair, glass merchant, Newcastle.
 HIDDLESTON, ROBERT ALEXANDER, draper, Jubilee-st, Stepney. April 7. Trusts: I. McCutcheon, jun., warehouseman, Friday-st, and J. Stevens, wholesale clothier, Little Trinity-la.
 HUNTER, JOHN, builder, Lincoln. April 1. 10s. by two equal instalments on June 30 and Sept. 30. Trusts: H. Newsum, timber merchant; C. Pratt, wine merchant; and W. J. Warren, wharfinger, all of Lincoln.
 HUDSON, WILLIAM, druggist, Leamington Priors. April 10. 7s. by two instalments of 5s. May 7 next, and 2s. on May 7, 1870,—secured.
 HUGHES, JAMES, mechanical engineer, Chorlton-upon-Medlock. April 24. 2s. 6d. in 3 mos. Trust: G. Haslam, accountant, Manchester.
 JACOBS, JOSEPH, victualler, Burton-upon-Trent. March 15. 10s. by two equal instalments, on March 29 and Aug. 29.
 JACOBSEN, RUDOLPH BERNARD, merchant, Liverpool. April 23. Trust: H. V. Banner, accountant, Liverpool.
 LANG, GEORGE, sen., gentleman, Toronto, Canada. April 5. Trusts: G. E. Wells, surgeon, Crewkerne, and H. Lang, gentleman, Gracechurch-st.
 LARKIN, WILLIAM HENRY, late manager of Machynell Branch of the National Provincial Bank of England, Machynell. March 18. Trusts: T. Crutley, Month-row, Islington. April 28. 3s. 4d. by two equal instalments, in 3 and 6 mos.
 LAZARUS, SAMUEL, and LAZARUS, BARNET, wholesale opticians, Hatton-garden. April 7. 5s. by two equal instalments, in 3 and 6 mos.
 LEGGO, WILLIAM, builder, Clifton-vils, South Norwood. April 21. 2s. 6d. in 14 days.
 LOW, DAVID, tailor, Hull. April 1. 3s. by two equal instalments, on May 31 and June 30.
 MEARS, JOHN, auctioneer, Stockton. March 28. 5s. by two equal instalments, in 1 and 3 mos. Trusts: W. H. Kirkup, grocer, and J. Wilson, bookseller, both Stockton.
 MITCHELL, JOHN, and MITCHELL, REUBEN, worsted spinners, Bradford. March 29. Trusts: J. Ambler, and A. Bunting, woollapsters, both Bradford.
 ORMAN, CHARLES, baker, Wotton-under-Edge. April 17. Trusts: W. Long, miller, Newmarket, and D. Perrett, brewer, Bourn-street.
 PANE, CHARLES, draper, High-st, Camden-town, and Scarborough. April 2. Trusts: J. Barnicot, Friday-st, and J. Howell, St. Paul's-churchyard, warehousemen.
 PURBOTT, JOHN, builder, Worcester, near Birmingham. April 2. Trusts: H. Taylor, glass merchant; and J. R. Chirm, timber merchant, both Birmingham. Sols. Saunders and Bradbury, Birmingham.
 RINDERS, HENRY, builder, Sandhurst. March 23. Trusts: T. Winter, Cambridge Town, and T. M. Westcott, Wokingham, timber merchants.
 SANDERS, SAMUEL, woollapster, Pilton. April 2. Trusts: J. Goss, and G. Mogridge, yeoman, both Ilfracombe.
 SCOTT, JOSEPH, cloth manufacturer, Idle. April 19. 8s. by two equal instalments, in 2 and 5 mos.
 SOUBRY, EDWARD, grocer, Blyth. April 23. 4s. by two equal instalments, in 2 and 4 mos. Trust: J. Ord, general grocer, Newcastle.
 TOM, WILLIAM, farmer, Rooksea. April 23. 5s. in 1 mo.
 TREUMAN, WILLIAM, ironfounder, Brookmore, near Brierley-hill. April 14. 7s. by two equal instalments, on April 14, 1870, and April 14, 1872. Trust: H. Walker, doctor of medicine, Brierley-hill. Inspectors: E. Burford, agent, Brookmore, and S. Bennett, builder, Brierley-hill.
 WATSON, JOHN PERCIVAL, merchant, Lime-st. April 15. 10s. by four equal instalments, in 3, 6, 9, and 12 mos,—secured.
 WEST, ROBERT, clock maker, Leek. April 19. 12s. 6d. by four equal instalments, on Aug. 19, and Dec. 19, next, and April 19 and Aug. 19, 1870.
 WHITEHOUSE, WILLIAM, grocer, The Pleck, near Walsall. April 28. 5s. by two equal instalments, in 1 and 3 mos.

Gazette, May 4.

ALPHABER, HENRY, ship chandler, Cardiff. March 22. Trusts: W. H. Tucker, jun., and T. Murray, merchants, both Cardiff, and T. Harding, oil merchant, Bristol.
 APPLETON, JULIANA, widow, Cromer-cottage, Kilburn. April 5. 3s. in 6 weeks.

ARCHER, JOHN, draper, High Easter. April 5. 5s. by three instalments, of 2s., 2s., and 1s. in 2, 4, and 6 mos from registration. Trusts: R. Griffin, pawnbroker, Baintree, and J. Barnard, farmer, High Easter.
 BELL, THOMAS ALFRED, manufacturing chemist, Wigan. April 9. 2s. 3d. Trust: R. Wood, calico printer, Manchester.
 BETHLE, GEORGE, wholesale ironmonger, Upper Thames-st. April 25. 8s. by two equal instalments of 3s., in 2 and 4 mos.
 BIRTWHISTLE, JOSEPH, woollapster, Halifax. April 14. Trusts: H. Stansfield, and G. Washington, woollapsters, both Halifax.
 BLAKE, EDWARD, grocer, Eltham. April 23. Trust: R. Hughes, cheesemonger, Richard-st, Woolwich.
 BLOVEREN, BENJAMIN, hat manufacturer, Church-st, Spital-fields. April 21. 5s. by two equal instalments, in 4 and 8 mos from registration. Trust: H. E. Norfolk, accountant, Coleman-street.
 BROWLEY, JOHN, publican, Rossett. April 6. Trust: J. Caldecott, public accountant, Chester.
 BUGGS, JAMES ISAAC, draper, Prescot. April 14. Trusts: J. Chadwick and J. A. Openshaw, merchants, both Manchester, and I. Buggs, manufacturer, Wakefield.
 BURNES, BENJAMIN, currier, Brentford, and Uxbridge. April 5. Trusts: W. Palmer, tanner, and E. Crisp, leather factor, both Market-st, Bermondsey.
 BURT, ARTHUR, spoon manufacturer, Birmingham. April 26. Trust: F. E. Williams, accountant, Birmingham.
 CARKE, PETER, grocer, Burslem. April 5. 5s. in 28 days from registration. Trusts: B. Clarke, bootmaker, and T. H. Tomkinson, gentleman, both Burslem.
 COLLISHAW, GEORGE, grocer, Kingston-upon-Hull. April 13. 5s. on April 21.
 DUBLEY, HUBERT, upholsterer, Forest-hill. April 3. Trust: G. Fowles, auctioneer, Stamford-rd, Fulham.
 FLORIS, GEORGE BROOKE, tobacconist, late New Oxford-st. April 7. 2s. 6d.
 HAMILTON, ROBERT, surgeon, Derby. March 27. Trusts: J. Hicks, grocer, and E. Stanesby, iron merchant, both Derby.
 HOWITT, JOHN, late grocer, Sheffield. April 14. 5s. on or before May 5.
 HUNTLEY, GEORGE, confectioner, Bristol. April 8. 6s. by two equal instalments, in 1 and 4 mos from registration,—secured. Trusts: T. Bolwell, milliner, and R. L. H. Mole, gentleman, both Bristol.
 JENKINS, CHARLES HENRY, pattern maker, St. Paul's-rd, Islington. April 21. 5s. by two equal instalments, in 3 and 6 mos from registration.
 JONES, ROBERT, draper, Cerrig y Druidion. April 2. Trusts: J. Shoolbrod, accountant, Manchester, and E. Williams, chemist, Cerrig y Druidion.
 JOSEPH, EMANUEL, stay manufacturer, Manchester. April 7. Trust: S. Levi, accountant, Manchester.
 LOCKART, EDWARD, insurance clerk, Eaton-v's, Loughton. April 13. To pay trustee 1500. in 14 days. Trusts: W. E. I. Lockhart, gentleman, Lanark-vil, Brixton-rd, and A. W. Digby, Chancery-la.
 LYLES, JULIUS, merchant, Fenchurch-st. April 22. 1s. 6d. in 12 mos from date of deed. Trust: W. H. Mardon, accountant, Poultry.
 MATHEWS, WILLIAM, oil and colourman, Hampstead-rd. April 14. 2s. in 29 days from date of deed.
 MCLELL, FRANCIS, and MITCHELL, JOHN, worsted spinners, Bradford. April 2. Trusts: J. Ambler, and A. Bunting, woollapsters, both Bradford.
 MOAT, GEORGE THOMAS, and MOAT, WILLIAM ARCHIBALD, common brewers, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. April 3. Trusts: J. Haigh, distiller, Wakefield, and J. Irving, builder, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.
 MOON, CHARLES, hosier, Wolverhampton. April 3. Trusts: J. Grime, merchant, Manchester, and M. O. Suffield, warehouseman, Birmingham.
 NICHOLSON, DAVID, builder, High-st, Wandsworth. April 5. Trusts: D. W. Yong, cement manufacturer, Tuscany-wharf, Kingsland, and E. Mills, timber merchant, King William-st.
 NORRIS, JAMES, butcher, West Gorton. April 27. Trust: J. Lees, widow, Denton.
 RAMSAY, JOHN, wool top dealer, Bradford. April 13. 4s.—2s., 1s., and 1s. in 1, 3, and 6 mos—the last secured.
 RUSSELL, WILLIAM CHAPMAN, draper, Fakenham. March 30. 6s. 8d. by six instalments of 1s., 1s., 1s., 1s., 1s., and 1s. 4d. in 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, and 12 mos,—last secured. Trusts: J. W. Richards, and W. Ryles, cabinet maker, Rugby.
 SALISBURY, THOMAS, brush manufacturer, Horfield and Broadmead. April 26. 6s. in 1 mo from registration.
 SEAR, DAVID, coal merchant, Wyeabwy, and Cowley Peachey, near Wye. April 2. Trusts: J. F. Gray, draper, Birmingham, and W. Ryles, cabinet maker, Rugby.
 SILVANUS, MARGARET, upholsterer, Wellington-pl, Holloway-rd. April 2. Trusts: J. C. Hill, Gresham-st, and W. P. Ingram, Aldermanbury, both warehousemen.
 SIMMONS, EDWARD, timber merchant, Windsor-rd, Denmark-hill. April 3. Trust: R. Rolfe, builder, Dulwich.
 SMITH, BENJAMIN, grocer, Tipton Kingswinford, and Wall-heath. April 8. 5s. 6d. in 7 days from registration. Trust: H. Clark, woollen draper, North Hyde Farm, near Hounslow.
 SMITH, JOSHUA, chemist, Wakefield. May 1. 7s. 6d. by three equal instalments, in 3, 6, and 9 mos from registration. Trust: G. B. Rayner, woollen cloth manufacturer, Horbury.
 SMITH, HENRY, boot dealer, Liverpool. April 27. 5s. by two equal instalments, in 4 and 8 mos from registration,—secured.
 STIRLING, WILLIAM, stone mason, Stockport. April 22. Trusts: J. Livesey, plumber, Wilsnlow, and S. Adhead, contractor, Manchester.
 TAYLOR, MARY, widow, late innkeeper, Bolton. April 21. 7s. 6d. in 1 week from registration. Trust: B. Aldred, accountant, Bolton.
 TRICKET, WILLIAM, and HEYS, ROBERT, cotton manufacturers, Ewood Bridge. April 20. 4s. in 3 days from registration. Trust: E. O. Lord, cotton manufacturer, Rawtenstall.
 VINCENT, JOHN, clothier, Month-row, Islington. April 28. 3s. 4d. by two equal instalments, in 3 and 6 mos.
 WHITE, WALTER, trimming manufacturer, Cheapside. April 21. Trusts: W. Willeringsham, warehouseman, Castle-st, Falcon-sq, and E. Brassett, commission merchant, Laurence-la.
 WILKINSON, WILLIAM HENRY, warehouseman, Chorlton-upon-Medlock. April 12. 1s. in 2 mos from April 12.
 WILLS, CAROLINE, hosier, Sunderland. April 13. 5s. by two equal instalments in 1 and 4 mos.
 WILSON, HENRY, joiner, Holbeck, near Leeds. April 9. Trust: T. Dance, timber merchant, both Leeds.
 WOODBRIDGE, STEPHEN, retailer of wine, Lower Norwood. April 16. Trusts: T. B. Phillips, builders' ironmonger, Paddington-green, W. H. Lavers, and S. Moore, timber merchants, both King William-st, London.
 WOOLSON, FREDERICK AUGUSTUS, decorator, Leamington Priors. April 3. Trusts: T. H. Thorne, banker, Leamington Priors, and H. Taylor, glass merchant, Birmingham.
 WOOLHOUSE, HENRY, no occupation, New Windsor. April 29. Trust: H. Lawson, public house broker, New Windsor.
 WULFSON, HERMAN, wholesale jeweller, Houndsditch. April 5. 6s. by three equal instalments, on July 24, and Nov. 24 next, and March 24, 1870,—secured.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

BIRTHS.

BARKER.—On the 21st ult., at Hazelford, Manchester-road, Southport, the wife of T. W. Barker, Esq., solicitor (formerly of Kirkby Lonsdale), of a son.
 KENT.—On the 1st inst., at Norwich, the wife of Alfred Kent, Esq., solicitor, of a daughter.
 ROBERTS.—On the 1st inst., at Brynderw, Surbiton, Surrey, the wife of Richard W. Roberts, Esq., of Gray's-inn, London, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

WELDON-WELDON.—On the 27th ult. at Rathfarnham, Mr. W. Weldon, A.B., M.B., Ch.M., T.C.D., of Holborn-hill, Cumberland, to Mary J., daughter of Mr. R. Weldon, barrister-at-law, of Rathgar, Dublin.

DEATHS.

BLAKE.—On the 3rd inst., aged 86, Anna Kemp, widow of Edward Blake, of Portlaid, Sussex.
 NEWELL.—On the 25th ult., on his homeward passage on board the Deila, near Gibraltar, aged 49, Henry Newell, Esq., of H. M. Madras Civil Service and British Resident at the Courts of Travancore and Cochin, India. Friends will please accept this intimation.
 NEWSTADT.—On the 3rd inst., at 18, Ely-place, Holborn, aged 60, William Henry Newstead, solicitor.
 SMITH.—On the 25th ult., at Lancing, Sussex, aged 53, Toulmin Smith, Esq., of Highgate.

Sales by Auction.

Hampstead and Hendon.—Beautiful Residential Estate, with capital mansion, known as Golders Hill, and situate at North End, conservatory, forcing houses, kitchen gardens, pleasure grounds, and park-like lands, 72 acres, four cottages adjoining, the great tithes amounting to 22l. per annum; also about 14 acres at Cowhouse-green, Cricklewood-lane; the whole comprising about 90a. 3r. 4p. With possession.

MESSRS. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and CO. are instructed by the Executors of the late Miss Bertrand to SELL, at the AUCTION MART, Tokenhouse-yard, Lothbury, near the Bank, on TUESDAY, MAY 25, at Two o'clock, in two Lots, a beautiful RESIDENTIAL PROPERTY, known as Golders Hill, situate at North End, in the parishes of Hampstead and Hendon, comprising a capital freehold mansion, for many years the favoured residence of the late Mr. Commissioner Evans, with conservatory, gardens, and park-like lands, cottages, the great tithes, &c., the whole comprising about 90a. 3r. 4p.

May be viewed by cards only, which, with particulars and plans, may be had of

WILLIAM THOMAS, Esq., Solicitor, 8, Gray's-inn-place, Gray's-inn, W.C.;

at the Auction Mart, E.C., and at the offices of Messrs. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and Co., 5, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

Hackney-wick.—Very important Freehold Estate, comprising the capital Mansion, known as Sydney House, with extensive pleasure grounds, stabling, kitchen garden, gardener's cottage, and meadow land; the whole about 11 acres, admirably adapted for building purposes, having frontages to Homerton-lane, Church-road, and the Oriel-road; also two Cottages and a Small Plot of Building Land. It is bounded by the North London Railway, but a short distance from the Victoria-park Station, and the New Station at Homerton.

MESSRS. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and CO. have received instructions from the Executors of the late Thomas Ballance, Esq., to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, E.C., on TUESDAY, MAY 25, at Two o'clock, a very important and valuable FREEHOLD ESTATE, known as Sydney House, close to the New Homerton Station, and but a short distance from the Victoria-park Station on the North London Railway, situate at Hackney-wick, and comprising the capital mansion for many years the residence of the late Thomas Ballance, Esq., with grounds, stabling, &c., and meadow land, the whole about 11 acres, with good frontages. May be viewed by cards only.

Particulars and plans will be shortly ready, and may be had of

Messrs. DAVIDSON, CARR, and BANNISTER, Solicitors, Weavers'-hall, 22, Basin-hall-street, E.C.;

and at the offices of Messrs. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and Co., 5, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

Worcestershire.—In Chancery: Hawker v. Pratt.—Freehold and Tithe-free Estates, in the parishes of Grafton Fyford and Flyford Flavel, in all 400a. 2r. 1p. Lot 1. Hill Court, with ancient residence, and Albert's, containing 218 acres of principally grass land. Lot 2. A small Farm, known as Jasper's, 37 acres. Lot 3. An Enclosure of Wood, 18 acres. Lot 4. Church House, with farmhouse and buildings, and 113 acres. Lots 1, 2, and 3 with possession at Michaelmas next.

MESSRS. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and CO. are instructed by an Order of the Court of Chancery to SELL the above, at the Auction Mart, London, E.C., on TUESDAY, MAY 25, at Two o'clock precisely, in Four Lots.

May be viewed, and particulars, with plans, had of

Messrs. CREE and LAST, Solicitors, 13, Gray's-inn-square, London, W.C.

of Messrs. WARR and BUCK, Land Agents, Worcester; and at the offices of Messrs. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and Co., 5, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

Berks, near Bracknell.—Freehold Building Land, forming the outlying portion of the Lilly Hill Estate, about 100 acres, only three-quarters of a mile from Bracknell Station, four from Ascot, and nine from Windsor, having extensive frontages to the Bagshot-road. The whole divided into plots of from two to seven acres. Is exceedingly dry, and in most part clothed with varieties of the fir tribe, is beautifully undulated, and has a sheet of ornamental water, presenting the most charming sites for gentlemen's residences, or admirably adapted for a public institution, as the neighbourhood is proverbially healthy.

MESSRS. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and CO. are instructed to SELL the above, at the AUCTION MART, in MAY next.

Particulars and plans are preparing, and (as soon as ready) may be had of Messrs. FEW and CO., Solicitors, Covent-garden, W.C.; and of Messrs. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and Co., 5, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

Yorkshire.—The Egton Freehold Estate of upwards of 13,000 acres, bounded in part by the Whitley and Pickering Railway, and intersected by the River Esk, and by the North Yorkshire and Cleveland Railway, with valuable bands of ironstone and freestone, corn mill, quarries, valuable rights of fishing for twenty miles, and shooting extensive rights (in addition to cultivated land) 6000 acres of moor land.

MESSRS. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and CO. are instructed by an Order of the Court of Chancery to SELL the above, at the AUCTION MART, London, E.C., on TUESDAY, JUNE 1, at Two o'clock precisely.

May be viewed, and particulars, with plans, had of

R. CARTER, Esq., Solicitor, 16, Lincoln's-inn-fields, W.C.;

of R. J. WILBY, Esq., Winterfield, Catterick, Yorkshire; and of Messrs. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and Co., 5, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

Middlesex, Ashford.—The Spelthorne Estate, freehold and great tithe free and land-tax redeemed, with a registered indefeasible title, close to the Ashford Station of the South-Western Railway; comprising homestead and about 72 acres of capital building land, with extensive frontages to existing roads, admirably adapted for the erection of detached residences and public institutions, the soil being gravel and the district dry and very healthy. With possession.

MESSRS. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and CO. are instructed to SELL the above, at the AUCTION MART, London, E.C., on TUESDAY, JUNE 15 next, at Two o'clock precisely.

May be viewed, and particulars had of

Messrs. SPYER and SON, Solicitors, Old Broad-street, E.C.;

and of Messrs. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and Co., 5, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

Herefordshire.—Important and highly valuable Freehold Estates, on the borders of Worcestershire, three miles from Ledbury, and four from Malvern, with mansion, distinguished as Hope End, beautifully placed in the centre of an extensive park of 200 acres, with lodge entrance on either side commanding the most charming views of the Malvern Hills, Easton Castle and Woods, and other romantic scenery of the district; with stabling, green-houses, graperies, gardener's cottage, &c., lawn, and pleasure grounds; six farms, with superior farm residences to each, and farm buildings, the greater part newly erected on the most modern and approved principles, the lands thoroughly drained, of rich soil and very productive. The woodland, scattered over the property, abounding in game, numerous cottages and small holdings. The entirety being about 1300 acres.

MESSRS. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and CO. have received instructions from the Devises of the late Thomas Heywood, Esq., to SELL the above highly valuable ESTATES, at the FEATHERS INN, LEDBURY, on THURSDAY, JUNE 3 next, in One or Eight Lots. The mansion may be viewed by cards only, to be had of Messrs. Farebrother and Co.

Particulars and plans may be shortly obtained of Messrs. FEW and CO., Solicitors, COVENT-GARDEN, W.C., and of Messrs. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and Co., 5, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

North Wales.—Montgomeryshire.—The important Freehold Residential Domain, distinguished as the Dolforan Estate, situate in the parish of Kerry, within three miles of Newtown and fourteen of Welshpool, and within a drive of Shrewsbury, and easy of communication with North and South Wales and the manufacturing and great commercial districts, with capital mansion, known as Dolforan Hall, stabling, offices, park, pleasure grounds, trout stream; the hills abounding in grouse and black game, numerous farms, and extensive sheepwalks, all let to respectable tenants. The whole containing an area of about 1000 acres.

MESSRS. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and CO. beg to inform the public that they are instructed by the Trustees of the will of the late Walter Low, Esq., to submit to public COMPETITION, in JUNE next, in Lots (unless an acceptable offer for the entirety be in the meantime made by private contract), the above important FREEHOLD ESTATE.

Particulars are preparing, and (when ready) may be had of Messrs. FEW and CO., Solicitors, COVENT-GARDEN, W.C.; and at the offices of Messrs. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and Co., 5, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

Wiltshire and Somersetshire.—The Life Interest of a gentleman in his 46th year, in the Rental, approaching 6000l. per annum, arising from extensive estates in these counties; also Policies of Assurance, subject to certain mortgage charges on the whole.

MESSRS. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and CO. are instructed to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, Tokenhouse-yard, E.C., in the month of JUNE next, the following important FREEHOLD ESTATES.—In the county of Wilts: The Bulford Estate, near Amesbury, producing 1100l. per annum; Stapleford, near Salisbury, 810l. per annum. In Somersetshire: The Trent, Charlton, Horthorn, Little Marston, and Hammer Estates, near Sherborne, producing about 3000l. per annum; and the Durston Estate, near Yeovil, about 1100l. making a total rental of 6010l. per annum; also Policies to the extent of 40,000l. The whole subject to charges, which, including the premiums on the policies, amount to about 4000l. per annum.

Particulars, when ready, may be had of

Messrs. STILL and SON, Solicitors, 5, New-square, Lincoln's-inn, W.C.;

Messrs. RAWLINCE and SQUAREY, Land Agents, Great George-street, Westminster, S.W., and Salisbury.

at the Auction Mart, E.C.; and at the offices of Messrs. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and Co., 5, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

Finsbury.—Eligible Freehold Property, let at low rents.

MESSRS. ELLIS and SON are directed by the Devises of the late Nathaniel Ellis, Esq., to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on THURSDAY, MAY 29, at two o'clock, in three lots, the excellent FREEHOLD DWELLING-HOUSE, being No. 21, at the corner of King's-street, Wilson-street, Finsbury-square, near the Metropolitan and Broad-street Railway Stations, let to Mr. Scott, a yearly tenant, at 52l. per annum; a capital Residence adjoining, situate No. 29, King-street, in good repair, in the occupation of Mrs. Bannister, who has expended a considerable sum, at the very low rent of 47l. per annum; and a Dwelling-house, No. 11, King-street, let to Mr. Jacobs, at 33l. per annum.

Printed particulars may be had of Messrs. SHEFFIELD, Solicitors, 32, Lime-street; at the Mart; and of Messrs. ELLIS and SON, Auctioneers and Estate Agents, No. 49, Fenchurch-street.

Good Leasehold Property, held at a low ground rent.

MESSRS. ELLIS and SON are directed to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on THURSDAY, MAY 29, at two o'clock, in one lot, the excellent FREEHOLD DWELLING-HOUSE, being No. 21, at the corner of King's-street, Wilson-street, Finsbury-square, near the Metropolitan and Broad-street Railway Stations, let to Mr. Scott, a yearly tenant, at 52l. per annum; a capital Residence adjoining, situate No. 29, King-street, in good repair, in the occupation of Mrs. Bannister, who has expended a considerable sum, at the very low rent of 47l. per annum; and a Dwelling-house, No. 11, King-street, let to Mr. Jacobs, at 33l. per annum.

Printed particulars may be had of

Messrs. GRUBBER and COOPER, Solicitors, 3, Billiter-street; at the Mart; and of Messrs. ELLIS and SON, auctioneers and estate agents, 49, Fenchurch-street.

Walton-leath, near Epsom.—Valuable Freehold Property, with possession, comprising two powerful wind corn mills, with steam-engine, tackle, and machinery attached; two convenient residences, commanding beautiful views of the surrounding country, with stabling, outbuildings, gardens, and pasture land, in all about six acres; situate on the road leading from London to Betchworth, and distant about three miles from Epsom.

M. R. SAFFELL has received instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at the AUCTION MART, Tokenhouse-yard, London, on TUESDAY, MAY 11, at One for Two, in one or three Lots, this very desirable FREEHOLD PROPERTY. May be viewed by cards, to be had of the auctioneer.

Particulars, with plan and conditions of sale, may be had of

Messrs. LUCAS and SHOWLER, Solicitors, 1, Trinity-place, Charing-cross;

at the principal hotels at Epsom; at the Auction Mart; and at the Auctioneer's Office, 33, Abchurch-lane, Lombard-street, London.

MESSRS. DEBENHAM, TEWSON, and FARMER'S MAY LIST OF ESTATES and HOUSES, including landed estates, town and country residences, hunting and shooting quarters, farms, ground-rents, rentcharges, house property and investments generally, may be obtained free of charge, at their offices, 80, Chesapeake, E.C., or by post for one stamp. Particulars for insertion in the June List must be received by the 29th May at latest.

MESSRS. EDWIN FOX and BOUSFIELD'S forthcoming SALES, at the AUCTION MART, —

WEDNESDAY, MAY 12.

DOVER.—Mount Ellis, a charming Freehold Estate, comprising a modern and substantial Family Residence, standing in ornamental gardens and grounds of 31 acres, with possession.—Vendor's solicitor, J. DARLEY, Esq., 4, Raymond-buildings, W.C.

On the THAMES, at Teddington.—Attractive Villa Residence, with large garden and capital stabling; well-secured Freehold Ground-rents of 104l. per annum. Vendor's solicitor, J. DARLEY, Esq., 4, Raymond-buildings, W.C.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 19.

On the VERGE of the CITY OF LONDON.—Valuable Building Area in Wilson-street, Finsbury, close to the North-Western Railway Terminus, and a few minutes' walk from the Metropolitan Railway in Moortown. Vendor's solicitors, Messrs. LAWRENCE, PLEWIS, BOYER, and BAKER, 6, Old Jewry-chambers, E.C.

ST. BRIAVEL'S, Gloucestershire.—Snug little Cottage Residence, with garden, outbuildings, and nearly 8 acres of fine old pasture land, occupying one of the most beautiful sites in the kingdom. Vendor's solicitors, Messrs. EVANS, Chepstow.

BRITTON-HILL.—Two Leasehold Residences (25 years free of ground rent), distinguished as Hope-house and Hadley-house, producing a clear net rental of 122l. per annum. Vendor's solicitor, C. STROGHILL, Esq., 35, Carter-lane, Doctors'-commons.

ENFIELD.—Three Freehold Cottages, situate at Chase-side, adjoining Messrs. Green and Co.'s brewery, and let on lease at a rental of 30l. per annum. Vendor's solicitor, C. STROGHILL, Esq., 35, Carter-lane, Doctors'-commons.

DALSTON.—Within a few minutes' walk of the Dalston Junction Station, on the North London Railway.—Leasehold Residence, known as 13, Greenwood-road, for occupation or investment.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 2.

Re J. THWAYTES, deceased. City of London. The highly important and very desirable Freehold Estate, distinguished as Nos. 11 and 45, Fenchurch-street, one door from Mincing-lane, comprising the extensive and well-known premises, conspicuous among the adjacent buildings as a specimen of the thriving establishments of a former age. Let on lease at the low old rent of 600l. per annum. By order of the trustees. Vendor's solicitors, Messrs. GRAY, JOHNSTON, and MOUSLEY, No. 3, Raymond-buildings, Gray's-inn, W.C.

STOKE-NEWINGTON.—Very attractive, detached Residence, distinguished as Glebe-field-house, with secluded and ornamental garden grounds; held for a long term, at a ground rent of 180l. per annum. Vendor's solicitors, Messrs. COX and SOX, 4, Cloak-lane, Cannon-street, E.C.

WINCHMORE-HILL, Cheshire.—Most enjoyable detached Leasehold Villa Residence, with beautifully planted garden grounds of about an acre, stabling, &c. With possession. Vendor's solicitors, Messrs. DRAKE, SOX, and BLWITT, 3, Cloak-lane, Cannon-street, E.C.

NOTTING-HILL.—A desirable and substantially built Freehold Residence, conveniently and agreeably situate, being No. 3, St. James's-square, with conservatory and garden in the rear, eligible alike for occupation or investment. Vendor's solicitors, J. H. LUDALL, Esq., 12, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, W.C.

IN CHANCERY.—Re Monks, deceased.—Monks v. Monks.—Five Leasehold Houses for occupation and investment, being Nos. 9 and 13, Darlington-terrace, Paddington. No. 34, Canterbury-road, Kilburn. No. 17, Craven-terrace, and No. 11, Southam-street, Kensal New Town, producing a rental of 200l. per annum; held for long terms at moderate rents. Vendor's solicitors, Messrs. BARRISTON, NEWSON and BIRD, 3, Gray's-inn-place, W.C. Messrs. LUMLEY and LUMLEY, No. 15, Old Jewry-chambers, E.C.

ST. JOHN'S WOOD and SOUTH NORWOOD.—Freehold House, 14, Finchley-road, St. John's Wood. Two Leasehold Residences, Nos. 1 and 2, Broadlands, South Norwood. Vendor's solicitors, Messrs. SCARD and SOX, 17, Great St. Helen's.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 9.

IN CHANCERY.—Between Jane Sarah Hill, widow, and George Lively Nicholls, plaintiffs; and William Martin Nichols, defendant.—Hanwell.—Very valuable Freehold Estate of nearly 15 acres of Building Land, with extensive frontage to the turnpike road to Brentford, and facility for creating additional frontage to a very great extent available for the erection of villas and cottages, or the creation of ground-rents. Possession at Michaelmas next. Vendor's solicitor, J. COMBE, Esq., 25, Bucklersbury.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16.

SUSSEX.—Freehold Estate, consisting of 150 acres of fine grazing and fattening land, situate on the sea coast, close to Selsea Bill.

STAMFORD-HILL.—Valuable Freehold Estate, comprising a spacious freehold detached family residence, with outbuildings, conservatories, pleasure and kitchen gardens, and grounds of five or six acres. Vendor's solicitors, Messrs. GROVER and HUMPHREYS, 4, King's Bench-walk, Temple.

On the THAMES, at Staines.—A singularly desirable Freehold Property, delightfully situate, and distinguished as Thames Cottage, with about 10 acres of finely timbered lawn, pleasure garden, and meadow land. A most enviable site, the residence of a gentleman's residence, or for numerous smaller villas and a fishing or boating hotel, to which the position is pre-eminently suited. Vendor's solicitor, G. WILKINSON, Esq., 10, Tokenhouse-yard.

ST. LEONARD'S-ON-SEA, Sussex.—A most substantial brick-built Freehold Dwelling-house, in capital repair, pleasantly situate and being No. 73, Margaret's-place, opposite St. Mary Magdalen Church, and immediately adjacent to Warrior-square, St. Leonard's, the most fashionable place of resort on the south coast. Vendor's solicitors, J. R. S. Mincing-lane, E.C. WILLIAM LOVEGROVE, Esq., 5, South square, Gray's-inn, W.C.

IN SUSSEX by order of the Executors.—Valuable Freehold Estate, known as St. Peter's Farm, situate at Battle, comprising a comfortable residence and 60 acres of highly fertile land abutting on railway station. Vendor's solicitors, J. H. ATTER, Esq., Stamford; C. SHEPPARD, Esq., Battle.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 23, and following day.

THE TYSEN AMHURST ESTATE, within the parish of Hackney.—Freehold Ground and Reserved Rents arising from Estates at Clapton, Hackney, Dalston, and Kingsland, amounting to a gross annual sum of 1000l. The rack rents estimated at many thousands a year) on the expiration of existing leases, the majority of which have but very few years to run; also numerous capital Houses, in possession, including the whole of Clapton-square, several taverns, and business premises, &c.; affording to capitalists, trustees, and investors generally unusual scope for acquiring the most reliable and improving of all securities. Vendor's solicitors, Messrs. CROFTON and SOX, 1, Great Winchester-street, E.C.

Particulars of the above sales may be obtained at the Mart; of the respective Solicitors; and of Messrs. EDWIN FOX and BOUSFIELD, 21, Gresham-street, Bank, E.C., or of Coleman-street.

CONTENTS—REPORTS.

COURT OF APPEAL IN CHANCERY.
THE BRITISH EQUITABLE ASSURANCE COMPANY v. THE GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY—
Policy of assurance—Proposal to insure—Acceptance	422
Re THE FINANCIAL CORPORATION (LIMITED); SASSOON'S CASE—
Company—Winding-up—Contributory	424

ROLLS COURT.

Re LATTIMER'S CHARITY—
Charity—Scheme—Trust to clothe and educate "poor boys"	425

V.C. STUART'S COURT.

Partnership—Infant partner—Suit for dissolution	427
Re THE LONDON, CHATHAM, AND DOVER RAILWAY COMPANY; Re THE LONDON, CHATHAM, AND DOVER RAILWAY COMPANY'S ARRANGEMENT ACT 1867—
Practice—Administration—Court of Appeal in the first instance	431

V.C. MALINS' COURT.

Re THE INTERNATIONAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY—
Winding-up—Jurisdiction—Transfer of business	433
Page v. WIDEX—
Injunction—Copyright—Date of first publication	435

V.C. JAMES'S COURT.

HARBOTTLE v. POOLLEY—
Practice—Ex parte Injunction—Pleading	439

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

Re THE CAMBRIAN RAILWAY COMPANY—
Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 18), s. 55, 68—Award—Mortgages to take up	437
ASHWORTH (app.) v. HEYWORTH (resp.)—
Markets and Fairs Clauses Act 1847 (10 Vict. c. 14), s. 13—"Dwelling-place or shop"	439
BROOKS v. COURTNEY—
Negligence—Injury to a servant—Action against a master	440

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

COLLINS v. THE MIDDLE LEVEL COMMISSIONERS—
Remoteness of damage—Negligence	442
SALISBURY ELECTION PETITION—
Serinity—Nonpayment of rates—Express decision of revising barrister	444
JACOB v. SEWARD—
Co-tenants under different tenants in common—Action ex delicto	448

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

NEWBURN AND ANOTHER v. BAXON—
Stock Exchange—Sale of shares—Broker and jobber	449
WALKER v. CORY AND ANOTHER—
Practice—Nonsuit—Leave to enter verdict for plaintiff upon findings of the jury	453

CROWN CASES RESERVED.

Re J. ELIZA LUMLEY—
Bigamy—Onus of proof of first husband or wife being alive at the time of the second marriage	454

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

Re ALBERT PELHAM CLINTON—
R.I. 190, sect. 195—Offences—Rash and hazardous speculation	456

LEADING ARTICLES, SUMMARIES, CORRESPONDENCE, &c.

TO CORRESPONDENTS	41
LEADING ARTICLES:—
Topics of the Week	41
Waste Lands in the County Courts	41
The Responsibilities of Attorneys	42
Admiralty Jurisdiction over Foreign Ships	42
Disamaging	43
Copyright in Dramatic Incident	43
Lugate Law	44
Land Law Reform	44
SITINGS AND DOINGS OF THE COURTS	44
REVISION LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions	48
LEGISLATION AND JURISPRUDENCE:—
House of Commons	48
ESTATE AND INVESTMENT JOURNAL:—
Stock and Share Markets	51
Public Companies	51
Reports of Sales	51
SELECTORS' JOURNAL:—
Notes of New Decisions	51
Court of Queen's Bench	52
Helm-at-Law and Next of Kin	52
Creditors under Estates in Chancery	52
Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35	52
Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the Bank of England	52
MAGISTRATE AND PARISH LAWYER:—
Notes of New Decisions	53
REAL PROPERTY LAWYER:—
Notes of New Decisions	53
JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL:—
Notes of New Decisions	53
MARITIME LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions	54
RECENT CASES:—
Notes of New Decisions	54
LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL:—
Answers to the Final Examination Questions	54
COUNTY COURTS:—
Notes of New Decisions	55
Chertsey County Court	55
Parish Councils	56
CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION	56
PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS	57
NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE	57
THE LAW LIBRARY:—
Elmer's Ingram on Compensation to Land and Houseowners	57
Staring's Indian Criminal Law and Procedure	58
LAW SOCIETIES:—
Law Students' Debating Society	58
Liverpool Law Students' Debating Society	58
Southern's Benevolent Association	58
LEGAL OBITUARY:—
Mr. Edward Challinor	58
LEGAL NEWS	58
THE GAZETTES	58
WEDDINGS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS	60

CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

Four lines or thirty words	3s. 6d.
Every additional ten words	0s. 6d.
Advertisements specially ordered for the first page are charged one-fourth more than the above scale.
Advertisements must reach the office not later than the clock on Thursday afternoon.

VOL. XLVII.—No. 1363.

To Readers and Correspondents.

ONE WHO IS ABOUT TO ENTER HIS ARTICLES.—No doubt. The list is given in this journal before examination.

Y. EASTLEY.—The LAW TIMES REPORTS were not in existence at that time.

SUBSCRIPTION TO THE LAW TIMES.

Paid in advance:—	£ s. d.
One year	2 13 0
Half-a-year	1 7 6
On credit or for separate numbers:—
Single numbers (stamped)	0 1 1
" " (unstamped)	0 1 0
Double numbers (stamped)	0 1 7½
" " (unstamped)	0 1 6

NOTICE.

The Nineteenth Volume of the LAW TIMES REPORTS is now complete, and may be uniformly and strongly bound at the LAW TIMES Office, price 4s. 6d.

THE Law and the Lawyers.

WE published last week a scale of costs under the Parliamentary Elections Act. We took this from our contemporary, the Irish Law Times, and we confess to some surprise in seeing its first publication in that journal. The letter below will show that our contemporary has blundered:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.
Common Pleas Office, Chancery-lane,
May 12, 1869.

Sir,—I have had my attention called to a scale of costs published in the LAW TIMES for the 8th May as the "Scale of Costs under the Parliamentary Elections Act 1868." I beg to inform you that no scale whatever has been either issued or settled.—I am, your obedient servant,

JOHN GORDON.

The Officer appointed under the Act.

It will be observed that the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench in Leveson v. The Queen reduces the status of the Aldermen of London to that of being mere dummies ornamenting the Central Criminal Court. On turning, however, to the State Trials by Howell, vol. 19, p. 674, we find that on the trial of ELIZABETH CANNING for perjury, the aldermen then present asserted their right to interfere in the proceedings of the court, and on Chief Justice WILLES proposing to transport the prisoner for seven years, Alderman Sir JOHN BARNARD moved that the punishment should be only six months' imprisonment, on which a poll was taken, and the question decided by a majority of eleven, including six judges and the recorder, against eight aldermen. This case should have been brought to the notice of the court on the late occasion; but as we hear that another writ of error is about to be applied for to carry the proceedings into the Court of Exchequer Chamber, it most probably will be brought before the Judges of that court, and ultimately taken to the House of Lords.

THE Government Bill for the establishment of county financial boards has been submitted to the House of Commons. It proposes to constitute a board to conduct the finances of the county, of members elected by the unions and magistrates who will sit ex officio. In fact, the plan of the highway boards has been adopted, with this only difference, that the election will be by the unions and not by the parishes. The financial business of the counties will be separated from the judicial business which will proceed as at present. The measure appears to have been well received on both sides of the House. Indeed, the experiences of the highway boards have satisfied all who have taken part in them, that the magistrates and the representatives of the parishes can work together with perfect harmony and mutual respect, to the great advantage of the community.

WASTE LANDS IN THE COUNTY COURTS.

WE publish to-day a most important and opportune judgment on the rights of lords and commoners on waste lands delivered by Mr. STONOR, judge of the Chertsey County Court. Before noticing the decision itself, we may remark that the case strongly evidences the capacity of the Judges of the inferior tribunals to deal with questions hitherto tried in the Superior Courts, and shows also the extent of the new labours which have been imposed by the Act of 1867. And we make this observation for the purpose of putting forward the claim of the Judges to increased remuneration. We have it on authority that the number of writs issued in the Superior Courts has decreased by one-third since the passing of the Act of 1867. The cases, which this number of writs represents are, in all probability, cases of greater importance than had ordinarily found their way into the County Courts, and in addition we have to remember that numerous cases are now sent down by the Superior Courts to the County Courts. The salary of a County Court Judge ought to bear such a proportion to the salary of a puisne judge, as the labours of the one bear to the labours of the other.

The judgment of Mr. STONOR on the question of waste land and the power of inclosure, is the more important from the fact that the learned Judge was long well known as a conveyancer, and also gained a reputation by his decisions as Chief Commissioner of the West India Encumbered Estates Commission, which on one occasion drew forth the well-merited encomium of Lord KINGSDOWN in delivering a judgment of the Privy Council (Fraser v. Burgess, 12 Moo. P. C. Cas. 314.) And, in his capacity as a County Court Judge, he has given several admirable judgments, which have been reported at length in the County Courts Chronicle.

In the case to which we are now referring two trespasses were charged by the lord of the manor; the one trespass being the entering and passing over a certain close in exercise of an alleged right of way; the other, the destruction of a fence in vindication of alleged common right of pasture and turbary. The first question decided was not new, namely, that a grant by the lord of the manor and inclosure by the grantee of a portion of waste land of the manor could not destroy a right of way acquired by prescription. The second question was whether the grantee of the lord of the manor could, by custom, enclose a portion of waste land on which common rights of pasture and turbary existed. Of course the doctrine which applies to the grantee applies, a fortiori, to the lord.

The first matter to be considered in all these cases is, concerning the customs of the particular manor. There are two things which a lord may do with the waste; (1) grant copyholds with the consent of the homage, in accordance with the custom of the manor; and (2) approve under the Statute of Merton. The former right can very rarely be exercised to the detriment of the commoners, because the homage, representing in many instances all the tenants of the manor having common rights on the waste, might withhold its consent if those rights were in any way threatened. The right of approvement is the one which has to be feared, and is that which will in all probability prove fatal to the plaintiffs in Hoare v. Wilson. On the evidence, Mr. STONOR inclined in favour of the custom giving the lord power to make grants of portions of the waste, and he expressed the opinion "That, having regard to the limitation in quantity, the saving of sufficient pasture and turbary, and the consent of the homage being required in respect of all grants, it is likely to prove beneficial to those directly interested, and also to the public."

It will be seen from what has been said that Mr. STONOR's decision was a decision of fact rather than of law. It did not in any way touch the important question whether the existence of a right of turbary effectually checks the lord's power to enclose. From the valuable work of Mr. ELTON we are led to conclude that a notion which has long prevailed, that rights other than those of pasture would, where existing, limit the lord's power under the Statute of Merton on the ground that they extend over the whole waste, is exploded. He cites (p. 230) Peardon v. Underhill, 16 Q. B., where common of turbary was claimed over a piece of rocky ground in a large moor, where no peat had ever been found. It was held that the jury were not to speculate upon the chance or possibility of peat or turf growing in that place, and that the proper inference from the user as proved was that there had been a grant to take fuel, the right being confined to the parts containing or likely to contain it. "The principle here expressed," says Mr. ELTON, "applies to all rights of common except pasture."

The one point which remains undecided is, subjects of common right besides pasture existing on a heath, and there being few commoners, whether the commoners can claim to have the whole heath left open in order that they may not be debarred from exercising their rights on any part of it. The probability is that this question never will be judicially decided, the difficulty of proving customary rights becoming greater every year.

THE RESPONSIBILITIES OF ATTORNEYS.

ATTORNEYS are responsible in two ways, to the court and to their clients. Each kind of responsibility has been illustrated within a very short period, the first in the Irish case upon which we commented a fortnight since, and the second in the case of Mr. HAYNES, whose pecuniary relations with the convict LEVERSON, have been the subject of an investigation and report by Master MANLEY SMITH, and adjudication in Mr. HAYNES's favour by the Court of Queen's Bench.

It is somewhat to be regretted that the proceedings against Mr. BARRY, in Ireland, for an alleged contempt of court, have terminated without any judicial exposition of the law relating to contempt by attorneys, and the proper mode of punishment. But one important doctrine was laid down, namely, that a contempt of court may be committed by an attorney, for which he may be punished as an attorney, although the act be done not in the presence of the court, and not in his character of attorney. This doctrine is rather more startling than that which follows, and which is that there is inherent in every court power to originate proceedings punishing contempt committed against itself. Speaking of the objection taken by Mr. BARRY's counsel, the court said: "The first objection made by him was that the court could not of its own motion, in the absence of a complainant, originate proceedings, or take any action in respect of any contempt, however gross, unless committed in the presence of the court. We cannot adopt this doctrine. We are of opinion that if any contempt of court has been committed by anyone, whether in the presence of the court or not, the court have jurisdiction to originate proceedings to punish such contempt." Nothing is here said about the manner of punishing such contempt; not a word is said as to the power of the court to suspend an attorney from practising for such an offence. Therefore the sole question for consideration is whether the court should have jurisdiction over an offence which they would have no power to punish if it were committed by a non-professional person. The society of the attorneys and Solicitors of Ireland have in meeting expressed in a resolution the opinion "that if any judge or court of law or equity has the jurisdiction or power to proceed in a summary manner against an attorney or solicitor as such on a charge or allegation unconnected with the practice of his profession, it is desirable that such an unconstitutional power should no longer exist, and that we must petition against it or proceed in such a manner as is most likely to have it abolished."

No one can say for a moment that such a power ought to be given to any body of men, however eminent and however high they may be above any imputation of being affected by passion or prejudice. The relation existing between attorneys and the courts is a relation purely professional. They are accountable to the court for all professional malpractice; and it would be as absurd for a court to punish an officer for an offence in no way connected with his office as it would be to interfere in the affairs of his household. We trust that we shall hear no more of such an assumption of authority.

Now, as regards Mr. HAYNES. That gentleman seeks commiseration at the hands of the Profession. For our part, we are inclined to sympathise with him to the extent that we consider that he was very unfortunate in becoming concerned in the affairs of an utterly illiterate and, we may now say, unscrupulous woman. Any solicitor might be pitted for having business relations with a person unable either to read or write, but who nevertheless had sufficient ingenuity to deceive and cajole the public. But beyond this we cannot go when we look at the last paragraph of Mr. MANLEY SMITH's report, which runs thus: "I cannot conclude this report with out remarking that had Mr. HAYNES's books been properly kept, the difficulties which would have arisen in adjusting the accounts between him and Mrs. LEVERSON would not have occurred, and much valuable time would have been saved." In justice to Mr. HAYNES we will here mention the charge, which wholly failed, namely, that, having large sums of money in his possession, he conspired with others to get her wrongly convicted when he was instructed and acting as her attorney for the defence. This is emphatically denied by Mr. HAYNES; and Mr. MANLEY SMITH reports, that "no corroborative evidence was produced in support of this part of the charge against Mr. HAYNES, though Mrs. LEVERSON seemed to be under the impression that every one was conspiring against her. I, therefore, do not think it necessary to report further upon it."

Except, therefore, in respect of the misfortune first alluded to we do not see that Mr. HAYNES stands in need of commiseration. He has been acquitted of every charge by the Court of Queen's Bench, and stands unprejudiced in the eyes of the Profession and the public.

ADMIRALTY JURISDICTION OVER FOREIGN SHIPS.

It is most important to the preservation of peace between maritime countries that the jurisdiction of the courts of one country over the vessels and crews of the other should be well understood, and it is perhaps more important still in a humbler way as a matter of everyday practice. It is established by decision that the Admiralty Court has jurisdiction over claims by foreigners serving on board foreign ships, but at the same time the exercise of this jurisdiction is discretionary with the court, and if the consent of the representative of the government to which the vessel belongs is withheld, upon reasonable grounds being shown, the court may decline to exercise its authority. In The Nina, 17 L. T. Rep. N. S. 391, it was decided that in this respect each case must depend upon its own circumstances.

The Act of 24 Vict. c. 10, by its 10th section in express words gave power to the court to entertain a suit by "any" seaman of "any" ship for wages earned by him on board the ship. In the above case it was discussed whether this section overrode the rule of court which said that "in a wages cause against a foreign vessel, notice of the institution of the cause shall be given to the consul of the State to which the vessel belongs, if there be one resident in London, and a copy of the notice shall be annexed to the affidavit." Sir Robert Phillimore held that the section of the Act cited did not take away his discretion. He said, "I hold that I have the same discretion as my predecessor in this chair possessed in suits of this description. I am sure that it is most expedient, upon grounds of international comity, that the court should possess this discretion." And he adds, "It is no unfrequent cause of complaint on the part of foreign States that the law of England does not in general accord, in British ports, to foreign consuls that reasonable authority in mercantile transactions between the seamen and masters of their own ships which is almost invariably accorded to foreign consuls by the law of other States." His general ruling as above stated the learned judge qualified by the remark which we have referred to, that each case must depend on its own circumstances. "I do not say," he observes, "that this court will never entertain a suit of this kind without the sanction of the foreign consul."

So far as regards wages suits. Now as regards collision on the high seas. This is illustrated by the case of the Scotia, arising in the United States District Court, and reported 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 375. In that case an American ship was sunk in a collision at sea with a British steamer, and it appeared that the ship had not the regulation lights set which are required by the British and the American statute alike, but had one, which hung on her anchor-stock on her starboard bow; that although she had made several changes of her course, she made none after her light was seen from the steamer, but her course was crossing that of the steamer; that the steamer, seeing the single white light, supposed it to be the masthead light of a steamer at a much greater distance than the ship actually was, and accordingly ported her helm, and the vessels came in collision.

This was decided against the steamer by the general laws of navigation, but we propose to direct attention to the acknowledged doctrine that in a suit in our Court of Admiralty between a British and an American ship, the Court will not apply British statute law to the case unless required by such statute to do so; and that it will not apply the statute laws of the two countries, even when shown to be alike, unless required by British statute law to do so.

The points made by the libellants was that the Scotia being a British steamer could not avail herself of a municipal statute of the United States to convict an American vessel of a tort committed on the high seas; that the questions in controversy must be determined without reference to the municipal law of either the United States or Great Britain, and solely according to the general maritime law; that the regulations adopted by the two Governments severally for the guidance of their respective vessels, cannot bind a vessel of either nation as against a vessel of the other nation, until such regulations are adopted as international, and placed beyond the power of being changed by either nation without the consent of the other. In the judgment delivered by Judge Blatchford, there is a very able summary of the decisions on this important point. In the case of the Dumfries, 1 Swa. 63, Dr. Lushington in a suit between a Danish and British vessel, in respect of a collision on the high seas, decided that the ordinary nautical rules must apply. This decision was followed in the Zollverein, at p. 96 of the same volume, where Dr. Lushington held that whilst the foreign ship was bound by the general maritime law, it could not make the British ship amenable to British statute law. And this learned Judge expressed a similar opinion in the case of the Saxonia, 1 Lush. 410, where he said, "when a British and foreign ship meet on the high seas, the usual rule is, that the statute is not binding. Clearly it is not binding on the foreigner, and if it were considered binding on the British vessel, the British vessel would manifestly be under an undue disadvantage. I believe the practice of applying the maritime law to such cases has been followed universally up to the present moment, and I hold such to be the law." This view is ratified in other cases, and what the general maritime law is, we are told by Mr. MacLachlan, p. 268. He says: "Between foreigners, or between a British and a foreign ship, when such cases of collision on the high seas are brought into the English Court of Admiralty, the only rules of navigation that can be appealed to are those usages of the sea generally known and customarily observed by the ships of various nations on the high seas. A foreign vessel, therefore, will not be allowed to set up the British rules, in order to show nonobservance of them by a British ship that has been in collision with her, for they are not mutually binding, so as to be available for a British ship against a foreigner."

Then we have to suppose that the disadvantage referred to by Dr. Lushington, as affecting the British ship, if British law had been held binding upon it, in the Saxonia, is common to both vessels. That is to say, we have to suppose a case where the law of the countries to which two colliding ships respectively belong is the same. There does not appear to be any authority for saying that a foreign vessel sued by a British vessel can, by reason of the above circumstance, be taken out of the general maritime law and placed within the municipal law of the two countries; whilst there is a decision of Dr. Lushington to the contrary in the Wild Ranger, 1 Lush. 553. That case went to the extent that a British statute not made applicable to a foreign ship could not be made to extend to it by reason that the country of the foreign ship had a similar law. The importance of this point is much diminished by reason of the orders in council, which have directed that the regulations agreed to by all the most influential maritime countries shall apply to all such countries, the same being named. According to our law, therefore, the distinction between foreign and British ships, as regards regulations respecting navigation, lights, and fog signals, is limited to ships of those countries which have not given in their adhesion to the terms of the 58th section of the British Act of July 29, 1862, as respects such regulations, or whose adhesion has not been signified by an order in council. The vessels of all countries which have been declared by an order in council to have given in their adhesion to the British regulations respecting navigation, lights, and fog signals, are treated in all respects, in the courts of Great Britain, like British vessels.

It may be useful to note here, that the countries which, in addition to the United States, have given in their adhesion to the regulations are the following: Austria, the Argentine Republic, Belgium, Brazil, Bremen, Chili, Denmark Proper, the Republic of the Equator, France, Greece, Hamburg, Hanover, the Hawaiian Islands, Hayti, Italy, Lubeck, Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Morocco, the Netherlands, Norway, Oldenberg, Peru, Portugal, Prussia, the Roman States, Russia, Schleswig, Spain, Sweden, Turkey, and Uruguay. These Orders in Council were published at various dates, from Jan. 13th, 1863, to Feb. 6th, 1866. All the countries named, except Denmark, Greece, the Hawaiian Islands, Schleswig, and the United States, adopted the regulations in 1863.

The effect of the adhesion of the above countries to the British regulations is, as stated in the judgment in the Scotia case, to make those regulations the law of the sea. And it is the duty of a Court of Admiralty to enforce those rules as such, and not as municipal or statute law.

DISMAYORING.

We are compelled to coin a new word to describe a new process, and following precedent in the case of disbarring, where a man called to the Bar is removed from it, we adopt the phrase Dismayoring, to describe the act of removing an elected mayor from his office.

Seeing that mayors are of very venerable antiquity, that there are a great number of mayors, that they are chosen by popular election, and that men of all opinions, religious and political, are not merely eligible, but elected in fact, it is as extraordinary as it is creditable to the people who choose, and the men who have been chosen for this office, that no provision has yet been found necessary for the removal of a mayor for misconduct, not positively criminal. Under certain circumstances a mayor may cease to be such, but neither has there existed, nor has there been required, any process by which a mayor might be removed by external authority. The Mayor of Cork would have been the first who had so offended as to call for a special ex post facto law for his removal. He would have had an Act of Parliament all to himself. His name would certainly have lived in history, when all but some score or so of his contemporaries had been forgotten. If nothing more, he would have secured present notoriety and future immortality. May it not be feared that the example will be more likely to attract than to deter?

The difficulty is undoubtedly great. It was necessary to do something, but the prudence of the determination what to do may be reasonably questioned. Upon one point there can be little hesitation; the Bill should have been general in its provisions, and not limited to the particular case of the Mayor of Cork. If what Mr. O'SULLIVAN has done required his removal from his office, as all are agreed, like acts would require the like removal of other mayors. A general measure subjecting mayors to removal, on an ex officio information by the Queen's Bench, for any misconduct which the court might hold to deserve such a penalty, and making it retrospective in the special instance of the Mayor of Cork, would have remedied a real defect in the law, and have met the special case of Mr. O'SULLIVAN as it deserved, without giving him the importance which unfortunately would have made the Government Bill of Pains and Penalties more of a glory than of a shame.

The Mayor of Cork has anticipated the action of the Legislature by resigning his office. For this he may fairly claim the gratitude of the Government. Opinion was rapidly growing that even his offence, great as it was, did not justify so unconstitutional a proceeding as punishment by an ex post facto law. The Bill, backed by the whole strength of the Ministry and its devoted following, would probably have been carried in the Commons, but it would certainly have been rejected by the Lords, one of whose noblest functions it is to protect the liberties of the subject and to interpose between the impulses of a passing public anger and the objects of it the calmness of that more statesmanlike temper which considers permanent results rather than the gratification of present passions.

But, although the suspended Bill was unadvised and unconstitutional, the conduct that gave birth to it has revealed a grave defect in the law, which it would be desirable to remedy, as soon as decorum will permit, by some such means as we have suggested above.

COPYRIGHT IN DRAMATIC INCIDENT.

We have, in the April number of the American Law Review, a case illustrating the law of copyright, and for the first time establishing a property in incident. It was an application in equity for a provisional injunction to restrain the defendants from the public performance and representation of a scene called the "railroad scene," in the well-known play of "After Dark." From a non-legal point of view this case is also interesting, as apparently convicting Mr. Boucicault of plagiarism in a matter where he made originality his particular boast. The scene alleged to be pirated was taken from an American play entitled "Under the Gaslight." This scene, as most of our readers are probably aware, consisted in the rescue of a person from the railroad a moment before a train passes across the stage. To this incident the plaintiff attributed the success of his piece, which was performed for eight consecutive weeks in New York. Mr. Boucicault having adapted the incident, and placed the scene underground instead of on the surface, reaped great profits by its representation in England; but, not contented with this, he sent copies of his play to the defendants for sale and performance in the United States. This sale and performance it was sought to restrain.

The preliminary question raised was whether such a scene as that mentioned could be a dramatic composition within the United States Act of 1856, which provides that any copyright thereafter granted under the laws of the United States, "to the author or proprietor of any dramatic composition, designed or suited for public representation, shall be deemed and taken to confer upon the said author or proprietor, his heirs and assigns, along with the sole right to print and publish the said composition, the sole right also to act, perform, or represent the same, or cause it to be acted, performed, or represented, on any stage or public place during the whole period for which the copyright is obtained." This question elicited a careful explanation from Blatchford, J., who delivered judgment. "A composition, in the sense in which that word is used in the Act of 1856," he says, "is a written or literary work invented and set in order. A dramatic composition is such a work in which the narrative is not related, but is represented by dialogue and action. When a dramatic composition is represented, in dialogue and action, by persons who represent it as real, by performing or going through with the various parts or characters assigned to them severally, the composition is acted, performed, or represented; and, if the representation is in public, it is a public representation. To act, in the sense of the statute, is to represent as real, by countenance, voice, or gesture, that which is not real. A character in a play who goes through with a series of events on the stage without speaking, if such be his part in the play, is none the less an actor in it than one who, in addition to motions and gestures, uses his voice. A pantomime is a species of theatrical entertainment in which the whole action is represented by gesticulation, without the use of words. A written work consisting wholly of directions set in order for conveying the ideas of the author on a stage or public place by means of characters who represent the narrative wholly by action, is as much a dramatic composition designed or suited for public representation as if language or dialogue were used in it to convey some of the ideas." Consequently, he held that the "railroad scene" was a dramatic composition within the Act.

The analogy which is then detected between a dramatic and an harmonious arrangement of musical notes, such as was dealt with in D'Aubaine v. Boosey, 1 Y. & C. 288, will be at once obvious, and it will be useful if remembered by English readers. In that case, the plaintiffs, proprietors of the copyright of an opera of Auber's, and also of another copyright of the airs of the same opera, filed a bill in equity to restrain the defendant from infringing such copyrights. The defendant had published several of the airs, with some alterations in the shape of quadrilles and waltzes. The Court pronounced a judgment, which Blatchford, J., quoted; and that judgment having been subsequently adopted with the highest approbation by an American Judge (Nelson) it is now of the greater importance. Referring to the admitted facts which we have named, Lord Lyndhurst said, "Piracy may be of part of an air as well as of the whole; and, in the second place, admitting that the opera consists of the whole score, yet if the plaintiffs were entitled to the whole, a fortiori, they were entitled to publish the melodies which form a part. Again, it is said that the present publication is adapted for dancing only, and that some degree of art is needed for the purpose of so adapting it, and that but a small part of the merit belongs to the original composer. That is a nice question. It is a nice question what shall be deemed such a modification of an original work as shall absorb the merit of the original in the new composition. No doubt such a modification may be allowed in some cases, as in that of an abridgment or a digest. Such publications are in their nature original. Their compiler intends to make of them a new use; not that which the author proposed to make. Digests are of great use to practical men, though not so, comparatively speaking, to students. The same may be said of an abridgment of any study; but it must be a bona fide abridgment, because if it contains many chapters of the original work or such as made that work most saleable, the maker of the abridgment commits a piracy. Now it will be said that one author may treat the subject very differently from another who wrote before him. That observation is true in many cases. A man may write upon morals in a manner quite distinct from that of others who preceded him; but the subject of music is to be regarded upon very different principles. It is the air or melody which is the invention of the author, and which may, in such case, be the subject of piracy; and you commit a piracy if, by taking, not a single bar, but several, you incorporate in the new work that in which the whole meritorious part of the invention consists. . . . Now it appears to me, that if you take from the composition of an author all those bars consecutively which form the entire air or melody, without any material alteration, it is a piracy; though, on the other hand, you might take them in a different order, or broken by the intersection of others, like words, in such a manner as should not be a piracy. It must depend on whether the air taken is substantially the same with the original. Now the most unlettered in music can distinguish one song from another, and the mere adaptation of the air, either by changing it to a dance, or by transferring it from one instrument to another, does not, even to common apprehensions, alter the original subject. The ear tells you that it is the same. The original air requires the aid of genius for its construction, but a mere mechanic in music can make the adaptation or accompaniment. Substantially, the piracy is, where the appropriated music, though adapted to a different purpose from that of the original, may still be recognised by the ear. The adding variations makes no difference in the principle."

In view of this decision and the decision in the American case of Jollie v. Jacques (Blatch. C. C. 618), it would have been extremely difficult to come to the conclusion that a dramatic incident could not be the subject of copyright. It was well remarked by the learned Judge that the adaptation of the series of events constituting the railroad scene to different characters, who use different language from the characters in the original play, is like the adaptation of the musical air to a different instrument, or the additions to it of variations, or an accompaniment. "A mere mechanic in dramatic composition," he adds, "can make such adaptation; and it is a piracy if the appropriated series of events, when represented on the stage, although performed by new and different characters, using different language, is recognised by the spectator through any of the senses to which the representation is addressed, as conveying substantially the same impressions to, and exciting the same emotions in the mind, in the same sequence or order." Consequently the adaptation of the "railroad scene" to Boucicault's play was held to be an infringement of the plaintiff's copyright, and the injunction asked for issued.

It follows from the above that a pantomime may be the subject of copyright.

LUGGAGE LAW.

THERE was an amusing discussion in the Queen's Bench on Monday upon the meaning, legal and popular, of the term "luggage." A passenger by train had chosen to carry with him a rocking horse. The entire weight of his luggage, horse included, was within the allowance for luggage. The railway charged carriage for the rocking horse, alleging that it was not "luggage," a claim which Mr. HUDSON disputed, and hence the action, which was originally tried in the County Court, whence it was taken by appeal to the Queen's Bench. The question for the decision of the court was, "What is luggage?"

Mr. Justice HANNEN referred to a dictionary, and found the definition there to be "anything cumbrous and difficult to carry, of more weight than value." This would admit the rocking horse, but it would exclude much that is now universally looked upon as luggage. Clearly the compiler of the dictionary was thinking of the strict meaning of the word, with reference to its etymology, and not of the popular use of it. Mr. Justice LUSH inquired if a sportsman, who might undoubtedly carry his gun as luggage, might not also carry the game he has killed? Mr. WILLS, for the company, admitted that he might do this, but he might not carry a barrel of beer, or a sack of potatoes. Mr. Justice HAYES cracked a joke about the requirement of a horse box. Mr. Justice LUSH put the case of a cradle, a perambulator, or a bedstead, to which the answer was that much would depend upon size. Mr. Justice HANNEN suggested a large picture in its frame, or a great bath; but these are illustrations ab inconvenienti; a bath may be luggage, though very troublesome to carry; it is the fashion with some travellers to convert their baths to use by fitting a cover, and filling them with clothes, &c. Then the contention was to restrict it to articles for personal use, but it was fairly answered, may not a man carry with him a salmon, or a brace of trout, or a barrel of oysters, or a hamper of wine or books, or a multitude of other things of the like nature? Mr. Justice HANNEN suggested that the rule might be for a passenger to carry anything which passengers usually carry, as being required for personal use and accommodation on a journey. This definition would include a bath, but exclude a rocking horse or a cradle. But suppose the passenger to be a lady with an infant, would not the cradle be required for personal use and accommodation? True, that the learned Judge adds the condition of the requirement being for use "on the journey," which would exclude a cradle and many other things; but then it would exclude also a multitude of things which every passenger carries beyond the necessary quantity, or of another kind from such as the mere journey would justify. This definition will not hold water. Ultimately the court came to the decision that a definition was difficult; that none suggested had been perfectly exhaustive; they would not restrict it to articles required for personal use; but they held that it might fairly be limited to such articles as are usually carried by passengers, and which would consequently exclude the rocking-horse.

Surely a very vague definition; more vague than any that was suggested and rejected. Imagine a porter at a railway station called upon to determine whether an article is such as passengers usually carry; or a litigant passenger disputing his decision before a jury, who must be directed to determine upon argument and evidence what things are ordinarily carried by railway passengers.

LAND LAW REFORM.

THE Land Law question is assuming in Ireland a very practical position. The people are taking it into their own hands, and shooting the landlord who presumes to demand his rent, and the master who ventures to discharge his servant. Mr. BRIGHT tells us in his place in Parliament that he is prepared with a measure that will put an end to the present reign of terror, by the process of redistribution of the land, now massed in the hands of a few large owners, among the peasantry in a multitude of small holdings. He is careful to add that his scheme contemplates the giving to the tenants without unjustly taking from the landlords, and there is, consequently, a great desire to learn how this seeming contradiction is to be accomplished. The Irish peasantry interpret it in the manner most agreeable to themselves, and verily believe that Mr. GLADSTONE purposes, under Mr. BRIGHT's inspiration, to confiscate the property of the Protestant landlords, as he has confiscated that of the Protestant Church, and divide it among the Catholic tenants. They are so imbued with this belief that in many parts of the country the tenants are making preparations to take possession as owners, and bargaining by anticipation for under-tenancies; for what the Irish peasant means by possession of land as owner is, not that he shall cultivate his own freehold, but that he shall let it to a still poorer man, and be himself a proprietor. It is scarcely possible that the Government can satisfy such expectations, and the disappointment of hopes so highly wrought will doubtless be followed by a more formidable outbreak than has been yet witnessed. The Government has been exhorted, under these circumstances, to make a candid statement of their intentions, so that hope and fear may cease to be excited by fanciful anticipations. But they plead that the Church Bill is as much as they can undertake in a session, and they persist in silence until next year. Nothing more is known of their designs than that they have not yet adopted, for they have not consulted as a cabinet upon, the redistribution scheme of Mr. BRIGHT. But as the mind of that very able man dominates over the feebler minds of his colleagues, there can be little doubt that, as he prevailed with the Church, so he will with the land; that both will be treated on the same principle of confiscation with compensation.

Nor will the process be so difficult as many may suppose. There is already a precedent for it. It is daily performed in the cases of railways and public improvements. The Lands Clauses Consolidation Act is the engine by which this work is done. Land is wanted for the undertaking, and power is given to the promoters to take it, even against the will of the owner, the company paying the value as assessed by an arbitrator or a jury. The law protects the interests of owners under disability, as infants, cestui que trusts, and such like, by holding their shares of the purchase-money. It is an arbitrary, and in many instances an unjust law; but it is necessary that individual whim, covetousness, or even convenience, should not impede the public good.

We have no doubt that Mr. BRIGHT has in his mind something of this same kind of dealing with land for the purpose of creating peasant proprietors. He would probably compel landowners to sell the land to their tenants either on payment of an assessed value, or by quarterly or annual payments after the manner of building societies. It would be an extreme measure for the law to sanction, and it would not end with the particular cases that provoked it. Some men would certainly follow the example for worse purposes. But in itself and by itself it would not be very alarming, or, at least, not quite such a novelty as it appears to some persons. This is doubtless the design of Mr. BRIGHT.

The next scheme of land law reform, and at present the most popular, is that which is called fixity of tenure. The meaning of this is plain enough. It is a claim by the present tenants to convert their tenancies into freeholds, charged with a groundrent, which would be sheer robbery. Yet it is this, and this only, that is desired by the tenants, or that will content them.

SAYINGS AND DOINGS OF THE COURTS.

[CONTRIBUTED BY THE REPORTERS OF THE SEVERAL COURTS.]

ROLLS COURT.

The past week has produced the following cases deserving of notice:—

Re The Metropolitan and Provincial Bank (Limited), ex parte Carnegie, was an application by Mr. Carnegie, formerly the manager of the bank, for leave to prove under the winding-up for the sum of 1150*l.*, which he claimed under the following circumstances:—In March 1865 Mr. Carnegie was appointed manager of the bank for three years, at a salary of 1500*l.* a-year and a percentage on the profits. At the end of 1866 some changes took place in the constitution of the bank, and soon afterwards his services as manager were dispensed with, though he continued to be employed for some time in a different capacity. He claimed 3250*l.* as a compensation for the loss of his situation, and for his services after he ceased to be manager. The bank having refused to pay this sum, he brought an action against them, and the bank thereupon paid 1000*l.* into court. The matter was then referred to an arbitrator, who awarded 1100*l.* in addition to the sum already paid into court. Mr. Carnegie then took out the present summons, thinking that the arbitrator had not sufficiently considered his claim for remuneration for the loss of his situation. His Lordship said that he was of opinion that Mr. Carnegie's claim in respect of the loss of his situation was one of the matters of difference which had been referred to the arbitrator, and that it was covered by the award. The summons must therefore be dismissed. Upon the evidence before him, his Lordship did not think that Mr. Carnegie's services, after he had ceased to be manager, were deserving of any remuneration.

Norris v. The Caledonian Insurance Company was a suit instituted by the legal personal representative of the late John Sadleir, praying that the plaintiff might be declared to be entitled to an absolute lien on certain moneys in court, for premiums paid by the plaintiff and the late John Sadleir in respect of a policy of which the moneys now in court were the proceeds. The policy was granted in 1840 by the Caledonian Insurance Company, to one Richard Lalor, to secure 4999*l.* 19*s.*, on the lives of three persons, and was assigned to John Sadleir, in 1850, by Lalor's administratrix, as security for a debt of 900*l.*, due by Lalor. In 1863, on the expiration of the last life in the policy, the sum of 4716*l.* 5*s.* 9*d.* (being the policy money less certain sums for costs, &c., which they were by order of the court entitled to retain) was paid into court by the Insurance Company. In addition to the plaintiff, there were several claimants of the fund in court, who were made defendants to the present suit. They were Mr. and Mrs. Kenny, who were judgment-creditors of Lalor, and disputed the validity of the assignment of the policy to Sadleir; the Tipperary Joint Stock Bank, now in process of winding-up, whose official manager declared that the debt, to secure which the policy had been assigned, was due to the bank and not to Sadleir, and that the bank was therefore entitled to the benefit of the security; and Vincent Scully who claimed under an equitable assignment of the policy. The plaintiff claimed a lien on the fund in court in priority to all these claimants for what John Sadleir and he, since Sadleir's death, had paid in premiums to keep on foot the policy, with interest thereon, at 6*l.* per cent., which is the Irish rate of interest. His Lordship said that the assignment of the policy to Sadleir was not void, but at most only voidable, and that Mr. and Mrs. Kenny could not now set it aside after nearly twenty years' acquiescence. The Tipperary Joint Stock Bank was also too late in making its claim. All proceedings should be stayed as to the claims of those defendants. As to the question of priority between the plaintiff and Vincent Scully, his Lordship said that he would consider it and give his decision next Term. He should, however, give only 5*l.* per cent. interest on the amount expended in premiums, and not 6*l.* per cent.

Tidball v. Walker was a suit for the administration of the estate of William Walker, who died in 1843, having by his will, dated the 17th Nov. 1842 given all his property, real and personal, to trustees upon trust for his wife during her life; and as to his real property he declared it to be his will that after the decease of his wife the rents and profits arising therefrom should be equally divided between his children, share and share alike, in half-yearly payments, and that the share or shares of such of his children as might die leaving issue should go to such issue, and in default of issue such share or shares should revert to the surviving children. On behalf of a second son of a deceased son of the testator, it was contended that the wife gave only life interests to the testator's children and that he was entitled to a share in his father's share. His Lordship said that the gift of the rents and profits carried the freehold, and that the husband at-law of the deceased son was consequently entitled to his share.

Baskcomb v. Beckwith was a suit instituted by vendor and his mortgagees for the specific performance of a contract entered into by the defendant in May 1867 for the purchase of a house a ground situate at Chislehurst. The premises question were part of the Manor House estate which was put up for sale by auction in lots May 1867: the lot purchased by the defendants comprised the Manor House, and the rest of the estate was divided into building lots. The contract was signed, and after many requisitions title was accepted, the only question now in dispute between the parties being the construction of one of the conditions of sale, which contain certain restrictions as to building by the vendor it being provided, amongst other things, that public-house should be erected on the estate.

vendor contended that this restriction affected only the lots comprised in the sale, but the defendant contended that it extended to the whole of the vendor's property, and in particular to a plot of land at the corner of the Croydon-road, which belonged to the vendor, but was not comprised in the sale. The vendor intended to build a public-house on this land, and as it was within 120 yards of the lot purchased by the defendant, his purchase would be much depreciated in value by the erection of the public-house. The defendant consequently refused to complete the purchase, whereupon the plaintiffs filed their bill for specific performance. On behalf of the defendant it was argued that this was a case of mistake; the plan annexed to the conditions of sale did not show that the plot of land in dispute belonged to the vendor, and if the purchaser had known that it belonged to him, and that it was his intention to erect a public-house on it, he would not have entered into the contract, to enforce which this suit was instituted; the purchaser ought therefore to be relieved from his contract, as it was entered into under mistake. At the conclusion of the argument his Lordship reserved judgment, saying that he would read the evidence.

Re Smith, Knight, and Company (Limited) was a motion on the part of the liquidators of this company that Adolphe Hakin, who had been served with a subpoena to attend and be examined before William Morris, Esq., the special examiner appointed in this matter, for the purpose of examining and cross-examining witnesses in the winding-up of the company by order, dated the 27th May 1868, but had refused to attend, might be ordered to attend and be sworn and examined before the special examiner, or in default thereof might stand committed to Whitecross-street Prison. Hakin, formerly a shareholder in the company, was alleged to have transferred out of his name into that of one Sutton, his clerk, 644 shares, upon which about 32,000*l.* was due to the company, and it was alleged that Sutton was resident in France, out of the jurisdiction of the court, and that there was no chance of the company getting anything from him in respect of these shares. Under these circumstances the liquidators considered it of great importance to have the fullest cross-examination of Hakin, before the question of his liability to be placed on the list of contributories was brought on for decision. Accordingly on the 10th April last notice was given to Messrs. Thomas and Hollams, Hakin's solicitors, to produce Hakin before the special examiner on the 13th April. In reply they said that they were not aware of any order appointing a special examiner, and they declined to appear before him. The liquidators then caused a subpoena to be served upon Hakin, and as he still refused to appear before the special examiner, the liquidators now moved that he might be ordered to attend, or be committed. It appeared that Mr. Morris had been appointed, on an ex parte application, special examiner for taking the evidence generally in the winding-up of the company. On behalf of the liquidators it was contended that it was the usual practice in winding-up cases to appoint a special examiner all at once for the whole winding-up, and that the court had jurisdiction to make the appointment. Hakin had disregarded the order of the court, and ought to be ordered to attend before the examiner, or be committed. His Lordship said that he could not make the order asked for. He was not aware that it was the usual practice to appoint a special examiner all at once for the whole winding-up, and he considered it a highly improper practice. If the parties agreed the court was in the habit, upon evidence that the examiner of the court could not hear the matter in time, to appoint a special examiner chosen by the parties; but the court would not appoint anyone to be special examiner to whom any of the parties had a reasonable objection. Hakin was justified in not going before a special examiner to whom he had not consented. After hearing counsel for Hakin on the question of costs, his Lordship decided that the costs should come out of the estate.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

In The United States v. Tait, which came before the court on the 8th inst., a question arose as to the allowable character of certain interrogatories which the defendant sought to have answered by the plaintiffs, or some officer on their behalf. The defendant, Sir Peter Tait, is an army clothier, who had received from the Confederate States of America a certain quantity of cloth to be made up into uniforms for their soldiers; and the present action was brought by the United States, as having succeeded to the property of the Confederate States, to recover the value of the cloth. The defendant exhibited twenty interrogatories, which he sought to have answered by the plaintiffs. They related to the constitution of the United States and of the separate States comprised in the Union, and to the chief events connected with the late war, such as the duration of the de facto government of the Confederate States and the belligerent rights accorded to them. There were also interrogatories relating to the authority of Gen. Titus to make contracts in London on behalf of the plaintiffs. The question of the admissibility of the interrogatories had come before Justice Mellor, at chambers, who, on account of its importance, referred it to the court. Mr. Mellish, Q. C., with Mr. Cohen, argued against the relevancy of most of the interrogatories, and the propriety of asking a sovereign State to answer questions as to its power over, and its right to subdue, portions of its territory which revolt from it. Mr. Brown, Q. C. and Mr. E. Jenkins, on the other side, argued in support of the propriety and relevancy of the interrogatories. The court (consisting of Lord Chief Justice Cockburn, Mr. Justice Lush and Mr. Justice Hannen) allowed the interrogatories comprised under the three heads of—(1) when the de facto government of the Confederate States came to an end; (2) how long the United States treated the de facto government of the Confederate States as existing; and (3) as to the authority of the plaintiffs' agent, Gen. Titus, to make contracts on their behalf. The interrogatories are to go to the American consul at Liverpool, who has been in this country from the beginning of the war; and if his answers are insufficient, the matter is to be brought before the court again.

In Bignell v. The London and South Western Railway Company, which was argued on the same day; a question arose as to the liability of railway companies as carriers of cattle. The plaintiff, on the morning of the 21st March 1868, which was a Saturday, proceeded to a fair at Odiham, and told the station master at Winchfield, the station nearest to Odiham, that he should want two trucks to take home cattle that afternoon. The station master told him he feared that he might not be able to get them, but would do his best; and he did in fact telegraph to two different stations for trucks to be sent to Winchfield, and also sent notes by the guards of the up and down trains to the station masters down the line to send trucks if they had them. The plaintiff having bought some cows and calves at the fair, came with them to the station in the afternoon, but no trucks had arrived, and the cattle were left at the station, where they remained until trucks arrived on Monday morning, when they were sent on. By the company's conditions two days' notice should be given of intention to send cattle from any station. The jury at the trial found that there was negligence on the part of the railway company in not getting the trucks, and in leaving the cattle exposed during the time occupied in getting them. A rule having been obtained for a new trial on the ground that there was no evidence of negligence on the part of the company, Mr. Prentice, Q. C., and Mr. Warton, showed cause against it, Mr. Pollock, Q. C., and Mr. Ormerod, appearing in support of it. The court, without calling on the counsel for the defendants, made absolute the rule for a new trial, on the ground that the railway company had done all in its power, and that there was no negligence on their part.

The indispensable theory that every one is presumed to know the law was reluctantly upheld by the Court of Queen's Bench, on Monday last, in Moore v. Rose. This case was one of peculiar hardship, for the plaintiff had suffered, and the defendant will now have to suffer, for a want of "legal knowledge." The facts were shortly these: Mrs. Moore, the plaintiff, after her husband's death cut down a few trees upon a Devonshire estate, in which she had a life interest. This showed an ignorance of real property law, to correct which the brother of the deceased husband filed a bill in Chancery against her. Ignorant of equity procedure the unfortunate woman failed to answer, and was therefore committed for contempt to Exeter Gaol. Finally, suffering from a want of knowledge of the statute law, she remained in prison long after the time when she was entitled to be discharged, by virtue of 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 36. But when the Lord Chancellor had been applied to, and she was at last set free, she found that she was not alone in her ignorantia juris; her gaoler had been equally unaware of the above-mentioned Act, which cast a duty upon him of liberating her after a given time. So she brought an action of false imprisonment against him, and obtained a verdict awarding her substantial damages. A rule nisi to set aside that verdict having been granted, it was now argued. Mr. Powell, Q. C. (Mr. Anderson with him) maintained the liability of the gaoler, while Mr. Huddleston, Q. C. and Mr. Buller contended that the action would not lie. The question principally turned upon the 5th subsection of sect. 5 in the statute above referred to, which provides, "That if the defendant, under process of contempt for not appearing or not answering, be in actual custody, and shall not have been sooner brought to the bar of the court under process to answer his contempt, the plaintiff, if the contempt be not sooner cleared, shall bring the defendant, by a habeas corpus, to the bar of the court within thirty days from the time of his being actually in custody, or detained (being already in custody) upon process of contempt, and if the last day of such thirty days shall happen out of term, then within the four first days of the ensuing term;" and in case any such defendant shall not be brought to the bar of the court within the respective times aforesaid, the sheriff, gaoler, or keeper," &c. "in whose custody he shall be shall thereupon discharge him out of custody without payment by him of the costs of contempt, which shall be payable by the party on whose behalf the process issued." For the governor of the gaol it was argued that the action was out of time, being barred by the 4 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 75 (Prisons Regulations Act); that the action was brought in trespass instead of in case; and that it should have been against the sheriff and not against the gaoler. The court (consisting of Mr. Justice Lush and Mr. Justice Hannen) held, that the Prisons Regulation Act did not apply; that the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 15, dealing with the gaoler as an independent officer having duties of his own prescribed by the statute, and not as an agent of the sheriff, cast a duty upon him to discharge out of custody at the end of a specified time, and that his not doing so was the subject of an action of trespass. The rule was therefore discharged.

On the same day the question whether a rocking-horse, weighing 78lbs., standing on a flat surface, and about 44in. in length, is "personal luggage" of a traveller on a line of railway was solemnly argued for some hours on appeal from the decision of the judge of the County Court of Derbyshire in the case of Hudston v. The Midland Railway Company. The regulation of the company allowed first class passengers 112lb., second class 100lb., and Government passengers 56lbs. of "personal luggage only (not being merchandise or other articles carried for hire or profit) free of charge," all excess of luggage to be charged for according to distance. The County Court judge held that rocking-horse was not personal luggage within the foregoing regulation, and against this decision the appeal was brought. Mr. Macnamara argued in support of the appeal; Mr. A. Wills (with whom was Mr. J. C. Carter) on behalf of the railway company. The court (consisting of Justices Lush, Hannen, and Hayes) affirmed the judgment of the County Court judge, and held the rocking-horse not to come within the category of "personal luggage." They acknowledged the difficulty of giving any precise definition of "personal luggage," but thought that those words must be taken to refer to such things as a traveller usually or ordinarily carries with him on a journey.

In Godard and others v. Gray, which was partly argued on the same day and continued on Tuesday, an important question arose as to the effect to be given to a judgment of a foreign court against English subjects resident here. A charter-party entered into in this country gave a French firm at St. Nazaire (the plaintiffs in the present action) the right to a ship for three voyages, and they had it for one only. The charter-party contained the following clause: "The penalty for non-performance of the agreement—estimated amount of freight," which was 8900 francs. The French Court of First Instance gave the plaintiffs double that amount, i.e., 17,800 francs for the two voyages lost. On appeal by the defendants to the Imperial Court at Rheims, the sum awarded to the plaintiffs was reduced to the amount of freight for one voyage, viz., 8900 francs. To recover that amount, the present action was brought on the French judgment. Mr. Brown, Q. C. and Mr. Finlason appeared for the plaintiffs, and argued that the defendant having appeared before the French court, and prosecuted an appeal from the judgment of the inferior court, it was not open to him now to object to the jurisdiction of those courts, and that there was nothing in the judgment itself which should induce an English court to refuse to enforce it. Mr. H. Shield (with whom was Mr. Manisty, Q. C.) for the defendant, contended that as the contract was made in England, by English subjects not resident or domiciled in France, the French courts had no jurisdiction; and that if they had they had wrongly applied the English law in awarding the full amount of the penalty named in the charter-party, and therefore that their judgment should not be enforced in this country. The court reserved its judgment.

On this day the court delivered judgment in the case of the writ of error brought by Mrs. Levenson (otherwise Madame Rachel), who was convicted some time ago, at the Old Bailey, before Mr. Commissioner Kerr and an alderman. Error had been assigned on three different grounds—(1) that two commissioners being necessary to constitute a court for the trial of indictments at the Central Criminal Court, the same alderman was required to sit with Mr. Commissioner Kerr throughout the trial, if it lasted for several days, and not a different alderman on different days; (2) that as only one court was provided by the Act, there was no power to divide the court, and sit in different chambers; (3) that by virtue of the County Courts Act 1867, which converted the Sheriffs'

Court of the City of London into a County Court, Mr. Commissioner Kerr has ceased to be a commissioner, and was incompetent to act as a judge under a commission of oyer and terminer. The court considered that the first ground of error was the only one that presented any difficulty, but that even it was untenable. The commission under which the Central Criminal Court was held was one of oyer and terminer, and the language of the Act constituting the court was the same as that used in the commissions of oyer and terminer, under which justice had been administered for centuries, and so the Act must be read by the light of the procedure which had so long obtained, by which on circuit such commissions had been held under a single judge and represented on the record as taking place before the other judges sitting under the commission, the trial being considered to take place constructively before the whole body acting under the commission. On this ground the presence of an alderman in addition to the single judge was not required, and it was unnecessary that a second judge should sit with Mr. Commissioner Kerr. On one point the Lord Chief Justice differed in opinion from the other members of the court; he thought that if a second judge were necessary that judge must be the same throughout the trial, else the cause could not be said to have been "inquired of" and "heard" by the judges by whom it was "determined and adjudged." The other members of the court were of a different opinion; but all agreeing on the former point, viz., that a second judge was unnecessary, judgment was given for the Crown on that ground of error. As to the other two grounds of error, the court were unanimously of opinion that the trials at the Central Criminal Court could take place in different chambers; and that the authority of the judges of the Sheriffs' Court to sit as judges of the Central Criminal Court had not been taken away by the County Courts Act 1867. So that judgment has been given for the Crown on all points, and nothing remains for Madame Rachel but to work out her full term of imprisonment, unless a court of error (before which there is some talk of bring the matter) should come to a conclusion different from the unanimous decision of the Court of Queen's Bench.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

In the case of Walker v. Cory, which was argued on Saturday, May 1 and Tuesday, May 4, a number of points of law of considerable interest and complication arose, including a point of practice which calls for notice as being one of no little importance. The action was for demurrage earned under a charter-party of a somewhat unusual character. The charter-party provided for a voyage from Swansea to Dieppe with a cargo of coal, and allowed a certain number of loading days, and if these were exceeded for a certain rate of demurrage. But it was further agreed that the charter should last a year, during which the ship should continue making voyages between the same places, and a stipulation was contained in the margin stating that the demurrage should be ascertained at the termination of the charter-party, when the number of days for which demurrage was due was to be ascertained upon the average of the voyages taken. It was admitted that this meant that if the charterer exceeded the given time for loading on one occasion, but loaded in less than the given time on another occasion, the days by which he fell short of the time on the latter occasion should be set-off against those by which he exceeded it on the former, and so on a similar principle with all the voyages he might take during the year. The principal question which arose between the parties was as to the construction of the word "termination" in the charter-party, and it arose under these circumstances:—It appeared that after taking a certain number of voyages the ship was prevented by a continuation of unfavourable winds from prosecuting her voyage under the charter-party, and the shipowner, finding he was losing considerably by the delay, begged the charterer to cancel the charter-party; the charterer refused to do this. The shipowner had subsequent communications with the charterers' broker, who wrote him a letter on Nov. 30th, saying that he might make a voyage to some port in the north, for which the wind was favourable, on his own account, provided that afterwards he made a voyage under the charter in place of the present voyage. Subsequently the broker wrote to him again, saying he might make a voyage to the north, without making it good under the charter-party. The ship accordingly went on a voyage to the north, and was lost through stress of weather. The broker professed to have authority for writing these letters, but the defendants denied that such was the case. It was contended at the trial on the part of the defendants, the charterers, that the charter-party had not terminated within the meaning of the word "termination" used therein, and therefore no demurrage had become payable, and that if it had, it was determined by the wrongful act of the plaintiff in going a voyage not under the charter-party, the broker having no authority to license such an infringement of its terms. The learned Chief Baron, who tried the case, left the question to the jury whether the broker had authority to license the deviation. The jury found that he had. The Chief Baron, however, directed a nonsuit, reserving leave to the plaintiff to move to enter a verdict for himself for the amount of demurrage. It was now on the argument of the rule contended for the defendants, that the termination of the charter-party meant its termination in the natural course of things by effluxion of time, and did not include an unforeseen termination by loss of the ship, and that it was intended that the liability to demurrage should be determined by the average number of days occupied in loading over the whole number of voyages to be made in a year. The court, however, were of opinion that the meaning of "termination" of the charter-party included its termination by the loss of the ship, and that therefore the plaintiff would become entitled to have the demurrage ascertained and paid upon the loss of the ship. They therefore thought the nonsuit must be set aside. The defendants' counsel thereupon contended that the findings of the jury were against the weight of the evidence on the question of the broker's authority, and that, in the absence of such authority the plaintiff having deviated had wrongfully determined the charter-party, and could not by the subsequent loss of the ship become entitled to demurrage. The rule must therefore be made absolute for a new trial; not to enter a verdict for plaintiff. The plaintiff's counsel objected to this, on the ground that the defendant ought to have moved a cross rule for a new trial within the first four days of term; to this it was answered that the verdict not being entered for plaintiff, but a nonsuit, there was nothing to move against. It was contended, however, by plaintiff's counsel that defendant ought at least to have given notice within the first four days of his intention to raise the point that the findings were against evidence. The court were of opinion that the court could not be bound to enter a verdict for the plaintiff if the effect would be that such verdict would be against the weight of the evidence. They therefore directed the counsel for the parties to argue the question whether the finding of the jury was against evidence, and upon hearing their arguments, postponed judgment, strongly recommending a settlement under the peculiar circumstances of the case.

In the case of Courtauld v. Legh, a question arose on Thursday, the 6th inst., as to the right to bring error upon the decision of the Court of Exchequer on a special case. It will be remembered that the case raised an important question as to the right to access of light under the Prescription Act to an unoccupied house, and the court gave judgment in favour of the plaintiff. Upon this judgment the defendant took proceedings in error: these proceedings were set aside at chambers, and from the decision at chambers the defendant now appealed to the court. It appeared that the special case had been stated by an arbitrator under an order of reference. The order of reference provided that the action should be referred to an arbitrator, and that, if required by either of the parties, he should state a special case for the opinion of the court, and that judgment should be entered upon the case according to the opinion of the said court; it further provided that neither the plaintiff nor the defendant should bring or prosecute any action or suit either at law or equity against the arbitrator, or bring any writ of error, or prefer any bill in equity against each other, or of concerning the matters so as aforesaid referred. The case was stated pending the reference, and the decision of the court having been given, an appointment was obtained before the arbitrator to proceed with the reference: the defendant stated that he intended to bring error, and the further proceedings before the arbitrator were postponed to enable the question whether the defendant was entitled to bring error to be settled. The defendant's counsel now contended that error might be brought. The case was within the Common Law Procedure Act 1854, which provided for error on a special case. The order of reference provided for two distinct objects, and was to be construed as if these objects had been provided for by separate instruments. One object was merely the statement of a special case by an arbitrator in the ordinary way, upon which it was clear error might be brought. The other was the assessment of damages and the determination of what should be done to settle the questions at issue between the parties. It was provided that judgment should be entered upon the case, and the provision against bringing error in the order of reference, was only a common form introduced in all such cases, and was never intended to prevent the parties from questioning the decision of the court upon any point of law which the arbitrator might raise for the opinion of the court, but only to prevent the decision of the arbitrator himself on matters within his jurisdiction from being questioned. Chief Baron Kelly was of opinion that all the order of reference meant was, that the arbitrator might raise a question for the opinion of the court, for his guidance in determining the case; it did not contemplate a judgment of the court in the strict technical sense of the word. A judgment in a special case in the usual course was final, whereas this was merely a preliminary step, and the decision of the arbitrator was to be final. There was no judgment upon which error could be brought. Baron Bramwell said that it was clear there was no final judgment on which error could be brought. It did not even follow the ultimate determination of the arbitrator would be in favour of plaintiff. Even if there were a judgment, the agreement as to bringing error would be in the way. The rest of the court concurring, the rule to rescind the order setting aside the proceedings was discharged.

In the case of Pelly v. Harding, cause was shown on the part of the defendants against a rule calling on them to pay certain sums of money, pursuant to the award of an arbitrator. The case was one of considerable intricacy, but it appeared that the substance was briefly this. The defendants were the Liquidators of Overend, Gurney and Co. (Limited), and the action was for commission alleged to have been earned upon the charter of three steamships which had belonged to Overend and Co., called the Queen of the South, the Mauritius, and the Golden Fleece, to the Government for the Abyssinian expedition. The action was referred, and an undertaking given by the defendants to pay the sums found due within a fortnight, and the arbitrator found certain sums to be due for commission to Capt. Pelly, but the defendants objected to pay these sums on the ground that Capt. Pelly, who had for a considerable time previously to the liquidation been the registered owner of the ships as trustee for Overend and Co. had received sums of money on account of the ship's earnings equal to the sums found to be due to him. It appeared, however, that Pelly had made considerable disbursements on account of the ships. Chief Baron Kelly said that the rule must be made absolute. The plaintiff might have just cause for not considering himself indebted at all to the estate of Overend and Co. Baron Martin said that he had done all he could, and he hoped with some little success, for nineteen years to prevent excuses being made for not performing awards. In times gone by the making of an award in favour of either party was only the signal for all sorts of capacious proceedings on the part of the other to set it aside. The learned judge was happy to say that of late years the setting aside of awards had greatly ceased. There was one class of awards which he was especially anxious to support if possible. Briefs were often delivered to counsel in cases wholly unfit to be tried at Nisi Prius, and pressure was put on counsel to refer. Counsel were frequently obliged to put pressure on a client reluctant to refer, and then it was very hard that afterwards, when the award was made, there should be all sorts of technical objections and delay. He did not see where a reference had been made on the express understanding that the money found due by the arbitrator should be paid within a certain time, that an answer could be set up to an application for payment that some previous claim or other existed against the plaintiff. Baron Bramwell was of the same opinion. He thought that anything that would be a plausible defence to an action on the award would also be an answer to an application to the summary jurisdiction of the court. If the defendants could have shown facts that would have amounted to a defence on the ground of legal or equitable set-off to an action, he for one should not have been inclined to grant the application; but he thought there was no set-off in law, because the money due was due to the bankrupt estate of Overend and Gurney. There was no equitable defence because the defendants had undertaken to pay in a fortnight with knowledge of the facts. Under these circumstances the rule must be made absolute.

The case of Merrall (app.) v. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England (resps.) was a case on appeal from the decision of the judge of the County Court of Westminster, which raised a nice and, as the Lord Chief Baron observed in the course of the case, a very important, question. It was an action by the commissioners to recover a sum of 25*l.* for dilapidations in respect of certain premises held by the defendant of the plaintiffs, in which, on its trial before the County Court judge and a jury, the plaintiffs got a verdict for 15*l.*, whereupon the defendant appealed. The facts were that the defendant became tenant of the premises to the plaintiffs under certain articles of agreement, dated 26th June 1863, for a term of three years from 25th March 1863, at a rent payable quarterly, with a stipulation that the tenant was to put and maintain the premises in tenable repair, &c. The said agreement was executed in duplicate, one part being signed by the surveyors of the plaintiffs, through whom the letting was arranged, and the other part by the defendant, but neither part was sealed with the corporate or common seal of the commissioners. The defendant entered and held the premises under the agreement for the term therein mentioned, and he held over for two years afterwards, paying the reserved rent up to the 25th March 1868, when his tenancy was determined by a notice to quit. The defendant contended that the plaintiffs, as a corporation, had no power to lease except by deed under their common seal, and so the agreement was void as not being under seal, or, at all events, was evidence only of a yearly letting, on such terms as were applicable to a yearly tenancy, which the stipulations as to repairs were not, and he claimed a nonsuit. The judge ruled that the defendant, during the time he held over, from Lady Day 1866 to Lady Day 1868, was tenant from year to year, upon such of the terms of the agreement as were applicable to a yearly tenancy, and he left it to the jury whether, upon the evidence, the defendant had or not complied with the stipulations as to repairs, who found for the plaintiffs for 15*l*. The questions were, whether the judge should have nonsuited the plaintiffs, and whether he had misdirected the jury. The case was argued before the full court of the Exchequer on two days, Mr. Anstie, for the appellant, contending that the plaintiffs should have been nonsuited. No tenancy except, at most, a tenancy at will was created, and no action but for use and occupation could be maintained. The corporation was not bound by the agreement, and so there was no mutuality and no binding contract, and consequently no action lay. The defendant did not get what he bargained for. Mr. Gates, contra, for the commissioners, argued that, even conceding the agreement to have been void originally, yet, the defendant having gone in and held for three years under it, and having held over for two years afterwards at the same rent, the cases showed that he held over as tenant from year to year on the terms of the agreement. A number of cases and authorities were cited on both sides, both at common law and in Chancery, and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners Acts, 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 77, s. 1, 5, c. 37, s. 6, and 13 & 14 Vict. c. 94, ss. 7 and 8, were referred to. At the conclusion of a long argument the court (Chief Baron Kelly, and Barons Bramwell, Pigott, and Cleasby), gave judgment unanimously in favour of the plaintiffs (the respondents), and held that they were entitled to retain their verdict; and they were of opinion, following the decision of the Court of Common Pleas in the case of Wood v. Tate, 2 Bos. & Pul. N. R. 247, that the defendant (the appellant), held over as tenant from year to year on the terms of the written agreement, though the latter was void as a lease for want of the common seal of the commissioners.

In Nash v. Hawkins Mr. Murphy, on the part of the plaintiff, moved for a rule calling on the defendant to show cause why the plaintiff should not be entitled to his costs in this action, to be taxed by the master. It was an action for malicious prosecution and false imprisonment, to which the defendant had pleaded a justification, and at the trial, before Baron Martin, at the last Summer Assizes for Hertfordshire, the plaintiff got a general verdict on both counts, with 5*l*. damages, his Lordship telling the jury that if they believed the defendant, there was reasonable and probable cause for giving the plaintiff into custody; and his Lordship declined to certify for costs. [Baron Martin.—I remember that at the time I thought the verdict was wrong.] The action was commenced in June 1868. After the passing and coming into operation of the County Courts Act 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 142), the 34th section of which provides, that in any action founded on tort, commenced in a Superior Court after the passing of the Act, where the plaintiff recovers not exceeding 10*l*., he shall not be entitled to any costs of suit, unless the judge shall certify on the record, &c., or unless the court or judge at chambers shall, by a rule or order, allow such costs. It was an action that could not be brought in the County Court. Being asked to explain the delay in coming to the court, Mr. Murphy said that the plaintiff was poor, and had been advised, in order not to have so many rules pending on the same point, to wait the decisions in two other cases raising the same question, namely, first of Gray v. West, in the Queen's Bench, in which case was shown on the 16th Nov., and judgment only given on the 28th Jan. last, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 221; L. Rep. 4 Q. B. 175; and then, Croven v. Smith, in this court on the 27th April last only, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 400. Chief Baron Kelly (Barons Martin, Bramwell, and Cleasby concurring) said, "Is not your delay very unreasonable? you should have moved within the first four days of Michaelmas Term, or if not then, at least within a reasonable time. Here eight months have been allowed to elapse before any application is made. We cannot entertain it, and your rule must be refused."

A discussion on a point of practice raising the question whether or not it is competent for the same counsel to move twice on the same day, occurred in this court to day (Friday, 7th inst.) in a case in which Mr. H. James, who had previously moved and obtained a rule in Johns v. The London and South-Western Railway Company, again rose in his tub to move, whereupon Mr. Baron Bramwell said, "Can we hear you Mr. James? I think it is contrary to the practice of the court for the same counsel to move twice on the same day. I well recollect when I was at the Bar attempting to do so, and being severely, but not unkindly, rebuked by Lord Wensleydale for so doing. The case I refer to is Hollis v. Hoscacon, reported in 19 L. J. 269, Ex., in which, after a discussion upon the question of practice, this court then decided that it was well to adhere to the rule as then established, except only in the case of motions for new trials." Chief Baron Kelly asked what was the date of that case, and on hearing that it was in 1850, said he hoped the court had grown wiser in the interval, for he could not himself see any good or use in so absurd and arbitrary a rule, and for his own part he was willing it should be abolished and to hear Mr. James's motion. Mr. Baron Martin said he thought the old rule was wholesome and necessary, and operated beneficially both for the public and the Bar. But for it a Scarlett or a Follett, if it were allowable for the same gentleman to move more than once on the same day, might shut out the rest of the Bar, and monopolise the court to himself the whole day. He hoped the old practice would be adhered to. Mr. H. James then said he believed the practice in the Queen's Bench and Common Pleas in this respect was at variance with that in this court, whereupon Mr. Denman, Q. C., as amicus curiæ, said that during three years in which he was a reporter in the Common Pleas, the same counsel was allowed to move more than once on the same day. Their Lordships then consulted the master, and inquiries were made of the other courts on the point; but eventually the matter dropped without any definite decision, and the rule of practice was left as it was before, Mr. H. James observing that he had no feeling one way or the other in the matter, and that he was quite content to move to-morrow.

BAIL COURT.

This court sat on the last three days of term. On Thursday, 6th May, there was an application of the ordinary character for a mandamus against the Mid-Wales Railway Company, in which Sir John Karslake, Q. C., and Mr. Macnamara showed cause against the rule, and contended that the appointment of an arbitrator in this case was void, the statutory formalities not having been complied with, and the question to be determined not having been defined in the order of reference. The court, however, said that the rule must go, as there were disputes respecting matters of fact, which could not be determined upon affidavit. Mr. Kemplay showed cause against an order obtained by Mr. Waddy in the case of Irving v. Askeu, calling on Mr. Ingham, judge of the Cumberland County Court, to show cause why he should not sign and seal a case agreed upon between the parties. The plaintiffs were the assignees of a bankrupt contractor for sewage works for a local board of health, under an agreement by which the bankrupt was to complete by a certain time, failing which the board were to be at liberty to take to any materials on the ground. The contractor made default, the defendants availed themselves of the above power, and the plaintiffs as assignees sued to recover the value of certain portions of plant, which as well as the materials the defendants had taken. The case was heard, and decided in favour of the plaintiffs, both as to plant and materials. The defendants then gave notice of appeal, and a case was settled by and between the parties for the judge to sign and seal. His Honour declined to do so, and the case stood over by successive adjournments for several months, when at length the judge observed that he thought, on looking over the agreement, that the plaintiff should have judgment for the value of the plant only, and that if this suggestion were adopted, there might be no necessity to appeal at all. As to what then took place, there was some slight conflict of testimony, but after going carefully through the allegations on each side, the court held that there had been no absolute refusal, to justify a rule which was in the nature of a mandamus, and discharged the rule with costs. A preliminary objection taken by Mr. Kemplay, that the case could not be heard, because the plaintiffs had not been served with notice of it, was overruled.

In Reg. v. The Metropolitan Meat Market, Mr. Alfred Wills (Mellish, Q. C. with him) admitted that a rule for a mandamus obtained by Serjt. Tindal Atkinson must be made absolute, directing the corporation of London to summons a jury to assess compensation; but as many questions of law would be raised, it was arranged that the whole matter had better be stated in a special case.

Re The Lapilla Pyrites Company, a rule nisi was obtained by Mr. Milward, Q. C., for setting aside an award.

Ex parte Littler. Mr. Harrington obtained a rule nisi for a rule calling on the vicar and churchwardens of the parish of Bloxwich, Staffordshire, to show cause why a mandamus should not issue, commanding them to hold a vestry for the election of parishioners' churchwarden. Notice of a vestry meeting, on Easter Tuesday, to elect a churchwarden, was given by posting a notice on the church doors on Good Friday. This was insufficient, as the combined effect of 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, s. 1, and 7 Will. 4, and 1 Vict. c. 45, was to require that notice should be given on a Sunday at least three clear days before the time appointed for holding the meeting, so that if a meeting were to be held on any day in the week earlier than Thursday, notice must be given on the previous Sunday week. In addition to this purely legal point, two others were made on behalf of the applicants. In the first place, it was said that the Bloxwich clock was not a very good one, and persisted in disagreeing, not only with the Greenwich time ball or the Shaksperian Shrewsbury clock, but with itself, as it would never strike the hours until the minute hand had got to five minutes past. The parishioners, however, were very indulgent to their clock's chronometrical frailties, and so, from time whereof the memory of Bloxwich was not to the contrary, they had been accustomed to give it "a quarter of an hour's law" before they began business. But last Easter Tuesday, there was an unwanted stir in the village. One section of the parishioners came up sharp to time, and forthwith a Mr. Robert Evans was proposed as candidate, whereupon the vicar reminded them of the clock and the custom, but the supporters of the churchwarden proximate refused to wait, and insisted that the election should take place without delay. They began accordingly, and not wasting much time in speechifying, they had nearly got their candidate elected when Mr. Littler, the applicant, rushed in and proposed Mr. Beley, "an old and tried servant" of the Bloxwichians, who had been their churchwarden on sundry previous occasions. There was a show of hands, at which Mr. Beley was beaten. His friend, the applicant, rushed out to take counsel with him; obtained his consent to go to a poll, and hurried back to the meeting to demand it, having been absent only two minutes. But those two minutes had sealed the fate of Beley and of Bloxwich. A resolution in favour of the new candidate was declared carried, and the vicar was actually entering it in his minute-book, when Mr. Littler got into church again, and demanded the poll. He was promptly told that he was too late; his demand was refused, and the anti-Beleyite was declared duly elected. Hence the present application, on which a rule was at once granted.

In Reg. v. Selfe, ex parte Corderly and Samuel, Mr. Underdown moved for two rules, calling on Mr. Selfe, the police magistrate, to show cause why two orders made by him should not be brought up to be quashed. The application arose out of some proceedings against the secretary of a benefit society, and involved a detailed examination of numerous Acts of Parliament, as to which Mr. Justice Mellor said it was a great pity they were not all repealed and re-enacted or consolidated. It was contended that the magistrate had acted without jurisdiction, and a rule nisi was granted.

Sundry cases were then withdrawn, struck out, or the rules enlarged; after which Mr. Francis Turner showed cause against a rule for a new trial in the case of Chandler v. Solomon, an issue sent down to be tried at the Croydon County Court. The action was to recover 28*l*. odd, the balance of an account for fitting up the Croydon theatre. The defendant paid 16*l*. into court, and the jury gave a verdict for the remainder. McIntyre supported the rule, and as it appeared that the judge was not satisfied with the verdict, the court somewhat reluctantly made it absolute, costs to abide the event, and the trial to take place in the County Court of Southwark.

On Friday, May 7th, several motions were made before Lush and Hayes, JJ. In Reg. v. The Guardians of the Medway Union, Mr. Barrow moved for a rule, calling upon two justices for the county of Kent to show cause why a certiorari should not issue to bring up a certain order. In 1844 a man named Dolan was convicted of vagrancy at Rochester, and sentenced to a month's imprisonment at Maidstone. While there he became, or was found to be, insane, and was removed to the county lunatic asylum, in which he has lived ever since, this unlucky instance of vigour against vagrancy having saddled the county with the burden of keeping a pauper lunatic for 25 years. The lunatic's place of settlement had never been discovered, and under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 54, s. 2 it was provided in such cases the county must bear the burden, but it was now contended that under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 12, s. 6, the obligation of supporting him was transferred to the city of Rochester, as the place where the prisoner was found com-the buildings should be erected at an expense of not more than 750,000*l.* Well, up to the present moment, 880,991*l.* 7*s.* 5*d.*, or nearly 900,000*l.*, had been expended upon land alone, and the commissioners stated the whole expense of purchasing land and erecting buildings would amount to no less than 3,200,000*l.* It appeared that additional land, which would cost 700,000*l.*, would have to be purchased for the Carey-street site, that the buildings to be erected would cost 1,574,000*l.*, the architect's commission would be 74,000*l.*, and furniture and contingencies would cost 150,000*l.* But the House would remember that the proposed expenditure of 3,200,000*l.* made no provision for approaches. With the exception of the Strand, the Law Courts, if built on the Carey-street site, would have no approaches worthy of the name. Every hon. gentleman who looked at the map with Carey-street marked upon it would see the Law Courts, if built on the Carey-street site, would be placed in a perfect hole, surrounded on all sides except by the Strand by mean buildings. His hon. and learned friend the member for Richmond, who made so able a speech in favour of the Carey-street site, admitted that approaches to it were necessary, but he threw the expense of making those approaches on the Metropolitan Board of Works, a duty which he (Mr. Layard) was quite sure no metropolitan member would for a moment accept. When he took the office which he now had the honour to fill, he found this state of things existing—that he was expected to bring in a Bill to acquire additional land which would cost about 700,000*l.*—that the House had acted upon representations which had turned out to be inaccurate—that vast expense was being incurred—that the proposed approaches to the Carey-street site could not be constructed for less than 1,000,000*l.* at least. He would venture to say that the Carey-street site would altogether involve an expenditure of about 4,000,000*l.* Well, he communicated with his right hon. friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and he found that he had come to exactly the same result on the financial question that he (Mr. Layard) had on the architectural question. They both felt that it was impossible to continue this enormous expenditure, and that the only thing to be done was to put a stop to it, at any rate until the House had an opportunity of considering the subject. It became his duty to look at the other schemes that had been proposed. One was that proposed by his hon. friend the member for Bath. By that scheme the courts were to be built upon the Carey-street site, and the offices of the courts upon the Thames Embankment. He found that the lowest estimate for that scheme was 2,720,000*l.* But there were many arguments against that plan. In the first place, he did not admit that all the offices proposed to be erected in connection with the law courts were necessary. Secondly, if there were any arguments in favour of dividing the offices from the Law Courts, the public convenience would be consulted by building the courts, instead of the offices, on the Embankment, leaving the offices to be erected on the Carey-street site. Consequently, that was a scheme which did not appear to him to be one which he could recommend to the House. The next scheme was the converse of that just mentioned, namely, the placing of the courts upon the Embankment, and the offices on the Carey-street site. There was the same objection as to the expense, which would be about three millions sterling, and there were a number of offices proposed to be erected on the Carey-street site which would not be necessary. Sir Charles Trevelyan's plan was the next plan, and no doubt it was very magnificent and comprehensive; but his views were considered rather visionary, and that rather interfered with the calm consideration of his plan. The great objection to his scheme was its very considerable cost. To obtain the whole site between the Strand and the Embankment, bounded on one side by King's College, and on the other by the Temple, would cost 3,250,000*l.*, but even that would be cheaper than the Carey-street site, and the approaches were nearly all formed; but he might have to add to that any loss on resale. There was a great mass of opinion in favour of Sir Charles Trevelyan's site. In a letter received from the Chief Baron, his Lordship stated that he and all the common law judges with whom he had been able to communicate, with a single exception, thought that the Thames Embankment site should be preferred. He (Mr. Layard) had an interview with all the barons of the Exchequer, and they unanimously desired that the Law Courts should be placed on the Thames Embankment. The Inner and Middle Temple had memorialised in favour of the Thames Embankment. Lincoln's-inn was in favour of Carey-street, but had not memorialised against the Thames Embankment, there being such a difference of opinion there on the subject. He denied that all the solicitors were in favour of the Carey-street site. A body of solicitors were certainly in favour of Carey-street, but a large body of solicitors from the east and west, north and south, were in favour of the Thames Embankment. Another plan, recently suggested, would be acceptable to the solicitors and attorneys represented by the Law Institution, namely, to erect on the Carey-street site the Law Courts proposed to be erected on the Thames Embankment; but the plan he (Mr. Layard) was about to propose was a much cheaper plan than that one. They had paid nearly 900,000*l.* for the land in Carey-street; the erection of the courts would cost 1,000,000*l.*; and they must go to the expense of making approaches. (Hear, hear.) It became his duty to propose a plan that would meet the popular opinion respecting the Thames Embankment without involving the Government in the large expense attending all the schemes he had mentioned. He was quite prepared to bear the responsibility of having suggested the plan referred to by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and it was proposed after much consideration. There is a street running parallel with the Strand and Embankment called Howard-street, near King's College, within a few yards of Essex-street, continued by small lanes. (Hear, hear.) It was the site for a complete block of buildings, bounded on the west by King's College, on the east by the Temple property, and on the south by the Embankment. A portion of the site was part of reclaimed ground, and the whole contained six acres. One advantage of taking the site would be that they would be saved from the necessity of purchasing an expensive frontage, and almost the whole of the block, with one exception, belonged to one landlord—the Duke of Norfolk. It was not, as alleged, a hole, but is one of the most commanding positions on that part of the Thames. The level of Howard-street was almost the same as that of the Strand, there being a little fall from the Strand to the end of Howard-street. Surrey and Arundel-streets had no doubt a considerable depression. It would be seen how the level could be made equal in Howard-street through the whole length of that street. On this space, containing six acres, they could erect eighteen courts, and all the offices necessary for those courts. He had gone into the whole scheme with Mr. Street, who had met him most honourably, showing that he was desirous to carry out his views, and entirely approved of them. In adapting his plan to the new site there was no necessity for altering the general arrangement of the offices. He proposed to erect near King's College, on the west, the courts of law; and at the east would be placed all the offices. The building would be on a line with Somerset House, and the terraces of the two buildings would be continuous. (Hear, hear.) There was a piece of reclaimed land on which it was proposed to erect the railway station, the approaches being ready, without any expense to the public; while, on the contrary, the Carey-street site had no approach from the east and west, and was surrounded by buildings that excluded the free circulation of the air. On the Embankment there was a railroad and the river, and it was accessible, not only from all parts of London, but from all parts of the country. The country solicitors might reach the courts without crossing a single street. It was accessible from the south by Westminster-bridge and the other bridges, and it was accessible from every part of London, east and west. He proposed to convert the terrace of Somerset House into a road to be used by the judges, from whence each judge would be placed upon the level of his court. Coming from the Strand, the judges would scarcely have to ascend any steps at all, whereas in the Carey-street site they would have to ascend forty steps, or from the Strand seventy or eighty steps, while the public would have to ascend 100 steps from the Strand. By having two blocks separate, one for the courts, the other for the offices, either of them could be extended when necessary. As regarded the expense, he had gone most carefully into it with Mr. Hunt, the surveyor, the adviser of the Board of Works. Mr. Hunt valued the land at 600,000*l.*, and he took 1,000,000*l.* as the outside of the cost of the building, so that the whole expense would not exceed 1,600,000*l.* Although estimates were very often exceeded, he thought there were good grounds for expecting that they would not be exceeded. The estimate of cost for the building on seven and a half acres of the Carey-street site was 750,000*l.*, though the addition of six acres added 600,000*l.* to the cost. He took 1,000,000*l.* as the cost of the building on the new site, and he undertook that it should not exceed that sum, and that not a sod of earth should be turned up until contracts for the erection of the building at that sum had been framed. The undertaking could be carried out without in any manner interfering with the traffic on the Thames Embankment, whereas he asked members to consider what the block of traffic in the Strand would be with such a building as the Law Courts in progress on the Carey-street site. It was ornamentation that ran away with the money in such buildings, but with a frontage on the Embankment little of this would be wanted. The great point would be to have grand and simple proportions. (Hear, hear.) It was not the smallest recommendation of the new site in his eyes that here the space would be contracted—(ironical cheers)—so that there would be no temptation to throw away million after million, but it would be easy to extend it if it were required. It was said that by the change of site they must lose 500,000*l.* on the Carey-street ground; but he could assure the House that negotiations were at this moment in progress for the purchase of the site at the full price paid for it by the Government, not including the law expenses, and he was advised by Mr. Hunt not to be in any haste to close with the proposal, as there would be every chance of much more than recouping the amount already expended. With regard to the position of the railway station, if it were to be placed in the centre of the building, no doubt that would be very objectionable, and he had opened communications with the railway company, and found that an arrangement might be made for placing it at the end of Essex-street, which would be the most convenient situation that could be chosen. If they adhered to the Carey-street site, they could not commence building on it under a year, for they would have to acquire houses on the additional ground, and give notice to the occupants. At present there were no working drawings or elevations of the buildings in readiness, so that a full year would be required. What he proposed to do by the Bill was to proceed as if the notices had been given in November last. The Bill would be referred to the examiners, and the Standing Orders Committee, who would decide if it was a proper case for the suspension of the standing orders. When the Bill was read a second time, the steps necessary for the execution of the project would be taken by compulsory powers, limited to the 30th June 1870. He contended that this course would be more for the advantage of the owners and occupiers of land than any other that could be taken, as relieving them from the suspense and anxieties of delay. If the House assented to the Bill, they would be able to proceed without the loss of a single hour, though, in point of fact, the delay of a year in a matter of such exceeding importance was of little consequence. He believed that every single court, and all the dependent offices, might be erected on the six acres. As soon as an elevation was decided on he should have a model of the building constructed, so that it could be examined and criticised by the public. He was in favour of adopting for the building the Gothic style of architecture—not the ecclesiastical Gothic style, but that which the Italians had adopted for secular purposes. He believed, if the plan he proposed were adopted, the country would be provided with a magnificent building, and he therefore begged to move for leave to introduce the Bill. (Hear, hear.)—Sir R. PALMER said it was impossible for him, even at that late hour (a quarter to one o'clock), to remain silent after the speech the House had heard. It was necessary that some answer should be given to some of the statements made, and he gave notice he should take the sense of the House on this Bill on its second reading. (Hear, hear.) It appeared to him that no worse scheme, or one more calculated to mar a useful project, was ever submitted to the House than this—(hear, hear)—and no more unjust or uncandid remarks could have been made with respect to the recommendations of the Royal Commission. That commission represented all branches of the law; it had not exceeded its functions, or committed the House to the laying out of a farthing of money. He could conceive no more unjust or uncandid thing than to bring forward the views of the commission as a reason why the original scheme and site should be thrown over, and this increased expenditure incurred. Let the House recollect that on the Carey-street site they could have a block of six acres for the building, and land enough for two large streets at either side of it. Let the House recollect that it took four years to clear that site—that a large labouring population had been unhoused by that clearing, and that it involved an expense of 880,000*l.*, the annual interest of which was 42,500*l.*, and that they were going to turn all this over to please his right hon. friend. (Laughter.) He should call the attention of his right hon. friend, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, to an amount of 27,822*l.* paid to the firm of Roscoe and Field for costs, but of that, 23,381*l.* was for pure payments of money out of pocket. Then, again, 8925*l.* was paid for expenses of surveying other than that paid to Mr. Pownall, who was employed by Government. He thought it was a little hard upon the gentlemen whose names were so introduced to speak of that large amount as enormous, whereas if his right hon. friend had known the figures and facts more accurately he would have known there was not a particle of foundation for thus representing it. He did not think his right hon. friend would find that he would have to pay a smaller bill in regard to the Howard-street site. (Cheers.) His right hon. friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer said if one thing was more absurd than another, they would have first to clear the north side of the Strand, and then the south side; but that was exactly what they were going to do. (Hear, hear.) And they were taking six acres without making the smallest arrangement for approaches; for in order to get the bare space of six acres they would go up to the Temple on one side, and King's College on the other.—Mr. LAYARD: No, no, no.—Sir R. PALMER: Oh, but yes, yes, yes ("Hear, hear," and laughter).—Mr. LAYARD: Essex-street would be formed into a street sixty feet wide.—Sir R. PALMER said they would have to take more land than they mentioned, or else take some from the site. Then they would advance to the very edge of the railway cutting, bringing it forward before the Temple Gardens considerably; and the Howard-street site presented a much worse level than Carey-street. It was suggested that the public would be able to come up the Embankment and railway. But the lawyers would not come that way. They would come from the north side, and there should be approaches from the north, those approaches being the same as would be necessary for the Carey-street site. All that was needed for the Carey-street site was an approach from Holborn, and that would be necessary for the present scheme. And could anybody believe that when it was carried out they would not have to widen the Strand? They were told on a former night that somebody had run down there from Lincoln's-inn in three minutes. (Laughter.) He tested this on Saturday, and found it took six minutes, which meant twelve minutes, for getting from court to chambers and back again, which was time enough to lead to such serious risk that a barrister would be kept dancing attendance all the time in these new courts. And therefore they would be, for some reason that he could not imagine, unless it was for ecclesiastical or Palladian architecture, inflicting great inconvenience on those who did business in those courts, and therefore on the clients. Barristers from Gray's-inn and Lincoln's-inn, and all coming from the north would all have to cross the Strand to get to the new site. And where were they going to erect this beautiful building? Down in what he would venture to call a hole, where it might be seen from the river or the Embankment, but which would be no ornament to the metropolis at large; whereas, if it were erected in Carey-street, it would be on a site where it might be seen from all sides of London. With regard to the opinions of judges and barristers, he knew the judges were not all in favour of the Embankment. Some persons might be, seeing that it would increase the value of their property. But there was no difference of opinion in Lincoln's-inn on the subject, to whose interests the new site if adopted, would be highly prejudicial. As to the solicitors, both provincial and metropolitan, he believed the whole of them were against the Embankment site. (Hear, hear.) They told him that the Profession, as a whole, was as unanimously against it as it was possible for any body to be against any scheme. (Cheers.) He would do all in his power to prevent this scheme being carried. (Cheers and laughter).—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said, as his hon. and learned friend in the whirlwind of his eloquence had said he would allow the Government to bring in this Bill, he would not enter into the numerous topics which had been broached, and which could be fully discussed on the second reading. For himself, he was calm on this subject. Whatever the House did, he hoped they would do that which was best for the public interests; that at any rate they would not consent to the enormous expenditure which was going on when he came into office. His hon. and learned friend had dealt rather severely with him. He had accused him of raising false issues, of being uncandid and unjust, and of a good many other things that he did not remember. The fault had been not so much in the original estimate as in the introduction, in 1868, of a Bill which was never discussed, which virtually gave to the commissioners an unlimited power of spending money for purposes for which the House had before granted only limited powers. (Hear, hear.) By the original resolution the expenditure was not to exceed 1,500,000. As to Messrs. Field and Co.'s bill of 27,000,000, he thought it was a grave error in the commissioners, who had appointed Mr. Field their secretary, to appoint the firm of which he was a member their solicitors. (Hear, hear.) When he came into office he found that an expenditure of 4,000,000, was contemplated by the commissioners. He felt that it was his duty not to give his assent to that enormous expenditure. He did not pretend to any judgment or taste in these matters, therefore he could argue them with good temper. If the House thought the Carey-street site was better than the Embankment site, let the courts be built on the Carey-street site; but he hoped they would not permit the enormous expenditure which was contemplated when he came into office.—Lord JOHN MANNERS said if a second Act was passed in 1866, the Government of the day, and not the commissioners, were responsible. [The

Digitized by Google

CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER.—That Act was passed when the noble lord was in office.] (Laughter.) That might be, but the Act was introduced when Lord Russell was a member of the Government. And as to the appointment of the firm of Field and Roscoe as solicitors to the commissioners, the Government of the day was responsible for that appointment, because they must have assented to it. As to the main issue, he could only say that if the scheme now propounded were carried, the Government would become land jobbers on an enormous scale. (Cheers.) It appeared that the Carey-street site was to be sold in dribblets, and for years that part of the site which remained unsold would be a waste and a disgrace to Parliament. He believed the Carey-street was the cheaper of the two sites, and on the second reading he would cordially support the amendment of his hon. and learned friend.—Mr. GOLDNEY said that in introducing this Bill the Government were departing not only from principle but from fact. The main point was this, that the courts should be concentrated in a place accessible to all people who used them. He hoped before the second reading that the proceedings of the commissioners would be printed, from which it would be seen that every one of their acts was submitted to the Treasury. On what ground was the Carey-street site taken, except that it was deemed absolutely necessary for the public advantage to obtain it? If the Government sanctioned a departure from a plan so sanctioned, what confidence could be placed in any arrangement made by them? He hoped the plan before the House would be rejected by a large majority.—Mr. TITE thought the public would be gainers by the discussion that had taken place.—In reply to Sir G. JENKINSON, Mr. LAYARD promised that a correct plan should be furnished before the second reading.—Leave was then given to bring in the Bill.

JUDICIAL FUNCTIONS OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Sir J. ESMONDE gave notice that on Monday next he would ask leave to introduce a Bill to enable the House of Commons to examine witnesses upon oath.—Mr. W. M. TORRENS gave notice that on Tuesday next he would move the following resolution: "That, whenever any person shall have been duly called upon by order of this House to give evidence in support or in disproof of any allegation of fact set forth in a bill of disability or of pains and penalties, such person shall be examined upon oath, or upon such solemn affirmation as may be most binding upon his conscience."

THE EDMUNDS' SCANDAL.

Mr. BENTINCK asked the Secretary to the Treasury whether a copy of a paper entitled "The History of the Edmunds' Scandal," by Leonard Edmunds, was now on record in the Treasury, and, if so, whether he would lay the same on the table of the House.—Mr. AYRTON said it was true that Mr. Edmunds had written a letter to the Lords of the Treasury to say that he had the honour to enclose a copy of a paper entitled "The History of the Edmunds' Scandal," and to request that they would cause the same to be made a record of the Treasury. The Treasury was not exactly the place for recording everything that any person chose to send there, and, therefore, if Mr. Edmunds was anxious to have the paper presented to Parliament, he thought he had better choose some other channel than that office.—Mr. BENTINCK gave notice that at an early day after the recess he should call the attention of the House to the case of Mr. Edmunds, and should make a motion upon the subject.

THE BANKRUPTCY BILL.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL, in reply to Mr. MORLEY, said that the Bankruptcy Bill was now ready, and he hoped it would be in the hands of members to-morrow or next day. In answer to the further question, he hoped to be able to go into committee on the Bill very early after Whitsuntide.

FIRE INSURANCE POLICIES.

Mr. H. B. SHERIDAN asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether it was intended by the Government Bill that those persons only who had renewed or effected fire insurance policies since the announcement of the Budget for periods extending beyond Midsummer, at which time the fire insurance duty is to cease, would be entitled to the rebate or drawback for the excess of duty so paid.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER.—This question depends on the 12th section of the Customs and Inland Revenue Act. That section provides for the case of persons who may effect any Insurances against fire after the 12th April, but is silent as to all persons making assurances before that date. They, therefore, would not be entitled to rebate.

COUNTY COURTS BILL.

Mr. NORWOOD, in moving the second reading of this Bill, said that its object was to alter the procedure in County Courts in order to remove the very considerable hardship inflicted on plaintiffs by the present state of the law, which compelled them in an action for a claim under 50*l.* to go for redress to the County Court of the district where the defendant resided. An objection had been taken to his proposal by the hon. baronet the member for Reading on the ground that considerable hardship might be entailed on the defendant. He proposed now to remove any objection on that score by a proviso to the effect that where the defendant made affidavit that he had a good defence, and gave reasonable security for the costs, the case might be transferred from the district of the plaintiff. He begged to move the second reading of the Bill.—Sir F. GOLDSMID was of opinion that it would be quite sufficient for all purposes that the defendant should make an affidavit that he had a good defence without requiring him to give security for costs. (Hear, hear.) As notice of the clause had been given only last night, perhaps the best course to be taken would be to allow the Bill to be read a second time, and before it should go into committee ample opportunity should be given to the Attorney-General to consider whether the proposal of the hon gentleman was sufficient to protect the interests of the defendant.

—Mr. G. GREGORY was understood to say that to compel the debtor to give security was objectionable, and his simple declaration that he had a good defence ought to relieve him from the necessity of going a great distance from his home to resist what might be an unjust demand.—Mr. DENMAN would support the second reading in order that the Bill might be carefully watched and amended in committee. Whether it would be a good or a bad Bill would depend upon how it was shaped in committee. There were cases in which it was now a hardship for the plaintiff to have to follow the defendant all over the country; and, on the other hand, it would be a considerable hardship on the defendant—who was generally the poorer party of the two—to be obliged to fight his case in a court a long way from his own home.—Mr. M'MAHON thought it doubtful whether they ought really to agree to the second reading. The third and fourth clauses of the Bill were in themselves pernicious. The Summary Procedure Act went altogether on a wrong foundation, giving a preference to promissory notes and bills of exchange, which it did not give to documents of greater weight—that was, under seal; and there was no reason why such a power should be extended to County Courts. It might be all very well that the great London merchants should be able to drag their debtors from Northumberland, Cornwall, or Wales; but such a power might be abused by spiteful creditors or by persons who were not merchants or traders at all.—Mr. M. CHAMBERS thought if the Bill was really required it ought to be introduced by some member of the Government.—Mr. NORWOOD explained that the Bill was confined to traders; and whether those traders were poor or rich they could equally avail themselves of its provisions. He also protested against the dictum that a private member was not to be at liberty to initiate any legislation for the removal of any proved defect in the existing law, and he could not see that he was bound to wait under the circumstances for the attendance of the law officers of the Government.—Mr. STAVELEY HILL believed that every clause of the Bill but the fifth had received a fatal wound, and even that solitary exception could also be shown to be open to serious objection. He therefore appealed to the hon. member for Hull to withdraw the measure, and either bring it in himself in an amended form or leave it in the hands of the Government.—Sir G. JENKINSON said that, unless either of the alternative courses suggested by the learned member who spoke last were adopted he would move that the Bill be read the second time that day six months.—The debate stood adjourned.

COUNTY COURTS (ADMIRALTY JURISDICTION).

Mr. NORWOOD obtained leave to bring a Bill to amend the County Courts (Admiralty Jurisdiction) Act 1868, and to give jurisdiction in certain maritime causes, and the Bill was read the first time.

SUCCESSION DUTIES.

Mr. W. FOWLER called attention to the duties charged on the succession to real property, and the exemption enjoyed by certain descriptions of property. He entered into an elaborate historical disquisition on the origin of the Probate and Legacy Duties, and discussed the arguments adduced by Mr. Gladstone in support of his Succession Duty Acts. Dilating on the unfairness of treating real and personal property on a different footing, he maintained that the owner of the fee-simple ought to pay the same rate as owners of personal property; and made very light of the ordinary apology that land bore more than its fair share of local burdens. The motion with which he concluded was to the effect that the present state of the law is anomalous and requires the attention of the Government.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, in reply, pointed out that the motion involved the great problem of finding a common measure for the taxable capacity of different species of property. This problem (for which he avowed he was not prepared with a solution) no doubt was a fit subject for ingenious speculations, but it was not likely to be forwarded by abstract resolutions which would only unsettle men's minds. He promised, however, to give his best attention to the subject, and he promised (amid no little laughter) that if he were lucky enough to hit on an idea, he would not fail to take advantage of it.—Dr. BALL argued that Probate Duty was a very injurious mode of taxing the land, and, after some remarks from Mr. G. GREGORY, Mr. M'LAREN, Col. CORBETT, and Mr. A. JOHNSTON, the motion was withdrawn.

COUNTY FINANCIAL BOARDS.

Mr. KNATCHBULL-HUGESSEN brought in the long-promised Government Bill for the establishment of County Financial Boards. Prefacing his statement by an expression of concurrence in the conclusion of last year's select committee—that there was no practical cause for dissatisfaction with the present county administration, but that the desire of the ratepayers to share in the administration of their own affairs was reasonable and ought to be satisfied, he explained that the Bill would avoid three things—cumbersome machinery (for it would only contain 20 clauses), the creation of new districts, and the permissive principle. The Bill proposed to divide the business of quarter sessions into judicial and administrative. The first would be left to the magistrates, and the second to a body consisting of the Court of Quarter Sessions, with the infusion of a certain number of elected representatives. The boards of guardians would be the constituent body, and in the larger counties one member (up to four) would be elected for every 50,000*l.* of rateable value, and in Wales and in the smaller counties 25,000*l.* would be the unit. This he calculated would give a general average of about one elected to five ex officio members in the financial boards. Mr. HUGESSEN put forward the Bill not so much with an expectation that it would secure greater economy as to satisfy a reasonable demand and lead to a greater harmony between different classes of the community.—Col. W. PATTEN, as chairman of last year's committee, confirmed the statement that no case of maladministration had been made out against the magistrates, and where dissatisfaction was found it was mainly because the accounts had not been published in sufficient detail. But he admitted that the grievance, though a sentimental one, required a remedy. While reserving his opinion on some points, he gave a general approval to the Bill.—Mr. BRUCE, in reply, stated that the Bill would be found to meet all the objections raised to it.

ESTATES AND INVESTMENT JOURNAL.

STOCK AND SHARE MARKETS.

CONSOLS are at 92½, having slightly advanced since Monday, in consequence of a belief prevalent that the Bank of England will not further advance the rate of discount, at least for the present. Other stock and funds have partaken of the depression, and it is said that foreign securities, to the amount of a million, have been sold to foreign buyers during the week. The following are the fluctuations:

ENGLISH FUNDS.	Fri.	Sat.	Mon.	Tues	Wed	Thu
Bank of England Stock	242	242	...
3½ Cent. Red. Ann. ...	91½	90½	90½	90½	91½	91½
3½ Cent. Cons. Ann. ...	92½	92½	92½	92½	92½	92½
New 2½ Cent. Ann.
Do. do. Jan. 1894.	76
New 3½ Cent. Ann. ...	90½	90½	90½	91	91	91½
5½ Cent. Annuities
5½ Cents. ¼ Jan. 1873
Ann. 30 years exp.
April 5, 1885
Do. exp. Jan. 5, 1880
Do. exp. July 1880	114½
Ind Sea Tele. Ann. 1908
Consols, for Acc. ...	92½	92½	92½	92½	92½	93
India 5½ Cent. for Acc.
India 5½ Cents. July 1880	...	114½	114	114½	114½	114½
India Stock, July 1880
India Stock, 1874	...	211	210	...	212	...
India 5½ Cent.
India 4½ Cents. 1888	100½	100½	100½	100½	100½	100½
India 5½ Cent. 1870
India Bonds (1000 l.)	b	b	3s.d
Do. (under 1000 l.)	...	3s.d	5s.c
Ex. Bills, 1000 l.	a	c
Do. 500 l.	1s.d	5s.d	...
Do. 100 l. and 200 l.	1s.d	5s.d	...
3½ Cent.

a 2½ and 2½ per cent., 3s. dis.
b Pr.
c 2½ and 2½ per cent. 5s. dis.
d Premium.
e Discount.

PUBLIC COMPANIES.
RAILWAY COMPANIES.

London, Chatham, and Dover.—The matters referred to the arbitration of Lord Cairns and the Marquis of Salisbury may be condensed as follows:—1. The relative rights, liabilities, and interests, as between the several undertakings, sections, and capitals of the company. 2. The distribution of any available moneys or stocks now in the hands of the company or Court of Chancery. 3. The legal and equitable rights and interests of companies who have leased their undertakings to or whose lines are worked by the company. 4. The legal and equitable rights, liens, and priorities of general creditors. 5. All matters in question as between all the parties in all actions and suits at law or in equity. 6. The arbitrators will also have power to fuse and consolidate all or any of the separate undertakings and capitals as they may consider best for the prosperity of the whole undertaking; to arrange, abate, adjust, and reconstitute and capitalise the company's borrowed and share capitals, funds, rents, charges, separate stocks, interests, arrears of interest, debts, and liabilities.

FINANCE, CREDIT, AND DISCOUNT COMPANIES.

Credit Foncier, and Mobilier of England, Limited.—Vice-Chancellor Malins has made an order to continue the liquidation under the court's supervision, Mr. Mowatt and Mr. Cape acting as liquidators.

Trust and Agency of Australasia.—A dividend at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum, or 4s. per share.

BANKS.

Bank of British Columbia.—3 per cent. per annum dividend declared.

London and South African.—A dividend of 5s. per share for the half-year.

Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Banking Corporation, Limited.—The liquidators have returned 6*l.* 12s. 6d. on the shares with 10*l.* paid, and 1*l.* 12s. 6d. on the shares with 5*l.* paid; and it is believed that the assets when realised will show a further 1s. 6d. per share.

ASSURANCE COMPANIES.

Church of England Assurance.—A dividend of 10 per cent. declared.

English Marine Company, Limited.—Creditors' claims must be forwarded to the liquidator's solicitor by the 31st inst.

MISCELLANEOUS COMPANIES.

Anglo-Romano Gas.—A dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum.

City of London Permanent Benefit Building.—6 per cent. per annum interest and the dividend increased to 7½ per cent.

Hong Kong and China Gas.—Interim dividend declared at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum.

Tavistock Ironworks and Steel Ordnance, Limited.—A dividend of 6s. 8d. in the pound to the creditors has been announced by the official liquidator at the offices of Messrs. James, Edwards, Cash, and Stone.

Vauxhall Bridge.—Dividend, 17s. per share.

REPORTS OF SALES.

[Note.—The reports of the Estate Exchange are officially supplied in the following list. Auctioneers whose names are registered there will oblige by reports of their own sales.]

Thursday, May 6.

By Mr. F. I. SHARP, at Garroway's.
Leasehold, two residences, Nos. 6 and 7, Milton-grove, Upper Holloway, annual value 30*l.* each, term 92 years unexpired, at 6*l.* 6s. each per annum—sold for 210*l.* each.
Leasehold shop and premises, No. 7, Milton-grove, annual value 40*l.*, term similar to above, at 6*l.* 6s. per annum—sold for 300*l.*

Friday, May 7.

Messrs. RUSHWORTH, ARBOTT, and Co., at the Mart.
Leasehold house, shop, and premises, No. 172, Oxford-street, term 31 years unexpired, at 130*l.* per annum—sold for 510*l.*
Freehold, 2a. 3r. 3p. of building land, situate at Mortlake, Surrey—sold for 1800*l.*

Tuesday, May 11.

By Messrs. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and Co., at the Mart.
Freehold residence, No. 5, Balham-grove, Balham, let at 35*l.* per annum—sold for 1000*l.*
Freehold ground-rent of 12*l.* 10s. per annum, secured on No. 6, Balham-grove—sold for 250*l.*
By Messrs. DEBENHAM, TEWSON, and FARMER, at the Mart.
Freehold residence, known as Acton House, Acton, with stabling, outbuildings, and paddock containing 3a. 0r. 4p.—sold for 5100*l.*

Wednesday, May 12.

By Messrs. NORTON, TRIST, WATNEY and Co., at the Mart.
Two undivided 7½ parts or shares of a freehold property, situate in Bell-court, Mincing-lane, and two rentcharges of 1*l.* 13s. 4d. each, &c., let on lease at 57*l.* 10s. 8d. per annum—sold for 5000*l.*
Leasehold two houses and shops, Nos. 74 and 75, Gatten-road, Peckham, producing 52*l.* per annum, term 93 years unexpired, at 10*l.* per annum—sold for 350*l.*
Leasehold ground-rent, amounting to 100*l.* per annum, secured on Nos. 11 to 15, Blomfield-terrace, Harrow-road, term 73 years unexpired, at 2*l.* per annum—sold for 1750*l.*
The second portion of the Martin Park Estate, Tooting, comprising about 25 acres of building land, in 21 lots. Lot 1 sold for 100*l.*; lot 2, 200*l.*; lot 3, 250*l.*; lot 4, 300*l.*; lot 5, 300*l.*; lot 7, 300*l.*; lot 10, 400*l.*; lot 11, 400*l.*; lot 12, 500*l.*; lot 13, 1300*l.*; lot 14, 250*l.*; lot 19, 400*l.*; lot 20, 200*l.*; lot 21, 310*l.*

By Messrs. WINSTANLEY and HORWOOD.
Freehold residence, No. 113, Camberwell-road, let at 55*l.* per annum—sold for 830*l.*
Freehold residences, Nos. 109 and 111, Camberwell-road, let on lease at 24*l.* per annum, annual value 100*l.*—sold for 670*l.*

Freehold, three messuages, situated in North-mews, Addington-square, Camberwell, let on lease at 3*l.* 3s. per annum—sold for 150*l.*

Freehold estate, comprising the "Suffolk Brewery," Addington-square, and five houses, shops, &c., in New Church-road, Camberwell, let on lease at 15*l.* per annum—sold for 2300*l.*

By Messrs. EDWIN FOX and BOUTFIELD.
Freehold ground-rents of 84*l.* per annum, secured on Nos. 1 to 8, Montpelier-terrace, Teddington—sold for 1650*l.*

By Mr. E. CHESTERTON.
Leasehold residence, No. 43, Addison-gardens, North Kensington, let at 84*l.* per annum, term 87 years unexpired, at 5s. per annum—sold for 1120*l.*

Leasehold residence, No. 23, Holland Villas-road, Kensington, let at 115*l.* per annum, term 82½ years unexpired, at 3s. per annum—sold for 2210*l.*

Thursday, May 13.

By Messrs. CHINNOCK, GALSORTHY and CHINNOCK, at the Mart.

Freehold house and shop situate in High-street, Wandsworth, let at 30*l.* per annum—sold for 670*l.*

Leasehold house, No. 1, Grove-villa, Upper Grove-lane, Camberwell, let at 50*l.* per annum; term, 72½ years from 1847, at 7*l.* 8s. 6d. per annum—sold for 550*l.*

Leasehold, two residences, Nos. 6 and 7, Grove-villas, aforesaid, let at 40*l.* per annum each; term 72½ years from 1845, at 12*l.* 2s. 3d. per annum—sold for 740*l.*

Leasehold beerhouse, known as the Beehive, 2, Bromell's-buildings, High-street, Clapham, let at 26*l.* per annum; term 23½ years, unexpired, at 4*l.* per annum—sold for 130*l.*

THE PRICE OF LAND.—Some land in the parishes of Streatham and Croydon, which a few years ago only brought 200*l.* per acre, has lately been sold at the rate of 1400*l.* per acre; and on Tuesday some land at Acton was sold at the Mart for 1350*l.* per acre, which a few years ago would not have realised more than 300*l.* per acre.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

NOTES OF NEW DECISION.

ARBITRATION—COMMON MISTAKE—ERRONEOUS RECITAL.—Where an arbitrator has, by agreement of the parties, jurisdiction to determine disputes which may arise as to certain matters specified in the agreement, and the parties submit to him for adjudication matters not within his jurisdiction, both the arbitrator and the parties being under the misapprehension that the matters so submitted are within his jurisdiction, the award of the arbitrator is good. The recital, in an award made under such circumstances, of the original agreement to refer, will not invalidate the award: (Thames Ironworks, &c., Company v. The Queen, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. Q. B.)

WILL DESTROYED WITH INTENTION TO REVIVE EARLIER WILL.—DECLARATION—INTESTACY.—A testatrix having made two wills just before her death, destroyed the second. The court held that as the act of destruction was not accompanied by a simultaneous declaration of intention, the first will was not thus revived: (In the Goods of Weston, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 330. Prob.)

ADMINISTRATION PENDENTE LITE—MOTION TO DISCHARGE.—Where all the issues in a suit have been found for the executor propounding a will, if an administrator pendente lite has been appointed, the regular course is not to move to discharge him, but to take out probate and call on the administrator to show cause why his grant should not cease: (Duprez v. Veret, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 331. Prob.)

SUIT FOR RESTITUTION—SEPARATE DEED—PROVISION FOR WIFE DURING LIFE OF A CHILD—NONPAYMENT OF COSTS—ATTACHMENT.—By a deed of separation, a husband covenanted and did actually invest in the hands of trustees, a sum of 250*l.*, to be applied to the separate maintenance of his wife and her child. But it was also covenanted that in the event of the child dying before attaining the age of twenty-one, the said sum was to be repaid to him by the trustees. The wife instituted a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, in which cruelty was pleaded on both sides. The court held that the deed made no independent provision for the wife, and that the husband, therefore, should provide her with the means of trying the issue between them. And the costs not being paid by the husband in pursuance of the order, it directed an attachment to be issued against him, but allowed it to lie for three weeks in the registry, to give him an opportunity of finding the money: (Williams v. Williams, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 332. Div.)

PRIVY COUNCIL—REHEARING—MISTAKE IN TITLE.—One of the respondents in an appeal from India gave instructions to agents in England to take all necessary steps to maintain the decree from which the appeal was made. The agents made inquiries at the Privy Council Office, and were informed that the record in the appeal had not arrived. This was a mistake arising from the agents having referred to the appeal under the title that was given in their instructions, while the appeal had been properly entered at the Privy Council Office under a different title. In consequence of this mistake, the appeal came on for hearing, was heard ex parte, no one appearing for the respondent, and judgment was given for the appellant. A petition on behalf of the said respondent, praying that, under the above circumstances, the appeal might be reheard, was dismissed with costs, for the Judicial Committee will not grant such an unusual indulgence, except under very special circumstances, and only where the ex parte hearing has been occasioned by no default in the party applying for a rehearing. Here there was default in the petitioner and his agents: in the former, that the appeal was misdescribed; in the latter, that they did not examine the list at the Privy Council Office for themselves. It is not the duty of the registrar to the Judicial Committee to give notice of the arrival of the records in appeals to agents who request it: (Re Kisto Nauth Roy, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 333.)

PETITION—APPORTIONMENT—8 & 4 WILL. 4, c. 22—TIMBER MONIES.—Where the court has ordered money arising from the sale of timber, cut with its sanction, to be invested, and the dividends to be paid to the tenant for life, the first owner of the inheritance, or the first tenant for life unimpeachable for waste, is entitled to the corpus of the fund in court: In such a case the legal personal representatives are not entitled to an apportionment of a dividend accrued due during the lifetime of the tenant for life to whom the dividends have been ordered to be paid. An order of court is not an instrument in writing within the Apportionment Act (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22), so as to create a right to an apportionment of dividends of a fund paid in under it: (Joddrell v. Joddrell, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 349. M. R.)

INJUNCTION—PUBLICATION INJURIOUS TO REPUTATION—REMEDY IN EQUITY.—H., who had ceased to be solicitor to a firm which became bankrupt, threatened to publish a printed advertisement to creditors, involving the statement that D., a solvent merchant, had been a partner in that firm. D. obtained an ex parte injunction to restrain him so doing: Held, that this court had jurisdiction to restrain the publication of matter injurious to mercantile reputation, as a valuable part of a man's property: (Dixon v. Holden, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 357. V.C. M.)

TRUSTEE BY DEPOSIT—FAILURE OF BANK.—G., being entitled to a share of an estate, went abroad, leaving a power of attorney to receive such share. The estate was sold, but the purchaser requiring G.'s confirmation, his share was deposited in the names of E. and P. in the bank on a declaration of trust. On the confirmation arriving, E. was repeatedly applied to for more than four months, but neglected to hand the fund over, alleging a difficulty in making out the account; the bank failed, and the money was lost. On bill filed: Held, that E. was liable to restore the money with interest, and pay the costs, P. being always ready to hand over: (Gough v. Ety, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 359. V.C. M.)

SECURITY FOR COSTS—INTERPLEADER ISSUE—LEAVE TO SIGN JUDGMENT.—A sum of money had been paid into court to await the result of an interpleader issue; the execution creditor who was defendant in the issue lived abroad, and was ordered to provide security for costs, and for that purpose proceedings were stayed. About five months afterwards, as no security had been given, the court granted the claimant leave to sign judgment for the money in court, unless defendant found security in a fortnight: (Melin v. Dumont, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 366. C. P.)

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

Re AN ATTORNEY.

P. M. White applied to the court to restore to the roll of attorneys William Savage Poole, who was struck off the rolls in Nov. 1863, for having misappropriated sums amounting to upwards of 2000*l.*, which had been placed in his hands by Mr. John Howa, a client. The learned counsel stated that Mr. Poole, soon after he was struck off the rolls, became bankrupt, and after a full investigation he received an immediate discharge; and an application to Lord Chancellor Westbury to remove him from his office of coroner for one of the divisions of Warwick failed. Proceedings had been commenced by Mr. Howa in Chancery against the partners of Mr. Poole, his father and brother, and they had compromised the claim by a payment of 1500*l.* Ever since Nov. 1863, Mr. Poole had been managing clerk to an attorney, and this gentleman and fifteen other attorneys, and also seventeen laymen, made affidavits of Mr. Poole's good conduct since Nov. 1863, and sixty-six attorneys signed a memorial to the same effect. The learned counsel concluded by saying that he did not think he had ever seen stronger testimonials, and by submitting that under the circumstances his application should be granted.

Garth, Q. C. (with him Murray) appeared to show cause in the first instance on behalf of the Law Society.

WILLES, J. regretted that, after full consideration, he felt it impossible to accede to the application. Without observing upon the loose way in which testimonials to character were often given, and to the slight weight which was to be allowed to such testimonials as against proved facts in conduct, he must say that, assuming the testimonials to be true, they constituted the only affirmative facts in this case, which was clearly made out in favour of Mr. Poole. It did not appear that he had himself made any reparation to the injured person. A man in Mr. Poole's position was bound to resort to economy amounting to parsimony to scrape together money to repay what he had misappropriated. His income, it appeared, was 250*l.* a year, an income which did not show a state of destitution or entire inability to make efforts for restitution. It ought to be considered as a condition precedent to an application of this kind, that the attorney should have made full reparation if he could, or, at least, that he should have made earnest and sincere efforts to the best of his power for restitution. He could not but think that if the court were to accede to this application they would be perverting their duty, and acting in aid of evildoers to the discouragement of those that do well.

Application refused.

HEIRS-AT-LAW AND NEXT OF KIN.

FARRER (John), Pudsey, Hough Side, York, heir-at-law, to come in by June 18. June 28; V.C. S., at twelve.

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY.

LAST DAY OF PROOF.

ALLENBY (E.), Regent-street, and of Surbiton. June 18; Bell and Newton, solicitors, 21, Abchurch-lane. July 2; V.C. S., at twelve.
BLACKSHAW (Thomas) Marton Chester. May 27; W. Cooper, solicitor, Congleton. June 10; V.C. S., at twelve.
BRISTOWE (Simon), Canterbury-road, Brixton. May 22; B. W. Marslam, solicitor, 10, St. Swithin's-lane. June 1; V.C. J., at one.
BROWN (Fredk. J.), 47, Fenchurch-street, London. June 10; Messrs. Minett and Smith, solicitors, 3, New Broad-street. June 24; V.C. S., at twelve.
BROWNE (Lydia), 47, Fenchurch-street, London. June 10; Messrs. Minett and Smith, solicitors, 3, New Broad-street. June 24; V.C. S., at twelve.
BROWN (Sarah), 88, New Kent-road. May 24; Watson and Sons, solicitors, 12, Bouverie-street, E.C. June 3; V.C. S., at one.
BROWN (Tommy), 18, Nelson-square, Blackfriars-road. May 19; Messrs. Rennolls, solicitors, 1, Lincoln's-inn-fields. June 3; M. R., at eleven.
CHAMBERS (Edwd. L.), Fonthill, Torquay. May 29; E. J. Barker, solicitor, 2, Broad-street, Bristol. June 8; V.C. M., at twelve.
DUNFORD (Wm. G.), 39, Parliament-street, S.W. May 22; G. J. Durrant, solicitor, 23, Guilford-street, Bus-sell-square. May 29; V.C. M., at twelve.
EARL (Wm. S.), Southgate. June 8; O. V. Field, 1, Farnival's-inn. June 18; V.C. S., at one.
FINCH (Wm. C.), Fisherton Angor, Wilts. May 29; C. M. Whatman, solicitor, Salisbury. June 19; M. R., at eleven.
FRANKLIN (Elizabeth), 15, Colville-terrace East, Notting-hill. June 1; F. Mason, solicitor, 17, King-street, Cheapside. June 10; V.C. M., at twelve.
GARDNER (William), Baker's coffee-house, Change-alley, Cornhill. May 28; J. Biggsden, solicitor, 5, Walbrook. June 9; V.C. S., at twelve.
GREENING (Josh.), Sheffield. June 14; Gainsford and Bramley, solicitors, Sheffield. June 30; V.C. S., at twelve.
GOLDER (Mary), 7, Marine-terrace, Folkestone. June 7; E. Lettis, solicitors, 13, New-linn, Strand. June 14; V.C. J., at twelve.
HOBBS (Jesse), New Kent-road, Southwark. June 12; Davis, Son and Co., 17, Warwick-street, Regent-street. June 23; V.C. S., at twelve.
HUNT (J. J.), South Norwood, Croydon. June 12; Drummonds and Co., solicitors, Croydon. June 5; M. R., at twelve.
JOHN (Henry S.), 11, Neville-terrace, Brompton. May 22; C. Stevens, solicitor, 35, Bucklersbury. June 8; V.C. S., at twelve.
KING (William), Grecian Cottages, Crown-hill, Norwood. June 10; B. Raina, solicitor, 15, Fish-street-hill, E.C. June 15; V.C. J., at twelve.
LARKIN (Elizabeth), Gloucester Tavern, King-street, Greenwich. June 4; Miller and Stubbs, solicitors, 8, Eastcheap. June 14; V.C. M., at twelve.
LEES (Geo.), Ashton-under-Lyne. May 29; W. Orford, solicitor, 44, Brown-street, Manchester. June 16; V.C. J., at one.
LEES (Robert), Ashton-under-Lyne. May 29; W. Orford, solicitor, 44, Brown-street, Manchester. June 16; V.C. J., at one.
MAYNE (Charles O.), Manor-house, Great Stanmore. June 12; H. Webb, solicitor, 11, Argyll-street, Regent-street. June 10; V.C. S., at twelve.
MILNER (Frederick W.), Holstead, Essex. June 3; R. Southey, solicitor, 16, Ely-place, Holborn. June 17; M. R., at eleven.
NATHAN Lewis, 24, Mare-street, Hackney. June 12; M. K. Brand, solicitor, 3, Farnival's-inn. June 29; V.C. S., at twelve.
NORTHGATE (Henry), Eagle public-house, Camden Town. June 10; Nash, Ford and Co., solicitors, 2, Suffolk-lane, E.C. June 25; V.C. S., at twelve.
PAIN (Elizabeth), Deal, Kent. June 5; Mercer and Mercer, solicitors, 9, Minchance-lane. June 18; V.C. J., at twelve.
SCOTT (Edmund J.), Bucklersbury. May 30; John Combe, solicitor, 23, Bucklersbury. June 3; V.C. J., at one.
SEWELL (William), High-street, Portland Town. June 4; A. R. Cocker, solicitor, 26, Gower-street, Bedford-square. June 16; V.C. M., at twelve.

STAPLETON (Geo.), Whitefriars Wharf, London. May 24; Newton and Co., solicitors, 1, Wardrobe-place, Doctors' commons. June 12; V.C. S., at twelve.
WESTER (Chas. F.), 83, Princes-gardens, S.W. June 10; Young, Maples, and Co., solicitors, 6, Frederick-place, Old Jewry. June 19; V.C. S., at twelve.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. c. 35.

Last day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.

ALLEN (Wm.), Uppington, Salop. June 24; R. Paine, solicitor, Shrewsbury.
ANDREW (Hannah), Hendham-hall, Manchester. June 15; E. Andrew, accountant, 61, Princes-street, Manchester.
AUSTIN (Frederick L.), 28, Hyde-park-square. July 1; Currie and Williams, solicitors, 32, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
ATWOOD (Louisa), 63, Portland-road, Notting-hill. July 1; Simpson and Co., solicitors, 51, Grosvenor-street.
BACHS (John), Hagley, Worcester. May 25; Wm. Bachs, solicitor, High-street, West Bromwich.
BAKER (Thos.), Blackstone, Kidderminster. June 10; Saunders and Bradbury, solicitors, 41, Cherry-street, Birmingham.
BARBER (John), Ridgmont, Bedford. June 15; John Greene, solicitor, Ampthill, Beds.
BARNETT (Wm. E.), Newcastle-upon-Tyne. June 3; Griffith, Crighton, and Co., solicitors, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.
BELL (John), Scarborough. May 21; Messrs. Drawbridge and Howntree, solicitors, Scarborough.
BESCHOFF (Geo. S.), 4, Gloucester-terrace, Regent's-park, N.W. Aug. 1; North and Son, solicitors, 4, East Parade, Leeds.
BLUNDELL (Richard), Liverpool, late of Melbourne. Sept. 28; Hurry and Briggs, solicitors, 21, Queen-street, Melbourne, Victoria.
BROWN (Thomas), Eastwick-hall, Eastwick, Herts. June 18; J. Mote, solicitor, 1, Walbrook, E.C.
BROOKE (John B. J.), Hounslow, Middlesex. July 7; Bogy and Butt, solicitors, 1, Raymond-buildings.
CHAPMAN (Edward H.), 134, Lendenhall-street. June 12; Park and Nelson, solicitors, 11, Essex-street, Strand.
CLARKE (A. M.), 217, Essex-road, Islington. May 29; J. Selby, solicitor, 2, Fen-court, Fenchurch-street, E.C.
CLARK (Sarah), 9, Wellington-terrace, Liverpool-road, Holway. Feb. 24; Ellis and Co., solicitors, 16, Mark-lane, London, E.C.
COLTMAN (William), West Hartlepool, Durham. May 29; Turnbull and Bell, solicitors, Church-street, West Hartlepool.
ELLISON (Eliza), Moss Lee, Sharples, Lancaster. July 25; E. T. Whitaker, Duchy of Lancaster Office, London.
EVELYN (Francis), Corton, Hereford. June 15; Ford and Lloyd, 4, Bloomsbury-square.
GURNEY (John H.), Brixton-hill, Surrey. June 5; Pattison, Wigg, and Co., solicitors, 50, Lombard-street.
HARRINGTON (Katharine), 245, Brompton-road. June 20; A. Myers, solicitor, 15, Berners-street, Oxford-street.
HAYCOCK (Arthur), Durham, Essex. June 24; M. Shepherd, solicitor, 27, College-street, College-hill, London.
HOWE (John A.), One Swan-yard, Bishopgate-street. June 17; Sidney Smith, and Co., 1, Farnival's-inn, E.C.
HUGHES (Jubal), George-street, Aston, near Birmingham. Aug. 4; Ryland and Martineau, solicitors, 7, Cannon-street, Birmingham.
JACKSON (George), Tanton Hall, near Stokeley, Yorks. June 26; J. A. and T. Bowerby, solicitors, Stokeley.
JACKSON (Sarah), Clifton-villa, Longton-grove, Upper Wykeham. July 1; Upton, Johnson, and Co., solicitors, 8, Austinfriars, E.C.
JOYCE (Chas.), 31, Landedowne-crescent, Kensington-park. June 24; Wansley and Bowen, solicitors, 30, Molesworth-street, E.C.
KEAY (Thos.), Elmwood-lodge, Brixton-hill. July 4; W. Millman, solicitor, 8, Southampton-buildings.
LIARDET (Mrs. O. A.), Weston-super-Mare. June 15; R. S. Taylor and Sons, solicitors, 3, Field-court, Gray's-inn.
MORRIS (Mrs. A.), Brunswick-villa, Southport. June 2; R. Ashton, solicitor, King-street, Wigan.
NEIGHBOUR (William), Horspath, Oxford. July 1; T. and G. Mallan, solicitor, 125, High-street, Oxford.
O'BRIEN (William), 116, Belvidere-street, St. James's Wood. June 1; R. S. Taylor and Sons, solicitors, 3, Field-court, Gray's-inn.
PAGE (Chas.), Old Moor Farm, Southminster, Essex. June 23; E. Bromley, solicitor, 43, Bedford-row, W.C.
POLYBLAKE (Geo.), 198, St. John-street-road, Clerkenwell. June 15; Lewis and Sons, 7, Wilmingdon-square, Clerkenwell.
REED (Geo.), High Hartgate, York. July 12; T. L. Reed, solicitor, Donham-mare, York.
SANDRACE (Joseph), Deansgate, Manchester. July 8; Beevor, Darwell, and Co., solicitors, 8, John Dalton-street, Manchester.
SARGANT (Jane A.), Ely Lodge, Lordship-road, Stoke Newington. Aug. 2; W. B. Brook, solicitor, 1, New-linn, Strand.
SELWIN (Sir John T.), Down-hall, Harlow, Essex. June 5; B. Petersen, Snow and Co., solicitors, 49, Chancery-lane.
SMITH (Benjamin), 3, Wellington-terrace, St. John's-wood. July 1; Brooks and Co., solicitors, 7, Goddard-street, Doctors' commons.
TENNENT (Sir James E., Bart.), 68, Warwick-square, and Fernagh, Ireland. June 27; Pritchard and Enfield, solicitors, Wellington-chambers, Bell-yard, Doctors' commons.
TICKETT (Lucretia), 35, Osnaburgh-street, Regent's-park. July 11; Fielder and Sumner, solicitors, 14, Goddard-street, Doctors' commons.
WESTCAR (Henry E.), Herne-park, Kent. Aug. 10; B. Gwynne and Co., solicitors, 100, Oxford-street.
WIDDICOMBE (Henry), Doddington-grove, Kesteven. June 12; H. J. Semple, solicitor, 21, Duke-street, Manchester-square.
WILSON (John S.), Edthorpe, Lund, York. July 1; Ford and Tongue, solicitors, Great Driffield.
WITHERS (Mary), 62, St. Paul's-street, New North-Islington. June 10; Baddeley and Sons, solicitors, 1, Leman-street, Goodman's Fields.
WYNDHAM (Alexander W.), Dinton, Wilts. June 1; De ville, Lawrence, and Co., solicitors, 6, New-square.

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDEND IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

[Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each, in the months, unless other claimants sooner appear.]

GRIFFITHS Elizabeth, Portland-street, Kingsdown. B. dividend on 10*l.* Consolidated 3 per Cent. Claimant. W. Collins attorney for James G. Middlesex.
SMITH Henry, Tottenham, Middlesex. Dividend on Reduced 3 per Cent. Claimant. H. Smith.
WATSON Jane Caroline G., Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Dividend on 10*l.* Consolidated 3 per Cent. Annuitant. Claimant. G. Watson.

NEW TAXING MASTER.—It is understood that Mr. Mills, the Chancery taxing master, has signed, and it is said that Mr. Edward Bloor is to have the appointment, which circumstance would necessitate a vacancy among the clerks at Vice-Chancellor James's chambers.

MAGISTRATE AND PARISH LAWYER.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

BASTARDY—PRACTICE—CORROBORATION.—Sect. 2 of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, enacts that a summons for an order of affiliation is to be had on application "to any one justice of the peace acting for the petty sessional division of the county, or for the city, borough, or place in which she shall reside. A woman who has no settled place of residence may apply to the justices of the division in which for the time being she happens to be. It was also held, that if there be any corroboration whatever of the woman's testimony, the effect of it is for the justices alone, and this court will not interfere by their decision upon it: (Lawrence v. Ingmire, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 391. Q. B.)

APPEAL—COSTS—ORDER BAD IN PART.—The quarter sessions reversed a refusal by justices in petty sessions to grant an alehouse licence, and further ordered the justices to pay the appellant 35*l.* for his costs. The part of the order awarding costs was held to be bad, inasmuch as it did not follow the directions as to costs of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 27, and 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 5, which require the costs to be paid in the first instance to the clerk of the peace: (Reg. v. Peek, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 393. Q. B.)

MALICIOUSLY WOUNDING.—A verdict for a common assault may be given upon an indictment for maliciously wounding under sect. 20 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100: (Reg. v. Canwell, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 402. C. Cas. R.)

PERJURY—MATERIALITY.—B. was indicted for perjury on an affidavit used by him in the taxation of costs. The signature to the affidavit was proved to be in his handwriting, but there was no evidence that he was the person who swore to the truth of the affidavit. The defendant in the action swore that the affidavit was used before the taxing master when B. was present, and it was then publicly said to be B.'s affidavit. The defendant was then indicted for perjury committed on B.'s trial, and the indictment alleged that it was a material question on such trial whether B. was so present before the taxing master, and whether the affidavit was then used in B.'s presence, and whether it was then stated publicly that the affidavit was B.'s. These questions were held to be material on the trial of B.: (Reg. v. Alsop, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 403. C. Cas. R.)

PENAL SERVITUDE.—A return has been made of the number of previous convictions recorded against persons now undergoing sentences of penal servitude. From the statistics supplied on the subject it appears there are 6920 male convicts at present undergoing terms of penal servitude in convict prisons, for terms varying from five years to the duration of life. Of these 1582 had not been previously convicted; against the others from one to five and upwards of previous convictions had been recorded.

CAMBRIDGE.—At a meeting of the Cambridge town council an election to the office of clerk of the peace for the borough, vacant by the resignation of Mr. William Cockerell, took place. There were three candidates—Mr. John William Cooper, LL.M., a barrister practising at Cambridge; Mr. Henry French, and Mr. George William Fitch, solicitor. The votes of the council were taken twice, it being necessary that the person elected should have a majority of votes of the councillors present. At the first scrutiny the votes were, for Mr. Cooper, 14; Mr. French, 10; and Mr. Fitch, 9. Upon the second scrutiny 20 voted for Mr. French, and 15 for Mr. Cooper, and the former gentleman was declared duly elected.

THE CASE OF MADAME RACHEL.—It is understood that an application will be made to the Home Secretary for a commutation of the sentence of five years' penal servitude passed on Madame Rachel, now that the Court of Queen's Bench has given judgment in favour of the Crown, in the trial of error obtained on her behalf. Under the Bail in Error Act, by virtue of which the defendant was some time at liberty, it is provided by the 3rd section (8 & 9 Vict. c. 68) that the time a defendant is at large on bail shall be added to the imprisonment on the court affirming the judgment. Madame Rachel will return to Millbank in pursuance of the judgment of the court.

A SUCCESS UNPRECEDENTED.—MARAVILLA COCOA IS PERFECT.—The Globe says "Taylor Brothers' Maravilla Cocoa has achieved a thorough success, and supersedes every other cocoa in the market. For homoeopaths and invalids we could not recommend a more agreeable or valuable beverage." Sold in packets only, by all Grocers.—[ADVT.]

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

NUISANCE—ERECTION OF A CIRCUS.—A bill was filed to restrain the erection of an intended circus on an unoccupied piece of ground at the back of the plaintiff's house, and at a distance of 85 yards therefrom, and to restrain the performances. An interlocutory injunction was granted, and the circus, the erection of which had been commenced, was removed. On the hearing of the cause, Malins, V.C., made the injunction perpetual. On appeal, the bill was dismissed, on the grounds that neither the allegations in the bill, nor the evidence in the cause, made out a case of nuisance as likely to arise from the noise of the performances, and that the evidence failed also to prove any nuisance, such as this court would restrain, as likely to result from the assembly of disorderly crowds. After the interlocutory injunction had been granted in the first suit, the proprietor proceeded to erect the circus on an open piece of ground in front of the plaintiff's house, and at a distance of 115 yards therefrom, and commenced the performances in the circus. The plaintiff thereupon filed another bill to restrain the performances, and an interlocutory injunction was granted by Malins, V.C., and the circus was removed. Afterwards Lord Justice Lord Cairns dissolved the injunction on the ground of the insufficiency of the plaintiff's evidence. Further evidence having been adduced, the cause came to a hearing, when Malins, V.C., granted a perpetual injunction. On appeal, this decision was affirmed, on the ground that the evidence proved that the noise of the performances in the circus caused to the plaintiff an amount of nuisance such as to interfere with the ordinary comfort of his dwelling. The evidence in this suit also was held insufficient to establish a nuisance caused by the assembling of disorderly crowds, such as this court would interfere to restrain. Distinction between crowds assembling to see an out-door entertainment, and crowds going to and from the performances in a covered building such as a circus. Remarks upon Walker v. Brewster, L. Rep. 5 Eq. 25; 17 L. T. Rep. N. S. 135. Since the passing of Sir John Rolt's Act, it has become the duty of the Court of Chancery to try the question of nuisance itself, and it ought not to call for the assistance of a jury in determining that question, unless it cannot come to a satisfactory conclusion upon the evidence, and unless it considers that the verdict of a jury is essential to the ends of justice: (Inchbald v. Robinson, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 259. L. JJ.)

POWER OF APPOINTMENT—DEFECTIVE EXECUTION.—Land was settled to such uses as B. should by deed appoint, and in default of such appointment, to the use of C. and the heirs of his body. A railway company required those lands, and there was an agreement of reference as to the price; the award was made, and the company entered into possession, but B. died before he had executed the conveyance, having by will given the lands in question to his wife, subject to the equities affecting the same. The agreement with the company was held to be such a defective execution of the power as equity would assist, and that the purchase-money would, therefore, form part of the personal estate: (Re Dykes Trust, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 292. M. R.)

WILL—DUPLICATE—REVOCATION.—B. executed a will in duplicate, retaining one copy, and giving the other to the keeping of C. Subsequently she revoked the copy she had kept by tearing off the signature. The court refused probate of the other: (Re Slade, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 330. Prob.)

MORTGAGE—SALE BY MORTGAGEE—NEGLIGENCE.—A mortgagee in possession sold without taking due care to ascertain the value of the property, and parted with it at a loss. He was held to be liable to make good the difference between the price obtained for it and that which it would have produced had it been sold under a decree of the court: (Wolff v. Vanderzee, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 353. V.C. S.)

INFANTS' SETTLEMENT ACT—ADMINISTRATION.—The Infants' Settlement Act (18 & 19 Vict. c. 43) gives the court no power to compel an infant married woman to execute a settlement on her children, against her will, although circumstances may seem to render it desirable, the statute being simply enabling: (Re Potter, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 355. V.C. M.)

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW
JOURNAL.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

WINDING-UP—COSTS—PRACTICE.—The court having given a general leave to a claimant against a company in process of winding-up to bring such action or actions as he should be advised, the claimant proceeded to a trial at law to have the amount of damages assessed which he had sustained by the nonperformance of a contract within the time specified therein, and not completed at the time of the order for winding-up. The damages were assessed at a certain sum, which carried the costs of the action. The claimant applied in chambers that the amount of his costs as taxed might be paid to his solicitors in full. The official liquidator objected that the claimant was only entitled to a dividend upon the amount of his costs, in addition to the amount of damages as assessed. Held, that the claimant was entitled to be paid his costs in full, as well as the costs of establishing his original claim. Smith's case, L. Rep. 3 Ch. App. 125, followed: (Re Trent, &c., Ship-building Company, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 301. V.C. J.)

SALE AND PURCHASE OF SHARES—USAGE OF STOCK EXCHANGE.—Plaintiffs instructed their brokers to sell forty shares in a joint-stock company, and those shares were sold accordingly by them to M., another broker. M. afterwards sold them again on the Stock Exchange, and, in accordance with the practice of that body, the defendant was, a few days afterwards, named to the plaintiffs as the purchaser, the usage being that on the arrival of a certain day, termed "the name day," the name of the last purchaser is given to the broker of the original vendor, and inserted in the transfer-deed. A deed of transfer was then prepared and executed by the plaintiffs, and, with the share certificates, sent to the defendant. The company was shortly afterwards wound-up. Defendant never executed the transfer, or registered himself as a shareholder, and plaintiffs had been compelled to pay two calls on the shares, one of the calls being made on the day on which the defendant, in ignorance of the fact, instructed his broker to buy. The bill was filed for specific performance of the contract, as stated in the deed of transfer: Held (affirming the decree of the Master of the Rolls), that there was a contract between the plaintiffs and the defendant entitling the plaintiffs to indemnity by the defendant: (Hawkins v. Maltby, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 335. L. C.)

CONTRIBUTORY—APPLICATION FOR SHARES—UNCONDITIONAL ALLOTMENT.—B. applied for shares, and paid the required deposit, and they were allotted without condition or qualification. But the letter announcing the allotment stated that the further amount required on allotment must be paid on or before the 18th (ten days after the date of the letter). This was held not to introduce a new firm into the contract, so as to entitle B. to repudiate his shares: (Peck's case, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 340. L. JJ.)

CONTRIBUTORY—NOTICE OF ALLOTMENT.—The absence of sufficient notice of allotment of the shares applied for is ground for removing the name from the list of contributories, and the burden of proof of notice is on the liquidator: (De Rosaz's case, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 348. M. R.)

SHARES—CONTRACT COMPANY—BANKRUPTCY.—Under a contract with the promoters of a company, N. D. was entitled to 2000 paid-up shares, and by deed assigned for value 1140 of them to G. D. his son, of which no notice appeared to have been given to the company. The company was ordered to be wound-up, no allotment taking place, and there being no register of shareholders. N. D. became bankrupt, and his assignees claimed 340 of the 1140 shares, and G. D. admitted that claim, and in the winding-up both G. D. and the assignees claimed the other 800, G. D. as assignee for value, and the assignees as being in the order and disposition of the bankrupt at the time of his bankruptcy: Held, that the assignees were not entitled: (Re London India Rubber Company, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 355. V.C. M.)

RAILWAY ABANDONMENT ACTS—PRACTICE.—A railway company who had never purchased land or constructed the railway, but had obtained the covenant of abandonment from the Board of Trade, is within the provisions of the Companies Act 1862, by reference to the Railway Abandonment Acts: (Re Skipton, &c., Railway, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 359. V.C. M.)

MARITIME LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

COLLISION—LIGHTS—BRITISH AND AMERICAN VESSELS—LAW OF THE SEA.—An American ship was sunk in a collision at sea with a British steamer, and it appeared that the ship had not the regulation lights set which are required by the British and American statute alike, but had one which hung on her anchor-stock on her starboard bow; that although she had made several changes of her course, she made none after her light was seen from the steamer, but her course was crossing that of the steamer; that the steamer, seeing the single white light, supposed it to be the masthead light of a steamer at a much greater distance than the ship actually was, and accordingly ported her helm, and the vessels came in collision: Held, that, by the general laws of navigation, a steamer which meets a sailing vessel is required to exercise necessary precaution to avoid a collision, and if she does not she is prima facie in fault. That where a British ship sues an American ship in the British Court of Admiralty, that court would not apply British statute law to the case unless required by such statute to do so; nor would it apply the statute laws of the two countries, even when shown to be alike, unless required by British statute law to do so. That, although that court would, under the present British statute, apply to this case the rules adopted by Great Britain and the United States as to lights and navigation, yet as there is no provision in the statute of the United States requiring the courts of the United States to apply those statutes to cases before them, this case must be governed by the rules of the sea which prevailed at the time and place of the collision. That inasmuch as nearly all the nations whose ships usually navigate the waters where this collision took place have adopted similar rules in reference to lights and navigation, those rules have become the law of the sea, and are to be enforced by the Courts of Admiralty as such, and not as municipal or statute laws. That the ship, in accordance with those rules, had no right to carry the single white light which she did, and was bound to exhibit coloured side lights, which she did not. That the steamer had the right to infer from the exhibition of the white light that the approaching vessel was also a steamer, and that she was not in fault for acting accordingly. That the ship was in fault, and her libel must be dismissed: (The Steamer Scotia, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 375.)

INSURANCE ON PROFITS—WITHOUT BENEFIT OF SALVAGE.—The defendant underwrote a policy of insurance effected by the plaintiff for a certain sum. The policy was expressed to be upon profits valued at a larger amount than the insurance upon a cargo of timber per the British ship Lissie Jones, from Quebec to Newry. The defendant wrote in the margin the following words, without instructions from the plaintiff, although the latter made no objection when he afterwards saw them: "This policy is warranted free from average, being against total loss only, and without benefit of salvage." The ship was lost, but the defendant denied his liability on the ground that the policy was null and void under 19 Geo. 2, c. 37, s. 1: Held, that, notwithstanding the fraud of the defendant, this was a valid defence to an action on the policy. De Mattos v. Norak, L. Rep. 3 Ex. 185; 18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 797, followed and confirmed: (Mortimer v. Broadwood, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 398. C. P.)

MERCANTILE LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

LODGMET OF TITLE-DEEDS.—BANKER'S LIEN.—A banker has a general lien upon title-deeds lodged with him to secure overdrafts. When bills indorsed to a bank are dishonoured by the acceptors, and not paid by the customer of the bank who indorsed them, they are treated as overdrafts when charged to the account of the customer: (Re Joseph Williams, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 282. Miller, J. Ireland.)

BILLS OF EXCHANGE—COLLATERAL SECURITIES—LIEN.—The rule laid down in Ex parte Waring (19 Ves. 345) is restricted to cases in which securities have been deposited to meet a specific debt or to secure a specific bill, and does not extend to cases where the deposit has been made to secure moneys advanced on a current account: (Ex parte Overend and Co., 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 296. M. R.)

BANKING ACCOUNT—COMMISSION—COMPOUND INTEREST.—The right to charge compound interest in a banking account is entirely incidental to the relation of banker and customer, and ceases with the death of the customer: (Williamson v. Williamson, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 389. V. C. J.)

PLEA TO A BILL OF EXCHANGE—AGREEMENT NOT ALLEGED TO BE IN WRITING.—To an action by drawer against acceptor of a bill of exchange defendant pleaded that he "accepted the said bill upon a certain condition agreed upon between the plaintiff and defendant as part of the consideration for the said bill, viz., that the plaintiff should renew the said bill for a further term" . . . "if when the said bill became due the defendant should not have received payment" of certain money and compensation due to him. The plea averred that "the defendant accepted and delivered to the plaintiff, and the plaintiff received and always held the said bill upon and subject to the said condition; and at the time when the said bill became due, and at the time when the action was brought, the defendant had not received the said money and compensation, of all which the plaintiff had notice; and the defendant did all things necessary to entitle him to have the said bill renewed according to the said agreement, yet the plaintiff did not renew the said bill, but wholly refused so to do." Held, upon demurrer, that the agreement mentioned in the plea, if in writing, would be a sufficient answer to the action, and that it was not necessary that the plea should allege that it was a written agreement; the plea was therefore good: (Young v. Austen, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 396. C. P.)

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.

ANSWERS TO THE FINAL EXAMINATION QUESTIONS.

EASTER TERM 1869.—FIRST DAY.

I. PRELIMINARY.

Questions 1 to 5 inclusive.

II. COMMON AND STATUTE LAW, AND PRACTICE OF THE COURTS. (a)

6. Warranty.—No; not even pro tanto. His remedy is by cross action. Had the action been, not on the security, but upon the price of the goods, the unsoundness might have been given in evidence in reduction of damages: (Chit. Cont. 418, 7th edit.)

7. Ejectment.—The plaintiff must have a legal title, and he must recover by the strength of his own title and according to the right which he has. Before ejectment can be brought against a yearly tenant six months' notice must be given, to expire at the end of the current year's tenancy; against a tenant at will, however, a simple demand of possession will found a right of action: (Broom's Com. 753 et seq., 3rd edit.)

8. Fixtures—Removal.—To constitute such an annexation as will preclude a removal by the tenant, the article must be fixed in the ground, or to some substance previously a part of the freehold; for otherwise it does not cease to be a chattel and removable: (Chit. Cont. 326, 7th edit.; Elwes v. Maw, Sm. L. C. and notes, vol. 2.) As between landlord and tenant, the latter may take away such fixtures as he has himself put up, either for the purposes of trade, ornament, or furniture of his house, if thereby the freehold be not materially damaged; but such fixtures must be removed either during the continuance of his term or at the end of it; for he cannot remove them after he has quitted the premises: (Aroh. L. and T. 352, 2nd edit.; Digest, 26, 5th edit.) By the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 25, s. 3, farming fixtures (erected at the tenant's own cost and with the landlord's consent, and not in pursuance of some obligation) may be removed by the tenant making good any injury to the premises, if on a month's previous notice in writing be given to the landlord he does not elect to purchase the same: (Digest, 26, 5th edit.)

9. County Courts—Actions of tort.—By this Act the defendant may make an affidavit that the plaintiff has no visible means of paying the costs if he (the defendant) should obtain a verdict, and a judge of the court in which the action is brought may order that unless the plaintiff give security for costs (to be approved by a master), or satisfy the judge that he has a cause of action fit to be prosecuted in the Superior Court, all proceedings be stayed; or may remit the cause to a County Court for trial. The cause will then be heard in the County Court, and the costs of action subsequent to the order will be according to the scale allowed in the County Courts: (Sect. 10.)

10. Costs.—Costs in the cause are those which are properly incurred, and which are awarded to the successful litigant in the cause. Costs in any event are costs given on some interlocutory application to which the party is entitled whatever may be the result of the cause: (Pat. & Mac. Pr. 470, &c.)

11. County Courts—Title.—The County Courts have now a jurisdiction in ejectment where neither the value of the property nor the rent exceeds 20l. per annum; and in actions to determine the title to hereditaments, corporeal or incorporeal, to the same amount: (Digest, 123, 5th edit.)

12. Costs.—The plaintiff gets the costs up to instructions for plea, and the defendant the subsequent costs: (Digest, 89, 5th edit.)

13. Irregularity.—The application must be made within a reasonable time, and without having taken a fresh step with a knowledge of the irregularity: (Digest 64, 5th edit.)

14. Set-off.—The following are the requisites of a set-off: The plaintiff's claim and the subject of the set-off must be mutual debts, and not claims merely sounding in damages. The debt set-off must be a legal and not a mere equitable debt, nor must it be statute barred. It must also be due at the commencement of the action: (2 Geo. 2, c. 23; 8 Geo. 2, c. 24; Aroh. Nisi Prius, 122-124; Digest, 42, 5th edit.)

15. Simple contract.—A simple contract is an agreement either in writing not under seal or verbal to do or not to do some act. Irrespective of statute law, it requires (1) the mutual assent of two or more persons able to contract; (2) a valuable consideration which must not be illegal or immoral; (3) something to be done or omitted which is the subject of the contract: (2 Steph. Com. 54, &c., 4th edit.; Chit. Cont. 8, 7th edit.; Digest 3, 4th edit.)

16. Contribution.—Yes, in the action upon a promissory note; for the law allows contribution between defendants, ex contractu (unless, indeed, the contract be made with them as partners in trade, for then the remedy is only in equity). But as to the action of trespass X. will be unable to compel Y. and Z. to contribute, unless X. was not aware that the trespass was illegal, or if its nature was doubtful, for as a general rule there is no contribution between wrongdoers: (See Merryweather v. Nixon, 2 Sm. L. C. 336; and notes to Lampleigh v. Braithwaite, 1 Sm. L. C. 71; Digest 42, 5th edit.)

17. Interest.—The rule is that the law does not imply a contract by the debtor to pay interest, unless such be the usage of trade. To this rule, however, bills of exchange, promissory notes, and overdue money bonds, form an exception; and now, by the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28, a current rate of interest upon all debts or sums certain, may be allowed by a jury to a creditor, from the time such debts or sums certain were to be paid, if payable by a written instrument at a certain and specified time, but if not so payable, then from the time a written demand for payment is made, and notice given that interest will be claimed from them until payment: (See Chit. Cont. 580, 583, 7th edit.)

18. Attachment of debts.—A judge may, upon the ex parte application of the judgment-creditor, upon affidavit by himself or his attorney, stating that judgment has been obtained and is still unsatisfied, and to what amount, and that any other person (called the garnishee) is indebted to the judgment-debtor, and is within the jurisdiction, order that all debts owing from such third person to the judgment-debtor be attached to answer the judgment-debt. And the garnishee may be ordered to appear and show cause why he should not pay the amount due from him to the judgment-debtor in satisfaction of the judgment. If the garnishee does not pay the amount, or dispute the debt, the judge may order execution to issue. If the garnishee disputes his liability, the judge orders a writ to issue to try the point: (See 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, ss. 66, 67; Digest 107, 5th edit.)

19. Distress.—The rent must be certain or capable of being reduced to a certainty, and overdue: (Digest 25, 5th edit.)

20. Clear days.—They are reckoned exclusively of the first day and inclusively of the last, unless the last falls on Sunday, Christmas Day, Good Friday, or day appointed for a public fast or thanksgiving, in which case the time is reckoned exclusive of that day also: (Digest 67, 5th edit.)

III. CONVEYANCING.

21. Charity.—Pure personality may be bequeathed, if the land is already dedicated; but not money out on mortgage of real estate: (Digest 255, 5th edit.)

22. Entail.—As A. takes an estate tail under the rule in Shelley's case, he may execute a disentailing assurance, and vest the estate in the purchaser: (Digest 138, 147, 250, 5th edit.)

23. Amalgamation.—The provisions of the Mortmain Act must be complied with: (See Digest 254, 5th edit.)

24. Purchase and descent.—A. and B. take by purchase, C., no doubt, takes by descent (see

(a) The questions are given ante, p. 14.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106), still a tenant in tail is said to claim per formam doni.

25. Legal and equitable estate.—The better opinion is, that they are in B. and his heirs: (See fully Digest 197, 5th edit.)

26. Mortgage.—The heir-at-law of A. and his legal personal representatives must join in a reconveyance. The heir-at-law grants the legal estate, and personal representatives ratify the grant and give receipts for the money: (Digest 186, 5th edit.)

27. Husband and wife.—During coverture the husband has a freehold interest in the lands, which gives him a right to receive the rents and profits and to make leases thereof for twenty-one years; but, subject to these rights, he cannot convey or charge the lands for a longer period than while his own interest continues. If the issue are capable of inheriting as next heirs of the wife and he survives, he becomes tenant by the curtesy: (2 Steph. Com. 278, &c., 5th edit.; Digest 154, 4th edit.)

28. Descent.—D. first, because B. was not the root of descent; and secondly, because males are preferred to females: (Digest 261, 5th edit.)

29. Descent.—The lands of A. will go to the brother of his mother, for here A. took the lands ex parte maternâ, and consequently relations on the father's side cannot inherit, the descent never having been broken. The lands of B. will, however, go to the brother of the father, for the will of the mother broke the line of descent and made B. the purchaser and root of descent; and the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 7, enacts that the paternal line of the ancestors is to be preferred to the maternal: (1 Steph. Com. 416, 432, 433, 5th edit.; Digest 262, 5th edit.)

30. Lapse.—A legacy to the son will not lapse but he will be paid to his next of kin, unless he leaves a will disposing of the legacy thereby. The legacy to the nephew will lapse and fall into the residue if one, if none it will go to the testator's next of kin: (1 Vict. c. 26, s. 33; Hayes & Jarm. Conc. Wills 73, 105, 6th edit.; Digest 247, 5th edit.)

31. Sale of settled estates.—Yes; A. may apply by petition to the Court of Chancery for an order for a sale of such estates. The tenant in tail being under age a guardian must be appointed to consent, which is done by summons supported by affidavit, showing (1) the age of the infant, (2) whether he has a parent or guardian, (3) where he resides and by whom maintained, (4) in what way the guardian is connected with the infant and why proposed and how qualified, (5) that the guardian has no adverse interest and (6) consents to act; also the consent of all persons having any estate or interest under the settlement prior to the estate tail, whether as trustees for unborn persons or in their own right: (See 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120; Judges' Reg. Aug. 1857; Digest 166, 368, 4th edit.)

32. Mortgage debt.—The heir-at-law must now, by force of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 113, take the lands subject to the mortgage: (Digest 187, 5th edit.)

33. Devise.—Joint tenancy.—A devise does not operate as a severance of a joint tenancy therefore E. takes nothing. The devisee F., however, will take under the devise to him as a tenant in common may devise his undivided interest: (Digest 242, 5th edit.)

34. Contingent remainder.—He may do so; there is no breach of the rule against perpetuities here. Had A. been unborn the limitation would have been bad, or if there had been a limitation superadded to that of the unborn son: (See Will. R. P. 253, 254, 7th edit.; Digest 234, 5th edit.)

35. Executory interest.—B. may sell and convey his executory interest in the land to a purchaser by deed under the authority of the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 6: (Digest 220, 5th edit.)

COUNTY COURTS.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

Costs.—COUNTY COURTS ACT 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 142)—SLANDER.—SUFFICIENT REASON FOR BRINGING ACTION IN SUPERIOR COURT.—RECORD.—The plaintiff in an action for slander imputing a felony recovered upon a writ of inquiry 5*l.* damages. The under-sheriff before whom the writ was executed did not certify for costs, being of opinion that he had no power to do so. The plaintiff applied to the court for his costs under the 5th section of the County Courts Act 1867, and obtained a rule nisi. Neither the rule itself nor the affidavits upon which it was granted referred to the record, nor the nature of the cause of action, nor was the record itself in court. Held, first, that the court might inform itself of the cause of action by reference to the record in the same manner as in the case of a motion for a new trial or in arrest of judgment; and, secondly, the action appearing to be one of slander of a serious character for which the jury had given more than nominal damages, and such action not being within the jurisdiction of the County Court, there was prima facie sufficient reason for bringing the action in the Superior Court, and the plaintiff ought therefore to have his costs: The fifth section of the County Courts Act 1867 applies to actions of slander, but semble that prima facie, and in the absence of reason shown to the contrary, it is a sufficient reason for allowing plaintiff the costs, that the action could not have been brought in the County Court: (Craven v. Smith, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 400. Ex.)

CHERTSEY COUNTY COURT.

Tuesday, April 27.

(Before H. J. STONOR, Esq., Judge.)

BENHAM v. WELLS.

Common land.—The right of lord of manor to make grants.

This case involved the rights of the lord of the manor, under certain restrictions, to make grants of common land for purposes of inclosure.

G. White appeared for the plaintiff.

R. Cecil Austin appeared for the defendants.

His HONOUR said: This is an action in which the plaintiff sues the defendants, George Wells and Philip Wells, for damages in respect of two several trespasses upon a close which the plaintiff claims under a grant of the lord of the manor of Chobham. The one trespass is the entering and passing over the said close in the exercise of an alleged right of way. The other is the destruction of the whole of the fence in vindication of alleged commonable rights of pasture and herbage. At first both trespasses were admitted by counsel on the part of the defendants, but subsequently such admission was withdrawn by the defendant George Wells as to the second trespass, and conflicting evidence was adduced as to his participation therein. I may as well say at once that, upon such evidence I am of opinion that he did not commit or participate in the trespass in question, but expressly guarded himself from doing so. For obvious reasons it will be most convenient for me to consider the two alleged trespasses separately, and I will commence with the trespass admitted by both the defendants in respect of the alleged right of way. Accurate maps have been laid before me, and I have also had the advantage of a view of the locality, which is situate on the extensive common of Chobham. The defendants both possess or occupy certain tenements on the common, the one belonging to the defendant George Wells being adjacent, and the other belonging to the defendant Philip Wells, and used as a shop, being a little removed from the high road leading from Chobham to Chertsey. Nearly opposite the first is a public highway from Little Heath opening into the road just mentioned. From this point, and from the defendant George Wells's house to the defendant Philip Wells's house, and also to a road opening on the common upon which is built a public place of worship, and to divers other ways or tracks leading to the high road to Windsor and Egham, before it branches off to these towns respectively, is a pathway or track, which the defendants claim as a public right of way over what was formerly the waste, but is now an inclosure made by the plaintiff under an authority of a grant from the lord of the manor. In support of the right of way the defendants adduced the evidence of the defendants themselves and seven other witnesses who clearly established a right of way for upwards of forty years on the land in question, which was used not only by foot passengers but also by carts, and especially by carts proceeding to the shop of the defendant Philip Wells, loaded with corn. One witness, William Bullen, deposed to having mended the road in dispute with sods and turf, by order of the waywardens or overseers. On the other side, the plaintiff and six witnesses, including Mr. Drewitt, land steward to the lord of the manor (the Earl of Onslow), deposed that they never knew of any road or way where one is now claimed, but only tracks there, and that in fact there was another road leading to the defendant, Philip Wells's, house a little lower down, leading to the chapel and the other ways or tracks, and which had always been a good road; some of these witnesses, however, on cross-examination, admitted that they had seen carts and horses going up this path in good weather, and more frequently going down it, that it was constantly used by foot passengers, that the track road was sometimes repaired by filling up the ruts with turf, as deposed by William Bullen, and that the other road referred to was itself also formerly little more than a track, as indeed were probably most of the roads over the common. Upon the whole I find that there is, and has been for forty years, a public right of way, as claimed by the defendants, and that the same must be deemed absolute and indefeasible under the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 2, and that, therefore, it rests upon the plaintiff to show that the defendants are deprived of this right by virtue of the grant to the plaintiff of the land in question by the lord of the manor. Now, without going at present into the validity of that grant in passing the estate conveyed by it, and barring all commonable rights exercisable over the waste as such, it appears to me quite clear that such grant could not possibly bar or affect a public or private right of way which is a common law right, exercisable in derogation of, and not in conjunction with, the rights of the lord over the waste as commonable rights are, and I am therefore of opinion that as to this first alleged trespass, there must be a verdict for the defendants, who have made out their justification. The second alleged trespass, however, raises a question of considerably more difficulty, viz., the validity of the grant to the plaintiff by the lord of the manor, as to the estate conveyed by it, and in barring the commonable rights. In the present case it is admitted that the tenants of the manor, both copyholders and freeholders, are entitled to common of pasture and turbary, and therefore that the lord cannot inclose under the Statutes of Merton and Westminster, which are in affirmance of the common law, and apply only to common of pasture (2 Inst. 87 and 474; Grant v. Gunner, 1 Taunt. 435), but must prove a valid custom of the manor enabling him to make such grants. The plaintiff asserts that a custom does exist in the manor of Chobham for the lord, with the consent of the homage, to grant small portions of the waste, leaving sufficient pasture and turbary. The case of Arlett v. Ellis, 7 B. & C. 346, is an authority for the validity of such a custom if it is proved, and I shall presently consider whether it is proved in the present case. But I must notice here an objection taken by Mr. Austin, the able counsel for the defendant, that by the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 79, s. 1, it is provided that "no land shall be inclosed without the authority of Parliament in each particular case." Mr. Austin quoted this provision from the well-known treatise on the Inclosure Acts, by the late lamented Wingrove Cooke, 4th edit., p. 163, where undoubtedly the section is so stated, but inaccurately, as on referring to the Act itself I found the provision in question was qualified and extended only to inclosures "under the General Inclosure Acts," and therefore does not affect the present case, where the inclosure is under special custom, nor would it affect inclosures, or, as they are usually termed, approvals, under the statutes of Merton and Westminster. It remains for me, therefore, only to consider whether the existence of the custom in question is proved. The evidence on this point consists of the court rolls, and of the oral testimony of witnesses as to the acquiescence of all parties interested in numerous grants made in pursuance of this custom for nearly thirty years, commencing in the year 1841. Previously to the last mentioned there is one, and only one, entry of a grant of this kind on the court rolls, viz., of the 25th Oct. 1672, 24 Charles II., and which has been translated as follows: "At this court the lord of the manor aforesaid, with the consent of the homage and divers other tenants of the manor aforesaid, and in consideration that William Younge hath laid out divers sums of money in defence of the title to the waste of the manor aforesaid, hath granted to the aforesaid William Younge two acres of the waste aforesaid lying in a certain place there, called South Moor: To have and to hold to the aforesaid William Younge and his heirs for ever by copy of court roll at the will of the lord according to the custom of the manor aforesaid by the yearly rent of 2*l.* fine certain 2*s.* 6*d.*, and heriot certain 2*s.* 6*d.* on the death and surrender of every tenant thereof, and other services as other tenants by copy of court roll of the manor aforesaid of right accustomed; and he gives to the lord now for a fine for such estate so to be had thereon nothing, because he hath granted the aforesaid two acres of his special favour, and so is admitted tenant thereof and hath seisin by the rod and did fealty to the lord." The rolls in this manor only commence ten years previously to the grant, viz., on the 21st Oct. 1662, and the earlier court rolls were probably lost during the disturbances in the time of Charles I. and the Commonwealth. They continue from 1662 till the 21st Nov. 1728, 2nd George II., and then cease till the 12th Oct. 1752, 26th George II., at which date the following important entry occurs: "James Pullen was admitted tenant to one cottage and twenty perches of land, more or less, to the same adjoining formerly part of the waste of the same manor, to be held by copy of court rolls." No previous grant, or licence, or admission can be found in reference to the above copyhold; and at subsequent courts similar entries frequently occur, indicating that prior grants of the waste land had been made by the lord, probably during the periods for which the court rolls are not extant. On the 30th April 1841, 4th Victoria, the following entry occurs: "At this court the homage and tenants of the manor present in court do consent and agree that the lord of this manor may grant to the Rev. James Terram a piece of ground, parcel of the waste of this manor, containing one acre or thereabouts, for the purpose of thereon erecting a chapel of ease, situate at the west end, adjoining Paines-lane, upon such terms and for such estate as the said lord may think proper; and in pursuance of this Act the lord granted the land in question to the person named. In the years 1842, 1843, 1849, and 1858 similar grants were made at the rate of about one a year. In the years 1859 and 1860, fourteen such grants were made in each year. In 1861 there were six such grants. In 1862 there was only one. In the years 1868 there were twenty-five. The grants to the plaintiffs are dated the 27th May 1859, and 6th May 1861, which are in evidence, and which are substantially the same as the ancient grant of the time of King Charles II. All these grants are of very small pieces of land, generally less than one acre, and never exceeding three acres; but it was stated that there had been two grants of considerable extent (upwards of thirty acres each)—one in 1784 to Sir William Abdy, and another in 1835 to Sir Denis le Marchant, and that the latter was confirmed by a private Act of Parliament; but of neither of these grants was any evidence given. In all the grants during the last thirty years, and indeed, in the two others which I have mentioned, all parties interested seemed to have acquiesced, and the grantees to have been left in undisturbed possession of the land granted to them. The evidence of Mr. Drewitt and other witnesses leaves no doubt upon this point, at least as to the later grants. Under these circumstances the defendant, Philip Wells, resolving to assert his right of way across this land, granted to and inclosed by the plaintiff, and also his right of common, of pasture, and turbary upon it, not only effected a passage over the land as his father had done, but also levelled the whole of the fence of one side, so as to throw open the land. Now there is no doubt, upon the evidence before me, that the defendant, in respect of the tenement which he occupied, and as the lessee of the freeholder, was prima facie entitled to the commonable rights enjoyed by the freeholder and his father before him, and there is also no doubt that in pulling down the entire fence the defendant and those whom he employed pursued strictly legal means of asserting it against the plaintiff. Mr. Justice Bayley, one of the greatest judges who ever sat on the bench, says: "The authorities cited from Brooke's Abridgment and the Year-Book satisfy my mind that where a fence has been erected upon a common inclosing and separating parts of that common from the residue, and thereby interfering with the rights of the commoners, the latter are not by law restrained in the exercise of those rights to pulling down so much of that fence as may be necessary for them to remove for the purpose of enabling their cattle to enter and feed upon the residue of the common, but that they are entitled to consider the whole of that fence so erected upon the common as a nuisance, and to remove it accordingly," Arlett v. Ellis, 7 B. & C. 362; and Mr. Justice Littledale, another very great judge, observes in the same case that "there does not appear to be any reason why the commoners should not pull down the whole fence," and that "it is much more convenient than that he should bring an action for every obstruction," Ibid. 378. I much regret, therefore, that in a case where the title was so evidently in dispute, and where there was so much doubt and difficulty as the present, that any magistrate should have convicted and sentenced to hard labour for wilful damage a man who was only employed by the defendant, Philip Wells, to remove these fences on this occasion, especially as a similar charge had previously been made against another person, who was called as a witness in this case, and most properly dismissed by a very experienced and respected magistrate, Mr. Briscoe. I now come to the main point of this case, whether the right of the lord of the manor and homage to make the grants in question is sufficiently proved by the necessarily meagre and somewhat unsatisfactory evidence which has been furnished in support of it. I confess that this is a subject of much difficulty, and on which I have bestowed much consideration. And, firstly, the Prescription Act (3 Will. 4, c. 71), "shortening the time of prescription in certain cases," clearly does not apply to the present case; nor, of course, does the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), and the plaintiff must recover on the strength of the title of the lord of the manor to make the grant in question. Now, it cannot, I think, for a moment be contended that the grants of the last thirty years would, by themselves, sufficiently evidence such a custom, although no doubt those grants, and the acquiescence of the commoners and all parties interested certainly create a presumption in favour of the custom. The grants of 1784 and 1835 do not appear to me (if evidenced), to assist the claim of the lord, but rather to challenge a closer scrutiny into it. We next come to the grant of the time of King Charles II. 1672, which notwithstanding its peculiar circumstances is certainly strong evidence of the custom contended for. A single ancient entry has been held sufficient to prove the nature of the descent of copyhold, there being no contradictory instances, Dee Mason v. Mason, 3 Wills. 63, and, as observed by Lord Ellenborough in Roe d. Bennet, v. Jeffrey, 2 M. & S. 92, "one act undisturbed does not make a custom, but it is evidence of a custom." The various entries of admissions to inclosures, of which the original grants are not forthcoming, are, however, to my mind, very strong evidence of the existence of the custom, and taking into account the loss of the court rolls antecedent to 1662, and for the period between 1728 and 1752, the balance of testimony, in my opinion, inclines evidently in favour of the custom; especially as I think that, having regard to the limitation in quantity, the saving of sufficient pasture and turbary, and the consent of the homage being required in respect of all grants, it is likely to prove beneficial to those directly interested, and also to the public. Being of opinion that the defendant, George Wells, has made out his justification of the first trespass alleged against him, and is not proved to have committed, or participated in the second, I find a verdict in his favour; and although there is evidently much ill-will on his part towards the plaintiff, and although I do not think that any real injury has been occasioned to him or the other defendant by the interruption of the right of way, although, possibly, some injury may have arisen from the inclosure of the land and the building of the houses along the front of the road, still I think, considering the important question which has been raised by the plaintiff, and is now decided by this court under the authority of the recent Act (30 & 31 Vict. c. 142), that I must allow the defendant, George Wells, his costs under the scale provided by that Act and the general rules. With regard to the other defendant, Philip Wells, I am, of course, also of opinion that he has justified the first alleged trespass in the assertion of the right of way cleared by him, but after much consideration and some doubt that he has failed in justifying the second alleged trespass admitted by him in the destruction of the fence in asserting his rights of pasture and turbary, which rights I hold to be barred by the grant the lord with the consent of the homage made, the circumstances of the case, and especially the conviction now before me of the man employed by him in the sum of 3l. 6s. 8d. and costs (satisfied as to the latter, but not as to the defendant Philip Wells, by the severe penalty of one month's imprisonment with hard labour), I think that I shall meet the ends of justice by giving a verdict against him for the like amount in respect of the like damages which the plaintiff ought to have sued for here, or in some other civil court, in the first instance. I will also allow the plaintiff the court fees on that sum, and the costs of the advocate and one witness, Mr. Quilly, who produced the court rolls, and of the map produced, according to the scale just mentioned, but no further costs. There will be a verdict for the defendant George Wells, with costs as above, payable in a month, and a verdict for the plaintiff against Philip Wells for 3l. 6s. 8d., with costs, also payable in a month.

While then stated that three labourers had been convicted in 3l. 6s. 8d. each, with imprisonment and hard labour, and that the aggregate amount of such penalties (10l.) was the damages found by the magistrate who convicted.

Austin consented to the verdict against the defendant Philip Wells for 10l.

PORTSMOUTH COUNTY COURT.

(Before C. J. GALE, Esq., Judge.)

THE MARY ANN.

Procedure under the Admiralty jurisdiction.

In this case the judge was assisted by two nautical assessors, Capt. Shute B. Piers, R.N., and Capt. G. H. Parkin, R.N. The plaintiffs were James Lawrence and others, and the defendants the owners of a barge named the Mary Ann, 49 tons, of Harwich. The suit was instituted by the plaintiffs to recover 300l., for salvage services rendered.

Witt, barrister (instructed by Pritchard and Sons, of Doctors'-commons), appeared for the plaintiffs.

Elliott (of the firm of Binsteed and Elliott, of Portsmouth) for the defendants.

While the court was waiting for the arrival of the witnesses, a discussion took place as to the manner in which the proceedings should be conducted.

Witt said the intention of the Act was that proceedings should be conducted in precisely the same way as in ordinary cases in this court.

His HONOUR.—Is an appeal given?

Witt said there was an appeal given in all other cases. The appeal was only by leave of the judge. An appeal might be made to the High Court of Admiralty.

His HONOUR said in the County Court an appeal was only allowed on a point of law by a case. It seemed to him that the 26th section gave a general right of appeal.

Elliott.—Unless there was an agreement not to appeal, but he could not bind the owners, who lived at Harwich.

His HONOUR.—Are you agreed upon the value of the vessel saved and the cargo?

Elliott said they were very nearly; it was a matter of 50l. or thereabouts. The salvors made out that the vessel was worth 50l. more than they did.

It appeared that Mr. Beck had valued the vessel at 250l., and they had called in Mr. Reed, a ship builder, who had valued her at 200l. The value of the cargo, according to Mr. Beck's estimate, was 637l. 10s.

Witt referred to a provision in the Mercantile Shipping Amendment Act, which enacted that when any salvage question arose, the receiver of wreck for the district, on the application of either party, might appoint a valuer to value the property in respect to which the salvage claim was made, and a copy of the valuation, purporting to be signed by the valuer, and attested by the receiver, should be received as evidence in any subsequent proceedings. Under this section they had made an application to the receiver of wreck to get this wreck and cargo valued, and he had done so.

His HONOUR.—The Act of Parliament does not make his valuation conclusive.

Witt said he supposed it was considered that it would form a good basis.

Elliott said their valuation of the ship was 200l. and the cargo 660l.

Under the circumstances proved the COURT thought that 70l. would be ample compensation.

Witt asked his Honour to allow the costs to be taxed on the higher scale. There were two scales, the lower for cases where the amount awarded did not exceed 100l., and the higher where it was above 100l., except the judge should otherwise order.

His HONOUR said he did not see anything to take the case out of the ordinary rule, that costs should be governed by the amount recovered. The plaintiffs made a demand which was very much too large, while the defendant's offer was very much too small, and he thought it was fair and reasonable that the costs should abide the event.

THE DEFALCATIONS BY A COUNTY COURT OFFICIAL.—Samuel Drew Foulkes, late Deputy Registrar at the Wolverhampton County Court, was brought up on remand, charged in five separate cases with fraudulently altering an original record of the County Court. The depositions taken on the previous occasion were read over, and the prisoner was formally committed to take his trial at the assizes on each of the charges. Bail refused.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

[NOTE.—This department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editor is not responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it.]

REG. v. JOHN TAYLOR.—REG. v. CANWELL AND DUNN.—The decision of the Court of Criminal Appeal in the above cases, as it appears in your reports of 8th May 1869, pp. 402-3, is so startling to me as a clerk of indictments of some little experience, as well as to other gentlemen with whom I have discussed the subject, and appears to me to be so utterly unsupported by any known rules as to the construction of indictments, that I feel it my duty at once to call attention to it, in the hope of ascertaining whether or not the precedent is one that is likely to be followed in future cases. Assuming, as I do, the accuracy of your report, it appears that no counsel appeared for the prisoner, a circumstance, I think, not entirely to be left out of consideration. The prosecuting counsel referred to the following cases:—1. Reg. v. Oliver, which judicially decides simply that upon an indictment charging an assault occasioning actual bodily harm it was competent for the jury to convict of a common assault (a proposition which, I apprehend, was as clear before as after that decision); 2. Reg. v. Yeadon, in which the case of Reg. v. Oliver is relied upon, and which decides simply the same thing and nothing more; 3. Reg. v. Ingram, which decided, in the reign of Queen Anne, that a battery includes an assault. The prosecuting counsel appears also to have referred to Hawkins' Pleas of the Crown in support of the last thoroughly undisputed proposition. Upon the authority of these cases, the prisoner Taylor, who is indicted for unlawfully and maliciously wounding, and inflicting grievous bodily harm upon one T. M. (offences having no existence as such at common law, but now existing as offences simply by virtue of the statute 24 & 25

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.

Queries.

5. BOROUGH AND COUNTY MAGISTRATE.—Would one of your correspondents kindly inform me through the medium of the LAW TIMES what are the proper steps to take, and the usual mode of proceeding, for a gentleman retired from the legal profession, and no longer on the roll of attorneys, and who is possessed of the requisite property qualification as regards the county, in order to be appointed a borough as well as a county magistrate?

INQUIRER.

6. WILL.—A. by will gave all his real estate to trustees to use during his wife's life, and in case his wife should die before his youngest child should attain twenty-one, to the use of the trustees until his youngest child should attain twenty-one, in trust to pay the rents to wife for life, and then for his children until his youngest child should attain twenty-one; and upon the decease of his wife, or upon the youngest child attaining twenty-one, whichever event should last happen, the testator gave his real estate to all his children living at the time of his wife's death, or youngest child attaining twenty-one, whichever event should last happen, as tenants in common, with clause of survivorship in case any children should die before the happening of the event lastly referred to without leaving issue. But in case there should be no such child living on the happening of the event lastly thereinbefore referred to, the testator gave the same real estate unto and to the use of his own right heirs. The wife is the sole surviving trustee under the will. The testator left several children; one only (a son) now survives, the others having died without issue. The widow and surviving son are desirous of selling the real estate, but the purchaser objects to the title. Can the widow and the son (who is twenty-one, and the testator's heir-at-law) together make a good title?

Q.

7. CONVEYANCING PRECEDENTS.—I shall be glad to be informed by any of your numerous readers where I may find the following precedents: 1. A conveyance to a married woman of property paid for by the husband; 2. A similar conveyance when the money is the wife's separate money; 3. A mortgage by the married woman in each of the above two cases?

INQUIRER.

8. CONVEYANCE.—In a conveyance of lands, the following are the limitations to the purchaser: "To have and to hold said pieces or parcels of land, &c., unto the said A. B. and his heirs, to the use of such person and persons for such estate and estates, interest and interests, and to and for such intents and purposes, and under and subject to such powers, &c., and in such manner as he, the said A. B., by any deed or deeds, &c., with or without power of revocation, &c., shall appoint, and in default of, and until such appointment, and so far as no such appointment shall extend, to the use of the said A. B." It will be observed there are no words of limitation to the ultimate use. What estate has the purchaser in the lands conveyed?

AN ARTICLED CLERK.

9. CREDITOR OMITTED FROM DEED OF ARRANGEMENT.—Will any of your numerous readers be so kind as inform me whether, in case a creditor is omitted in the statement of debts required to be filed with a deed of arrangement under sect. 192 of the Bankruptcy Act 1861, such deed, when duly filed, is a bar to an action by the creditor for the amount of his claim? By answering this query with reference to any authority or case on the subject would much oblige.

E.

10. ARTICLED CLERK.—1. By articles of agreement, dated 15th April 1865, A. became bound to serve B. as his clerk "from the day of the date hereof, for, and during, and until the full end and term of five years thence next ensuing, and fully to be complete and ended." When can A. pass his Final Examination and be admitted? 2. How many hours a day can a principal compel his articled clerk to work? He works now from nine a.m. to seven p.m., including Saturdays, and sometimes on a Sunday, and is suffering in health from overwork, but the principal refuses to alter the hours. 3. Arrangements are made by B. to article E. in the month of April 1864, and E. enters B.'s office on the 5th May 1864, for a month on trial; at the end of the month all parties are satisfied, and final arrangements are made, a salary is fixed, and the articles are drawn up and approved, and engrossed, but are not signed and stamped till the February following, in consequence of B. being called away about that time, and the articles were placed on one side and mislaid. E. thinking it of no consequence as long as he served his five years with B. It is now desirous that E. should be admitted as early as possible. When can he enter for his Final Examination?

E.

(11.) MARRIED WOMAN—SEPARATE ESTATE—ADULTERY.—A., by post-nuptial settlement, gave to his wife power to appoint, by deed or will, the equities of redemption of various valuable properties and the surplus moneys arising from the sale thereof. Fourteen years after the date of the deed she lived in adultery, first having gone through a form of marriage in a foreign country, and she subsequently appointed, by deed and will (the latter of which is duly proved), the properties to the person with whom she lived in adultery. The ultimate remainder in the post-nuptial settlement is to A., the first husband, on default of appointment by his wife. No proceedings were taken in the Divorce Court by A. Will any of your readers refer to any authorities or law which will invalidate the appointments, or say if the elopement and adultery was a revocation of the power of appointment contained in the deed? T. M.

12. MORTGAGES BY DEMISE.—Some practitioners are under the impression that when a mortgage for a term is paid off the term is as it were satisfied and is extinguished, and consequently they do not call for a surrender or re-assignment. But the best opinions incline the other way, unless the mortgage-money be paid off on the very day stipulated in the proviso for redemption. In practice I always call for the junction of the mortgagee in and subsequently dealing with the property for the purpose of divesting him of the legal estate. I think the subject is one of great importance, and I should be glad of the views of your readers on the following:—In all mortgages by demise let this declaration (or something like it) be incorporated: "It is hereby expressly declared that if the said (mortgagor), his heirs, executors, or administrators, shall after the time hereinbefore stipulated for payment of the said sum of _____ and interest, and before the exercise of the power of sale hereinbefore contained, pay unto the said (mortgagee), his executors, administrators, or assigns, the said sum of _____ and all interest and other moneys due hereunder, and the said (mortgagee) his executors, administrators, or assigns shall endorse, or cause to be endorsed, on these presents a memorandum or receipt under his or their hand or hands evidencing such payment, then and in such case the said (mortgagee) his executors, administrators, or assigns shall from thenceforth stand possessed of the said lands, &c., in trust for the said (mortgagor), his heirs and assigns, for the residence then unexpired of the said term which shall thereupon become attendant upon the inheritance of the said lands, &c., and subject thereto shall be deemed to be satisfied and absolutely cease and determine." See Satisfied Terms Act (8 & 9 Vict. c. 112).

X.

13. LEASE.—What is the practice as to engrossing a lease and the counterpart? Does the lessor's solicitor engross both? And when nothing is said about costs, how are they borne?

LEX.

Answers.

(Q. 109.) TRANSFER OF MORTGAGE.—M. E. S. has misunderstood the query. He will find, on referring to it, that it was stated the mortgagee had devised his trust estates to B. and C., who were also his executors, and, consequently, the transferee will get the legal estate from them. The difficulty is as to the assignment of the mortgage debt, one of the executors of the mortgagee being also the transferee. I shall be obliged if some experienced conveyancer will give me his view upon it.

H. E. JUN.

(Q. 2.) COVENANT TO REPAIR IN LEASE.—The judge of a County Court holds that the effect of qualifying a covenant to repair, and leave in repair (usual form) by adding such words as "fair wear and tear excepted" is to render it almost nugatory, inasmuch as, in his opinion, the tenant is relieved of all liability to repair, except as to wilful damage. From this it would appear that in order that as much protection may be afforded the landlord as the tenant, the covenant should be retained in its simple form, and left open to proper legal construction as mentioned by "M. E. S." in his reply. The words just quoted are, I believe, commonly considered a very proper qualification to this covenant, but in view of recent decisions, it would seem that they should be carefully excluded from all forms. As a point of practice, the subject deserves consideration, and I should like to see further opinions in future numbers.

C. ST. AUBYN ANGROVE.

(Q. 3.) EQUITY OF REDEMPTION—MORTGAGE.—I may state for "J. G.'s" guidance that acknowledgment of a conveyance by a married woman was insisted on by the purchaser's solicitor, under the following circumstances: A. being seised in fee, by deed duly acknowledged, joins with her husband in mortgaging the estate for securing a sum of money borrowed by the husband, as in the case put by "J. G." The proviso for reconveyance declared that on payment of mortgage-money and interest, the mortgagee would reconvey to such uses upon such trusts and for such estate or estates, intents and purposes as the husband and wife should during their joint lives by any deed or deeds jointly direct or appoint, and in default thereof to use of it in fee. The mortgage was paid off, but no reconveyance was taken till the husband and wife agreed to sell the property, when they requested the mortgagee's representatives to join in the conveyance, which they did in the usual way. The husband and wife in joining in the conveyance also appointed under the power given above.

SOUTHAMPTON. C. ST. AUBYN ANGROVE.

—There is no necessity for A. to acknowledge the deed whereby she proposes to mortgage her equity of redemption, and it would be incorrect if she did so. The new mortgage will be by appointment under the power limited to A. by the original mortgage, and there is not even a necessity for the concurrence of her husband.

M. E. S.

(Q. 4.) EXECUTORS.—The jurisdiction conferred upon County Courts in administration cases is confined to suits by creditors, legatees, devisees, heirs-at-law, or next of kin. The only way then, in which an executor can get the estate of his testator wound-up in the County Court is to procure one of these parties to institute the suit. But if the executor is also a trustee under the will, he may, for the purpose of carrying out the trusts reposed in him, take advantage of the jurisdiction in that behalf granted to the County Court.

M. E. S.

LAW LIBRARY.

Compensation to Land and Houseowners; being a Treatise on the Law of Compensation for Interests in Lands, &c., payable by Railway and other Public Companies. By THOMAS DUNBAR INGRAM, Barrister-at-Law. Second Edition, by J. J. ELMES, Barrister-at-Law. London: Butterworths.

THE importance of this subject to railways and enterprises of a public nature, not less than to the owners of land whose interests are, by a species of confiscation, seized and appropriated without their owner's consent, sufficiently justifies the devotion of a distinct volume to a single branch of railway law. The appear-

Vict. c. 100, s. 20), is convicted of the common law offence of an assault, although no assault is charged in the indictment, and although (as I shall venture to submit), the indictment does not even charge any offence whatever. Chief Baron Kelly is reported to have said, in giving judgment, "Although the word 'assault' does not occur in either count of the indictment, yet both counts necessarily include an assault," &c. I am not aware of any decided authority for this proposition; and I venture, although most respectfully, and with the very greatest deference, to question it as thus stated, as I do not think it clear that it would be impossible to imagine a case of wounding coming within at least the words of the section without any assault. If, however, the above proposition of the Lord Chief Baron be indisputably true, still I am not aware of any case which decides that, by the common law a prisoner can be convicted of an assault, or any other offence, unless that assault or other offence be expressed in words charged in the indictment. The rule on this subject, as laid down in Starkie's Criminal Pleadings, vol. 1., p. 41, is thus stated: "And in general, whenever an offence as described in the indictment is made up, partly of facts and circumstances, which constitute a less aggravated offence, and partly of circumstances peculiar to itself, the defendant may, if the evidence warrant such a conclusion, be found guilty of the more simple, and acquitted of the more serious offence." Upon this well-known and perfectly intelligible rule the decision in Reg. v. Oliver is founded; but I venture to submit that there is no authority to warrant its extension to offences not described in the indictment; and that it is a dangerous precedent to do so. Moreover, I venture to assert that the indictment, as set out in your report, charges no offence whatever; inasmuch as it purports to charge two offences which, as described therein, are not offences at all at common law, but are simply misdemeanors created by the statute, and yet are not alleged to have been committed against the statute. I presume that the draftsman relied upon 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24, which provides that "no indictment shall be held insufficient for (amongst other things) want of a proper or formal conclusion." I am not, however, aware of any case which decides that this provision extends to warrant the omission of the conclusion "against the form of the statute" where the offence is a statutable one; and as the same section expressly authorises the omission of the words "against the peace," and provides for the case of the insertion of the words "against the form of the statute" in the singular number instead of in the plural, or vice versa. It seems clear that it was never intended to dispense with the necessity for the statutory conclusion where the offence was statutory. I, therefore, submit, with great deference, that the indictment was bad on the face of it.

T. G.

NOTARY PUBLIC.—In many towns there is no officer of this description for the purpose of taking ship protests, &c., and the unsatisfactory, although apparently not really irregular practice is adopted of having them taken before a Chancery commissioner. This is probably owing to the heavy and disproportionate amount of stamp duty (30%) payable on appointment (in addition to the attendant fees and expenses of about 15%), it being inconveniently large for those solicitors who are the only practitioners whose purpose would be served by obtaining the appointment. Being myself one of this class, and desirous of acting in that capacity, I should be glad to communicate with other solicitors similarly circumstanced, with the view of discussing and determining among ourselves whether a reduction of the duty would be best obtained by a joint petition to the House of Commons, or an address to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, or how otherwise.

CIVILIAN.

12th May 1869.

COUNTY COURT PROCEDURE.—I observe in your Saturday's number a notice of a petition for a reform of County Court Procedure. I wish to suggest that in the first of the proposed amendments the words "or agent" be omitted. The court has a right to the guarantee for correctness, which is implied by the process being issued to solicitors only, and it is very desirable that such process should not be committed to any person who may choose to represent himself to be the "agent" of a suitor, such agencies are too numerous already.

J. HESTER.

PROMOTIONS & APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Grundy, of the firm of Grundy and Coulson, of Manchester, has been appointed an Extraordinary Commissioner to administer Oaths in the Irish Court of Chancery, for the counties of Lancashire and Cheshire; and also a Commissioner for taking Affidavits in the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer of Pleas, Ireland.

ance upon the title-page of the words "second edition," attests in the most conclusive manner that Mr. Ingram had rightly measured the requirements of the Profession when he designed the monograph before us. Seeing what a small space the subject occupies in the statute book, it would scarcely have been credited, but for the evidence of the work itself, that a treatise of 226 pages could have grown out of it. But such is the fact, and this without any undue expansion; the cases are not cited at needless length, nor are extraneous topics introduced to swell the volume. The work is divided into thirteen chapters, treating of agreements with promoters of companies before they have obtained their special Act, and the course to be pursued by a landowner opposing the Bill; of contracts with the company after incorporation; of the powers possessed by railway and other public companies for compulsory purchase, and the manner in which they are to be exercised; and of the restrictions imposed upon those powers. An interesting chapter is devoted to the much litigated questions relating to lands injuriously affected, and this is followed by three chapters in which the author has collected the cases, classifying them under three divisions; first, where lands are taken or purchased, but not entered upon until the purchase money and compensation are ascertained and paid; secondly, the cases in which the property is taken, or injuriously affected, before satisfaction made to the owners; and, thirdly, the cases of loss and damage not remediable either by compensation or action at law. The various modes of assessing compensation are next considered; then the manner of dealing with the interests of lessees and tenants at will; then the question of costs; and, lastly, certain special cases of compensation peculiar to railway companies. The appendix contains no less than sixty forms, required in the practice of this branch of the law, and the statutes and parts of statutes in which it is embodied. The index is very ample. Thus it will be seen to be a book very valuable to all solicitors who may be concerned either for railways or for the persons whose properties are affected by them.

Indian Criminal Law and Procedure. By M. H. STARLING, L. L. B., Barrister-at-law. London: Allen & Co.

A VOLUME of nearly 700 closely-printed pages embodies the entire of the criminal law of our Indian Empire. Mr. Starling, who has had extensive experience as a practitioner in the criminal courts in England, was peculiarly qualified for the laborious task which he has performed so well. If time and space would permit, an extremely interesting and instructive review of this work might point out the differences between the criminal law we apply to our Eastern Empire and that we enforce at home, with the reasons, ethnological and religious, for some of the remarkable divergencies which would be found to exist. Such a treatise, though impracticable in our crowded columns and amid the various claims upon our attention, would be an appropriate theme for the Law Review, and we commend it to the notice of our quarterly contemporary. Mr. Starling will, we hope, receive the reward of his useful labour in the employment of the knowledge and ability of which he has thus proved the possession, where the Indian public may have the benefit of them.

LAW SOCIETIES.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

At the meeting of the Society, held at the Law Institution, Chancery-lane, on Tuesday evening last, Mr. Warrington in the chair, the question for discussion was, "Does an immaterial alteration made in a deed by the person taking a benefit under it after the execution of the deed, render it void?" which was opened by Mr. G. P. Amos in the affirmative. The society decided in the negative by a large majority.

LIVERPOOL LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

The ninth meeting of the session was held on Friday, the 30th April, Mr. Bright presiding. The question for discussion was—XIV. Jurisprudential. "Ought married women to stand in the position with regard to their property as femes sole?" Mr. French opened the debate in the affirmative, but, after a long discussion, the negative side of the question was carried.

THE SOLICITORS' BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION.

At the usual monthly meeting of the board of directors, held at the Law Institution, London, on Wednesday the 5th inst., Wm. Strickland Cookson, Esq., in the chair, the following directors were present—Messrs. Hedger, Nelson, Rickman, Shaen, and Sidney Smith; Mr. Eiffe, secretary.

A donation of 20l. was granted to the necessitous widow and children of a non-member; and nineteen new annual members were admitted to the association.

LEGAL OBITUARY.

MR. EDWARD CHALLINOR.

We have to record the death of Mr. Edward Challinor, of Hanley, who died on the 25th ult. at his temporary residence, Oak Mount, Withington, near Manchester, at the age of 52 years. Mr. Challinor was admitted in Easter Term 1839, and practised at Hanley from the year 1840 up to the time of his illness, which fell upon him early last year. Mr. Challinor had been town clerk of Hanley since the incorporation of the borough, he having been most instrumental in obtaining the charter. He was also clerk to the local board of health, and to the burial board of Hanley, and registrar of the Hanley, Burslem, and Tunstall County Courts, and was likewise solicitor to the respective boards of health of Burslem and Tunstall, and held many other public and important appointments. He was much looked up to and respected in his profession.

LEGAL NEWS.

FRENCH COURTS AND COURT COSTS.—A curious case has recently been tried in Saigon. It appears that Captain Jeffries, of the ship Mexicana, induced the plaintiff to enter into a contract to freight the ship Mexicana, the captain guaranteeing the vessel to be classed A 1 for at least a year from date. It was afterwards discovered that the vessel was not classed either at Lloyd's or Veritas, and as the plaintiff would be obliged to insure the goods shipped, he could not avail himself of the charter, and sued in the Commercial Tribunal to compel the defendant to fulfil his part of the contract, and within a certain time to provide the plaintiff with a ship of the description specified. The court directed that the defendant should fulfil the contract, that is, find a ship of the proper description within eight days, and gave judgment against him in costs. The defendant appealed the case to the Superior Court, immediately, when it was decided that the former judgment was wrong in law, as it should have fixed damages at a given sum, instead of decreeing defendant to perform an impossibility. Judgment was therefore entered for plaintiff for 1000 francs and costs. And now comes the bill of costs, a fact that will scarcely be believed here, where going to law is such an expensive luxury that poor people cannot afford it. It is appended to the report of the case in the Saigon Advertiser and Shipping Gazette. The costs of the first trial were 40 francs 20 centimes, exclusive of registering fees,—equal to 10.644 dollars.

WHEN THE TAXES ARE TO BE PAID.—A statement, in the form of a Parliamentary return, has been issued, showing the periods in the years 1869-70 and 1870-71 when, under the scheme of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, payments will have to be made in respect of assessed taxes and licence duties respectively by persons who have kept articles liable to duty previous to or in either of those years; and also showing the periods in the years 1869-70 and 1870-71 in which, under the same scheme, house duty, land tax, and income tax, under the several schedules, will be collected, and in respect of what year's assessment, or part thereof, each such collection will be made. From this statement it appears that payments will have to be made in respect of assessed taxes and licence duties; and house duty, land tax, and income tax will be collected, under the scheme of the Chancellor of the Exchequer as follows, viz., after—

- 1869—Oct. 10.—First payment of assessed taxes on 1868-69.
- 1870—Jan. 1.—Income tax on schedules A. B. D., for financial year 1869-70.
- " Jan. 1.—Income tax on schedules C. and E., paid by deduction in each quarter of the fiscal year.
- " Jan. 1.—Payment of land tax and house duty for 1869-70.
- " Jan. 1.—Licence duties for articles to be kept in the year ending the 31st Dec. 1870.
- " April 5.—Payment of second moiety of the assessed taxes on 1868-69.
- 1871—Jan. 1.—Same payments as Jan. 1870.

THE GAZETTES.

Professional Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, May 4.

LUCAS, JOSEPH, and SHOWLER, ROBERT FRANCIS, attorneys and solicitors, Trinity-pl., Baring-cross, May 3.
TATLEUL, GEORGE WILLIAM, and JONES, JOSEPH SPURDELL, attorneys, solicitors, and conveyancers, To quay, March 5.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, May 7.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.
AYTON, WILLIAM GEORGE, courier, Charlotte-st., Sloane-st., and Hill-st., Knightbridge. Pet. May 4. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Watson, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 23.
BONNET, JOHN CONRAD, tailor, Woolwich. Pet. May 1. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Messrs. Spiller, South-pl., Finsbury. Sur. May 24.
BREARLEY, ASLEY FRANCIS, gentleman, Portico-pl., Hyde-pl. Pet. May 3. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Tucker, Southampton-bldgs. Chancery-lane. Sur. May 28.
BYRNE, EDWARD MCALPIN, mercantile clerk, Cosmo-pl., Southampton-row, Brompton. Pet. May 3. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Dobbs, Gresham-st. Sur. May 25.
CAPON, THOMAS, miller, Stokebury. Pet. May 3. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Sole, Turner, and Turner, Aldermanbury, agents for Coaks, Norwich. Sur. May 21.
CHART, THOMAS, merchant, Lime-st., Serpoo and Birkenhead. Pet. May 4. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Watson, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 26.
COHEN, SIMON (otherwise Siegmund Sellman), fancy dealer, Upper-st., Dillington. Pet. May 1. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Green, Ironmonger-lane. Sur. May 27.
CORNWALL, JOHN LAWS, late greengrocer, Essex-rd., Dillington. Great Northern Potato-market, King's-cross, and Orchard-st., Ball's-pond. Pet. May 3. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Thompson, Gray's-inn-sq. Sur. May 25.
COX, FRANCIS, estate agent, Great St. Mary's, Basinghall-st. Pet. April 30. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Coleman, Greenwich. Sur. May 28.
CROSS, SAMUEL JOB, victualler, Sutton. Pet. May 3. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Lade, Gresham-bldgs, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 26.
DAVEY, HENRY, civil engineer, John-st., Adelphi. Pet. May 1. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Linklaters, Hackwood, and Addison, Walbrook. Sur. May 31.
EDMOND, HENRY, manager of the Portman-chambers, Portman-sq. Pet. May 3. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Widding, Titchborne-st., Edgware-rd. Sur. May 31.
ELLIS, HOBART THOMAS WILLIAM, silversmith, King-st., Covent-gdn. Pet. May 3. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Doves and Co., Portico-chambers, Lime-st. Sur. May 28.
GARNER, JOHN, clerk in the Hudson's Bay Company, Greenwood-rd., Hackney. Pet. May 4. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Champion, Ironmonger-lane. Sur. May 24.
GILSON, EDWARD ROWELL, clerk to an insurance broker, Croydon, and Lower Thames-st. Pet. May 2. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Richardson, George-st., Mansion-house. Sur. May 24.
HATCHEL, DANIEL GEORGE, innkeeper, Southampton. Pet. May 3. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Linklaters and Co., Walbrook. Sur. May 31.
HAYES, JAMES, traveller to a spiced beef dealer, Isleworth. Pet. May 3. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Nottley, Trinity-st., Southwark. Sur. May 24.
JEWELL, WILLIAM HENRY, insurance broker, George-st., Mansion-house. Pet. April 24. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Laurence and Co., Old Jewry-chambers; and Rickards, Crown-st., Old Broad-st. Sur. May 24.
JONES, HENRY, merchant, Crutched-friars. Pet. April 23. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Flux, Argyle, and Hawkins, East India-square, Leadenhall-st. Sur. May 25.
JOSEPH, JOHN, snook owner, Great York-st. Pet. May 4. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Linklaters, Hackwood, and Addison, Walbrook. Sur. May 31.
LAIRD, ROBERT GRIMMOND, general merchant, Billiter-sq. Pet. May 4. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Messrs. Miller, Shorncliffe-st. Sur. May 27.
LOVELL, ROBERT JAMES, foreman to a coachmaker, Portland, near Weymouth. Pet. May 6. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Coombe and Co., Staple-inn. Sur. May 25.
MAYNARD, CHARLES, and MISTON, ALFRED, millers, Skingth. Pet. April 28. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Lawrence, Fleva, and Co., Old Jewry-chambers, for Darvill and Co., Windsor. Sur. May 27.
MORRIS, MATTHEW SOMERVILLE, artist, Margate. Pet. May 1. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Evans and Laing, John-st., Bedford-row. Sur. May 25.
MORRIS, EDWARD, late cook, Hanover-st., Walworth-rd. Pet. May 3. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Fisher, Manor-rd., Walworth. Sur. May 28.
MORRIS, JOHN, assistant to a beer retailer, Chatham. Pet. May 1. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Cooke, Gresham-bldgs. Sur. May 27.
MORTON, WILLIAM HENRY, late assistant manager of pleasure gardens, Newmarket, Oxford. Pet. April 29. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Frost, Argyle-sq., Regent-st. Sur. May 19.
NEWEOTE, STEPHEN (known as Charles New), grocer, Short-gdns, Bloomsbury, and Grove-rd., and North-bank, St. John's-wood. Pet. May 1. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Pittman, Guilden-chambers. Sur. May 28.
OLIVER, HENRY, builder, Telford-st., Lancaster-rd., Nottingham. Pet. April 30. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Tilley, Finsbury-pavement. Sur. May 24.
SCHLOTTMANN, HILMUTH, journeyman fancy box maker, John-st., White-church-lane. Pet. May 3. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Watson, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 24.
SPRINGETT, FREDERICK WILLIAM, wine merchant, Totton. Pet. May 4. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Edwards, Bush-lane, Cannon-st. Sur. May 25.
SUTCLIFF, JULIUS, formerly dealer in cigars, Englefield-rd., Islington. Pet. May 3. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Harrison, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 24.
TITCHMARSH, THOMAS, farmer, Boyston. Pet. May 3. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Wood, Crooked-lane. Sur. May 25.
TURNER, JOHN WILLIAM, brewer, St. Robert's-st., South-pl. Pet. May 3. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Pritchard, South-sq., Gray's-inn. Sur. May 24.
WALLIS, WILLIAM GEORGE DENNETT, law stationer, St. John's-grove, St. John's-hill, New Wandsworth. Pet. April 30. Reg. Brougham. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Lilley, Trinity-st., Southwark. Sur. May 24.
WALSHAM, WILLIAM HENRY, accountant, Gresham-st., and Idmiston-rd., Stratford. Pet. May 3. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Brown, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 25.
WELSH, VICTOR EDWARD, no business, Kent-green. Pet. May 1. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Lawrence and Co., Old Jewry-chambers. Sur. May 24.
WRELOCK, ARTHUR WILLIAM PHILLIPS, lighterman, Black-barnet, Chesham-lane. Pet. May 4. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Chidley, Old Jewry. Sur. May 24.
WOOLCOTE, HENRY, journeyman confectioner, Old Brentford. Pet. May 4. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Olive, Portmouth-st., Lincoln's-inn. Sur. May 28.

To surrender in the Country.

ALLAN, ROBERT, innkeeper, Hurworth-pl., near Croft. Pet. May 3. Reg. & O. A. Bowes. Sol. Stevenson, Darlington. Sur. May 20.
APLIN, WILLIAM, publican, Hatch Besenham. Pet. May 2. Reg. & O. A. Meyer. Sol. Trenchard, Taunton. Sur. May 22.
ARMSTRONG, RICHARD, porter, Liverpool. Pet. May 4. Reg. O. A. Hime. Sol. Brown, Liverpool. Sur. May 18.
BAKER, EDWARD BRADLEY, tobacco dealer, Liverpool. Pet. April 20. Reg. & O. A. Hime. Sol. Thornley, Liverpool. Sur. May 17.
BATTY, GEORGE, builder, Fulford, near York. Pet. May 3. O. Young. Sol. McLaren, York, and Simpson, Leeds. Sur. May 19.
BROOKES, GEORGE, refreshment house keeper, Birmingham. Pet. March 20. Reg. & O. A. Guest. Sol. Howlands, Birmingham. Sur. June 4.
CHAPMAN, GEORGE, saddler, Winterton. Pet. April 8. Reg. O. A. Brown. Sol. Macmillan, Barton-on-Humber. Sur. May 11.
CHESBROUGH, ALFRED, woolstapler, Bradford. Pet. May 1. Reg. O. A. Brown. Sol. Rawson, George, and Wade, Bradford. Sur. May 18.
CLARKE, CHARLES, hotel keeper, Bromsgrove. Pet. May 4. R. Tudor. O. A. Kinnear. Sol. James and Griffin, Birmingham. Sur. May 21.

HARPER, MARY, lodging-house keeper, Bristol. Pet. May 4.
 REG. & O. A. Harley and Gibbs. Sol. Thick. Sur. May 23
 SILCOCKS, THOMAS, out of business, Bristol. Pet. May 4. Reg. &
 O. A. Harley and Gibbs. Sur. May 23
 SIMMONS, RICHARD, grocer, Arley, near Leeds. Pet. May 1.
 Reg. & O. A. Harley. Sol. Harle. Leeds. Sur. May 21
 SKETCHLEY, THOMAS, baker, Birmingham. Pet. May 6. Reg. &
 O. A. Guest. Sol. Francis, Birmingham. Sur. June 4
 SPENCER, JOB, plumber, Ashby-de-la-Zouch. Pet. May 6. Reg.
 Threlk. O. A. Harris. Sol. Rowlands, Birmingham. Sur. May 25
 STACEY, WILLIAM ROBERT, tailor, Weston-super-Mare, Pet.
 May 7. Reg. Wilde. O. A. Acranman. Sols. Price, Burnham, and Press and Inskip, Bristol. Sur. May 21
 SUMMERHALES, SAMUEL, builder, Weston-super-Mare. Pet.
 May 6. Reg. Wilde. O. A. Acranman. Sols. Henderson and Salmon, Bristol. Sur. May 21
 SYLVESTER, WILLIAM CHARLES, chief constable of police, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Pet. April 14. Reg. Gibson. O. A. Laidman.
 Sols. Ingledew and Daggett, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Sur. May 5
 TAYLOR, RICHARD LLOYD, locksmith, Birmingham. Pet. May 8.
 Reg. Wilde. O. A. Guest. Sol. Rowlands, Birmingham. Sur.
 June 4
 WARDLE, THOMAS, merchant's clerk, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Pet.
 May 8. Reg. & O. A. Clayton. Sol. Joel, Newcastle-upon-
 Tyne. Sur. May 21
 WAREING, WILLIAM, bobbin maker, Preston. Pet. May 7. Reg.
 & O. A. Myres. Sols. Messrs. Turner, Preston. Sur. May 22
 WATERS, JOHN, builder, Truro. Pet. May 8. Reg. & O. A. Chil-lingworth, Truro. Sol. Lewis, Truro. Sur. May 22
 WEBB, ALFRED, butcher, Bath. Pet. May 7. Reg. & O. A. Smith.
 Sol. Wilton, Bath. Sur. May 23
 WHITELEY, THOMAS, and COWGILL, JAMES, cotton spinners, Huddersfield. Pet. April 23. O. A. Young. Sols. Jacob.
 Huddersfield, and Carless and Tappett, Leeds. Sur. May 31
 WILKIE, ABRAHAM ROBERT, baker, Landport. Pet. May 3.
 Reg. & O. A. Howard. Sol. Champ, Portsea. Sur. May 26
 WILLIAMS, PHILIP HENRY, stockbroker, Bristol. Pet. May 6.
 Reg. Wilde. O. A. Acranman. Sols. Press and Inskip, Bristol.
 Sur. May 21
 WOODWARDS, BENJAMIN, photographer, Trowbridge. Pet.
 April 23. Reg. & O. A. Webber. Sol. McCarthy, Frome. Sur.
 May 24
 WYNTS, HENRY, beerhouse keeper, Westerham. Pet. May 4.
 Reg. & O. A. Holcroft. Sol. Carnall, Sevenoaks. Sur. May 27

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.
Gazette, May 4.
 HALL, GEORGE LOWTHIAN, artist, Elgin-rd., Malda-vae, Aug. 6, 1893
Gazette, May 7.
 ADAMS, JOHN, grocer, Bradford. April 12, 1893
 FLORIS, GEORGE BROOKE, tobacconist, Oxford-st. March 18, 1893
 SPIRAGG, MARY ANN, spinster, Trevor-st., Knightsbridge. Aug. 26, 1893
 TURNER, WINSTRAEP, basket maker, Hull. Feb. 12, 1890

Dividends.
BANKRUPT'S ESTATES.
The Official Assignees are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.
*Markman, W. victinaller, first, 4s. Parkyns, London.—Ditch, J. E. shipbroker, second, 3d. Turner, Liverpool.—Cates, A. milliner, first, 2d. Stanfield, London.—Dickens, F. W. clerk in War Office, third, 3½d. Parkyns, London.—Dunham, D. builder, first, 3d. Stanfield, London.—Edmund, T. scrivener, third, 9-10ths, d. Stanfield, London.—Hewitt, R. grocer, second, 1d. Turner, Liverpool.—Leach, H. cigar merchant, second, 1½d. Turner, Liverpool.—Morrison, K. clerk in Somerset-house, second, 4s. 2½d. and 6d. to new proofs. Stanfield, London.—Perrinier, J. D. pay-master in R. N. second, 3s. 3d. and 3s. 3d. to new proofs. Stanfield, London.—Richardson, G. B. necktie manufacturer, first, 3s. 1½d. Stanfield, London.—Rhyberty, T. coal merchant, second, 2½d. Turner, Liverpool.—Varell, J. J. musical instrument dealer, first, 1s. 6d. Turner, Liverpool.—Whitehouse, W. banker, first, 20s. Turner, Liverpool.—Withington, W. commission agent, first, 3½d. Turner, Liverpool.
 Bond, J. attorney, first, 6d. Turner, Liverpool.—Dorning, J. merchant, second, 1½d. Turner, Liverpool.—Henson, W. grocer, first, 2s. 1½d. Kinnear, Birmingham.—Huydon, J. leather dealer, first, 2s. 1½d. Kinnear, Birmingham.—Lawrence, E. grocer, first, 4s. 10½d. Parkyns, London.—Ransay, G. B. builder, first, 1d. Kinnear, Birmingham.—Ridd, J. brewer, first, 2s. 1d. Turner, Liverpool.—Rose, J. B. and Rose, R. drysalters, 2d. Turner, Liverpool.—Shepherd, H. timber merchant, first, 2s. 2½d. Parkyns, London.—Sutton, J. clothier, first, 2s. 5d. Kinnear, Birmingham.—Turner, J. brewer, second, 6½d. Turner, Liverpool.—Wate, J. W. bookseller, second, 1½d. Parkyns, London.—White, W. upholsterer, first, 3s. 1½d. Parkyns, London.*

Assignment, Composition, Inspectorship, and Trust Needs.
Gazette, May 7.
 ACKLAND, WILLIAM JOHN, draper, Chapel-st. Islington, and Mitcham. April 27. 6s. 3d. three equal instalments on June 24, Aug. 1, and Oct. 24, second, 2s. 6d. O. A. Yorks, Watling-st., and G. Elbeck, Milk-st., warehousemen
 ALEN, SAMUEL, farmer, Twycross. April 13. 14s. on April 27
 BARR, HENRY WILLIAM, milliner, Dartford and Bexley-heath. April 27. 10s. 6d. three equal instalments, 10s. 6d. on June 24, Aug. 1, and Oct. 24, second, 2s. 6d. O. A. Yorks, Watling-st., and G. Elbeck, Milk-st., warehousemen
 BECK, JOSEPH, shopkeeper, Oldbury. April 29. 10s. 6d. on June 24, Aug. 1, and Oct. 24, second, 2s. 6d. O. A. Yorks, Watling-st., and G. Elbeck, Milk-st., warehousemen
 BENNETT, GEORGE, outfitter, Dover. April 17. 15s. by four instalments of 3s. 10s. in 3, 6, 9, and 12 mos from May 1, second, 2s. 6d. on June 24, Aug. 1, and Oct. 24
 BENTON, GEORGE, hay dealer, Westgate. April 2. 3s. by two equal instalments, on July 1 and Oct. 1
 BERKELEY, GEORGE BLACKBURN, gentleman, Yorks. pi., Islington. April 10. In full in 12 mos after the decease of the survivor of his father and mother
 BUCKLEY, JOHN, and BUCKLEY, ROBERT, boiler manufacturers, Gauxholme, near Todmorden. April 1. Trusts, W. A. Jenner, and J. Hall, iron merchants, Manchester, and G. Crossley, COUSINS, GEORGE, grocer, Church-st, Wimbledon. April 6. 5s.

by two equal payments, on May 1 and Aug. 1.

DANIEL, GEORGE, brewer, Roseborough-st, Plymouth.
May 3. 1*s*. 6*d*. in 10 days, and 1*s*. 6*d*. in 12 mos

DAVIES, GEORGE, packing-case maker, Manchester. April 7.
6*d*. by three instalments.—3*s*. in 1 and 3 mos, and 1*s*. 6*d*. in 6 mos.

DAVIS, CYRUS, and DAVIS, GEORGE, victuallers, Giltspur-st, at Metropolitan Cattle-market. April 30. Trust. W. Carden, gentleman, St. John-st, Clerkenwell

DEGLAS, JAMES, ironmonger, High-st, Deptford. April 12.
Trusts E. A. Highton, and J. Oshams, iron merchants, both Upper Thames-st

DUGGIN, HENRY THOMAS, grocer, Brompton-rd. April 12. 10*s*.
by four equal instalments, in 7 days, and in 2, 4, and 6 mos from April 12.

EGGLESDEN, EDWARD, victualler, Hove. April 12. 5*s*.
APRIL 13.

EVANS, WILLIAM HENRY, and JACOBS, SOLOMONS, printers,
Liverpool. April 27. 5*s*. in 14 days

FARLEY, DAVID, commission agent, Amelia - vils, Southgate.
April 8. 6*s*. by two equal instalments, in 1 and 3 mos.

GARLICK, GEORGE POPE, chemist, Birmingham. April 10. 2*s*. 6*d*.
in 1 mo

GODSON, ROBERT, mantle manufacturer, Tottenham-cr.-rd.
April 10. Trust. R. W. Bilby, manager to W. & Co. Needham and Co., Saint Paul's-churchyard, and J. Folkes, trimming manufacturer, Gutter-lane, Chapside

GREGORY, JOHN THOMAS, grocer, Salford. April 16. Trusts. J.
Stuart, Esq. and J. M. Smith, Esq., both Manchester

HALE, THOMAS FREDERICK, surgeon, Stavely. April 24. 5*s*. in 10 days. Trust. L. Bower, accountant, Chesterfield

HAYWARD, ANNE, schoolmistress, Apsley-house, Richmond.
April 8. 5*s*. in 21 days,—secured

HIGHAM, GEORGE, beersealer, Woudham. April 23. 5*s*. in 14 days

HINTON, EDWIN, out of business, Queen Anne-rd, South Hackney.
March 15. 2*s*. in 2 mos

HURDMAN, JOHN, salesman, Snow-hill, and Birmingham.
April 29. 5*s*. by equal instalments, in 7 days and 3 mos.

KEER, DAVID, draper, Pittfield-st. Horton. April 6. 6s. 6d. by four instalments, 4s. 6d. on execution, and 2s. by three equal instalments, in 4, 6, and 9 mos.—secured. Trust. M. Keer, draper, High-st. Bromley.

LEWIS, JAMES, provision merchant, Spittal. April 10. Trusts. T. Hogg, miller, and W. Ainsley, tobacconist, both Berwick-on-Tweed.

LONGLEY, JAMES, music dealer, Leeds. April 19. Trust. C. Longing, accountant, Leeds.

MC LOUGHLIN, WILLIAM, bookbinder, Manchester, and West Salford. April 28. Trust. M. Preston, accountant, Manchester.

MEYER, GEORGE, ANTHONY, hatter, tailor, manufacturer, Manchester. April 10. Trusts. W. C. Hulme, timber merchant, and W. Lindop, ivory turner, both Manchester.

OATES, THOMAS, commercial traveller, Worcester. April 7. Trust. G. A. Turley, linen draper, Worcester.

PALLISTER, JOHN, tailor, Durham and Willington. March 31. Trust. W. H. May, woollen warehouseman, Gutter-lane.

PARKER, WILLIAM MICHAEL, bootmaker, Hull. April 3. 6s. in three equal instalments, on June 1, Sept. 2, and Dec. 1. In respect, J. Sreeton, manufacturing stationer, Hull.

RAYNER, ALAN, and RAYNER, DENNIS, woollen manufacturers, Halifax. March 30. Trusts. E. Sykes, manager, J. Brooke, woollen merchant, and C. Hirst, jun., woolstapler, all Huddersfield.

SENIOR, EDWARD, waste dealer, Dewsbury Moor. April 12. Trusts. W. E. Taubman, waste dealer, Blackburn, and E. Higham, cotton spinner, Todmorden.

SINFIELD, WILLIAM, baker, Fulham-rd. April 2. Trust. A. J. Wright, miller, New Crane-mill, Shadwell.

SMITH, EDWARD, draper, Jubilee-st. Stepney. April 27. Trusts. J. Ellerton, tailor, St. Paul's Churchyard, and J. Stevens, wholesale clothier, Little Trinity-lane.

SMITH, JAMES, draper, Bolton. April 20. Trusts. J. Foy and M. Snell, drapers, both Bolton.

SMITH, JOHN, linen draper, Market-pl. Upper Holloway. April 14. Trusts. T. E. Crowley, butcher, Midway-park, Islington, and F. Johnson, warehouseman, Little Love-lane.

SOUTTER, ROBERT, and SOUTTER, RICHARD MOATES, merchants, Broad-st. Ratcliff. May 3. Inspector. A. A. James, accountant, Tottenham-rd.

SPRATT, LUCY, innkeeper, Horncastle. April 7. 6s. on May 5.

SQUIRE, ELIZA, widow, Portland-villas, South Norwood. April 20. 1s. 6d. in 6 mos.

STANCLIFFE, WILLIAM, builder, Sheffield. April 20. Trusts. C. Jenkinson, slater, and B. Topham, painter, both Sheffield.

SYKES, BENJAMIN, and SYKES, WILLIAM HAIGH, cloth manufacturers, Marden. April 7. Trusts. C. Hirst, Huddersfield, J. Shaw, Golcar, both woolstaplers, and C. Watson, merchant, Manchester.

WADE, HENRY, ship chandler, Cardiff. April 13. 10s. by four equal instalments, in 4, 6, 8, and 9 mos.—secured.

WARD, ARTHUR, furniture broker, Worthing. April 23. 10s. by four equal instalments, in 3, 6, 9, and 12 mos.

WARD, HENRY, contractor, Leeds. April 24. 5s. in 7 days.

WEBB, WILLIAM ALFRED, builder, St. Alban's. April 24. 5s.—4s. in 3 mos. and 1s. in 6 mos.

WELLS, JACOB BUTTER, farmer, Wadhurst. April 7. Trust. S. P. Graves, auctioneer, Southampton.

WILLIAMS, RICHARD, shopkeeper, Llanannan. April 19. Trusts. E. Jones, draper, Rochdale, and A. Humphreys, commercial traveller, Rhy.

YOXALL, WILLIAM, saddler, Ashton-under-Lyme. March 22. Trust. W. Madew, Ashton-under-Lyme.

Gazette, May 11.

ARDEN, RALPH, publican, Sandbach. April 12. Trusts. J. Dickinson, publican, and J. C. Hilditch, auctioneer, both Sandbach.

ARNSBY, GEORGE EKINS, shoe manufacturer, Earls Barton. April 15. Trusts. T. P. Stroulgan, leather merchant, and S. Ashby, carrier, both Northampton.

BENX, JOHN, and BENX, HENRY, cloth manufacturers, Morley. May 1. 6s. by three equal instalments, in 4, 6, and 9 mos. from April 20, 1868—secured. Trusts. J. Stephens, cloth merchant, and J. Coates, commission agent, both Leeds.

BLACK, GEORGE, cotton manufacturer, Nelson, near Colne. March 19. Trusts. R. Fenton, spinner, Blue Pitts, near Rochdale, and T. W. Taylor, yarn agent, Manchester.

BOSON, GEORGE, grocer, Tunstall. April 15. 5s. in 1 mo. from registration. Trust. S. Edge, chesefactor, Newcastle-under-Lyme.

BURFIELD, ROBERT COLLINS, grocer, Chatham. April 6. 10s. by three equal instalments, in 2, 4, and 6 mos. from March 31,—last secured.

CLIFFORD, WILLIAM PHILLIPS, draper, Penge. April 24. 9s. by three equal instalments, in 3, 6, and 9 mos.—secured. Trust. E. Clifford, Lewisham.

KREWDSON, FRANCIS, grocer, Ulverston. April 21. Trust. R. Casson, auctioneer, Ulverston.

DEDAWESS, GEORGE, grocer, Forchester. April 16. 2s. in 14 days from registration.

FELKARD, AUGUSTUS, secretary to a Commercial Company, Haslam House, Lewisham. April 30. 100s. by quarterly payments. Trust. W. A. Laker, accountant, Newton House, Lewisham.

FREEMAN, WILLIAM, watchmaker, Portsea. May 7. 7s. 6d. in 3, 6, and 9 mos. from registration,—secured. Trusts. M. V. Charles, and F. H. Nance, accountant, both Portsea.

GILL, SEPTIMIUS, innkeeper, Mossley. April 22. Trust. J. Halliday, accountant, Manchester.

GOSHER, SOLOMON, cigar merchant, Waterloo-rd, New-rd, Commercial-rd. April 30. 2s. 6d. on May 21.

GRAND, JOHN, boot maker, King's-rd, Chelsea. April 26. 5s.—2s. in 6d., and 1s. 6d. in 14 days, and 3s. and 6 mos. from registration. Trust. W. Arnall, livery stable keeper, Camden-mews, Camden-town.

GRAVES, WILLIAM HENRY, cloth manufacturer, Horsforth. April 13. 10s. by three equal instalments, in 3, 6, and 9 mos.—from May 1, 1868. Trust. J. Graves, Horsforth.

GWILT, JOHN LOVELL, grocer, Liverpool. April 13. 6s. by three instalments of 2s. in 1, 4, and 7 mos. from registration,—secured.

HEAVER, RESTA, grocer, Bolney. April 12. Trusts. M. Wallis, and D. Hack, wholesale grocers, both Brighton.

HILLIER, WILLIAM HENRY, cigar light manufacturer, Birmingham. April 14. 10s. by two equal instalments, in 2 and 4 mos. from registration.

HOLLIER, JAMES, grocer, Albion-house, Forest-hill. May 3. 5s. by three equal instalments, in 2, 4, and 6 mos.—last secured.

HUMPHREYS, JOHN, leather seller, Holloway. April 19. 7s. 6d. by three equal instalments, in 1, 3, and 5 mos. from registration.

JACKSON, CHARLES, spade maker, Harborne. April 13. 1s. in 1 mo. from date of deed. Trust. R. J. Cooper, auctioneer, Oldbury.

JUDD, JAMES, builder, Greyhound-rd, Fulham New Town. May 6. 5s. by two equal instalments, in 6 weeks and 2 mos. from first payment.

LEMAITRE, FRANCIS, portmanteau manufacturer, Oxford-st. May 6. 5s. by three instalments of 2s. 2s., and 1s., in 3, 6, and 9 mos. Trusts. L. Harris, leather merchant, Vero-st. Lincoln's-inn-fields, and T. C. Hudson, Birmingham agent, Aldermanbury.

MAVIN, GEORGE, jun., builder, Spennymoor. May 13. 6s. 3d. on June 1, 1869.

MAWSON, GEORGE, toy dealer, Southport. May 5. 5s. on July 19.

MAXWELL, ROBINSON, and LEGGE, JOSEPH WILLIAM, grocers, Old Kent-rd. April 12. Trusts. A. B. Neame, wholesale sugar dealer, and J. Rendell, tea merchant, both Eastcheap.

NELSON, JOHN, innkeeper, West Hartlepool. April 29. 10s. on registration. Trust. R. H. Young, gentleman, West Hartlepool.

NEEDHAM, JOHN, provision dealer, Rusholme, near Manchester. April 20. 3s. by two equal instalments, in 2 and 4 mos. from registration. Trusts. W. Needham, warehouseman, Sale, and R. Needham, provision dealer, Manchester.

PALMER, GEORGE FREDERICK, licensed victualler, Birmingham. April 14. Trusts. E. T. Pickmere, wine merchant, and J. Fulford, maltster, both Birmingham.

PEARCE, JOSEPH, draper, Chesterfield. March 29. Trust. W. Sadler, merchant, Manchester.

PICKARD, RICHARD, grocer, Canon, near Cardiff. April 23. Trust. F. C. Hill, accountant, Cardiff.

PIGGOTT, JOHN, watchmaker, Ross. April 12. Trust. H. Carter, wholesale jeweller, Birmingham.

SHAW, JAMES, woollen manufacturer, Arthur's Greenfield. April 18. by two equal instalments, in 4 and 8 mos. Trusts. J. Shaw, and J. Shaw, weavers; W. Shaw, woollen manufacturer, all Arthur's; and C. Earnshaw, boot dealer, Oldham.

SPYER, JAMES, merchant, Billiter-st. May 3. Trusts. S. Isaac, merchant, East India-dock, Leadenhall-st.; J. Smith, broker, Leadenhall-st.; G. Little, merchant, Cullum-st.; and E. S. Haywood, widow, Oxford-rd, Liverpool-rd.

STEPHENSON, JAMES, grocer, Sunderland. April 12. 15s. in 4, 8, and 12 mos. from March 21,—secured.

THARLE, JOSEPH, straw hat manufacturer, Luton. April 5. 6s. WARHAM, MARY, widow, draper, Tunstall. April 19. 7s. 6d. by two instalments of 3s. 6d.—secured.

WEBBER, FREDERICK, draper, Devises. April 23. Trust. T. G. R. Harding, warehouseman, Bristol.

WHITE, ROBERT, wine merchant, Fen-ct, Fenchurch-st. April 8. 2s. 6d. in 4 mos. from registration.

WILBRAHAM, ANN, widow, Stapleford. April 14. Trust. J. Bainbow, grocer, Nottingham.

WILSON, CHARLES, tailor, Kingtonley. April 24. 5s. on June 1.

WILLIAMS, JANE, widow, provision dealer, Liverpool. April 13. Trusts. R. S. Danson, and E. Jackson, provision merchants, both Liverpool.

WOOD, HENRY, ironmonger, Church Streeton. April 10. Trust. H. Weatherby, accountant, Shrewsbury.

YOUNG, WILLIAM, draper, Grove-pl. Brompton. April 19. Trusts. J. Ellerton, warehouseman, St. Paul's-churchyard, and S. Walkden, warehouseman, Lawrence-lane.

ERRATUM.

Gazette, May 4.

BRIGGS (not Bugge, as previously advertised), JAMES ISAAC, draper, Prescott.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

BIRTHS.

BESLEY.—On the 7th inst., at 4, Belgrave-villas, Barrington-road, Brixton, S.W., the wife of Edward T. B. Besley, Esq., barrister, of a daughter.

HERAPATH.—On the 7th inst., at 1, Kidbrooke-park, Blackheath, the wife of Edwin John Herapath, Esq., barrister-at-law, of a son.

KNIGHT.—On the 8th inst., at 23, Castle-street, Hereford, the wife of James Henry Knight, Esq., solicitor, of a daughter.

NORRAGE.—On the 5th inst., at East Dereham, Norfolk, the wife of Charles B. L. Norrage, Esq., solicitor, of a son.

WEEKS.—On the 9th inst., at 4, Shaftesbury-terrace, Kensington, the wife of Thomas H. Weeks, Esq., solicitor, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

ROBERTS—RODGERS.—On the 5th inst., at St. Mary's Church, Sandown-park, Liverpool, Edward Francis Roberts, Esq., solicitor, Chester, to Agnes, second daughter of the late Robert Rodgers, Esq., of Liverpool.

DEATHS.

DEVONSHIRE.—On the 26th inst., at Holford-square, Pentonville, aged 77, Mr. Thomas Harris Devonshire, for nearly fifty years the highly esteemed and confidential clerk of Messrs. Freshfields, of Bank-buildings.

ELTON.—On the 5th inst., at Peterborough, aged 30, S. Rutland, Esq., solicitor.

BROOKSBANK.—On the 8th inst., at his house, 2, Barrow-hill place, Regent's-park, aged 80, Thomas Brooksbank, for nearly fifty years of No. 14, Gray's-inn-square.

BARNES.—On the 5th inst., at St. Catherine's, Hornsea, aged 64, Elizabeth, widow of Keith Barnes, of 7, Spring-gardens, and 8, Upper Portland-place.

BEECHAN.—On the 5th inst., at 8, Magdalen-road, St. Leonard's-on-Sea, aged 70, William Palm Beechan, Esq., solicitor, late of Hawkchurch, Salop, aged 68, James Goulbourn Etches, Esq., solicitor.

GILL.—On the 5th inst., aged 68, Matthew Gill, Esq., of Knaresborough, solicitor.

ROSE.—On the 12th inst., at 100, Barnsbury-road, N., Elizabeth, widow of the late Joseph Rose, Esq., Master of the Supreme Court of Tasmania, and third daughter of the late William Henry Rowe, Esq., barrister-at-law.

BREAKFAST—EPPE'S COCOA—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Eppe's attained by his homoeopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Eppe has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by the Trade only in 1lb. tins, and 1lb. tin-lined packets, labelled "JAMES EPPE and Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London."

PARTRIDGE AND COOPER
WHOLESALE & RETAIL STATIONERS,

92, FLEET-STREET, AND 1 & 2, CHANCERY-LANE, LONDON, E.C.

Carriage paid to the Country on Orders exceeding 20s.

DRAFT PAPER, 4s. 6d., 6s., 7s., 7s. 9d., and 9s. per ream.

BRIEF PAPER, 17s. 6d., and 23s. 6d. per ream.

FOOLCAP PAPER, 10s. 6d., 13s. 6d., and 18s. 6d. per ream.

CREAM LAID NOTE, 3s., 4s., and 5s. per ream.

LARGE CREAM LAID NOTE, 4s., 6s., and 7s. per ream.

LARGE BLUE NOTE, 3s., 4s., and 6s. per ream.

ENVELOPE, CREAM OR BLUE, 4s. 6d., and 6s. 6d. per 1000.

THE "TRIPLE" ENVELOPE, extra secure, 9s. 6d. per 1000.

FOOLCAP OFFICIAL ENVELOPE, 1s. 6d. per 100.

THE NEW "VELLUM WOVE CLUB-HOUSE" NOTE, 9s. 6d. per ream.

"We would direct particular attention to their New Club-house Paper; in our opinion it is the very best paper we ever wrote upon."—London Mirror.

INDENTURE SKINS, Printed and Machine-ruled to hold twenty or thirty folios, 9d. each, 3s. per dozen.

RECORDS FOLIOLETS, Ruled 1s. 6d. each, 17s. per dozen.

RECORDS OR MEMORIALS, 6d. each, 5s. 6d. per dozen.

LEDGERS, DAY-BOOKS, CASH-BOOKS, LETTER OR MINUTE-BOOKS. An immense stock in various bindings.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE-LIST of Inkstands, Postage Scales, Copying Presses, Writing Cases, Despatch Boxes, Oak and Walnut Stationery Cabinets, and other useful articles adapted to Library or Office, post free.

Established 1841.

IMMEDIATE ANNUITIES GRANTED by the EMPEROR LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, for the following sums deposited:—

At age.	For £100.	For £200.	For £300.	For £500.
75	17 13 6	35 7 0	53 0 6	88 7 6
70	14 3 2	28 6 4	42 9 6	79 15 0
65	11 13 4	23 7 10	35 0 3	58 7 1

For forms of proposal, prospectus, &c., apply to EBENEZER CLARKE, Jun., Secretary,
52, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

EXTINCTION OF PREMIUMS.—The New Series of the NORWICH UNION LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY provides a means of relieving a Life Policy from the future payments of Premium according to a system especially advantageous to the Insurer.—For the New Prospectus apply to the Society's Office, 50, Fleet-street, E.C.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, AND GENERAL
LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.
ANNUAL INCOME, steadily increasing, £230,000.
ASSURANCE FUND, safely invested, £1,500,000.
SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Persons who effect Policies on the Participating Scale before June 30th 1869, will be entitled at the NEXT BORNE to one year's additional Share of the Profit over later entrants. Tables of rates, and forms of proposal, can be obtained of GEORGE CUTCLIFFE, Actuary and Secretary,
13, St. James's-square, London, S.W.

ABOLITION OF FIRE INSURANCE
DUTY.—IMPERIAL FIRE OFFICE.
No. 1, Old Broad-street, and 16 and 17, Pall-mall, London.
Established 1803.

Subscribed and Invested Capital, 1,600,000.
Insurances can be effected both at Home and Abroad at Moderate Rates of Premium, and ENTIRELY FREE OF DUTY, after Midsummer next; meanwhile, the exact proportion will be charged provisionally.
Claims liberally and promptly settled.
JAMES HOLLAND, Superintendent.

EQUITABLE REVERSIONARY
INTEREST SOCIETY,
10, Lancaster-place, Strand.
Established 1835. Capital £500,000.

This Society purchases Reversionary Property, Life Interests, and Life Policies of Assurance, and grants Loans on these Securities.

Forms of Proposal may be obtained at the Office.

F. C. CLAYTON, } Joint Secretaries.
C. H. CLAYTON, }

LAW PROPERTY AND LIFE ASSURANCE
SOCIETY, 30, Essex-street, Strand, London.
CAPITAL, £250,000.

DIRECTORS.

Ralph T. Brockman, Esq., Folkestone.
Edward W. Cox, Esq., Serjeant-at-Law, 35, Russell-square.
Geo. Fred. Fox, Esq., Bristol.
E. E. P. Kelsey, Esq., The Close, Salisbury.
John Mead, Esq., 2, King's-bench-walk, Temple.
H. Paul, Esq., M.P., 33, Devonshire-place.

MEDICAL ADVISER.

Sir Henry Thompson, M.B., F.R.C.S., 35, Wimpole-street.
CONSULTING ACTUARY—F. G. P. Nelson, Esq., F.R.S.
SECRETARY—Edward S. Barnes, Esq.

THE NATIONAL REVERSIONARY
INVESTMENT COMPANY (Instituted 1837), for the Purchase of Absolute or Contingent Reversions, Life Interests, and Policies of Assurance on Lives.

Office—No. 63, Old Broad-street, London, E.C.
JOHN PEMBERTON HEYWOOD, Esq., Chairman.
EDWIN WARD SCADDING, Esq., Deputy-Chairman.
Solicitors—Messrs. Iliffe, Russell, & Iliffe, Bedford-row.
Actuary—Robert Tucker, Esq., the Pelican Life Assurance Company.

Forms for submitting Proposals for Sale may be obtained at the Offices of the Company.

G. A. RENDALL, Secretary.

IMPERIAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

CHIEF OFFICE.—No. 1, Old Broad-street, London.

BRANCH OFFICE.—No. 16, Pall-mall, London.

INSTITUTED 1820.

The outstanding sums assured by this Company, with the Bonuses accrued thereon, amounting to about 2,500,000s., the Assets, consisting entirely of Investments in first-class securities, amount to upwards of 950,000s.

The Assurance Reserve Fund alone is equal to more than nine times the premium income.

It will hence be seen that ample Security is guaranteed to the policy holders. Attention is invited to the prospectus of the company, from which it will appear that all kinds of insurances may be effected on the most moderate terms at the most liberal conditions.

The company also grants annuities and endowments. Prospectuses may be obtained at the offices as above, and he agents throughout the kingdom.

ANDREW BADEN, Actuary and Manager.

LAW UNION INSURANCE COMPANY
No. 123, CHANCERY-LANE.

CHAIRMAN.—Sir William Foster, Bart.

DEPUTY-CHAIRMAN.—James Cuddon, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Goldsmith's-building, Temple.

This Company is prepared to make immediate ADVANCE on Mortgage of Life Interests, Reversions, Freeholds, long Leaseholds, and to purchase Reversions, whether in life or contingent.

The Directors invite the attention of Solicitors and others to their new form of Whole World and Unconditional Policy, which affords peculiar and very great advantages Mortgagees and others.

Every description of Fire and Life Insurance business transacted.

Annuities granted on favourable terms. Prospectuses, copies of the Directors' Report, and information sent on application to FRANK M'GEDY, Actuary and Secretary.

ANNUITIES AND REVERSIONS.

LAW REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY.

66, CHANCERY-LANE, LONDON.

CHAIRMAN.—The Right Hon. Russell Gurney, Q.C., 1 Recorder of London.

DEPUTY CHAIRMAN.—Sir W. J. Alexander, Bart., Q.C.

Reversions and Life Interests purchased. Immediate Deferred Annuities granted in exchange for Reversions and Contingent Interests.

Annuities, Immediate, Deferred, and Contingent, and Endowments, granted on favourable terms.

Loans may also be obtained on the security of Reversionary Properties and Forms of Proposal, and all further information, may be had at the office. C. B. OLABON.

CONTENTS—REPORTS.

To Readers and Correspondents.

All communications must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

SUBSCRIPTION TO THE LAW TIMES.

Paid in advance:—	£	s.	d.
One year	2	13	0
Half a year	1	7	6
On credit or for separate numbers:—
Single numbers (stamped)	0	1	1
" (unstamped)	0	1	0
Double numbers (stamped)	0	1	7½
" (unstamped)	0	1	6

NOTICE.

The Nineteenth Volume of the LAW TIMES REPORTS is now complete, and may be uniformly and strongly bound at the LAW TIMES Office, price 4s. 6d.

THE Law and the Lawyers.

We understand that the ATTORNEY-GENERAL has amended the Bankruptcy Bill by abolishing the district courts altogether and at once.

THE new Bankruptcy Bill will effect a very considerable saving in the expenses of administering the law. This saving will be as follows: Eight district commissioners, viz., Birmingham, Bristol, Exeter, Leeds (2), Liverpool, Manchester, and Newcastle, at 1800*l.* per annum, each, 14,400*l.*; eleven registrars at 1000*l.* each, 11,000*l.*; official assignees, clerks, rents of offices, &c., 31,477*l.* 16s. 6d.; and an estimated reduction in the expenses of the London court of 14,000*l.*, making a total of 70,477*l.* 16s. 6d.

TRINITY Term, the last of the legal year, commences to-day. The arrears of business are considerable. In the Queen's Bench the new trial paper contains 2 rules for judgment and 54 for argument; the special paper, 2 for judgment and 50 for argument, making together with 7 enlarged rules no less than 115, besides the Crown paper. The Common Pleas has 2 enlarged rules and 4 for judgment in the new trial paper, and in the special paper 45, with 4 registration appeals—a total of 85. In the Exchequer the special paper has two rules for judgment and 28 for argument, and in the new trial paper 3 for judgment and 30 for argument, making 63. The total of the arrears of the of the courts is 263.

A NEW duty has been found for recorders. They are to be the umpires in trade disputes between masters and men. Mr. PORE, the Recorder of Bolton, has been called upon to arbitrate between the carpenters and joiners of that borough and their employers, and, what is still more to the credit of their common choice, he has arranged terms of settlement satisfactory to both parties, and by which they have voluntarily agreed to abide. Recorders are, perhaps, the fittest men who could be found for such a work, and they will, we doubt not, be very ready to undertake it whenever wanted; but should it not be remembered in their salaries, which are very small. In such cases they could not require a fee; but if they thus make themselves generally useful to the community, whose officers they are, should they not be more liberally remunerated?

BOXING matches and prize fights have been virtually put an end to by statute in the State of Illinois. It has been enacted, "That any person who shall send, cause to be sent, published, or otherwise made known, and challenge to fight what is commonly known as a prize fight, or shall accept such challenge, or who shall engage in such prize fight, or go into training preparatory to such fight, or act as trainer for any person contemplating a participation in such fight, and any person acting as aider or abettor, backer, umpire, trainer, second, surgeon, assistant or reporter at such fight, or in preparation for such fight, shall, upon conviction thereof, be confined in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than ten years." And that, "Any person who shall be in any way connected with any sparring or boxing exhibition shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not less than 100 dols., nor more than 1000 dols., and confined in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than one year."

THE failure of the attempt of Parliament to perform the functions of a Court of Equity in the matter of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company, was recently very forcibly pointed out by Vice-Chancellor STUART. Referring to the frequent applications to Parliament, he said, "The object of those applications was to induce the Legislature to alter the rights of the contending parties; rights, too, acquired under previous Acts of Parliament. Other delays have arisen from endeavours to get rid of the orders made by this court in July 1866 for the benefit of the company and its creditors. The attempts to get rid of those orders delayed the decree for a general and complete administration of the affairs of the company till Feb. 1867. But since that time the continued struggle before Parliament to procure enactments which would give one class of creditors and shareholders rights over another class to which, under the provisions of the existing law, they were not entitled, has produced still further obstruction. For all purposes of substantial benefit to the great body of the creditors and shareholders these proceedings before Parliament have been fruitless. Then again, the Arrangement Act of 1867, which, in consequence of these protracted, expensive, and fruitless struggles did not receive the Royal assent till the 20th Aug. 1867 has entirely failed to accomplish its only important function. It is entitled 'An Act to authorise the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company to raise a sum of money for the satisfaction of certain claims, and for other purposes relating to the undertaking of the company.' Parliament was told that unless the Act was passed no money could be raised, and on the faith of that representation the present body of directors were appointed, with power to raise money, and for that purpose the property of the company has been withdrawn from the protection of this court. The contests in Parliament have, in truth, placed the affairs of the company in the position in which they now are. Those contests have been continued and are still going on. The powers of this court are in themselves amply sufficient to deal with the rights and interests of all the parties before it; but if those rights and interests are to be interfered with by contests in Parliament, the arm of the court is powerless to render assistance." We trust that Parliament will take the hint given by the VICE-CHANCELLOR.

THE LAW OF HYPOTHEC.

THE Scotch tenant farmers are agitating for a change in the law of hypothec, and with such good effect that the Scotch county members are vying with one another which shall enjoy the honour of effecting the desired reform.

HYPOTHEC in Scotland is very like the law of distress in England, but it is not identical. Here a landlord can distrain only for rent actually due, and only for rent that has been in arrear for a limited time. But hypothec in Scotland is the charge which the landlord has upon the chattels of his tenant for future rent and with which those chattels remain charged into whose hands soever they may pass. Whether this great power was the cause or the consequence we are not informed, but its practical effect is to enable the landlord to give a year's credit for his rent; that is to say, where a tenant holds on a long lease, it is customary for him to retain a year's rent in hand, which is equivalent to a loan by his landlord to that amount, and relieves him from the necessity of supplying so much capital. But for this prospective charge upon the tenant's goods and chattels, it is manifest that the landlord would not, because with safety he could not, give to the tenant this accommodation.

If, therefore, the law is attended with such an advantage to the tenants, it will be asked, with wonder, Why are they so anxious to change it? The liability can never be an inconvenience to a solvent tenant, and to an insolvent tenant it can have no other inconvenience than that it prevents him from making away with his goods and cheating his landlord. The reason assigned for the demand is very curious. It is this, and this only—that by giving the landlord so great a security for his rent, it encourages him to be less careful in the selection of tenants, whence results an increase of competitors for farms that go into the market, and which competition raises

IN PARLIAMENT.
BRADFORD WATER BILL—
Loss of lord of manor—Neighbouring landowner	439
JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.
MURPHY AND ANOTHER v. GLASS—
Victoria—Equitable plea—Surety and principal	401
COURT OF APPEAL IN CHANCERY.
PARDO v. BINGHAM—
Retrospective Act—19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 10—Administration	464
CHILTON AND OTHERS v. THE EARL OF DURHAM—
Trust estate—Constructive notice	467
WHITNEY v. SMITH—
Trustee and cestui que trust—Solicitor and client	468
ROLLS COURT.
HORSLEY v. COX—
Costs—Taxation—Three Counsel	473
PLEWLEY v. HORRELL—
Compromise of suit—Specific performance	473
V. C. MALINS' COURT.
STEELE v. THE MIDLAND RAILWAY COMPANY—
Supplemental bill—Amendment of supplemental bill	475
V. G. JAMES' COURT.
UNITED STATES OF AMERICA v. MCBRAE—
Residence—Rights incidental to the power of Sovereignty—
Principal and agent	476
COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.
GOLDING (app.) v. STOCKING (resp.)—
Highway—Cattle straying on highway—Right of pasturage on sides of highway	479
REA v. THE GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY—
Poor-rate—Valuation list—Appeal	481
FOSTER (app.) v. HULL (resp.)—
21 & 22 Vict. c. 27, ss. 3 and 40—Conviction for drunkenness
DAVORD (app.) v. TAYLOR (resp.)—
Alibi—Offence against licence—Gaming	483
GRIFFITH (app.) v. PLACE (resp.)— Weights and measures—Store, place, &c., where goods are sold or weighed for conveyance	484
SILVER RABBIT, LEVISON v. THE QUEEN (in error)—
Central Criminal Court—Constitution of the Court	485
COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.
HELIET AND OTHERS v. NEVILL—
Joint action by solvent partner and assignees of bankrupt partner—Fraudulent preference	490
COURT OF EXCHEQUER.
DEWIS AND OTHERS v. WRENCH—
Judgment—Debtor—Stock and shares in a company	492
KNIGHT v. KING—
Manor—Common of pasture on wastes	494
CORREAU v. LEIGH—
Error—Special case—C. L. P. A. 1854, s. 32	496
COURT OF PROBATE.
In the Goods of G. CASMORE—
Will—Discretion	497
CLARE AND FOWLER v. CLARE—
Testamentary suit—Not know and approve of contents	497
CROWN CASES RESERVED.
REA v. KEAN AND OTHERS—
Evidence—Bankruptcy examinations	498
REA v. BIRCHES—
Plea—Plea—Evidence	499
DIVORCE AND MATRIMONIAL CAUSES COURT.
GAILLARD, GRAMAM AND GRIFFITHS—
Defence—Settlements—Power of court to revise	500
LEADING ARTICLES, SUMMARIES,
CORRESPONDENCE, &c.
50 CORRESPONDENTS
LEADING ARTICLES:—
Notes of the Week	61
The Law of Hypothec	61
Leveson's Case	62
The County Boards Bill	62
The Compound Householder's Bill	62
The Bankruptcy Law Amendment Bill	62
Privileged Communications and Express Mail	63
The Transfer of Companies	63
Courts of Appeal	64
The County Courts and their Judges	64
Intants in Chancery	65
SAYINGS AND DOINGS OF THE COURTS
65
ERINION LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions	67
LEGISLATION AND JURISPRUDENCE:—
House of Commons	68
The Irish Church Bill	68
STATE AND INVESTMENT JOURNAL:—
Stock and Share Markets	69
Public Companies	69
Reports of Sales	69
SOLICITORS' JOURNAL:—
Notes of New Decisions	69
Judges' Chambers	69
Improvement for Debt	69
Political Law and Next of Kin	70
Creditors under Estates in Chancery	70
Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35	70
Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the Bank of England	71
THE BENCH AND THE BAR
71
MAGISTRATE AND PARISH LAWYER:—
Notes of New Decisions	71
Suffolk Police Court	71
Suffolk County Justices	71
REAL PROPERTY LAWYER:—
Notes of New Decisions	72
JOINT STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL:—
Notes of New Decisions	72
NEWCASTLE LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions	72
LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL:—
Incorporated Law Society	73
COURT COURTS:—
Southampton County Court	73
BANKRUPTCY LAW:—
Notes of New Decisions	73
Oxford County Court	73
Bankruptcy Reform	74
CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION
74
NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE
75
THE LAW LIBRARY:—
Leonard's Precedents of Pleadings in Equity in the County
Courts	75
Scott's Commentaries on the History, Constitution, and Chartered Franchises of the City of London	75
LEGAL OBITUARY:—
Thomas Smith, Esq.	76
THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS:—
Business and Cause List for Trinity Term 1869	76
THE GAZETTES
76
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS
70
CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.
Four lines or thirty words	3s. 6d.
Every additional ten words	0s. 6d.
Advertisements specially ordered for the first page are charged one-fourth more than the above scale.
Advertisements must reach the office not later than five o'clock on Thursday afternoon.
VOL. XLVII.—No. 1364.

rents. By such a chain of reasoning is this change in the law advocated; but it is so far-fetched, so seemingly inadequate, one cannot but suspect that there are other more powerful reasons in the background, which the opponents of hypothec do not like to avow—as, indeed, is generally the case in politics as in private life, the ostensible motives, reasons, or excuses being rarely the real ones.

LEVERSON'S CASE.

WE have received the following communication from Mr. W. F. FINLASON. It must possess great interest for all our readers. He says:—"I was very much interested in your reference to the case in the State Trials, in which it appears that the aldermen on one occasion, before the Central Criminal Court, all asserted their right to take part in the sentence to be pronounced; and it confirms the opinion I find already entertained that the judgment in Leverson's case was erroneous. It is at variance with an unbroken chain of authority and usage from the reign of EDWARD IV. to our own time. It has always been a principle of the Constitution that laymen should be associated with lawyers in the commissions. It was held in that reign that if a layman is so associated, the others cannot proceed without him. In that reign the judicial government of the city was vested in the mayor (who by old custom was the coroner) and the recorder (as his assessor) with the aldermen, and even before that time it was held that a judgment in a case tried at Newgate, not before the mayor, was erroneous. Lord COKE, who had been recorder, sets out in his reports several cases at the Old Bailey, and in the commissions of oyer and terminer the mayor comes first, then the Judges, then the recorder and aldermen. In Craik's English Causes Célèbres are reports of several cases at the Old Bailey, in which the Lord Mayor appears to have taken an active part in putting questions; although, of course, as a lay member of the court, he would not interfere in the matters of law. The Act, therefore (4 & 5 Will. 4, c 36), in making the aldermen Judges of the court, adhered to ancient usage. The language of the Act is clear, plain, and express that two or more of the Judges may try a prisoner. LEVERSON was tried by one; and we are told that two means one, because before the Act aldermen and other lay commissioners were never regarded as Judges, because not Judges of law. This, it has been shown, is quite erroneous; but even assuming it to be so, what then? Parliament in plain terms enacted that prisoners should be tried by two Judges. What could the previous practice matter? And if a lay Judge cannot be deemed a Judge, where was the second Judge in Leverson's case? If a second Judge was necessary, the Lord Lord CHIEF JUSTICE sees clearly enough that the same Judge must sit throughout; but he says that a second was not necessary, because, on account of previous practice, two must be taken to mean one. I should have thought otherwise; but it is plain that, as to the practice, it was held by the court in Lord TENTERDEN's time that the practice of a century is of no avail against the terms of a statute. The subject is of great and general interest on account of the bearing it has on quarter sessions jurisdiction; and as the authorities are too numerous to be comprised in a letter, I have to-day published an essay on the subject (a), to which I beg leave to refer."

THE COUNTY BOARDS BILL.

THE cry for elected County Boards to expend the county rates has been raised by two classes of persons, having very different motives.

The first class of clamourers consist of those who believe in the dogma that taxation without representation is tyranny, and that the finances of the counties will be better and more economically administered by a board elected by the ratepayers than by magistrates appointed by the Crown.

The second class of clamourers consists of those who care nothing for the rates, nor for the expenditure, nor for the ratepayers, but whose only desire is to "pull down" the magistracy, and who believe that this measure will help the process.

The second class is vastly more numerous than the first class, and more noisy. Facts and arguments are addressed to them in vain, for their desire is quite apart from the question whether the finances of the counties are or are not well managed, or whether a change of managers is likely to improve the management. If the present administration were perfect, and that which is to succeed were as bad as it could be, still these persons would approve the change, because it gratifies their passion for equality by the process of levelling down. It will be observed that they do not pant for equality by the process of "levelling up."

The Government Bill is designed to satisfy the first class, who are entitled to respectful attention; it does not attempt to win the applause of the second class.

It is admitted on all sides that the finances of the counties are faithfully and economically administered. Indeed it would be wonderful if it were otherwise; for they to whom the management is now entrusted are the persons who have the greatest possible interest in the prudent application of the fund to which they are the largest contributors, and as a rule they comprise the most sensible men of their class, with habits of business, and leisure to devote to it.

It is further admitted that vestry government is not satisfactory. The reason is plain. Parish meetings and parish officers do not represent the parish. A clique of busybodies—a small minority—in fact control the affairs of ninety-nine parishes out of every hundred, the ratepayers generally abstaining from meetings, and shrinking from offices which are troublesome and profitless if honestly performed, and which are consequently resigned to jobbers, who look for some direct or indirect advantage, and to self-important people, whose small vanity is flattered by the petty distinction.

As nobody anticipates any practical advantage from the change, which is allowed to be nothing more than a concession to a popular sentiment, it was obviously prudent to change but little, to preserve as much as possible of the existing element which works so well, and to admit as little as possible of the new element which in its own sphere of action has hitherto worked so ill. It would be manifestly unwise to swamp the existing administration; and the problem to be solved by the Government was, how to reconcile the preservation of the good and yet to admit the regenerative principle. The plan adopted appears to satisfy both of these requirements.

In the first place, it repudiates the parish vestry. The members of the financial board are not to be elected at a parish meeting. The choice is committed to the unions, and each union will have one or more representatives according to its size. This will secure the county against being subjected to the control of parish agitators; for the boards of guardians, composed of collected parishes, will not choose the local busybody of any one parish. The number of representatives will, it is calculated, be but one-fifth of that of the ex officio members; but in practice it will be found here, as at the boards of guardians and the highway boards, that the attendance of the ex officio members is very small, and that the business of the county board will be practically conducted by the representatives of the ratepayers.

Fears have been expressed that there will be a marked line of distinction, and probably much antagonism between the ex-officio and elected members of the board. But experience has proved the groundlessness of this anticipation. They sit together at poor-law boards and highway boards, and no such consequences have arisen. On the contrary, it is noticed that there is more harmony at the boards well attended by the ex-officio members than at others, the presence of gentlemen of position and education exercising a wholesome influence of restraint over their colleagues. The mingling of classes at the proposed financial boards is, in fact, the one great advantage that will result from them, and we trust that the magistrates generally will resolve to take a more active part in county business when associated with the representatives of the board of guardians.

Mr. KNATCHBULL-HUGUESSEN, when introducing the Bill, protested emphatically against a suggestion that the adoption of it should be optional. He objected altogether to optional legislation. It had, he said, half destroyed the value of the Highways Act. If the measure is good, such adoption should be compulsory. If there is a doubt about this, it ought not to be attempted.

Demagogues are already raising the cry that the Bill is a mockery, not worth having, and calling for an unqualified transfer of the county finances to the elect of the parish vestry, itself the nominee of the parish agitator. Nothing short of this will satisfy such objectors, and the prudent course will be to pay no heed to them.

THE COMPOUND HOUSEHOLDER REDIVIVUS.

HE was only scotched, not killed after all. He was declared to be dead and buried; but now we see him again in full vigour, and likely to outlive the youngest of us. With much reluctance, and after many shifts to do without him, Mr. GOSCHEN has submitted to common sense, and in his amended bill he not only restores the compound householder where he flourished before, but he introduces him to all parts of England and Wales, even where he thinks his merits have not been recognised. In short, this new plan of the Poor Law President frankly and fully revives the practice of compounding for rates, only providing judiciously that the terms of composition shall not exceed a reduction of twenty-five per cent. To secure the tenant against disfranchisement, by reason of the rates being paid by the landlord in such case, all compounding landlords are required, under penalty of forfeiture of the privilege of compounding, to give to the overseers quarterly the names of their tenants, and the overseers are required to place those names on the rate book, under a penalty of 40s. for neglect. Thus the franchise is secured to the tenant, and the parishes will continue to enjoy the great convenience of collecting the rates of small tenements from the solvent landlords instead of harassing the insolvent tenant.

The LAW TIMES may fairly congratulate itself on this result. From the beginning of the controversy, as its readers will remember, when the proposition was made from the Radical benches for the abolition of the compound householder, and too hastily conceded to them by Mr. DISRAELI, it was strenuously contended in these pages that the scheme was a needless vexation to ratepayers and parishes, and that the existing law gave ample protection against the disfranchisement of the compound householder. From that time to this we have maintained a continued protest against the change, and contended for a simple repeal of the vexatious clauses in the Conservative Reform Act. We proved that the repeal was easy and safe, and that there was no need for coyness in dealing with the great principle of "personal payment of rates," for the simple reason, that no such principle was to be found in the Reform Act, whatever might have been the intention of the author. This assertion was denied again and again in Parliament and by the newspapers; but now it is tacitly admitted by Mr. GOSCHEN, and that which we have so long and persistently contended for is at length quietly conceded by the Government, and will doubtless be as quietly accepted by the Opposition.

THE BANKRUPTCY LAW AMENDMENT BILL.

THIS Bill has been published as amended, and some important alterations have been made in its provisions, consequent upon suggestions thrown out in the course of the debate on the second reading. It is no longer required that the trustee shall be a creditor, and he is to be appointed by a majority of the creditors in value only. The reason of this provision, is, we believe, to prevent as far as possible that canvass for the trusteeship, which, now that the trustees will be for the most part professional liquidators, is sure to attend a profitable appointment. Creditors whose individual interest in the estate is trifling are usually the majority of the whole body; their votes are given without regard to fitness, and the great creditors are swamped by the small ones. Value, not number, is the right test, even though it should give the preponderance to a few. But we would suggest to the ATTORNEY-GENERAL if it be not practicable to adopt the system of cumulative voting in bankruptcy, giving each creditor a vote, but with additional votes in proportion to the amount of his debt, say one vote for every 30l. This would be manifestly just, and it would secure still more effectually the object for which the change has been made.

It is to be an act of bankruptcy for a debtor to abscond or go abroad with intent to defeat or defraud his creditors, or, for a trader to suffer execution to be levied by seizure and sale for a sum of not less than 50*l.*, or for any person, to have execution levied upon him for 50*l.* and not satisfied. A new clause is devoted to proof of debts and making provision for estimating contingent liabilities.

It was proposed by the original Bill that an order of discharge is not to be made by the court unless the bankrupt has paid 10*s.* in the pound, or a majority in number, representing three-fourths of the creditors, pass a resolution to the effect that the bankruptcy has arisen from unavoidable misfortune, and that they desire his discharge. But by the amended Bill the court may, under any circumstances, use its discretion as to granting such an application.

If the bankrupt do not obtain his discharge the balance of any unpaid claims is to be deemed to be still existing in the nature of a judgment-debt, and to be recoverable as against his property after five years from the date of the bankruptcy.

A new clause enables the trustee to accept a composition, or some general scheme of arrangement, with the consent of a majority in number representing three-fourths in value of the creditors, but it must have the sanction of the court, which, when given, is to be conclusive on all the creditors, so far as relates to debts proveable under the bankruptcy; but no power is given to any majority to award to the bankrupt a general discharge from the debts proveable under a bankruptcy.

For the deed of arrangement is substituted a deed of liquidation, under which the affairs of the debtor will be wound-up by a trustee precisely as if he had been formally adjudicated bankrupt, and the discharge will not be complete until it has been granted by three-fourths of the creditors, and the trustee has reported to the court. The certificate of such discharge by the registrar will then operate as a discharge in bankruptcy.

All dealings between a person who has committed an act of bankruptcy and a person who has knowledge of the fact are void. The debt of the petitioning creditor or creditors must amount to 50*l.*, and the bankruptcy will be liable to be annulled if it should be found that the estate does not produce 50*l.* over and above the cost of realising it.

There are many minor amendments improving the language and construction of the Bill. But these are the most important of the modifications. It will be yet further improved in committee.

PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS AND EXPRESS MALICE.

In writing upon this subject, which is one of growing importance, we will take the opportunity of noticing a work recently published, and now upon our table awaiting review, namely, the third edition of Starkie's Law of Libel and Slander, by Mr. Henry C. Folkard. This edition is one of much greater value than either of the two which preceded it, because the various branches of the law have been extended so as to meet the peculiarities of the present day, and the exigencies which necessarily attend freedom of speech. The rulings of the present Lord Chief Justice in the cases of Hunter v. Skerpe, and Wason v. Walter are equivalent to, and much more perspicuous and easy of application, than a legislative enactment. Mr. Folkard makes full use of the directions to the jury in these remarkable cases—directions which in the latter case were approved on appeal to the full court. And this single feature distinguishes the new edition from its predecessors, and indeed gives it quite a new character.

The arrangement of Starkie is very good, and enables the practitioner at once to fix upon the part to which to direct his attention. For example, we are discussing the question of privilege, and we find a complete summary of the law under the title "occasion; malice in fact." Under that title we have considerations of privilege as attaching to voluntary communications; bona fide communications made to the proper authorities; communications founded on hearsay; indirect communications; bona fide applications to wrong parties, or those having no direct authority to give relief; communications privileged on the ground of interest in the party making or receiving them; publications in vindication of character; communications made in presence of third parties; where communications lose their privilege on the ground of exaggeration and excess; repetition of slander invented by another; and reassertion of slander.

We do not propose to discuss all or any number of these subjects, but only such as may serve to illustrate the case of Lawless v. The Anglo-Egyptian Cotton and Oil Company, L. Rep. 4 Q. B. 262. That case raises a question which must one day, we consider, take a new phase, resulting possibly in a change of the law. It simply comes to this, whether that which is untrue and libellous, uttered at a meeting of shareholders or directors of a company, or any body of persons, is to be held privileged on the simple ground that it was for the interest of such body that the utterance should take place. On this point we would say, can it be for the interest of anyone that an untrue statement should be made? Mr. Justice Mellor, in his judgment said that independently of any authority he was prepared to hold, "that a company having a great number of shareholders, all interested in knowing how their officers conduct themselves, are justified in making a communication in a printed report, relating to the conduct of their officers, to all the shareholders, whether present or absent, if the communication be made without malice and bona fide." To our mind this seems to be a dictum likely to bring about very serious consequences, considering the present proneness of shareholders and the public to suspect not only the servants of companies, but also the directors.

Let us look at the origin of privilege. At Chapter XI. of Mr. Folkard's edition of Starkie we find this passage: "The extensive principle which governs this class of cases, where the existence of express malice is a test of civil responsibility, comprehends all those where the author of the alleged mischief acted in the discharge of any public or private duty, whether legal or moral, which the ordinary exigencies of society, or his own private interest, or even that of another, called upon him to perform, but where the occasion does not furnish an absolute defence independently of the question of intention; as on the one hand, it would be contrary to common convenience to fetter mankind in their ordinary communications by the apprehension of vexatious litigation, so, on the other hand, would it be highly mischievous to allow men to inflict the most cruel injuries to reputation and character with impunity under the cloak and pretence of discharging some duty to themselves or to society, when they were, in fact, actuated by the most malicious intention." The author follows this up with the remark that the law most wisely makes the issue depend on the absence of express malice. It is the wisdom of this which we challenge.

The most prominent class of cases raising the question of privilege is that relating to characters given to servants. Now let this class of cases be compared with that represented by Lawless v. The Anglo-Egyptian Cotton Company. A communication by a master of a servant to a person proposing to engage that servant is a limited communication, limited in its effect, and being so limited, is, if untrue, to be justified on the ground of privilege. The want of care in ascertaining the truth of the communication is counterbalanced by the exigency of the occasion. The consequence of the want of care is limited, and it is no great strain to say that the communication shall be privileged. Now take the case of a large company or a charity. The care to be used in launching a defamatory statement should be proportioned to the probable magnitude of the consequences. In such cases privilege is claimed for an untrue statement, which must inevitably reach the attention of some hundreds or perhaps thousands of persons. This point was noticed by Lord Chief Justice Denman, in Martin v. Strong, 5 Ad. & E. 535, where privilege was claimed for a statement made by the chairman of the governing body of a charity. His Lordship said to counsel, "You set up a very large claim of privilege. There may be a thousand subscribers to a London charity." This remark shows that our view that privilege should be proportioned to the probable magnitude of the consequences is not altogether our own, nor entirely new. Therefore we repeat with the greater confidence that the rule which applies to the case of master and servant ought not to be applied to the case of companies and noncorporate bodies numbering thousands of persons.

It does not seem to have been considered that uttering a libel is a species of negligence. Under any and all circumstances, care should be exercised that injury is not done to another. To take an analogous case, that of a railway company running trains at low fares. It is for the benefit of the public that such trains should be run, yet we should think it preposterous if we attempted to establish the proposition that this fact exempts the company from the exercise of ordinary negligence. But in the utterance of defamation we tolerate any amount of carelessness so long as the occasion is what the law considers privileged, and there is no evidence of malicious intention. It is evidence of malice if the defendant can be proved to have known that what he said was untrue. Should this be enough? Ought not a person to be punished if he has not taken every pains to ascertain the truth of what he affirms? To utter a slander in simple carelessness of belief whether a thing be true or not—which is what ignorance that a thing is untrue amounts to—is an offence, as it appears to us, which ought not to be sheltered under a plea of a privileged occasion.

Mr. Justice Hannen makes a remark in Lawless's case which struck us as somewhat singular. His Lordship said that if, after the report of the directors had served its purpose, by making known to the shareholders facts which it was their interest to know, the statement had been entered in the books of the company to stand for ever a record against the plaintiff that he had had an accusation made against him, that might have been independent malice on the part of the company. But, with all deference, we would ask what effect the entry on the company's books could have, compared with the publication of a defamatory report? The effect in the one case is wholly disproportioned to the effect in the other; yet Mr. Justice Hannen says that the one would be punishable as being malicious, whilst the other would not be so. We confess that this distinction conflicts with our view of what is a fair remedy for a wrong; and, as we said at the opening of this article, we shall hope one day to see an amendment in the law.

In conclusion, we may do that which is now scarcely necessary—recommend Mr. Folkard's work to the attention of the Profession and the public. It is, as now edited, very valuable.

THE TRANSFER OF COMPANIES.

Of late there has been much cause for discontent in connection with the transfer of the business of companies to other companies by which an amalgamation or a merger of the one in the other has been effected. To our knowledge there has been considerable doubt as to the best method of establishing the bona fides of such transfers, and obtaining the redress of grievances by transferred shareholders.

By a recent decision Vice-Chancellor Malins has decided one point—that such a transfer cannot be impeached in the winding-up of the transferee company. This decision was given in the matter of the International Life Assurance Society. This company had power by their deed of settlement, to transfer their business to any other "well-established and responsible company carrying on a similar business." By virtue of this power the directors transferred the business of the society to the Hercules Life and Fire Insurance Company. This latter company was established in 1863, and had been reconstituted in 1865.

In the first place the Vice-Chancellor had to decide whether this company so recently established, and so shortly after its establishment reconstituted, could be considered a well-established and responsible company, and he held that it could not be said to come under that definition.

The next point requiring consideration was whether, the validity of the transfer to the Hercules Company being impeached, the Vice-Chancellor could make an order to wind it up. In this respect Vice-Chancellor Malins held that he was concluded by authority. The only cases mentioned in the judgment are Ex parte Dee, 3 De G. & Sm. 112, where Vice-Chancellor Knight-Bruce, under the early Acts, made a winding-up order under very similar circumstances, and that learned judge also decided that the fact that the business of the company was that of life assurance, involving many outstanding policies, did not render it inexpedient to wind it up. But in that case it does not appear that the validity of the transfer was impeached at the same time that the application to wind-up was made. The view taken by the Lord Justice Turner (confirming the Master of the Rolls) in the next case, which was under the Act of 1862, was that in accordance with which Vice-Chancellor Malins acted. The Lord Justice said, in giving judgment, (L. Rep. 1 Ch. App. 347), "There was much argument at the Bar upon the question of the validity or invalidity of the amalgamation of these companies, and upon several matters bearing upon that question; but in my opinion this is not a point we can decide in this jurisdiction." And subsequently his Lordship added, "If the resolutions for the voluntary winding-up of this company had stood apart from the amalgamation I should have thought the petition ought to have been dismissed on this point also; but the resolutions for winding-up the company voluntarily and for amalgamation are plainly parts of the same transaction, and if the resolution cannot stand as to one part of the transaction, neither, I think, can it stand as to the other part of it." This decision was equivalent to that which Vice-Chancellor Malins gave in express words. If, he said, it was desired to impeach the validity of the transfer on the winding-up petition, it must be decided in a cause instituted for that purpose, and therefore he declined to make the order to wind-up.

There are some facts connected with the amalgamation of the International Company and the Hercules Company which are edifying in connection with the business of promotion. The former company was twenty-five years old, and had a capital of a million. This business was transferred to the Hercules Company without any investigation having been made as to the stability of that company beyond any inquiry of its manager, a Mr. Shrubbs, who stated that it was flourishing. This being all the investigation made, a contract is agreed to on behalf of the International Company, which contract was brought about by a gentleman well known in connection with companies, who for three months' services—he having incurred no expenses—was to receive 8000*l.* Mr. Shrubbs, indeed, deposed to sixty interviews, which, at the above rate of payment would be paid for at something over 130*l.* a piece. The Vice-Chancellor said fairly enough that 10*l.* a-piece for such interviews would have been ample remuneration. Another incident there is equally instructive. Mr. Richardson, the secretary, becoming a director, and well knowing the ruinous condition of the affairs, although it did not transpire what salary he received, or what was his age, there being an arrangement to take over the officers, was paid 15,000*l.*, 5000*l.* in money. "These," said the Vice-Chancellor, "are transactions fraught with great suspicion, and do not commend themselves to my judgment, so contrary are they to prudence and common sense."

Everybody, of course, will echo this sentiment, and only regret the conclusion was, that such transactions were held binding on both companies.

We have only to remark, in conclusion, on the difficulty which may attend the winding-up of insurance companies. Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce, did not, it would appear, see so much difficulty in the matter as did Vice-Chancellor Malins. The former learned Judge did not regard the outstanding policies as a fact rendering a winding-up inexpedient. The latter, on the other hand, said: "Of all cases under the Winding-up Acts, an insurance office is the most difficult to terminate, in consequence of the duration of the policies. Here there are 2000 which may not expire for half a century." We think the view of Vice-Chancellor Malins the right one, and that difficulty should be felt in winding-up such a business.

In the case of the Hercules Company, which we have been discussing, and which is reported 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 433, the petition to wind-up was ordered to stand over until the validity of the transfer had been tested.

COURTS OF APPEAL.

THE London Chatham and Dover Railway Company's Arrangement Act 1867, by its 31st section confers a privilege of resort to the Court of Appeal in the first instance, which cannot but be regarded as valuable and deserving of extension to a much wider circle of litigants. The privilege, indeed, is extended by the Court of Chancery as a matter of practice in administration suits, with the object of saving expense. Now the question is why there should be any restraint placed upon the right of going to the Court of Appeal in the first instance. As remarked by Stuart, V.C., in a case which was before him during the present month (20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 432) it is very desirable, if possible, to avoid two hearings of a case.

This view we perceive is taken by the Judicature Commissioners in their report, but not in its full extent. It is only in the case of an appeal to the House of Lords that the appellants may skip the intermediate court, and go straight from the court of first instance to the ultimate Court of Appeal. "A direct appeal to the House of Lords without going through the Court of Appeal might," they think, "be allowed in all cases in which an appeal on matters of law would be to the Court of Appeal"—if the respondent consents to that course being taken, but not otherwise. This limitation is perhaps a very proper one; but, having this limitation, we do not see why the rule of practice applicable to appeals to the House of Lords should not be applied to appeals to the Court of Appeal which the Judicature Commissioners propose to appoint. The Court of Appeal will be very strong, consisting of the Lord Chancellor, the Lords Justices, the Master of the Rolls, and three other permanent Judges, with three of the Judges of the Supreme Court to be nominated annually by the Crown. The Court of Appeal thus constituted would be empowered to sit either as a full court, or in divisions, the number of Judges sitting together in any division never to be less than three.

It is not to be supposed that suitors would very frequently avail themselves of the privilege of going in the first instance before this court, the process of which would necessarily be more expensive; but as an appeal is to be in the nature of a rehearing it would be very important could the whole of an important case be laid in a perfect form before a strong court such as the proposed Court of Appeal would be. This would have a double effect; there would be but one trial instead of two, and the case would be thoroughly got-up once instead of got-up imperfectly, perhaps, in the first instance, with the Court of Appeal in view.

THE COUNTY COURTS AND THEIR JUDGES.

WE last week incidentally referred to the very onerous duties which have been imposed upon these judges by the new jurisdictions, and pointed out that they have a most substantial claim to such salaries as will compensate them in the way in which Judges of the Superior Courts, many of whose cases they will now have to try, are compensated. In confirmation and support of our view thus expressed, a pamphlet has just been published, written, we are given to understand, by a learned County Court Judge well known in the Midland Counties for the breadth and soundness of his judgments.

The claim which we, in common with the writer of the pamphlet, put forward on the part of the Judges, is amply justified by the extraordinary increase of business in the County Courts. Between 1864 and 1867, there was an increase in the number of plaintiffs tried, and cases sent for trial of no less than 203,700, in the number of causes determined 140,388, in the amount sued for of 434,452*l.*, and on the amount recovered of 170,874*l.*; and in the amount of fees received of 66,994*l.* "And," says our author, "of all these measures there is none of which the effect has been more marked, both as regards the decrease of pressure in the Superior Courts, and the increase of business in the County Courts, than the Act of 1867, which, as has been stated, further increased the original common law jurisdiction of those courts, and also empowered the Superior Courts, under certain circumstances, to transfer to the County Courts causes of any amount, and of almost every description. Of this power the Superior Courts have availed themselves freely; and the main object of the measure, the relieving those courts of a large amount of their business, which was becoming too heavy for the judicial staff, has been attained. The number of writs actually issued in the three Superior Courts of Common Law, in 1868, the year following the passing of the Act, was 83,174, as against 127,702 in 1867, showing a diminution of rather more than one-third. And of the writs actually issued, a considerable portion were sent, under the powers of the Act, to the County Courts for trial."

So much for the increase of the business. In the next place we have to regard that which is of more importance, namely, the character of the cases tried, because it is according to the intrinsic gravity of the causes and not according to their number that the Judge who tries them should be remunerated. Upon this point the writer of the pamphlet says: "Anyone who now attended, for the first time, a County Court, held either in London or in any important town on a country circuit, would be surprised at the number, the variety, and the importance of the questions at issue. Rights of way, rights of water, rights of light; actions of ejectment, involving the nicest points both of fact and of law; difficult and important questions turning upon the law of railways; long and complicated suits for the execution of trusts, for the specific performance of contracts, for the dissolution and winding-up of partnerships;—all these questions, and others as important (not to mention admiralty and bankruptcy matters), are now constantly tried by courts which originally were intended to dispose of little more, and which are commonly supposed still to dispose of little more, than disputed tradesmen's accounts."

Without more being said, we think it must be palpable that the Judges of County Courts are rapidly approaching to the level, in point of judicial importance, of the puisne Judges of our common law courts, and of the Vice-Chancellors in our courts of equity, and that they should be paid proportionately. We will, therefore, proceed to consider a point raised by our author as to limiting the amount, beyond which the jurisdiction of the County Courts shall not extend. He says: "It may well be expedient to confine the jurisdiction of the County Courts to cases of a certain class; but it is difficult to see the principle upon which any class of cases over which the courts are to have jurisdiction should have a compulsory limit as to amount. It must be obvious to any lawyer that the amount in dispute in a cause is no test whatever of either the importance of it to the parties, or the legal difficulties which it may present. An action of trespass where a shilling's worth of grass has been destroyed, a claim of 20*l.* for goods bargained and sold, a suit for the administration of a trust fund of 100*l.*, may be, and often is, as troublesome and as difficult, and may decide a principle as important, as a case of the same kind where the amount in dispute is a very heavy one. If the Judges of County Courts are competent to try the one, they are competent to try the other. The Legislature has, in the Bankruptcy Act now before Parliament, recognised this inconsistency, and given to the County Courts jurisdiction in bankruptcy without limit as to amount: though in 'The County Courts Amendment Act 1857,' the inconsistency still exists of allowing the judges to try certain causes to any amount if they are transmitted from the Superior Courts; but precluding them from trying (except by consent) the same class of causes beyond a certain amount in the first instance. If, however, it be thought inexpedient to abolish the limit as to amount altogether, it is but reasonable that the parties in an equitable or any other proceeding should have the power which they already have in common law causes and in admiralty matters, of tying it before the County Courts up to any amount by consent."

We most decidedly agree in the view that jurisdiction in all cases should be given by consent, and this must be the next step in the improvement of County Court jurisdiction. On the question whether it would be expedient to abolish the limit as to amount unconditionally, we have our doubts, and should be disposed to give an opinion in favour of retaining this limitation.

Another point raised in the pamphlet relates to the injurious effect of the Act of 1866, providing for the gradual extinction of the office of high bailiff and the devolution of the duties of that office upon the registrar. We agree in the inexpediency of this, and in the advisability of adopting a suggestion made to us by a correspondent, that in lieu of the high bailiffs, marshals or associates should be appointed who should be legally qualified to assist the Judge in the discharge of his judicial functions.

Finally we would revert to the question of payment to the Judges in the words of the author of this very skilfully compiled pamphlet. He says, "But the changes in the constitution of the County Courts have been so gradual, that the inconsistency and injustice of requiring the Judges to sit as Judges of common law, equity, admiralty, and bankruptcy, with no professional rank, and at a salary of the same amount as that of a taxing master in the common law courts, have been hitherto overlooked. The County Courts have achieved a success far beyond the expectations of their founders; they have outlived the not unnatural jealousy of the Profession; they are rising year by year in the respect and confidence of the public; and year by year fresh duties and increased responsibilities are cast upon them. It behoves the Legislature which imposes these duties and responsibilities to grant, in a spirit of wise and just liberality, a fitting position to those who have to perform and sustain them."

INFANTS IN CHANCERY.

A CASE of Wright v. Tanner, before Vice-Chancellor Stuart (20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 429), throws some light upon the position which infants now occupy before the Court of Chancery, and reveals an important alteration in a matter of practice in suits where infants are defendants.

The application in that case was that a person who was an infant at the time of a partnership agreement, to which he was a party and which he did nothing actively to affirm after coming of age, might be discharged as to proceedings in Chancery for the dissolution of the partnership. The infant came of age on the 2nd Aug. 1868, and on the 4th of that month the Chief Clerk in Chancery made a certificate in the cause, finding that capital to be brought into the concern by the infant was one of the assets of the partnership which were irrecoverable. The plaintiff in the cause forcibly dissolved the partnership, one of his reasons for doing so being that he had been imposed on by a representation that the infant was a person of full age, and he applied to vary the certificate so as to make the infants' capital recoverable.

The short ruling of the Vice-Chancellor as to the infant, after taking time to consider the matter, was that the decree dissolving the partnership having been made during the infancy, the Chief Clerk had properly certified that his share of the capital was irrecoverable. His Honour had previously held that notwithstanding the disaffirmance and disclaiming of the infant, the plaintiff could not be prevented from going on to a decree against him, and overruled the motion to stay proceedings. "Whatever rights may accrue to the infant from his infancy," he said, "whatever right he may have to say that he is not bound to contribute his share of the capital—which seems to be the view taken by the Chief Clerk—whatever right he may have for declining to take the salary, I cannot refuse the plaintiff his right of going on to get the best decree he can against this infant, considering that it has already been decreed that the partnership should be dissolved, and accounts taken, and that upon that being done, and the certificate made, the court would further consider the matter."

The consideration of the Vice-Chancellor is given most carefully to the status of infant defendants in Chancery. A great change, he observes, has taken place in the law and practice of this court with respect to suits of this kind. At one time every decree of the court made against an infant, although a guardian ad litem was appointed, gave upon the face of it leave to the infant to show cause against the decree when he came of age; and the time allowed for that purpose was generally six months. But the interest of infants was more strongly guarded by the old law; for in a suit for the administration of assets, where real estate descended upon an infant heir, or where an infant was interested in the real estate to be sold, by what was called parol demurring, the court was powerless to make a decree for sale until the infant came of age, and the decree was that if, upon the account of the assets, a deficiency should appear, leave might be obtained from the court for a sale against the infant. The law of parol demurring was absolutely abrogated by statute. The law, indeed, which made it error apparent on the face of the decree against an infant, unless a day was given to show cause, has been partially abrogated by the Trustee Act, and partially by the practice of the court. His Honour then referred, with surprise, to the confusion there is in the books of practice on this subject. He points out that in the last edition of Mr. Seton's work on Decrees the old and new cases are all referred to as authorities, without any distinction whatever as to the changes introduced by the Trustee Act and Sir Edward Sugden's Act, by which the law as to parol demurring has been entirely abrogated. In the recent edition of Mr. Daniell's work, however, to which the Vice-Chancellor alluded in complimentary terms, it will be found that a decree against an infant containing no day to show cause, so far from being a decree with apparent error on the face of it, binds the infant, and, being binding, can only be set aside for the same reasons of fraud, error, or mistake which would vitiate a decree against an adult person. So, adds the Vice-Chancellor, would a decree bind an infant where a day was given to show cause after the infant has come of age, if cause was not shown within six months. Practically, it never happened that cause was shown. There is hardly an instance of cause being shown under the old practice, against a decree giving an infant a day to show cause after he came of age. And as to the existing practice we may take from his Honour, —and there is no better authority— that an infant will always be allowed a day to show cause on the face of the decree, and that an order for foreclosure is never made absolute in any mortgage without giving an opportunity of showing cause. Lord Cranworth has positively decided that the right of an infant to show cause on a decree for foreclosure, must appear on the face of the decree.

SAYINGS AND DOINGS OF THE COURTS.

[CONTRIBUTED BY THE REPORTERS OF THE SEVERAL COURTS.]

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

On the 12th instant a new and most important point of mercantile law came before the court for decision in the case of Harrover v. Hutchinson. The action was one on a policy of insurance on a ship for a voyage from Buenos Ayres, "and any other port or ports" to Europe. The vessel went, and at the time the policy was effected was intended by the plaintiff to go, to Laguna de los Padres, a little port on the coast of South America, near Cape Corrientes, and, as found by the special case, a port unknown to underwriters. The vessel was lost on its way from that port to Buenos Ayres. It appeared that the plaintiff, before effecting the policy of insurance with the defendant, had applied to the brokers at Liverpool to insure the vessel, cargo, and freight from Buenos Ayres to Laguna de los Padres, and they had asked four guineas per cent. on cargo, which the plaintiff declined to give. The plaintiff then effected (for half that percentage) with the defendant the policy on which the present action was brought, but did not inform the underwriter that it was intended that the vessel should go to Laguna de los Padres. Two questions were argued at great length by Mr. Milward and Mr. Baylis on the part of the plaintiff, and by Mr. Cohen on behalf of the defendant, viz., whether the concealment by the plaintiff from the underwriter of the intention to send the vessel to the port, unknown to underwriters, of Laguna de los Padres, was not a concealment of a material fact which the underwriter could not be presumed to know, and, therefore, one which made the policy void; and (2) whether Laguna de los Padres could be said to be a port within the meaning of the policy, it being a mere village with no custom-house, and a place from which vessels could not clear for their port of destination in Europe. For the plaintiff it was contended that the general words "port or ports" included all ports within the province named; that it was the underwriters' business to know the character of all the ports in the district; and that there was no concealment which should vitiate the policy. For the defendant it was argued that the underwriter could not be presumed to know that the vessel was to go to Laguna de los Padres, and that if he had known it he would have exacted a higher premium as the port was new and unknown to underwriters; that the plaintiff knew this, as when he had disclosed the name of that port to the other brokers, they had asked a percentage on the cargo of four guineas, and consequently there had been a concealment of a material fact which avoided the policy; also, that Laguna was not a port within the meaning of the policy, as from the absence of a custom house the vessels could not clear thence to Europe. The court (consisting of Justices Lush, Hannen, and Hayes—the latter after considerable doubt) were of opinion that the plaintiff was not bound to disclose to the defendant the name of the port Laguna de los Padres; that the general word "port or ports" included it; that the underwriter was bound to know its existence and character, and therefore there was no concealment which vitiated the policy. They also held that Laguna was a port within the meaning of the policy, the interpretation to be given to the words "port or ports" in policies of insurance being ports at which vessels could load, and were accustomed to load.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

In the case of Maxsted v. Paine (second action), which was argued in this court on the 21st April, and in which the court took time to consider its judgment, which was delivered on the 8th instant, the very important, and to the commercial world very interesting, question was raised, discussed, and decided, of the liability of a jobber on the Stock Exchange to indemnify his vendor from all future liability in respect of shares purchased by the jobber from the vendor in a case where the jobber has passed to the vendor the name of a person as the "ultimate purchaser," who turns out to be a "man of straw," by reason of which the vendor remains liable to future calls. The question came before the court as a "special case" by order of Mr. Justice Willes, in which the facts, shortly stated, were as follows:—The plaintiff, on the 24th May 1866, sold through his brokers to the defendant, a jobber on the Stock Exchange, 100 50l. Overend, Gurney, and Co. shares, on which 15l. had been paid at 17 discount for the account day on the 30th May. Overend, Gurney, and Co. stopped payment on the previous 10th May, and the transfer books of the company were closed on the 12th May, and on the 22nd June, an order was made in Chancery for winding-up the company. On the same day (the 29th May) the defendant passed to the plaintiff's brokers the names of four persons as the "ultimate purchasers" of the shares in question (and amongst them the name of one "Francis Robert Goss" as the purchaser of ten of the said shares), which names were accepted by the plaintiff's brokers, and the usual transfers were then made out and executed and delivered to the brokers of the several purchasers. Two calls of 10l. each having been subsequently made by the liquidators on the said shares, and the same not having been paid by the said purchasers, the plaintiff was compelled to pay them, and now sought to recover back the money so paid by him from the defendant. In the case of the man "Goss" (which was the only one of the four cases above mentioned that was argued), it appeared that Sir Samuel Spry had been originally the purchaser of these ten shares through his brokers, Foster and Co., who were subsequently directed by Sir Samuel's solicitor not to pass Sir Samuel's name as the purchaser; and accordingly on the 26th May, Foster and Co. by the direction of the said solicitors, passed Goss's name to the defendant as purchaser of the said ten shares. The name of Goss was given by the solicitors in pursuance of an arrangement made with him that for the sum of 4l. 10s. he should take a transfer into his name of the said ten shares. Goss was a person in poor circumstances, and wholly irresponsible. But Foster and Co. were utterly ignorant of these matters when they passed his name to the defendant, and the defendant received it in the usual manner and in entire ignorance also of the arrangement above mentioned. The matter being brought under the notice of the Stock Exchange Committee, they declined to interfere, on the ground that Goss's name was passed by the brokers, Foster and Co., in good faith. Mr. Pollock, Q. C. (with Mr. Herschell) contended, on the part of the plaintiffs, that the defendant, as jobber, had not discharged his duty so as to relieve himself from liability to the plaintiff, his vendor, inasmuch as the name of Goss was not that of a bona fide and genuine purchaser, and that there was sufficient fraudulent practice around the whole transaction to render the custom and usage of the Stock Exchange, on which the defendant relied as a protection, of no avail to relieve him from responsibility to the plaintiff. Mr. Macnamara (with him were Mr. Mellish, Q. C., and Mr. Beresford), for the defendant, argued that by the rules of the Stock Exchange the defendant was only bound to pass the name of a person who had agreed to become the purchaser, and that having done so and the name having been accepted without objection at the time, he had done all that he was under any liability to do in respect of the shares in question, and was not liable or responsible for the calls subsequently made. The court took time to consider their judgment, and being divided in opinion they now proceeded to deliver their several written judgments. Baron Cleasby was of opinion that the defendant had not satisfied the usage of the Stock Exchange in giving the name of an ultimate purchaser in compliance with it. The ticket representing Goss as a bona fide purchaser for value was a falsehood and was not the genuine bona fide document required by the usage of the Exchange. For these reasons his judgment would be in favour of the plaintiff, the defendant not having performed his contract according to the usage. The Lord Chief Baron and Barons Bramwell and Pigott, on the other hand, were of opinion that the defendant had performed all that was required of him by the rules of the Stock Exchange. The plaintiff might have objected to Goss's name had he so chosen to do so, and the defendant must then have found a fresh one, for Goss was not a person whom, according to the rules, the plaintiff would have been compellable to accept as a transferee. But neither the plaintiff nor his brokers objected, but accepted the name and executed the transfers; and, having done so, they cannot now show that the defendant was bound to do anything more, or different from that which he has done. The correct name and address were given. Goss was not called "gentleman," "esquire," or "merchant." Had there been any fraud, no doubt there would be a remedy. The question here is not what is reasonable, but what is the practice? Their judgment, therefore, was for the defendant.

EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

On the 10th inst., the unanimous judgment of the court was delivered in the case of Redhead v. The Midland Railway Company, which was argued in Michaelmas Term last, and has since stood over for judgment. It was an action brought against the railway company for injuries sustained by the plaintiff whilst travelling on the defendants' line, owing to the giving way of one of the wheels of the carriage in which the plaintiff was. The tire of the wheel had broken into three pieces, owing to a flaw in the welding caused by an air bubble, and such a defect, it was proved, might occur in spite of the greatest care on the part of the manufacturer, and could not be discovered in the process of manufacture or afterwards, either by the eye or from the ringing of the metal. The question for the decision of the court was whether, under such circumstances, the railway company could be held liable for the accident which happened, and the injuries occasioned by it to the plaintiff. The Court of Queen's Bench (consisting of Mr. Justice Mellor and Mr. Justice Lush, Mr. Justice Blackburn dissenting) were of opinion that the railway company were not liable; that the only duty on them was to use the utmost skill and care in everything relating to the safety of their passengers, and that they could not be held to warrant the absolute roadworthiness of their carriage at the commencement of the journey. Mr. Justice Blackburn, on the other hand, thought that the railway company were liable for the consequences of any insufficiency, even though it arose from a latent defect which the exercise of the utmost care could not have guarded against. The Court of Exchequer Chamber in the long and elaborate judgment, which was read by Mr. Justice M. Smith, affirmed the judgment of the majority of the Court of Queen's Bench, and held the railway company not liable under the circumstances. They considered that the railway company does not make any contract of insurance with its passengers, but only contracts to take due care to carry them safely, so that negligence alone, on their part, would be a breach of the contract which the law implies; and as it was proved that in the present case the railway company were guilty of no negligence, they were not liable for the injuries sustained by the plaintiff.

The case of Popplewell v. Hodgkinson was argued on Saturday the 15th inst. The action was for injury to the right of support. It appeared that plaintiff had some "terry-built" cottages, which was interpreted in the special case to mean cottages of the worst construction in a street in the neighbourhood of Manchester. These were constructed on what is termed "made" ground. The ground in this case appeared to have been very badly "made," inasmuch as it consisted of a spongy sodden accumulation of refuse and rubbish full of water and slops which ran to it, and were thrown upon it from the adjoining streets. The ground had not been drained, but only just levelled before the cottages were built. The defendant was a contractor who, having to build a church on certain adjoining lands of the same description, drained these lands and made certain deep excavations for the foundation of the church walls until he came down to the solid ground. The effect of this was to drain off the water from the plaintiff's land, which in consequence subsided, and the cottages cracked, &c. It appeared that they had always been cracking and could scarcely hold together, but since the defendant's operations they were cracked to a greater extent. The Court of Exchequer found judgment for the defendant, one of the judges tersely expressing it as his opinion that if a man chose to build his house on a dunghill he must take the consequences. Against this judgment the plaintiff now appealed. Chief Justice Cockburn expressed himself as being very strongly of opinion that there could be no general principles of law which prevented the owner of land from draining it and taking the usual and proper steps for obtaining a secure foundation for building. The law was well settled that a proprietor was not entitled to remove the soil so as to deprive his neighbour of the natural support to his surface, but in this case the damage had not been done by the removal of the soil, but only by the moisture having been drained off. The counsel for the plaintiff thereupon endeavoured to substantiate the plaintiff's claim upon a different ground. It appeared that the land of the plaintiff and that of the defendant had originally belonged to the same person, who conveyed the plaintiff's portion to him for building purposes. It was argued that this gave rise to an implied engagement not to put the adjoining land to any purpose which might prejudice buildings placed upon the plaintiff's land. The court, however, were of opinion that the action was not maintainable, and that the judgment of the court below must be affirmed. They were of opinion that there was no general principle of law to prevent the owner of the adjacent land from putting his land to a natural and useful purpose, and taking such usual steps as were incidental to such purpose, even though it might have the effect of drawing off the water, and so causing his neighbour's land to subside. The only ground on which the plaintiff's case could be put was, the implied undertaking not to do anything prejudicial to the purposes for which the plaintiff's land was granted. It was true that where land was expressly granted for a specific purpose, there might be an implied agreement not to do anything which might diminish its value for that purpose, on the principle that no one can derogate from his own grant. The defendant's counsel had noticed, in argument, the case of the railway which had been constructed across Chat Moss. It might be if landowners sold land of that description for the express purpose of constructing a railway, and then proceeded to drain in the immediate vicinity of the railway, so as to loosen its foundations, there might be a ground of action, but the present was a wholly different case. No implied agreement could arise of the sort suggested by the plaintiff's counsel. The land was in the vicinity of a populous town, and the most natural and useful purpose to which it could be put was by building upon it. It could not, therefore, be taken that either party contemplated that the owner should be debarred from putting it to that purpose, and if entitled to put it to that purpose, no implied undertaking could be created that he should not take the proper and necessary steps for rendering it fit for that purpose, such as draining it and securing proper foundations. Under these circumstances, neither by the general principles of law nor by reason of any implied agreement, could the plaintiff have any right of action.

In the case of Nicholson v. Power, the doctrine of concealment with reference to policies of maritime insurance was much discussed. It appeared that the plaintiff had a ship loading with copper at a foreign port, and had received a letter from the captain stating the time when he should sail, and mentioning that that was the only copper ship lading at the port. Some time afterwards the plaintiff saw in the Shipping and Mercantile Gazette an announcement that a copper ship had been seen ashore at a certain place in distress: fearing from a comparison of the date with the time of his own ship sailing and from the description of the ship that it might be his own, he immediately set to work to get the ship insured. He did not communicate the facts to the defendants the insurer, but it appeared that the announcement contained in the Shipping Gazette was inserted in Lloyd's List, and might have been there seen by the defendant if he had looked. The ship was lost, and the present action was brought for the policy. It was contended on the plaintiff's part that there was no concealment to vitiate the policy. There was no obligation to communicate such facts, as the underwriter might, in the ordinary course of business, be presumed to know, and various authorities were cited to show that an underwriter was to be presumed to be acquainted with intelligence contained in Lloyd's List. The date of the vessel's sailing was known to the defendant, and it was open to him to draw the same inference as plaintiff did from the announcement in Lloyd's List. Chief Justice Cockburn thought that it was a very strong presumption to make, as applied to this case, that the defendant was as well acquainted with the facts as the plaintiff. These were not like general facts such as the existence of hostilities. The whole force of them lay in their application to the individual circumstances relating to this ship. If the plaintiff had gone to defendant and said: My ship sailed on such a day, and on such a day a copper ship was seen in distress at such a place, could it be supposed that he would have insured. It was unnecessary, however, to decide the question how far, under such circumstances, the underwriter was to be presumed acquainted with the contents of Lloyd's List, for, assuming that up to this point the plaintiff and defendant had common knowledge of the circumstances, there was one most important fact that had never been communicated to the defendant, namely, that plaintiff's ship was the only copper ship loading at the port at the time. The plaintiff's counsel then had recourse to another point, which was as follows: It appeared that in the first instance what is called a slip or memorandum only had been signed, and not a regular policy. After the loss had occurred the plaintiff applied for a policy. The defendant protested that he was not liable, but finally executed a policy, it being a rule of honour that a policy should always be executed when a slip has been signed. It was argued that the facts being all known to defendant when he signed the policy, he was bound by it; he could not be allowed to say in the same breath that he was liable and that he was not liable. The court, however, thought that there was nothing whatever in this point; by signing the policy he only meant to put himself in the same position as if a policy had been executed in the first instance. They, therefore, gave judgment for the defendant, affirming the decision of the court below.

The court sat on Friday, May 14, to hear errors from the Exchequer. Before proceeding to hear any of the fresh cases in the list, judgments were delivered in some cases argued on previous occasions, in which the court had taken time to consider. The first of them was the case of Parkes v. Prescott and Ellis, which involved a point not hitherto decided, relative to a defendant's liability, in an action of libel, for the publication in a newspaper of defamatory matters, such matters being published in consequence of the expression of a strong wish or hope on the part of the defendant, that the press would notice it. The case came before the court in error upon a bill of exceptions to the ruling of Mr. Baron Martin, at Nisi Prius. The facts were shortly these. The plaintiff was a respectable tradesman in Paddington, and the defendants were members of the Marylebone Board of Guardians. At a meeting of the board, at which the defendants were both present, and the defendant Prescott was in the chair, a discussion ensued relative to the case of the plaintiff's daughter, then an inmate of the workhouse, and strong observations were made by the defendants and other guardians condemnatory of the plaintiff's conduct with respect to his daughter, such conduct being termed "scandalous," "disgraceful," and "deserving of exposure," &c. The conduct in question being, as was stated, that he had refused to receive his daughter, a young woman of good character but rather weak intellect, into his house, and she had thereby been driven to seek the shelter of the workhouse. Reporters for the local papers, the Marylebone Mercury and the Paddington Times, were present at the meeting in the ordinary course of their duty to report, as news, anything occurring of interest to the inhabitants of the district. During the discussion of the case the defendant Ellis said, "I hope the press will take notice of this very scandalous case," and he called on the chairman (Prescott) to give an outline of the case. This was done, Prescott, in the course of this statement of the case, saying, "I am glad gentlemen of the press are present, and I hope they will notice it;" and he further added he hoped publicity would be given to the case. Subsequently to this meeting, the libels in question, being (as was proved at the trial) a "correct summary," made by the reporters from their notes, of the proceedings and speeches at the meeting, appeared in the two local papers above-named, and the plaintiff brought this action against the defendants, who pleaded not guilty. The learned judge upon the above facts being proved ruled that there was not sufficient evidence for the jury in support of the issue, and directed a verdict for the defendants, to which ruling the bill of exceptions above-mentioned was tendered. The argument was heard in last Hilary vacation, before Justices Byles, Keating, Mellor, M. Smith, and Hannen, when Mr. Giffard, Q.C. (with Mr. J. C. Mathew), appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Philbrick for the defendants. The Court took time to consider their judgment, and there was now a difference in opinion upon the bench. Mr. Justice M. Smith read a written judgment, in which he said his brothers Keating and Hannen concurred, overruling the direction of Baron Martin, and directing a venire de novo on the ground that there was evidence for the jury on the two questions which ought to have been submitted to them, namely, 1st, of a request to publish the proceedings of the meeting relating to the plaintiff's conduct; and, 2ndly, that the reports contained a correct account of the proceedings as the defendants meant it should appear. Mr. Justice Byles was of a contrary opinion, and thought that Baron Martin was right in directing a verdict for the defendants. His Lordship drew a distinction between the authority which renders a man liable civilly and that which will do so criminally. But there was a substantial objection here which no amendment could cure (and none had been asked for); the evidence did not show what particular party, or what particular defamatory expressions were, or were not, authorised by the defendants; and as the damages were not apportionable, but each defendant on the record was liable for the whole, neither of the defendants could be liable here except in respect of that which both had authorised. He doubted also whether the expression of a "hope that the Press would notice the case," amounted to an authority to publish defamatory matter spoken at a meeting. Mr. Justice Mellor (whose judgment was read by Mr. Justice Hannen) was also of opinion that there was not sufficient evidence for the jury in support of the issue joined on the pleadings. The majority of the court, however, being the other way, the exceptions to Baron Martin's ruling were allowed, and a venire de novo was ordered. The result of the case is that, although the direction of Baron Martin is overruled, there is an equal division of judicial opinion upon the point; Baron Martin and Justices Byles and Mellor (though not all of them for quite the same reasons) being in favour of the defendants, whilst Justices Keating, M. Smith, and Hannen, on the other hand, are in favour of the plaintiff.

The next case was that of the Earl of Derby v. The Bury Improvement Commissioners, which was heard in last Michaelmas Vacation before Justices Willes, Keating, Hannen, Brett, and Hayes. The court took time to consider, and Mr. Justice Hannen now (May 14) read the unanimous judgment of the Court of Exchequer Chamber in favour of the defendants, and reversing the decision of the majority of the court below. (The case below is reported 18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 147.)

The third case in which judgment was given, was that of the General Steam Navigation Company v. The British and Colonial Steamship Company (Limited), which was an action by the plaintiffs for damage done to their vessel by the vessel of the defendants coming into collision with it, at a part of the River Thames between Gravesend, and Yantlet Creek and Yantlet. At the time of the collision the defendants' vessel was under charge of a licensed pilot, taken on board by defendants at Dungeness, and it was through his carelessness that the accident occurred. The defendants' vessel belonged to the port of London, and if that port extends to Yantlet Creek, she was within her port; but if it does not, then she was not. By Geo. 4, c. 126, s. 59, vessels are exempted from compulsory pilotage when within their own ports. The Merchant Shipping Act 1854 exempts shipowners from being responsible for damage caused by the negligence of a qualified pilot in districts where pilotage is compulsory. By that Act the London pilotage district, within which pilotage is made compulsory, extends from Dungeness to London-bridge, but no pilot is to be licensed to conduct ships both above and below Gravesend. The pilotage rate for an upcoming vessel is a rate from Dungeness to Gravesend, and the pilot's regular place of discharge is Gravesend. On a special case it was held by Barons Martin and Channell (dissentiente Kelly, C.B.), that the defendants' vessel, having taken a pilot compulsorily at Dungeness, pursuant to the Merchant Shipping Act 1854, to navigate the ship to Gravesend, the relationship of master and servant did not arise between the owners and the pilot by reason of the ship having arrived within the limits of her port, and so the defendants were not liable for the pilot's acts. Semble, per Baron Martin, the Port of London does not extend to Yantlet Creek. Semble, per Baron Channell, aliter. But, per Chief Baron Kelly, the Port of London does extend to Yantlet Creek, and the pilotage ceasing to be compulsory, upon the vessel coming within the limits of the port, the defendants are responsible for the negligence of the pilot. The case was argued on two days in last Hilary Vacation, before Justices Byles, Keating, Mellor, M. Smith, and Hayes, and judgment was reserved, and now (May 14) Mr. Justice Byles read the written judgment of the Court of Exchequer Chamber, unanimously affirming the judgment of the majority of the court below in favour of the defendants.

A very important question relating to the liability of the commissioners of sewers for London to make compensation in damages to persons whose premises have been injuriously affected by the public works of the commissioners under their Act of Parliament was heard and decided on the 14th inst., so far as the judgment of the Court of Exchequer Chamber is decisive, upon a question of law, in the case of Ferraro v. The Commissioners of Sewers of the City of London. It was a special case involving the construction to be put upon certain sections of the City of London Sewers Act (11 & 12 Vict. c. clxiii, local and personal), and also of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 18). Plaintiff was a publican and licensed victualler in Liverpool-street, in the City, and the defendants, under sect. 120 of the general powers of their Act, caused the ground and soil of the street to be raised and made level, in doing which the pavement of the street was necessarily raised above the entrance to the plaintiff's house. Before this alteration, there had been two steps ascending from the street to the door of the plaintiff's house, but now there were two steps descending to it, so that the access was less convenient, and the house, it was alleged, less valuable as a tavern than before, the house being injured also in appearance, and the bar overlooked by passers by, and certain lights being darkened. For these injuries done by the alteration and works of the defendants, the plaintiff sought, by this action, to recover compensation, and also gave notice, after declaration delivered, requiring compensation under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845. In the court below it was argued for the plaintiff that the Local Sewers Act, though giving compensation expressly in certain specific cases, yet it also, by sect. 2, incorporated the general provisions of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, and, amongst others, sect. 68 of that Act, which section gave a right of compensation to the plaintiff for the injuries affecting his premises. For the defendants, it was urged that no compensation was due to the plaintiff, either by action or under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act in respect of acts done by the defendants under the powers and authority of their Act of Parliament, and by which Act they were not made liable to make compensation for any damage necessarily arising therefrom. Wherever by the Act defendants are empowered to do any works for which compensation is to be given, there are express enactments to that effect; and that the provisions of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845, and especially those of sect. 68, though incorporated by sect. 2 of the Local Sewers Act are by sect. 3, of that Act excluded therefrom, and, as qualified by sect. 3, do not apply to the present case or entitle the plaintiff to compensation in respect of the alleged acts of damage. The omission of power to give compensation was intentional, or, if not, it was a casus omissus. But, even if sect. 68 be incorporated, it still did not give compensation, but only pointed out the mode by which, where persons were entitled to it, it was to be obtained. The court below, the Lord Chief Baron and Barons Pigott and Cleasby, were unanimous in their opinion that no action would lie against the defendants for acts done by them in pursuance of sect. 120 of the Sewers Act, but that the plaintiff was nevertheless entitled to compensation in respect of his house having been "injuriously affected," by the defendants' works, the operation of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, as incorporated by sect. 2, of the Sewers Act, not being excluded by sect. 3 of the latter Act, and they gave judgment for the defendants in the action, and for the plaintiff as regards the claim to compensation. The defendants brought error. Mr. Browne, Q. C. (with him Mr. J. O. Griffiths), now argued for them, and Mr. Keane, Q. C., for the plaintiff, and urged the same arguments as were used below. After a long argument, the Lord Chief Justice Cockburn delivered the unanimous judgment of the court (Lord Chief Justice Cockburn, and Justices Keating, Lush, Hannen, Brett, and Hayes), reversing the decision of the court below, on the ground that sect. 68 was excluded from the Sewers Act in such a case as the present by the express provisions of sect. 3, and there was therefore no liability in the commissioners to make compensation in the present case.

ELECTION LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

ELECTION PETITION—SCRUTINY—WHETHER THE DECISION OF THE REVISING BARRISTER CAN BE REVIEWED.—An election petition under the Act of 1868 asked for the respondent's seat for the petitioner, on the ground that the former's majority over the latter at the election consisted of the votes of persons who were, although registered, not entitled to vote in a borough by reason of their not being rated to, and not having paid the rates, according to the 3rd section of the Representation of the People Act 1867; no objection was made before the revising barrister to these persons' names being retained on the register. Held (upon a special case stated for the opinion of the Court of Common Pleas), that sects. 79 and 98 of the Registration Act 1843 were incorporated into the Acts regulating the new practice in election petitions; that rating and payment of rates form part of a borough voter's qualifications, and are conditions precedent to his right to vote; that the non-performance of these conditions does not constitute a legal incapacity at the time of voting as in the 98th section of the Act of 1843; and that as there was no express decision of the revising barrister upon these votes, an objection upon the ground alleged could not be sustained on a scrutiny: (Salsbury Election Petition, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 444. C. P.)

BRECKNOCK NEW ELECTION.—On Wednesday

a petition against the return of Lord Hyde was presented at the Common Pleas Rule Office. Lord Hyde was elected after the unseating of Mr. Gwyn by Mr. Baron Martin, on the 9th ult.

INTERNATIONAL ELECTIONS.—The following particulars of Dissenting intimidation in Wales have lately been given before Mr. Bruce's committee by one of the witnesses. At the general election of 1868 Dissenting ministers were very active as politicians, many of them were paid agents, and their places of worship were frequently used for political meetings. With regard to political preaching, one witness had heard that in one instance a minister went so far as to say that those who voted for the Conservatives would be in danger of the pains of hell. Similar language was used in 1866, and one old man who had promised the Conservatives was attended by his minister, and told that he would endanger his soul if he so voted. There were other cases where Dissenters had been threatened with being "posted on the wall"—that is, excluded from the body to which they belonged, or otherwise disgraced—if they voted in a particular way. The Wesleyans, however, were very free from this kind of improper influence, and that exerted by the Church clergy was also very different, they simply using their influence as private gentlemen. The witness was not aware of any cases in which intimidation was resorted to by the landlords, and had never heard of any instance in which a tenant had suffered for his vote. Nor was the ballot desired by the tenant-farmers, who were usually very independent, and proud of wearing their party colours, so that they would scarcely make a secret of the way they voted, and as a rule a candidate could tell pretty well after his canvass how the votes would be given.

THE GENERAL ELECTION.—The following statistics concerning the late general election, and the position of parties in England may be relied on. In the first place, the Redistribution Bill gave 26 seats to places where the return of a Liberal was almost a moral certainty—viz., 8 seats to Scotland, 13 to English boroughs, two each to East Surrey and South-west Essex, which are practically metropolitan constituencies, and one to the London University. The minority clause deprived the Conservatives of 3 seats in Bucks, Berks, and Oxon, without yielding any compensation, making the total 29, which, if 3 be deducted for the Conservative gain in the new boroughs, and 1 for Conservative gain in the disfranchisement of old ones, leaves 25 seats simply given to the Liberals, whereas their total gain on the whole election has not been above 20; and even this might have been reduced nearly one-half had the Conservatives started two men wherever one was ultimately returned by a great majority. By disfranchisement the Liberals lost 20 seats, and the Conservatives 19. There still remain 49 pocket boroughs, or, to speak more correctly, boroughs where there is a predominating interest on one side or the other. Of these the Conservatives hold 25 seats in 25 boroughs, the Liberals 31 seats in 24 boroughs. There are, of course, many boroughs where one seat is close and the other open, and the Liberal predominance arises from their possessing both seats in several boroughs. It may not be generally noticed that the Liberals in England possess what, in military language, may be termed a quadrilateral. It is composed of the following groups of boroughs with their counties, which they control. 1. Metropolis, 28 seats. 2. The Black Country, 11. 3. The West Riding, 19. 4. The country between the Tyne and the Tees, 20. Total of 78; of which the Conservatives hold only nine—viz., two in the Metropolitan district, none in the Black Country, four in the West Riding, and three in the Northern district. The inference may be left to the reader. The following is the result of the last four general elections:—1857—Lib., 400; Con., 254; Lib. Majority, 146. 1859—Lib., 364; Con., 290; Lib. majority, 74. 1865—Lib., 369; Con., 289. 1868—Lib., 386; Con. 273. The success about which the Liberals boasted so much in 1865 was due solely to their having regained, or rather recouped, by a long-planned assault on the counties, of which in England and Scotland they gained 16, the loss occasioned by the bye-elections during the Parliament of 1859-'65. The cause of the late Liberal gain has been already explained.—Standard.

BREAKFAST—EPPS'S COCOA—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Epps attained by his homeopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by the Trade only in ½lb., and 1lb. tin-lined packets, labelled "JAMES EPPS and Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London."

LEGISLATION AND JURISPRUDENCE.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

JUVENILE OFFENDERS IN REFORMATORIES.

Dr. LUSH asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether, in the case of juvenile offenders sent under the Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 86, to certified reformatory schools, care is taken to afford instruction in handicraft trades, or whether in any such certified reformatory schools employment is limited to field labour.—Mr. BRUCE replied that as a rule a certain number of the boys were taught handicrafts, and he was not aware that in any school the instruction was confined to field labour. Field labour, however, did occupy the chief attention, because it was felt that for many of the boys it would be an advantage that they should emigrate to the colonies, where, of course, field labour would be of the greatest service to them.

THE CLERGY AND PARLIAMENT.

Mr. DIXON asked the First Lord of the Treasury whether he was aware, when he gave it as his opinion that all persons who have received episcopal ordination are thereby disabled from sitting in Parliament, that it was thought necessary to prevent, by special enactment in the Roman Catholic Relief Act 1829, the Roman Catholic clergy from sitting in Parliament.—Mr. GLADSTONE.—I must beg leave to correct the answer I gave on a former occasion. My learned friends the Attorney and Solicitor General advise me that, according to their view, sustained, no doubt, by the existence of that clause in the Roman Catholic Relief Act, that the provision contained in the Act passed in the case of Horne Tooke would not be understood to exclude from Parliament clergymen other than those of the Established Church. If that be so, the state of the law is one of anomaly and confusion still greater than I had supposed, and certainly it ought to receive early attention. It is not easy to see the precise manner in which it ought to be dealt with, but it is not possible to make any attempt to alter the law in the Bill now passing.

THE IRISH CHURCH BILL.

The Irish Church Bill has been reprinted to show the amendments made in it in its passage through the House of Commons. It would have been very convenient if the amended passages and new clauses had been distinguished by a different type; but the usual course has been followed—a slovenly course it is—of leaving every reader to compare the amended Bill with the original Bill, and by that tedious process find out the changes made. The Bill appears to have been extremely well drawn; but the best of Bills is not perfect, and some few amendments have been introduced in order to express the meaning more clearly or more accurately; as, for instance, in clause 12, which transferred to the Commissioners of Church Temporalities all property belonging to any person holding a bishopric, preferment, &c., a clause now qualified by the introduction of the word “as” before “holding.” The names of these commissioners are, of course, now inserted—Lord Monk, Mr. Justice Lawson, Mr. G. A. Hamilton—and their salaries limited to 2000*l.* a year. Clause 10, prohibiting future appointments to preferments by any person or corporation, is explained by adding, “by virtue of any right of patronage or power of appointment now existing;” and clause 13 has the new proviso that every present archbishop, bishop, and dean shall during his life enjoy the same title and precedence as if this Bill had not passed.

Several amendments have been made in the clauses providing compensation for the staff of the Church. As regards persons holding preferment, their present net incomes are to be paid to them so long as they continue to discharge such duties as they were accustomed to discharge, or would if this Bill had not passed have been liable to discharge, or any other spiritual duties in Ireland which may be substituted for them, with their consent and the consent of the representative body of the church, or, if not discharging such duties, shall be disabled from doing so by age, sickness, or permanent infirmity, or by any cause other than their own wilful default. Their net income is ascertained by deduction of taxes (except income-tax and other legal outgoings, including salaries of permanent curates; but it is now added that the commissioners shall determine the cases in which a curate is to be deemed a permanent curate, having regard to length of service, needful duties, non-residence or incapacity of the incumbent, or his habitual employment of a curate, after hearing objections; and this deduction is to cease if the salary of the curate ceases. Permanent curates are to receive their incomes from the commissioners unless, owing to the curate's misconduct, without the incumbent's consent, he quits the curacy, or by ill-health or otherwise, becomes incapable of discharging the duties.

Curates not entitled to compensation as permanent curates may be paid a gratuity equal to 25*l.* for every year of service, the total not to be less than 200*l.* nor more than 600*l.* The compensation annuities to diocesan or district schoolmasters, clerks, and sextons, are to be payable to them so long as they continue to perform the duties of their office, personally or by sufficient deputy in the same school or church, or any duties of the same kind which shall be assigned to them by the representative body of the Church. Stipendiary choirmen are to have a year's salary by way of gratuity; and these persons, and organists, vergers, &c., are to have further compensation if deprived of income derived from any property or fund which passes to the commissioners under this Bill.

Passing on to the clauses relating to churches and ecclesiastical residences, we find the clause omitted which allowed the commissioners to contribute towards the maintenance of twelve churches deserving of being maintained as national monuments, but being of a size beyond the means of the congregation to keep in repair; and in regard to the churches in use, and to be handed over to the representative body, that body is not to be required to state its willingness to maintain them in good repair. Churches built at the private expense of any persons and not taken by the representative body, are to be vested in such person if living, or in his representatives if he died (not within twenty-five years) but since the year 1800. The clause relating to burial grounds connected with churches vested in the representative body has been altered, and the first part of it is made to apply only “where the church has a burial-ground annexed or adjacent thereto, but not separated therefrom by any public highway, or that has been granted by a private donor to or exclusively used by the parishioners attending the said church;” in such cases the burial ground is to be included with the church in the commissioners' vesting order, or, at the option of the representative body, be vested in the poor-law guardians as a burial board, subject to a right of way to the church, and in this case there is to be no funeral during the ordinary service time at the church, and the paths to the church and the gates and fences are to be kept in repair by the guardians. The representative body of the Church are to be allowed to purchase ecclesiastical residences where there is a building charge at ten (not twelve) years' purchase of the annual value is estimated by the general tenement valuation. The clause allowing the commissioners to vest a certain limited further portion of land in the representative body, along with an ecclesiastical residence, is extended by a proviso that if they are of opinion that an additional quantity of land should be granted for the convenient enjoyment of the residence, or, to avoid a severance, they are to vest such additional land in the representative body, the price to be settled by arbitration if necessary. The clause allowing the representative Church body to claim the transfer to them of private endowments given since 1660 provides that, if no such claim is made, the commissioners on application are to vest such endowment in the donor if alive, or his representative if he died (not within the last twenty-five years, but) since 1800; and where any person has at his own cost recovered by legal proceedings, for the benefit of the Church, property which will remain at the disposal of the commissioners, they may pay him such sum as they may think fair and just. On the sale of tithe rentcharge to the landowner for a price payable by instalments, the annual payments must not extend over more than fifty-two years, the annual sum to be calculated at 4*l.* 9*s.* per cent. on the purchase-money, less the average amount of poor-rates.

The Regium Donum clauses follow. Compensation is provided for the ministers of the nonconforming congregation now fulfilling the conditions necessary for eventually obtaining a share in the grant. The clause providing compensation annuities for the Belfast theological professors is omitted, and their case is included in the Maynooth clause, which gives a capital sum of 14 times the annual payment withdrawn by this Bill. So also are some compensations payable to widows' funds. The Maynooth compensation is to be calculated on the sum paid in the financial year 1863-69; the other compensations in this clause are on “the annual sums.” The compensation clause relating to vicars-general, registrars, &c., is extended to auditors, deputy registrars (at the expense of the registrar), and clerks of five years' standing in the registries; and there is or may be a special compensation to the Chancellor and Prebendaries of Christ Church, Dublin, for loss of right of succession to certain benefices. A clause provides that all commutation moneys paid under this Bill in lieu of annuities shall be calculated at the rate of 3*l.* per cent. per annum. Where the commissioners sell land, and leave part of the purchase money on mortgage at 4 per cent., the payments are not to extend beyond 64 half-yearly instalments. Where they sell through the Landed Estates Court, rights of pre-emption declared in this Bill are to be, as far as possible, preserved in the court. New clauses give the commissioners power to raise money for carrying into effect the provisions of this Bill, and the Treasury may lend, or may guarantee repayment of a loan.

A new clause, sect. 64, provides that all plate, furniture, and movable chattels of a church, or used in connection with Divine service therein, are to vest in the representative Church body, and movable chattels held by an ecclesiastical person in his corporate right, subject to his life enjoyment of them; and where property is vested in an ecclesiastical corporation in trust for the poor or any other charitable purpose, the dissolution of the corporation is not to affect the continuance of the trust, but the property is to vest in the representative body of the Church, subject to the trusts; and where ecclesiastical persons are entitled virtute officii to be members of lay corporations for the management of any private endowment, or are trustees for the management of property belonging to institutions of private endowment for purposes not ecclesiastical, persons hereafter discharging analogous duties are to succeed in the place of these ecclesiastical persons. The clause containing provisions for appointments to be now made before 1871, has a proviso added to it, that if the owner of any archbishopric, &c., be appointed to fill a vacancy in any other, he shall, notwithstanding such appointment, retain all such life interest, rights, and privileges to which he would have been entitled if he had not accepted such appointment. These are all the material alterations made in the Bill. It extends now to seventy-one clauses.

ABOLITION OF IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT.

This Bill of the Attorney-General has been amended and reprinted. The most material alteration is the extension to all debtors of some provisions which in the original Bill applied only in County Court committals. This is effected by the introduction of a new clause enacting that “any person” shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable with imprisonment for a term not exceeding a year, with or without hard labour, if he has obtained credit under false pretences, or by means of fraud or breach of trust; or if he has wilfully contracted a debt or liability without a reasonable expectation of being able to pay; or if he has, with intent to defraud his creditors, or any of them, made a transfer of, or charge on, his property; or if he has, with intent to defraud his creditors, concealed or removed any part of his property since or within two months before the date of any unsatisfied judgment or order for payment of money obtained against him. The original Bill had a clause providing that on the prosecution for an offence under this Act, the accused should be entitled, if he should think fit, to be sworn and give evidence as a witness. This clause is now struck out.

EXPIRING LAWS.—The annual register of temporary laws has been laid before Parliament. There are in it some Acts which are always renewed from year to year—The Mutiny Acts, the Militia Ballot Suspension Act, the Militia Pay Act, and the Act for exempting Stock in Trade from Poor Rates. There are two Acts which will expire in August next unless renewed—the Irish Salmon Fishery Act 1863, so far as relates to the office of special commissioners, and the Act for preventing frauds and abuses in the linen, hempen, and certain other manufactures in Ireland. The time limited by the Act of last session for making application to the Board of Trade for an extension of time for completing railways is just expiring. There are a number of Acts which will expire at the end of next session unless renewed: the Act of 1866, relating to evidence receivable under extradition treaties; the Corrupt Practices Prevention Act of 1854; the Act of 1867 for amending the statute law as between master and servant; the Act of 1865 for regulating the use of locomotives on common roads; the Acts of 1863 and 1864 removing restrictions on the negotiation of bills and notes for sums below 5*l.*; the Episcopal and Capitular Estates Management Act of 1851; the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Act of 1847, so far as relates to provisions continued by the Act of 1858; the Act of last Session annexing conditions for the present to appointments to office in endowed schools; the Act for allowing duty-free malt to be used for food of animals; the Act allowing the malt duty to be charged by weight; the Act of 1866 relating to the expenses of witnesses to prosecutions before magistrates; the Act of 1841 for a survey of Great Britain; several Acts relating to Ireland—the Peace Preservation Act of 1856, the Unlawful Oaths Act, the County Cess Collection Act of 1845, the Private Lunatic Asylums Act of 1842, the Landed Property Improvement Act, and the Poor Law Act, so far as relates to the powers of commissioners. So far as relates to the appointment of commissioners the Salmon Fishery Acts of England and of Scotland will expire at the end of next session. This List of expiring laws will probably constitute the schedule of an Expiring Laws Continuance Act. There are some other temporary Acts not expiring until a later period; the Metropolitan Coal Tax Act not until 1882. Three Acts have this year disappeared from the list of temporary laws—the Habeas Corpus Suspension Act (Ireland) has been allowed to expire; the Alkali Works Regulation Act has been made perpetual; the Annual Indemnity Act has been rendered unnecessary by the passing of the Promissory Oaths Act of last Session.

ESTATES AND INVESTMENT JOURNAL.

STOCK AND SHARE MARKET.

THE money market continues to be much depressed by the advance in the rate of discount and doubts and fears arising out of the suspicious state of things in America.

The following are the fluctuations of the week:

ENGLISH FUNDS.	Fri.	Sat.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thu.
Bank of England Stock	244	242½	...	244	244	...
3½ Cent. Red. Ann. ...	91	91½	...	91½	91½	91½
3½ Cent. Cons. Ann. ...	92½	92½	...	92½	92½	92½
New 2½ Cent. Ann.
Do. do. Jan. 1894.	75½	75½	...
New 3½ Cent. Ann. ...	91½	91½	...	91	91½	91½
3½ Cent. Annuities
5½ Cents. ½ Jan. 1873	104½
Ann. 30 years exp.
April 5, 1885	114½
Do. exp. Jan. 5, 1889
Do. exp. July 1889 ...	114½	114½
Est. Sea Tele. Ann. 1908
Omaha, for Acc.	92½	...	92½	92½	93½
India 5½ Cent. for Acc.
Do. 17½ Cents. July 1889	114½	114½	114½
India Stock, July 1889
India Stock, 1874	212	...
India 5½ Cent.
India 4½ Cent. 1888 ...	100½	100½	...	100½	...	100½
India 5½ Cent. 1870
India Bonds (1000L.)	c	...	5s. b	c	...
Do. (under 1000L.)	c
Ex. Bills, 1000L. ...	a	2s. b	8s. b	...
Do. 500L. ...	a	10s. b	...	8s. b
Do. 100L. and 200L.
3½ c. ...	a	10s. b	...	8s. b a 2 and 2½ per cent. par.

b Discount.

c Par.

PUBLIC COMPANIES.

RAILWAY COMPANIES.

Antwerp and Rotterdam.—Dividend for 1868 fixed at 15s.

Buenos Ayres—Great Southern.—A half-year's dividend at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum.

BANKS.

English of Rio de Janeiro.—A dividend of 8 per cent. for the year.

London, Bombay, and Mediterranean Bank (Limited).—The official liquidators have announced a first dividend of 2s. 6d. in the pound to the creditors.

National Provincial of England.—A bonus of 7 per cent. in July next, making a total distribution for the year of 21 per cent. upon the paid-up capital.

MISCELLANEOUS COMPANIES.

Clarence Hotel of Dover (Limited).—Mr. F. B. Smart appointed official liquidator.

Clerks' Supply Association (Limited).—Mr. F. B. Batten is provisional official liquidator.

Indo-European Telegraph.—Call 5s. per share, payable on the 14th June.

Iron Ship Coasting (Limited).—Creditors' claims must be forwarded forthwith to Mr. Addis, the official liquidator. The 4th June is appointed for settling the list of contributories.

Leibig's Extract of Meat.—A dividend of 6 per cent. and a bonus of 5s. 6d. per share have been declared.

MINING COMPANIES.

Oporto Mining (Limited).—A call of 2L. per share upon the contributories is to be made on the 2nd June.

REPORTS OF SALES.

(Note.—The reports of the Estate Exchange are officially supplied in the following list. Auctioneers whose names are registered there will oblige by reports of their own sales.)

Friday, May 14.

Messrs. NORTON, TRIST, WATNEY, and Co., at the Mart.
Freehold public-house, known as the "Cock and Woolpack," situate in Finch-lane, Cornhill—sold for 6000L.
Leasehold residence, No. 31, Westmoreland-place, Bayswater, let at 75L. per annum, term 78 years, unexpired, at 10L. 10s. per annum—sold for 700L.
Leasehold residence, No. 1, Westmoreland-place, term and ground rent similar to above—sold 700L.
Leasehold residence, No. 1, Loudoun-villas, Devonport-road, Ramsgate, let at 40L. per annum, term 85 years unexpired, at 10L. per annum—sold 300L.

Leasehold residence, No. 3, Loudoun-villas aforesaid, let at 45L. per annum, term and ground rent similar to above—sold 350L.

Tuesday, May 18.

By Messrs. DRIVER, at the Mart.

Freehold, 8a. 3r. 12p. of land, situate between Farnham and Haslemere, Surrey—sold for 100L.
Freehold, 28a. 0r. 20p. of land, situate as above—sold for 405L.
Freehold, 38a. 3r. 2p. of land, in the tithings of Frensham and Dogflood, Surrey—sold for 865L.
Freehold, 41a. 0r. 10p. of land, situate as above—sold for 710L.
Freehold, 61a. 2r. 15p. of land in the tithings of Titford, Surrey—sold for 770L.
Freehold, 157a. 1r. 20p. of land, situate at Frensham, Surrey—sold for 1650L.

By Messrs. DEBENHAM, TEWSON, and FARMER.

Freehold residence, with stabling, garden, and grounds, of about 3a. 2r. 2p., known as Castle-house, the Forest, near Snarresbrook, Essex—sold for 4150L.
Leasehold residence, No. 45, Oxford-terrace, Fentiman-road, Lambeth, let at 48L. per annum; term 76½ years from 1861, at 7L. 10s. per annum—sold for 400L.

Wednesday, May 19.

By Messrs. WILKINSON and HORNE, at the Mart.

Freehold, four cottages, situate in Waggon and Horses-lane, Lower Tottenham, producing 27L. 6s. per annum—sold for 200L.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

NOTES OF NEW DECISION.

MEASURE OF DAMAGES—ASSIGNMENT OF GOODWILL.—The defendants assigned to the plaintiff a business they carried on in partnership on certain premises. In the deed of assignment they covenanted not to carry on the business within a certain area, nor to do any act, matter, or thing, whereby or by reason whereof the plaintiff, his executors, administrators, or assigns, or any other person or persons, claiming or to claim under him or them, should or might be injured or damaged in the trade or business. Subsequently the plaintiff assigned to A. and B. "the business in its entirety and the goodwill thereof as carried on by plaintiff upon the aforesaid premises," and engaged that he would not, after the transfer of the said business, carry on a similar business within a certain area. There was not, however, any express assignment of the benefit of the defendant's covenant to A. and B., but the memorandum containing the terms of the assignment stipulated that all proper dues and documents should be prepared and signed by the necessary parties. After the assignment to A. and B. the defendants committed a breach of their covenant with the plaintiff by carrying on business within the specified area: Held, per Martin and Cleasby, BB. (dissentiente Kelly, C. B.), that the plaintiff was entitled to recover substantial, and not merely nominal damages, as a trustee for A. and B., his assignees: (Wright v. Chappell, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 369. C. P.)

PRACTICE—INTERPLEADER—AFFIDAVIT OF NO COLLUSION.—The well-established practice is that, where a plaintiff in a suit of interpleader makes an affidavit that there is no collusion between himself and any of the defendants, no evidence in contradiction can be adduced until the hearing of the cause; and this immunity from contradiction was held not to be lost to the plaintiff, by the fact that he did not make the usual ex parte application for an injunction to restrain proceedings at law, and for liberty to pay the amount due into court, but applied upon notice of motion, which he supported by one affidavit in general echo of his bill, and another affidavit showing that he had received notices from the defendants, requiring him not to pay the debt to the other of them; but as he had adopted an unusual course, he was required to give an undertaking as to damages, as the price of the injunction: (Manby v. Robinson, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 385. L. JJ.)

FEMALE WARD—MARRIAGE AFTER TWENTY-ONE—SETTLEMENT—FUND BELOW 200L.—SEPARATE EXAMINATION.—A lady was entitled to a fund in court for her life, and during her infancy an allowance was made for her support, and the surplus of the income was accumulated. She attained twenty-one, and then married: Held (reversing the decision of the Master of the Rolls), that the accumulation ought to be paid to her, and not settled, but that, although the amount was below 200L., she must attend and be examined by the court before payment: (White v. Harrick, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 386. L. JJ.)

PRACTICE—PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS.—The defendants applied for an order upon the plaintiff that he should make the usual affidavit of documents. They (the defendants) were in contempt for not obeying an order of the court for production of a similar affidavit, not for nonpayment of costs: Held, that they were entitled to apply for such order, although in contempt; but that the affidavit of the plaintiffs should not be required to be filed until after the similar affidavit ordered to be made by the defendants: (Haldane v. Eckford, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 389. V. C. J.)

PRACTICE—COSTS OF MOTION—TAXATION—40 CONS. ORD.—RULES 32, 36, GENERAL ORDER, 17TH APRIL, 1867.—A mortgagor filed a bill to redeem, and alleged that he had paid off part of the debt, and prayed an injunction against proceedings at law. The injunction was granted until answer, on his paying a sum of money into court. The defendant, by his answer, denied that the part payment had been made to any person authorised to receive the money, and on his motion the injunction was dissolved. The money paid in by the plaintiff was taken out of court by the defendant, and when the accounts were taken, it was found that the defendant had been overpaid. On further consideration, it was ordered (inter alia) that the costs of the suit up to the time when the money in court was paid out to the defendant should be paid by the plaintiff; that, from that date to the decree, there should be no costs to either party, and that the subsequent costs should be paid by the defendant. The taxing-master included in the costs to be paid by the plaintiff those of the two motions to obtain and dissolve the injunction, and the Lords Justices (affirming the decision of James, V. C.), decided that they were rightly included, as they were costs incurred at a time when the plaintiff was in the wrong. Semble, that an application to vary the taxing-master's certificate should be made by summons in chambers, and not by motion in court: (Webster v. Manby, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 387. L. JJ.)

JUDGES' CHAMBERS.

Wednesday, May 19.

A NOVEL POINT.

An application was made to-day on a garnishee application of a novel character to Master Kay, at the Common Pleas, on the part of Messrs. Cox and Greenwood, army agents. An officer retired from the army, and the regulation price was paid to Messrs. Cox, and a judgment-creditor obtained a garnishee order on the money. The order was not known at Cox's until the following morning, and the question was whether it was binding. Pike, for the judgment-creditor, said Mr. Justice M. Smith signed the order after six o'clock, and it was served on the porter.

On the part of Messrs. Cox and Greenwood, it was stated that the London Gazette, in which notice appeared that the officer had retired, was not published until six o'clock, and then the office of Messrs. Cox was closed. It was not known until now that the order was obtained after the closing of the office. The point was quite new, and, as many cases occurred, should be considered before it was decided.

The MASTER gave until Saturday for the novel point to be considered.

IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT.

The following are some observations of the Incorporated Law Society of Liverpool upon the Imprisonment for Debt Bill.

The society, before entering upon the consideration of the Bill itself for the Abolition of Imprisonment for Debt, desire to express the following conclusions with respect to the principle on which the Bill is founded:

- (1.) That the laws of debtor and creditor, including the distribution of the estates of deceased insolvents, ought to be considered as a whole and not dealt with piece-meal by separate Bills.
- (2.) That the law of debtor and creditor ought, in the first instance, to be carefully considered under a Royal Commission, and the requisite amendments thought out by competent and well-known persons, who would be responsible to the public for their opinions.
- (3.) That all such Bills, and all the Orders of Court to be made in pursuance of the same, ought to be laid before the public for a sufficient length of time to ensure their receiving ample consideration from the Profession and the public before being brought into Parliament.

But assuming that the law is to be dealt with in the mode proposed by the Bills now before the House of Commons, and that it is determined, as a foregone conclusion, that imprisonment for debt is to be abolished, the committee are of opinion as follows:

- (a) That no exceptions from the complete abolition of imprisonment for debt, such as are proposed in sects. 5 and 6, ought to be made, save in respect of fines and penalties inflicted either in criminal cases or for contempt of court; the exceptions set out in the Bill being open to the objection of being contradictory to the principle propounded by the Bill without sufficiently substantial reasons.

- (b) That the present power of arresting on capias or under the Absconding Debtors' Act should not be limited as is proposed in sect. 7.

The sixteen penal clauses included under sect. 10 of the Bill properly belong to the Bankruptcy Bill, and cannot satisfactorily be dealt with apart from that Bill.

These clauses, whilst following tolerably closely the language of the existing law, introduce some changes of grave importance.

Modern legislation has introduced a new class of crimes relating to the conduct of mercantile men, trustees, and others. The necessity for such legislation is supposed to be proved by the prevalence of mercantile frauds. But in legislating for the cure of prevalent evils, great care ought to be taken lest greater evils be produced.

The ordinary class of offences which are punishable as crimes, usually involve no nice questions as to the intention of the perpetrator, though as a matter of law the question of intent always enters into the proof of the crime; for example, killing a man may, according to the intent, be murder, or it may be reduced to manslaughter, or even to justifiable homicide.

In the case of the majority of crimes against property, such as highway robbery, burglary, &c., the criminal intent is generally so clearly to be gathered from the evidence that the question of intent is seldom raised in practice, but it is none the less true that the criminal intent is always an essential element in the legal offence.

A more complicated state of society has induced the Legislature to create by statute a class of offences against property not known to the common law. For example—"Embezzlement."

"Embezzlement" is not, however, defined by statute; but by judicial decisions which show that the guilty intent to appropriate the property of another is an essential element in the offence.

The crime of embezzlement has been gradually extended under the same or other names, so as to embrace embezzlements or frauds by trustees and others, not included in the earlier enactments. In all such offences, however, the guilty intent is still, by express enactment or by intendment of the law, a necessary condition.

The complicated relations of modern society, however, require that there should be certain offences which may be called artificial offences or mala prohibita, such, for example, as taking out dogs unmuzzled, leaving goods on dock quays beyond a specified time, and other offences against bye-laws, yet all such offences are punishable only by pecuniary fine, and are broadly distinguished by the law from offences which are mala in se.

The existing bankruptcy law, whilst creating a number of special offences, still follows in the old track, for sect. 221 of the Bankruptcy Act 1861, whilst defining eleven offences which it makes misdemeanors, commences thus—"any bankrupt who shall do any of the acts or things following, with intent to defraud or defeat the rights of his creditors, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, &c."

The Bill now before the House of Commons proposes to make an entire change in this principle, and to create misdemeanors punishable by two years' imprisonment with hard labour, in proof of which it will not be necessary to show guilty intent.

The same alteration of the principle of the law, it must be observed, is to be found in several other of the recent bankruptcy Bills which have not become law. It is, however, a matter of very serious consideration whether such an alteration of the principles of the English criminal law is desirable.

At present the English criminal law involves the following principles—first, That every man is presumed to be innocent until he can be proved to be guilty; secondly, That no man can be required to criminate himself.

If the Bill now under consideration pass into law both these principles will be violated; and we think that so important an exception to the policy of our criminal law ought not to be adopted without a full reconsideration of the whole law of evidence in criminal cases.

A few examples of this remark will suffice.

The first, second, and third offences under the 10th section of the Bill are almost word for word the same offences as are included under the 2nd clause of sect. 221 of the Act of 1861, with the important exception that the present Bill omits the words which, in the preliminary part of the section of the Act of 1861 make the intent to defraud or defeat the rights of his creditors an essential element of proof in all the offences under that section.

It is no doubt true that the proof of intent is sometimes difficult, and that guilty persons get off owing to that difficulty, and that the judges of the land insist upon submitting to the jury the question of intent, and that such rigid administration of justice is at times thought to be over nice. But surely Parliament ought to pause and consider carefully the consequences before they overrule by legislation a principle so deeply seated in the very nature of our laws, that all judges sitting in criminal courts have from time immemorial acted upon it.

We know the evils of our present criminal law, that criminals occasionally escape, and that there are many offences against the moral law, such as adultery, seduction, deceit, and the like, which are not punishable as crimes—but do we sufficiently appreciate the benefits of the same system? Ought we not to remember that the administration of criminal justice in this country is absolutely pure and above reproach, and that putting aside some morbid sentimentalism peculiar to a very limited number of individuals, there is absolutely no sympathy with convicted criminals? Are not these blessings worth preserving to us at some very considerable sacrifice, and ought we not to consider that the dicta of a long line of eminent judges interpreting the criminal law of the land, should have some moral weight, as showing what ought to be, as well as what is the law? It is a saying, that the law rests in the breasts of the judges, and knowing as we do the character of the trained and impartial intellects that are brought to bear on our laws, and whose decisions on totally new points sometimes strike the heart and the conscience of the nation with an instant conviction of the correctness of the principles laid down, ought we to depart, without mature consideration, from a principle which pervades all judicial decisions on points of criminal law from the commencement of our national history to the present time.

An examination of the new offences created by the Bill in question does not tend to diminish the difficulty which might be felt in making so important a change.

The first three offences which may subject a bankrupt to two years' imprisonment with hard labour are—

"If he does not, to the best of his knowledge and belief, fully and truly discover to the trustee or other person administering his estate for the benefit of his creditors all his property, real and personal, and how, and to whom, and for what consideration, and when he disposed of any part thereof, except such part as has been disposed of in the ordinary way of his trade (if any), or laid out in the ordinary expenses of his family:

"If he does not deliver up to such trustee or person, or as he directs, all such part of his real and personal property as is in his custody or under his control, and which he is required by law to deliver up:

"If he does not deliver up to such trustee or person, or as he directs, all books, documents, papers, and writings in his custody or under his control relating to his property or affairs."

Let it be imagined that a bankrupt had, by accident or otherwise, without any fraudulent intention whatever, omitted to deliver up some trifling memorandum book, the whole of the information contained in which was also comprised in other books which he had duly delivered up, he would clearly be guilty of a misdemeanor under clause 3, and if indicted must necessarily be found guilty. That he would be sentenced to a merely nominal punishment we all believe; but in so believing we rely upon the good sense and high principle of the judges for remedying the defects of our legislation. And the lightness of the punishment would only be an alleviation of, not a cure for the evil; the stain of the conviction would remain, though unaccompanied by the smallest amount of moral guilt.

It is of no avail to say that persons innocent of moral guilt would not be prosecuted. Practitioners know that that is not so, and that innocent persons are, even under the present state of the law, prosecuted, or threatened to be prosecuted, from altogether corrupt motives, and with a view of gaining some object totally unconnected with the ostensible ground of the prosecution.

If such enactments as these were to become the law, it cannot be but that the public sense of justice would be violated, and that the reverence for the law of the land, as never inflicting any punishment not sanctioned by the moral law, would be gone.

The next clause of the Bill, however, introduces a still greater novelty in criminal jurisprudence. Clause 4 is as follows:—

"If after the commencement of the bankruptcy or liquidation, or within four months next before such commencement, he conceals any part of his property, to the value of ten pounds or upwards, or conceals any debt due to or from him, unless he proves that he did not do so with intent to defraud."

That is, whilst the technical proof of the offence, which by the very language of the section itself may co-exist with the absence of any intention to defraud, is sufficient of itself, if uncontradicted, to procure a conviction, it is left open to the prisoner to clear himself by the proof "that he did not do so with intent to defraud." The 6th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 14th, and 15th offences under the same section, and the offences created by section 11, are similarly qualified.

The full effect of these clauses can only be arrived at by considering them in connection with sect. 17, which permits the accused, if he think fit, to be sworn and give evidence as a witness.

At present no person charged with a criminal offence is permitted to give evidence in his own favour, so that his silence is not looked upon as an admission of guilt; but being presumed to be innocent till proved to be guilty, his guilt requires to be strictly proved. If an accused person is allowed to give evidence in his own favour, it is clear that if he does not avail himself of the option it will be assumed that his silence can only be accounted for on the assumption that the case against him is unanswerable. Therefore, wherever the examination of a prisoner is permitted, it would be just as correct to say that it is required; and if a prisoner is examined on his own behalf, he must of course be open to be cross-examined on behalf of the prosecution, and as everything he may say will of necessity be evidence against himself, the skill of the counsel for the prosecution will, in practice, be pitted against the prisoner with the object of inducing him to convict himself.

It is obvious, therefore, that these enactments would, if passed into law, inaugurate an entire change in both the practice and the principles of the criminal law, and must ultimately end in something very nearly approaching the French system.

It may be desirable, and it has often been contended that it is desirable, that a prisoner at the bar should be allowed to give evidence in his own favour, inasmuch as he only can properly explain the motives of his own acts. It is out of place here to argue whether this is so or not, but it is indisputable that the change, if made at all, is one of most vital importance to the administration of justice, and that it is just as applicable to all other offences as to offences under the bankruptcy laws. Therefore it necessarily follows that it is totally inadmissible to slip in such a provision, by a sort of sideward, in a Bill for the abolition of imprisonment for debt.

By way of doing impartial justice, however, the Bill metes out the same measure to creditors as to debtors; for sect. 12 subjects a creditor, who wilfully makes any false claim, or any proof, declaration or statement of account which is untrue in any material particular, to imprisonment for one year with or without hard labour.

It is difficult to say what the word "wilfully" in this section may mean. It is obvious that the misstatement is not criminal, if not made with intent to defraud. But wilfully may mean only knowingly, that is to say, that the error was not a mere mistake; if it is to mean more than that, it must mean with wilful intention to do wrong, that is, to defraud, and if that be the meaning, why not say so in words to which we are accustomed, and of which we know the legal effect?

The society purposely abstain from entering upon any criticism of the details of the Bill beyond what bears upon the general propositions with which they commenced. What they seek to show is, not how the Bill can be amended, but that it ought not to be allowed to pass at all, until the subject, or rather the subjects, with which it deals (since, as has been shown, it not only affects the law of debtor and creditor, but also makes a most vital alteration in the criminal law) have been much more carefully considered than it is evident they have been.

JOHN YATES, President.

Liverpool, 15th April 1869.

HEIRS-AT-LAW AND NEXT OF KIN.

BRAMPTON (Susan Anna), Mount Pleasant, Claines, Worcester. Heir-at-law to come in by June 8. June 22; V.C.S., at twelve.

CURRY (Susannah), Wimbledon, Surrey. Heir-at-law to come in by June 16. June 26; V.C.M., at one.

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY.

LAST DAY OF PROOF.

BILLAMORE (Catherine), 10, Oxford-parade, Cheltenham. May 31; T. Loughborough, solicitor, 23, Austinfriars. June 10; V.C.S., at twelve.

BRIDGE (Alfred C.), Middle Temple, London. May 28; Paterson, Snow, and Co., solicitors, 40, Chancery-lane. June 11; V.C.S., at twelve.

COLLINS (Robert), 3, Barton-street, Westminster. May 31; E. S. Stephenson, 7, Great Queen-street, St. James's-park. June 14; V.C.J., at one.

MAYNE (Chas. A.), Manor-house, Great Stanmore. June 12; H. Webb, solicitor, 11, Argyll-street, Regent-street. June 26; V.C.S., at twelve.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. c. 35.

Last day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.

ADAMS (Richard B.), Weston-super-Mare. June 24; Chanter and Finch, solicitors, Barnstaple, Devon.

ARROYAVE (Anselmo De), 43, Princes-gate, Hyde-park. Aug. 31; M. and F. Davidson, solicitors, 35, Spring-gardens.

BAGNALL (Chas. A.), Charnwood, Streatham, Surrey. June 1; J. M. Maddox, solicitor, 61, Cornhill.

BALL (Miss Eliza), 54, Portdown-road, Maida-vale, Middlesex. June 20; Burgoyne, Milnes, and Co., 160, Oxford-street.

BIXON (Alfred), Merlewood, near Lindale-in-Cartmel, Lancaster, and of Manchester. July 1; Aston, Son, and Roberts, solicitors, St. James's-chambers, South King-street, Manchester.

BUTLER (Thos.), 21, Sudeley-street, Islington. June 30; Taylor and Jacquet, solicitors, 15, South-street, Finsbury-square.

COTSWORTH (Rev. H.), Tempsford, Bedford. July 1; Upton, Johnson, and Co., solicitors, 20, Austinfriars.

CRICK (Henry), Ravenswood, Heaton, near Bolton, Lancashire. July 1; J. Gerrard, solicitor, 15, Acresfield, Bolton.

DASHWOOD (Rev. G.), Stow Bardolph, Norfolk. June 24; J. J. Nunn, solicitor, Downham Market.

EARL (John T.), Denmark-villas, Sunnyside-road, South Norwood. June 18; J. Rae, solicitor, 9, Mincing-lane.

GOODMAN (Wm. R.), 18, King's-square, Goswell-road. June 21; Ingle, Goody, and Co., solicitors, 20, Threadneedle-street, E.C.

HARRISON (Thos.), Ware, Hertford. June 30; Spence and Hawks, solicitors, Hertford.

LAMLEY (Samuel), Maidenhead. July 31; C. Brown, solicitor, Maidenhead, Berks.

MARTIN (John T.), 440, Old Kent-road. June 30; S. Shaw, solicitor, 21, Upper Park-street, Greenwich.

PHILLIPS (Wm.), Chipping Norton, Oxfordshire. June 24; Messrs. Rawlinson, solicitors, Chipping Norton.

PRICE (Francis), 75, Great George-street, Bermondsey. June 21; Glynes and Son, solicitors, 4, Crescent, America-square.

REYNOLDS (Wm.), Leicester. Aug. 3; J. E. Dalton, solicitor, Leicester.

REYNOLDS (John), Sleaford, Lincoln. July 1; T. Browett, solicitor, 25, Bayley-lane, Coventry.

TAYLOR (Thos.), 4, Park-terrace, Mace-hill, Greenwich. June 30; J. Berry, solicitor, 16, Walbrook, E.C.

THOMPSON (Fredk. F.), Archway-tavern, Highgate-hill. June 30; G. Crafter, solicitor, 81, Blackfriars-road.

WATERS (Thomas M.), 10, Trinity-square, Tower-hill. July 1; J. and R. Gole, solicitors, 40, Lime-street, City, E.C.

WATSON (Ralph), Carperly, Aysgarth, York. June 15; G. and G. Winn, solicitors, Askrigg, Yorks.

WAY (Samuel), Rugby, Warwick. June 30; Tucker, New, and Co., solicitors, 4, King-street, Cheapside.

YOUNG (Thos.), Walton-upon-Thames. Sept. 29; Grazebrook, Pain, and Co., solicitors, Chertsey, Surrey.

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDEND IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

[Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each, in three months, unless other claimants sooner appear.]

BROCKE (Frances), East Bridgford, Old Hall, Bingham, Notts, widow. Dividend on 1400l. 3l. 6s. per Cent. Annulise. Claimant, G. Freeth.

THE LAW COURTS SITE.—The present plan of the Government offers no single excuse for the change of site; even the arguments that were used to support Sir Charles Trevelyan's original site disappear. If a smaller building than was at one time thought necessary will suffice, it can as well be placed on the Strand (or mis-called Carey-street) site, already in our possession, as next the Embankment, and with infinitely better effect with reference to the adornment of London than if it be buried behind the houses on the south side of the Strand. The land already bought offers a noble position for a noble building; and its superiority with reference to the greatest convenience to the greatest number is so universally admitted as to require no argument.—Builder.

THE NEW COURTS OF JUSTICE.—A return has been published which shows that in four years, 1865-6 to 1868-9, the sum of 886,000l. has been issued out of the Exchequer on account of advances for expenses of the site, &c., for the new courts of justice, viz., in the first-named year, 40,000l.; in the second, 438,000l.; in the third, 317,000l.; and last year, 91,000l. During the same period amounts of 40,000l., 363,000l., 375,000l., and 105,000l. have been repaid to the Exchequer out of the surplus interest fund of suitors of the Court of Chancery, making a total of 883,000l. Up to the 20th April 1869, the purchase of site has cost 820,641l. 2s. 3d.; expenses of the commission, 30,661l. 6s. 9d.; surveyor's expenses, 12,762l. 12s. 6d.; legal expenses, 30,679l. 14s. 2d.; architects' charges, 9651l.; incidentals, 8222l. 3s. 9d.; making a total of 885,368l. 19s. 5d. In addition to this sum 2830l. 17s. was paid from the vote for public buildings for preliminary expenses.

THE BENCH AND THE BAR.

There is no foundation for the report that Mr. Gibbs has been nominated to succeed Mr. Maine as legislative member of the Indian Council. Mr. Gibbs has, we believe, been called to the bar, but has enjoyed little or no practice. In case Mr. Maine should decline to continue another year, Mr. Fitzjames Stephen, Mr. Denman, and Mr. Bruce Norton are mentioned as likely candidates for the office.

Some rather curious statistics have been collected, remarks the Athenæum, in reference to the composition of the House of Commons. It is said to contain 338 university graduates, among whom are 151 of Oxford and 122 of Cambridge. There are 287 members who were educated at public schools, 131 at Eton, 68 at Harrow, 29 at Rugby, and the remainder in smaller numbers at others. Of the nobility there are 3 Irish peers and 106 sons of peers. The barristers number 120, the members in the army 98, those in the navy 13. Commerce is represented by 15 bankers and 136 engaged in other kinds of business. There are 10 fathers who have sons sitting with them in the House, 24 pairs of brothers, and 3 brothers of one family.

MAGISTRATE AND PARISH LAWYER.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

MARKETS AND FAIRS ACT—MEANING OF TERM DWELLING-HOUSE OR SHOP.—Sect. 13 of the Market and Fairs Act 1847 enacts that "after the market-place re-opened for public uses, every person other than a licensed hawk who shall sell or expose for sale in any place within the prescribed limits, except in his own dwelling-house or shop, any articles in respect of which tolls are by the Special Act authorised to be taken in the market, shall, for every such offence, be liable to a penalty not exceeding 40s." B. was held not to be subject to this penalty for having exposed goods for sale under a wooden shed affixed to his house or shop, and supported on wooden posts, which had been erected for eighteen years, and previous to its erection stone flags had been built into and formed part of the house, beyond which they projected three feet, and which still remained beneath, and assisted to support the shed: (Ashworth v. Heyworth, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 439. Q. B.)

BIGAMY—BURDEN OF PROOF.—On an indictment for bigamy, it is for the prosecution to prove that the husband or wife, as the case might be, was living at the time of the second marriage. The existence of the party at an antecedent period may or may not afford a reasonable inference that he or she was living at the time of such second marriage; but it is purely a question of fact for the jury: (Reg. v. Lumley, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 454. C. Cas. R.)

SOUTHWARK POLICE COURT.

(Before Mr. PARTRIDGE.)

Refreshment to prostitutes.

Prostitutes are entitled to refreshment at a public-house, but must not be allowed to remain or be harboured by the publican.

Mr. Thos. Smith, the proprietor of the Shipwrights' Arms Tavern and Wine Vaults, Bermondsey-street, was summoned before Mr. Partridge, by order of the Commissioner of Police, charged with harbouring prostitutes and serving them while in a state of drunkenness, after receiving a caution from an officer of the police force.—Inspector Watson, M division, said that at twenty minutes to one on the morning of the 28th ult., he was on duty in Tooley-street, when he saw four prostitutes ejected from the King's Arms public-house, near the defendant's house. A minute after that the witness entered the latter place and found the four females standing in one of the compartments. He called the barman's attention to them, telling him who they were, and that they were the worse for drink. He returned to the house again in a few minutes, and the same females were still there drinking ale. The defendant was behind the bar then, and the women were turned out. One of them was so intoxicated that a constable was compelled to lock her up, and on the following day she was fined five shillings. In answer to the magistrate, witness said the house was generally well conducted.

The defendant, in answer to the charge, said that since he had kept the house (five years) he had conducted it in a respectable manner, which could be testified to by his neighbours. On the morning in question his house was closed at ten minutes to one. He recollected seeing the females in the house a few minutes before that time, but they were not served; and he could assure his worship that he never saw them before, neither did he know what they were until his attention was called to them by the police, and they left the house immediately, and the house was closed.

William Smith said that he assisted his father in the management of the house, and recollected the inspector following some females into the house at a quarter to one. He did not serve them, but while he was calling his father's attention to them, some men who had been previously served gave one of them a glass of ale. The house was closed within five minutes after that.

Two of the neighbours were called by the defendant, and, in answer to the magistrate, said that since Mr. Smith had kept the house he had very much improved it and the locality. They never saw any prostitutes harboured in the house.

Mr. PARTRIDGE observed that he had paid a great deal of attention to the case, inasmuch as it was of the utmost importance to the licensed victuallers and the police, and he did not consider there was sufficient evidence to justify a conviction. It had been held in the court above that when prostitutes entered a public-house solely for refreshments, the proprietor was justified in serving them, but if they were not served with refreshments, and the proprietor or his servants allowed them to remain, or harboured them, a conviction must follow. The Legislature never contemplated that such persons should not be served with refreshments. Such an enactment would be hard indeed. Therefore, taking the whole of the evidence into consideration, he dismissed the summons.

NORFOLK COUNTY JUSTICES.

SHIRE HALL, NORWICH.

Saturday, May 15.

Vagrant Act Amendment Act 1868.

By sect. 3 coins are instruments of gaming.

Therefore persons playing at pitch and toss on high road (if proved) are to be deemed rogues and vagabonds.

There must, however, be evidence that the persons are wagering or gaming within the meaning of the Act.

Edward Todd and Benjamin Simmons were charged under 31 & 32 Vict. c. 52, s. 3, with playing at pitch and toss on the previous Sunday evening.

Linay (managing clerk to Sadd) appeared for the defendants.

P.C. Charlesworth stated that he was watching, and saw each of the prisoners pitch two separate halfpence at a certain spot upon a public footway at Catton, near Norwich, and then go up to the place, pick up the four coins, and throw them up in the air, and then one defendant picked up some and the other the remainder; the defendants then commenced pitching the halfpence again at the same spot, and witness made his appearance, and the defendants immediately ran away, and left three halfpence and a button, which evidently had been laid as the "spot."

This being the case for the prosecution, Linay submitted there was no legal evidence to convict the defendants, as there was no proof that they were playing for money, and if there was no wagering or gaming then the simple fact of throwing halfpence at a particular spot, and then picking them up and throwing them up in the air, would not of course, per se, be an offence, and the witness was not near enough to see if the defendants took one another's halfpence after the pitching; and to come within the meaning of the section of the Act, he contended that there should be more than the mere proof that defendants were throwing about halfpence, in fact till this statute (31 & 32 Vict. c. 52) came into operation the game of pitch and toss was held not to be an offence (Watson v. Martin, 11 L. T. Rep. N. S. 372); and now it is only by this Act made an offence when coins are used as instruments of gaming or means of wagering on gaming.

Information dismissed.

THE CHIEF CONSTABLE OF SALFORD.—The Salford Town Council have appointed Captain R. W. Torrens to the office of chief constable in the room of the late Mr. Edward Hibberd.

Last week the Crown lawyers appeared in the Irish Court of Queen's Bench, to prosecute Rumble, the private of the 9th Foot, indicted for the manslaughter of Woods on the Drogheda polling-day. It will be recollected that Woods was killed by a bullet in the height of the riot. No order to fire was given by Capt. Daunt, who was in charge of the troops. Mr. Murphy, Q.C., laid down the principle that "if those in authority, and armed with deadly weapons, took the lives of any of their fellow citizens, they would have to answer to the civil tribunals, and show that they were placed in such circumstances that, for the reasonable protection of their own lives, it was necessary for them to do the act which caused the fatal consequences." The prisoner was acquitted.

THE EDMONTON LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH.—Some few years ago Mr. Alderman Sidney purchased an estate called Bowes Manor, in the parish of Edmonton, and about eighteen months back he commenced making certain alterations therein. In so doing he took in some tracts of land said to be the property of the parish, erecting posts and rails to establish his boundaries. The Edmonton Local Board of Health interfered, and ordered a case to be prepared for the opinion of counsel in the matter. This was submitted to Mr. W. Cunningham Glen, who advised the board that the entire highways from hedge to hedge were vested in them as conservators of the rights of the public and that they had no power to give to any individual a single inch of the parish ground. A correspondence then took place between the board and Alderman Sidney's solicitors, Messrs. Murray and Hutchins, who informed the board that they were prepared to fight the case on its merits. A meeting of the board has been held, when it was resolved that, unless steps were immediately taken to remove the encroachments, proceedings would be taken against Alderman Sidney for trespass.

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

LANDLORD AND TENANT—NOTICE BY MORTGAGEES.—The mortgagees gave notice to the occupier of mortgaged premises, demanding payment of rent to them instead of the mortgagor, and threatening a distress on nonpayment. There was no evidence of a previous tenancy, and the occupier had never paid rent to the mortgagees, nor did he assent to the notice. This was held not to create a tenancy between the occupier and the mortgagees so as to require notice before ejectment: (Biner v. Walters, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 326. C. P.)

MORTGAGE—FATHER AND SON.—A son, being an expectant devisee, paid off the mortgage on an estate belonging to his father. Afterwards, by an alteration in his father's will, he became only tenant for life in the estate. It was held (reversing the decision of Stuart, V.C.), that from the dealings between the parties it was to be inferred that the son paid off the mortgage debt in settlement of some pecuniary transactions, and therefore that the presumption that the son paid it off for his own benefit was rebutted, and that he was entitled to no lien on the estate for which he had so paid off: (Crow v. Pettingell, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 342. L.J.J.)

LEASES AND SETTLED ESTATES' ACT—VENDOR AND PURCHASER—SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.—By a settlement made on the marriage of A., certain freehold hereditaments were vested in a trustee in fee in trust for the separate use of A. during the joint lives of herself and her husband, with a restraint on anticipation, and if A. predeceased her husband, in trust for such persons as A. should by will appoint, and in default of appointment, in trust for the person or persons whom A. should leave her heir or co-heirs at law, and the heirs and assigns of such person or persons respectively; but in case A. should survive her husband, then in trust for such persons as she should by deed or will appoint; and in default of appointment, on the same trusts as those before declared in default of her exercising the power of appointment by will reserved to her in case she should predecease her husband. A petition was presented by A. (by her next friend) under the Leases and Sales of Settled Estates Act (19 & 20 Vict. c. 120), for sale of the property, and an order was made thereon for its sale, to which order the husband, the trustee, and the children of the marriage, who were all then infants (by their guardian), consented. The purchaser under this order objected to the title, on the ground that the Act required the consent of persons representing the equitable inheritance in the property, and that, as the heir or co-heirs at law of A. were, during her life, unascertained persons, no such consent could be obtained, and consequently that no sale under the Act could be made. The purchaser was thereupon discharged, by consent, from his purchase, and B., the plaintiff in this suit, was substituted for him, and the property was conveyed to B. B. afterwards sold the property by auction, and C. became the purchaser. C. took the same objection to the title which had been formerly taken by the original purchaser. B. filed a bill against C. for specific performance of the contract: Held (reversing the Master of the Rolls, who had dismissed the bill with costs), that A.'s marriage settlement was a settlement within the meaning of sect. 1 of the Act, and that the court had jurisdiction to make the order for sale, and a decree was accordingly made for specific performance, with costs, but no costs of the appeal were given. The Court of Appeal is not bound to consider a title doubtful because the judge of the court below has expressed an opinion adverse to it, but, on the contrary, ought to exercise its own judgment upon the title, and decide accordingly: (Beioley v. Carter, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 381. L. J.J.)

ESTATE PUR AUTRE VIE—APPORTIONMENT.—B., tenant for life of an estate pur autre vie, renewed the lease to himself and his heirs, and purchased the fee, subject to the original lease. The case was held not to fall within the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, the lease not being in writing; nor within 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, as they did not determine with the death of the tenant for life, and, therefore, that there was no apportionment in his favour of the rents accruing between the last payment and his death: (Mills v. Trumper, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 384. L. J.J.)

WILL—CONSTRUCTION.—Under a will which contained no express gift of residue, but gave all furniture and the like, and all money in the testator's house, or due to him, and "all my stocks, funds, and securities for money, money due on bonds, bills, notes, or other securities which I may die seised, possessed of, or entitled to, and of any kind and description whatsoever, my will and intention is that my executors do and shall pay the same to H.:" Held, that shares in banking and railway companies passed; the words amounting, under the circumstances, to a complete residuary bequest: (Re Dutton, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 386. L. J.J.)

CHARITY—SCHEME—EXTENSION OF TRUST.—L., by his will, made in 1624, declared that his trustees should hold certain lands upon trust out of the income thereof, to provide clothing of a specified description, "for eight poor boys inhabiting within the town of Edmonton," and "to cause them to be put to some petty school, to the end that they might learn to read English." A school-room for the purposes of the charity had been provided by a subsequent benefactress, and the annual income of the charity having increased from 60*l.* to 700*l.*, the Charity Commissioners had approved of a scheme for the settlement of the charity. The principal provisions of the scheme were, that the trustees should pay 70*l.* a-year to some school in each of three ecclesiastical districts which had been taken out of the ancient parish of Edmonton; that there should be an upper school as well as a lower one—the former open preferentially to sons of inhabitants of Edmonton, and then to others, the latter open exclusively to the sons of inhabitants of the town of Edmonton; that capitation fees might be charged; that three boys were to be educated gratuitously in the upper school, such boys to be selected by examination from boys in the lower school; and that twenty-five boys should be educated gratuitously in the lower school, and eight boys be provided with clothing, such boys to be selected on the ground of merit or poverty, at the option of the trustees. On a petition by certain inhabitants of the parish against the scheme: Held, that the primary object of the charity was the education of very poor boys, and that the scheme would carry out that object generally, but that the number of boys to be clothed might be extended from eight to twenty, as the inhabitants of the parish were strongly in favour of such extension. Capitation fees approved of, provided they be very small. (Re Latymer's Charity, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 425. M. R.)

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

MORTGAGE OF STOCK IN COMPANY—SALE BY MORTGAGEE—USAGE OF STOCK EXCHANGE.—In Dec. 1865, the plaintiff transferred to the defendant certain stock, to secure a loan for three months. The defendant sold the stock, but when the three months expired and the loan was paid off, he transferred to the plaintiff the like amount of the same stock, which, subsequently to his sale, he had purchased in the market. He had sold at a high, and bought at a lower price, and the plaintiff filed his bill claiming the profits thus made, on the ground that he was entitled to have the identical stock returned to him; he offered by his bill to re-transfer to the defendant the stock which the defendant had bought and transferred to him. On this footing a decree was made. During proceedings under that decree, it appeared that, before an amendment of his bill, the plaintiff had sold the whole of the stock, and was therefore unable to re-transfer it, and he then obtained an order upon a petition for liberty to transfer to the defendant other stock to the same amount, or to account for the value of it. On an appeal by the defendant against both the decree and the order on the petition, it was held, that such a variation as was made in the decree by the order in the petition, was inconsistent with the decree, and beyond the power of the court to make; and that the petition must be dismissed with costs. Also, that the fact of the sale by the plaintiff of the stock transferred to him ought to have been stated in the amended bill; and that the suppression of that material fact disentitled him to any relief in his suit; and the bill was also dismissed with costs. But their Lordships, believing that the suppression was not fraudulent, dismissed the bill without prejudice to any other proceedings which the plaintiff might be advised to take: (Langton v. Waite, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 337. L.J.J.)

CONTRACT—GUARANTEE—ULTRA VIRES.—The objects of a joint-stock company (limited) were declared to be for the making, maintaining, buying, leasing, hiring, selling, letting on lease or hire, or otherwise dealing with all and every kind of machinery, &c., employed in the construction of railways, the acquisition of lands for the purposes of the company, erection of buildings, &c., "and the doing of all such things as are necessary, contingent, incidental, or conducive to all or any of such objects." The company entered into an agreement under seal to pay deposits on a concession of the Belgian Government to the grantees to make and construct a railway from Antwerp to Tournai, with a view of enabling the contractors to execute and complete the work, which was in fact a guarantee for a large sum, in the hope of obtaining benefits of the concession, and by which the company would profit by executing the rolling stock, plant, &c., for the railway. On bill filed by a shareholder in the company to set aside this contract on the ground that the same was not within the powers of the directors of such company: Held, that such a contract and guarantee was ultra vires, and set aside accordingly with costs: "Quiescence" as distinguished from "acquiescence" commented upon: (Smith v. The Ashbury, &c. Company, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 360. V.C.J.)

PROMOTION MONEY.—The promoter of a company secretly agreed to give each of four directors, who subscribed the memorandum, ten 10*l.* shares or the money for them. After registration, a cheque for 400*l.* was paid to him by resolution of the directors, as money due to him from the company, under an agreement set out in the articles, and he handed the cheque to one of the four directors, to divide the amount according to the secret agreement. On an application by the official liquidator, under sect. 165 of the Companies Act 1862, the four directors were held jointly and severally liable to repay the sum of 400*l.* with interest at 5 per cent.: (Re The London and Provincial Starch Company, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 390. V.C.J.)

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES.—A general summary to returns of joint-stock companies wound-up or winding-up since Aug. 1862, shows that as regards England 367 companies have been dealt with representing a nominal capital of 136,772,452*l.*, 340 companies with a paid-up capital (as far as known) of 23,911,949*l.*, and 352 companies with liabilities, as far as ascertained, amounting to 74,473,750*l.* The return for Scotland shows 38 companies with a nominal capital of 555,820*l.*, 30 with paid-up capital amounting to 267,411*l.*, and one with liabilities amounting to 615*l.* The returns from Ireland show 14 companies with a nominal capital of 1,326,000*l.*, 12 with paid-up capital amounting to 168,667*l.*, and 4 with liabilities amounting to 8056*l.*

MERCANTILE LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

PARTNERSHIP—INFANT PARTNER.—In a suit in which a decree for a dissolution and an account of an unsuccessful partnership was made, the chief clerk had certified that one of the partners, an infant, was entitled to a salary under the partnership agreement; but that his share of the partnership capital, which was unpaid, was irrecoverable. Subsequently the infant, who previously to the date of the certificate, had attained his majority, moved to stay all further proceedings in the cause as against him, on his disavowing the agreement for the partnership, and disclaiming all interest under it. That motion was refused; but on the cause coming on for further consideration, on a question affecting the proportion which each of the partners was to contribute towards the partnership losses: Held, that the share of the infant partner was irrecoverable as an asset of the partnership; that the debts and liabilities (with the exception of the infant's salary) must be paid out of the certified assets; that the infant disclaiming his salary, it was not to be paid to him and that each of the partners (all of whom were parties to the suit) must pay his own costs; with liberty to apply: (Wright v. Tanner, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 427. V.C.S.)

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL

INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY.

INTERMEDIATE EXAMINATION.

Thursday, the 3rd June, is the day appointed for this examination, and candidates for examination are to attend on that day at half-past nine in the forenoon, at the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery-lane, London. The examination will commence at ten o'clock precisely, and close at four o'clock.

On the day of examination papers will be delivered to each candidate, containing questions to be answered in writing, selected from the works specified by the Examiners; and a paper of questions on bookkeeping.

FINAL EXAMINATION.

Tuesday, the 1st, and Wednesday, the 2nd June, are the days appointed for this examination, and the candidates for examination are to attend on those days at half-past nine in the forenoon of each day, at the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery-lane, London. The examination will commence at ten o'clock precisely, and close at four o'clock.

On the first day of examination, papers will be delivered to each candidate, containing questions to be answered in writing, classed under the several heads of—1. Preliminary. 2. Common and Statute Law and Practice of the Courts. 3. Conveyancing.

On the second day, further papers will be delivered to each candidate, containing questions to be answered in—4. Preliminary. 5. Equity, and Practice of the Courts. 6. Bankruptcy, and Practice of the Courts. 7. Criminal Law, and Proceedings before Justices of the Peace.

Each candidate is required to answer all the preliminary questions (Nos. 1 and 4); and also to answer in three of the other heads of inquiry, viz.—Common Law, Conveyancing, and Equity. The Examiners will continue the practice of proposing questions in bankruptcy and in criminal law and proceedings before justices of the peace, in order that candidates who have given their attention to these subjects may have the advantage of answering such questions, and having the correctness of their answers in those departments taken into consideration in summing up the merit of their general examination.

COUNTY COURTS.

SOUTHAMPTON COUNTY COURT.

(Before C. J. GALE, Esq., Judge.)

REED v. SCOTT.

An exposure of the "tally" system.

Emanuel for plaintiff.

Green for the defendant.

This was a jury case, the action being for the recovery of the sum of 50*l.*, alleged to be due for damages sustained by wrongful dismissal from service, for wages, and for board and lodgings. The demand was originally 61*l.*, but the plaintiff abandoned 11*l.* of the claim in order that the case might come within the jurisdiction of the County Court.

Emanuel, in opening the case, said the defendant was engaged in business at St. Mary's-place in carrying on the "tally" trade. It appeared to be the custom in this trade for men to travel about the country with large stocks of woollen and drapery goods, with which they called upon the poorer inhabitants of villages, and induced them to take goods and contract debts on the representation that they would give them indiscriminate credit extended over a considerable time for payment. They thus got these women to purchase goods of a most gaudy description, knowing that they had power to imprison the husbands if they would not pay. These tallymen were in the habit of employing a number of travellers, and it was a custom to engage these travellers for two, two and a half, or three years, they receiving no salary, neither paid weekly or monthly; but, before entering into an engagement, there was a stipulation to pay, 20*l.*, 25*l.*, or 30*l.*, per year, and this money was not paid until the end of the stipulated term of three years, when they were entitled to receive the whole accumulated salary according to agreement. There was also a custom that if the traveller at the expiration of the three years thought proper to take the good-will of the route through which he had travelled he could do so, but then he was not allowed his salary. The facts of the case were that in the early part of Nov. 1866, in consequence of an advertisement which appeared in the papers, the plaintiff applied to the defendant to be taken in his employ as a traveller upon the Scotch system, which was the name given to the "tally" trade. Plaintiff asked to be supplied with the particulars of an engagement under the Scotch system, and defendant sent in answer to this what the conditions were, and this was to the effect that plaintiff, who was at Dundee, should first pay his own expenses up; secondly, travel with drapery and solicit orders for a term of three years, with bed, board, and lodging, and to be supplied with every necessary; in fact, to be in the house as one of the family, and at the end of the three years to be put into business in the usual way. The letter concluded, "I may say no business for a sober and industrious young man can be, that offers such advantages as the Scotch system." The third letter was to the effect that plaintiff's services were accepted, and that it was a situation of responsibility—so much so, that he would become a master himself, and get from 300*l.* to 400*l.* a year. He was recommended to accept the offer, and assured that he would never regret it, and would make up his mind not to leave it until he had made his fortune. (Laughter.) In the fourth letter the defendant wrote to plaintiff, telling him to come by way of London from Dundee, and he would meet him at Southampton on his arrival. The plaintiff came to Southampton, and entered into defendant's service, the terms being to receive 20*l.* a year for the first year, 25*l.* the second year, and 30*l.* the third year, lodging and board in the house, and at the end of the three years either to accept the accumulated salary or take the goodwill of the business according to the usual routine. This was in Nov. 1866, and he continued in his business for two years, and not the slightest complaint was made that he had not discharged his duties properly and in a business-like manner. The plaintiff told defendant when he commenced his engagement that of course he must give unlimited credit, and that consequently there would be a large number of bad debts; but the profits were so good that they would make up for the loss. In Dec. 1866 when the defendant got into difficulties and compounded with his creditors, plaintiff asked if it was defendant's wish that he should leave, and the latter answered "No; there is no reason for your leaving; I shall carry on business again." Shortly after defendant began negotiations for transferring his business to another man, and plaintiff asked if he should be transferred over with the business, thus showing that he did not consider it a weekly or monthly engagement, and defendant said he should be. Those negotiations, however, fell through. Up to this time there had not been the slightest imputation made against the character of plaintiff. In Jan. 1869, when the plaintiff had been in defendant's service for two years and two months, defendant said he was to show another man his round. To this the plaintiff strongly objected, and he told his master so, but said he had no objection to go round with his master if he wished to see the customers. However, on his master assuring him that he need not be afraid of his (defendant's) taking any advantage of him, and that he would either pay him his salary or let him take the business, and would behave towards him in an honourable manner, the plaintiff took the new man his rounds, and on his coming back on the 17th Feb. defendant, accosting the plaintiff, asked him if he had introduced the new man to his customers, and on being answered in the affirmative, he said to plaintiff, "Now you have done this, you may go about your business." This was the case for the plaintiff. Defendant said he would give plaintiff 20*l.* for his first year's service, 25*l.* for the second year, and 30*l.* for the time that he had worked during the third year, and, after making certain deductions, paid him 29*l.* Now the question was, whether the master was justified in taking this course—in dismissing the plaintiff in this summary manner.

William Reed was then called, and Emanuel was about to place the letters which he had read into his hands, when Green said if they were put in in order to constitute them an agreement, he should ask that they be stamped.

His HONOUR.—It is an agreement in writing, and requires to be stamped.

Emanuel.—I think it is a point of considerable difficulty, and it should be reserved.

The Registrar said it must be stamped.

Emanuel.—It is not a contract; it is only an offer.

Green.—You opened it as a contract.

Emanuel.—The whole together is a contract, and not one letter.

Green.—Then the whole must be stamped.

It was then put to the plaintiff if he would pay the 10*l.* penalty, which he would incur by having the agreement stamped, but he declined to do so, and judgment was given for defendant with costs.

MARAVILLA COCOA FOR BREAKFAST.—The cocoa (or cacao) of Maravilla is the true Theobroma of Linnaeus.—The Globe says: "Taylor Brothers' Maravilla Cocoa has achieved a thorough success, and supercedes every other cocoa in the market. For homeopaths and invalids we could not recommend a more agreeable or valuable beverage." Sold, in packets only, by all grocers.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

EXCESSIVE EXPENDITURE—GAMING—CONDITIONAL ORDER OF DISCHARGE.—Where an offence has been proved under the above section which would justify the court in refusing or suspending the order of discharge, if asked so to do by any creditor or the assignee, but not having been asked so to do, the court having regard to the reasonable probability of the bankrupt having future assets, will annex conditions to the order of discharge to the effect that he should pay a certain sum per annum, until a fixed portion of his debts have been paid, although the bankrupt had no certain source of income. Quare, whether the bequest of an annuity payable to the bankrupt at the discretion of the trustees of the testator's will, ought to be charged with payments to assignees. (Re Albert Pelham Clinton, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 456. Bacon, C.)

OXFORD COUNTY COURT.

March 25 and April 29.

(Before J. B. PARRY, Esq., Q. C., Judge.)

Re H. BARON MANN, a Bankrupt.

Ante-nuptial settlements, and clandestine marriages in England and abroad.

This case is particularly noticeable, as developing incidents more singular perhaps, than those usually elicited in a court of bankruptcy. The bankrupt was remanded last February for refusing to disclose to the court, the particulars relative to a marriage alleged to have taken place in England or Scotland, between himself and a Warwickshire lady; and also for not producing a copy of a deed of marriage settlement, under which it was surmised he was entitled to considerable property that might probably be rendered available by his creditors. At the former hearing the learned judge, having intimated that, if the bankrupt did not make a full disclosure regarding his marriage and produce a copy of the deed of settlement, the case would be adjourned sine die without protection, he now appeared to pass his last examination.

C. Egan, supported.

P. Walsh appeared for Messrs. Day, Son, and Hewitt, of London, the opposing creditors and assignees.

Egan said, he was but recently consulted in this matter, and would not comment upon the strenuous opposition hitherto offered to the bankrupt; he advised the bankrupt's solicitor (F. B. Thompson, of Oxford), that his client should fully disclose to the learned judge, the circumstances enshrouding the case, otherwise, he would not appear as his advocate. The bankrupt, under his advice, would now answer such questions as his Honour deemed proper.

His HONOUR.—According to this deed, is the husband entitled to this property?

Egan.—That is the real question at issue in this case; and reference to the provisions of the settlement will show that—marriage or no marriage—the bankrupt and his creditors are excluded.

His HONOUR.—What we want is proof of the validity of the marriage, because under certain circumstance the bankrupt would become entitled to the property. The question to be tried is with reference to the property comprised in this deed, and the bankrupt is brought here to be examined, and to give a full and fair explanation of the facts on which he is examined, with a view to enable his creditors to possess themselves of the property for the purpose of paying his debts. He wants me to give him a discharge from his debts, but before I can assist him he must give the explanations required.

Egan.—There is no valid marriage.

The bankrupt was then sworn and deposed that: In 1866 he became acquainted with Miss Summers, and after a short time they agreed to become husband and wife, but the relatives of the lady being adverse to the match, they decided to get married in Scotland. On their way to Edinburgh in 1867, they sojourned a few days at Carlisle, where they united themselves by reading the marriage ceremony out of the Prayer Book; there were no witnesses, and no other ceremony of marriage ever took place between them. Subsequently they lived in Scotland, and now live in Leamington, as husband and wife, and they have one child living. As regards the deeds, the bankrupt said, no marriage settlement was made by him, but Miss Summers, in contemplation of marriage, settled her property upon herself and her lawful issue exclusively of any husband she might marry and of his debts or liabilities. Previously to making that settlement, Miss Summers informed him of her intentions, and he agreed thereto.

Egan submitted that the state of facts elicited from the bankrupt showed no valid marriage had been established; his Honour was well aware that the House of Lords had decided in the case of Beamish v. Beamish, that, "parties reading the marriage ceremony out of the Prayer Book, does not constitute a legal marriage, notwithstanding that the intended husband be himself a clergyman." The provisions of the deed of settlement proved that neither the bankrupt nor his creditors were lawfully entitled to claim any interest in the trust-property; and, in justice to Miss Summers (who is a member of a most respectable family), he begged leave to say that, the disposition made of her property in favour of lawful issue showed that at the time she executed the settlement she was a person of virtuous principles, and morally anticipated becoming a lawful wife, and a mother.

His HONOUR.—I have no doubt whatever of that.

Egan.—After your Honour's gracious expression, I will not trespass further upon the valuable time of the court than to ardently hope that taking into consideration all the circumstances of this sad case, the long and painful examination undergone by the bankrupt, and the full answers given by him, your Honour will be pleased to exercise the power rested in you, and grant the bankrupt his discharge.

His HONOUR said he was of opinion that the bankrupt had answered the questions very fairly, and he should make an order that he had passed his last examination, and fix the next court for his discharge, with protection in the meantime.

Walsh.—Shall we be able to examine the bankrupt any further.

His HONOUR.—I consider his examination is at an end. I think he has given his answers fully and fairly.

At the conclusion of the proceedings, his Honour said he hoped for the child's sake, that the marriage in Scotland would be established.

Egan joined in the kind wish, but feared it could not be realised. Indeed, the Yelverton case showed the instability of such imprudent unions: For although in Birt v. Boutinez, the first marriage (which took place at Gretna Green), was held valid in England; yet, the second (which took place at Brussels), was dissolved by the Belgian Ecclesiastical Court.

April 29.—This bankrupt came up to-day for his final discharge.

C. Egan (instructed by F. B. Thompson, solicitor of Oxford), was counsel for the bankrupt.

P. Walsh, for the opposing creditors.

Walsh stated that since the last court his client had gone to considerable expense in endeavouring to obtain information with regard to the marriage, or the alleged marriage, of the bankrupt, who said he had gone through no legal ceremony with his wife, Maria Summers, but that there was a marriage de facto at Carlisle, and he subsequently cohabited with her at various places in Scotland.—Mrs. Mann had been subpoenaed and was now present.

The Judge ruled that her evidence was inadmissible.

His HONOUR.—On what ground do you oppose the bankrupt's discharge?

Walsh.—On the ground that we have reason to believe the statement is not true.

His HONOUR.—That won't do. You must go by the Act of Parliament.

Egan.—Precisely. There must be evidence of criminality. There are six offences specified by Legislature, the committing any one of which would bring the bankrupt within the penal clause of the statute (sect. 159, Bankruptcy Act 1861); but unless you can prove he has committed one of them, the bankrupt must pass.

Walsh.—Your Honour intimated that we should bring up any fresh witnesses who would throw any light on the case, and I now tender the evidence of Mr. Hewitt.

Mr. Hewitt, of the firm of Day, Son, and Hewitt, was now sworn, and said—The bankrupt first entered the service of our firm in 1858. He was discharged in 1862. He was to sell goods, travel on commission, and collect accounts in Scotland. He was paid by commission on his sales. Defalcations were discovered in his accounts, as the customers when applied to for payment, said "they had paid our traveller."

Egan said it was probable, that amongst the numerous staff of agents employed by Messrs. Day and Company, errors in the accounts might have occurred; but Mr. Hewitt's evidence alone as to his customers' statements, was insufficient to sustain a charge of embezzlement, and he submitted that no satisfactory evidence had been adduced to prove the bankrupt had committed any one of the six offences specified in the penal clause of the Bankruptcy Act.

His HONOUR said there was no ground for his refusing the bankrupt's discharge under the Act of Parliament. Very few bankrupts had gone through as much as the bankrupt had done to get his discharge, and if he had done wrong he had been sufficiently punished.

The bankrupt was then discharged.

BANKRUPTCY REFORM.

Mr. Charles Baylis, solicitor, has made the following suggestions:

The process of passing through the Bankruptcy Court should be more deterrent than at present, and provision should be made that every person becoming bankrupt should, together with his books and accounts, undergo the strictest examination and scrutiny, and bad or even neglected book-keeping should be treated as a grave offence, and punished accordingly. The complying with the terms of this provision should only involve, on the part of a bankrupt, the keeping of books and accounts properly, and which every honest man must do for his own satisfaction and success in business. It is notorious that the bulk of the expense incurred in investigating and working a bankrupt's estate is in the unravelling of a bankrupt's accounts; this could easily be prevented by traders being compelled to keep their accounts in such a way that they or any ordinary man of business could understand them.

It should be considered,—

As to Exclusion of Companies and Large Partnerships.

1. Whether clause 5 ought not to be expunged; otherwise partnerships consisting of any number of persons above seven could trade with impunity and not be reached either under the winding-up clauses of the Act of 1862 or in bankruptcy.

As to Petitions for Adjudication in Bankruptcy.

2. Whether, in clause 6, the amount (50*l.*) should not be considerably reduced, inasmuch as a man can more readily pay a small sum than a large one, and, if not, the sooner steps are taken for the division of the debtor's property among the general body of creditors the better.

As to Appointment of Trustee.

3. Whether in clause 13, line 22, the word creditor should not be struck out, and in lieu thereof the words "Attorney or solicitor of five years' standing" be inserted. The appointment of a solicitor of five years' standing to be a trustee is strongly advocated for the following among other reasons: A solicitor is an officer of the court, and liable to the pains and penalties attaching thereto. Great expense will be saved by the trustee being a legal practitioner, and coming into direct contact with the court without the intervention of a client. He will only be entitled to his authorised and taxed costs, which will be considerably less than if a trustee is paid, and he has (which he must do) to act under the advice of his solicitor. Whilst on this ticklish subject of "Solicitors' Costs" one fact must be borne in mind—that a solicitor is entitled to 6*s.* 8*d.* for each attendance, and 3*s.* 6*d.*, or, in some cases, to 5*s.* for writing a letter; he must, therefore, make 300 of the former and write between 300 and 400, as the case may be, before a bill for 100*l.* is made up. This is mentioned to show that, so far as solicitors' charges are concerned, they are not a bar to cheap law.

As to Discharge of Bankrupt.

4. Whether after the heading of clause 42, and between the 29th and 30th lines on page 14, the following clauses should not be inserted:—

41a. "That the judge, on being satisfied that the bankrupt has given up all his property to his creditors, and otherwise conformed to all the requirements of the Act, shall issue a certificate of conformity, certifying (having reference to the amount of assets paid or estimated to be paid out of his estate, the mode in which the bankrupt's books and accounts have been kept, and the conduct of the bankrupt generally) the amount of future dividend (if any) in addition to that produced or estimated to be produced from his estate, to be ultimately paid by the bankrupt out of his future earnings; and, if sufficient cause is shown for an increased dividend being paid by any one or more creditors, the judge shall be at liberty so to certify."

41b. "That notes, under the seal of the court, and signed by the bankrupt, payable to the creditor or bearer, shall be issued representing the amount of future dividend set forth in the certificate of conformity, such notes to bear interest at 5 per cent., payable by equal annual instalments extending over five years; and, if the instalments are punctually paid, the whole of such interest shall be credited in favour of the bankrupt and in part payment of the last bill."

41c. "That the aforesaid notes may, at the option of the creditor, be registered as judgments against the bankrupt for the purpose of affecting after-acquired property. So soon as the bankrupt shall have paid the several notes and interest as aforesaid, or arranged with the holders for the payment thereof, and produce the same to the court, or give satisfactory evidence of their having been paid or satisfied, then the bankrupt shall be at liberty to claim his discharge."

41d. "That if default be made in the payment of any one or more of the said notes, then the holders thereof may summon and examine the bankrupt before the judge, who may order execution to issue for the whole or any portion of the amount, or otherwise deal with the matter as in his discretion will meet the justice of the case. The judgments on any of the notes shall take precedence of any obtained in respect of any debt or debts contracted subsequently to the bankruptcy."

41e. "That any conditional or absolute bill of sale, settlement, deed of gift, or any other voluntary deed or document made by the bankrupt after the passing of the Act, and notwithstanding that he may be solvent at the time of making them, shall be void as against creditors to the extent of the bankrupt's liabilities under the certificate of conformity; and, if the bankrupt be entitled, in right of himself, his wife, or otherwise, to any income derived under any will, marriage settlement, or deed of gift, executed after the passing of the Act, the entire income (less such a sum as, in the opinion of the judge, shall be necessary to maintain the wife and children of the bankrupt) shall be paid for a period of five years to the trustee under the bankruptcy, and form a fund for the payment of the notes to be issued by the court as aforesaid; and every provision or trust in any such will, marriage settlement, or deed of gift executed after the passing of the Act directing that such income shall, in the event of bankruptcy of the debtor, be paid to some other person other than the bankrupt, shall be inoperative as against creditors for the period of five years and to the extent aforesaid."

The introduction of these last clauses affects the most important parts of the Bill, and the utmost caution is necessary in considering the modes, terms, and conditions on which the bankrupt should be discharged, and ultimately released from his debts and liabilities. When the new Bankruptcy and Abolition Bills become law, debts will be no longer a charge on the person but on the debtor's property; therefore, it is absolutely necessary that the provisions of a Bankruptcy Act should be such as to deter persons from incurring debts or liabilities recklessly, and without considering the effect of failure on the future position of himself and family, and also that stringent measures should be in force not only to divest a bankrupt of every or any property he may be possessed of at the time of his bankruptcy, but to prevent him acquiring property thereafter, or even enjoying that which he may have accumulated, or in any way become possessed of or interested in, until payment of his debts and liabilities to the extent determined by the judge in bankruptcy.

5. Whether, in clause 42, line 80, the words "where" and "has been" should not be struck out, and "shall be" inserted; and, in line 38, after "closed" to the end of the seventh line, p. 15, should be struck out. These alterations are rendered necessary consequent on the suggested clauses as to the bankrupt's discharge and future liability.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

(NOTE.—This department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editor is not responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it.)

SOLICITORS AS MAGISTRATES.—The rule (which has been discussed by correspondents in your columns) of excluding attorneys and solicitors from the magistracy is not, I venture to assert, approved by public opinion. I have been curious enough to go through the "Municipal Corporation Directory" (published in 1866) with the Law List, and I find that in that year the attorneys and solicitors of England furnished upwards of thirty ex-officio magistrates. Each year, it may be assumed, would give a like result, and thus the fact is established that a large number of the members of our Profession have, with the full confidence of their neighbours, not only held office as magistrates, but have presided over the bench of magistrates in their respective boroughs. Several of the largest boroughs in the kingdom have within the last few years elected attorneys as their chief magistrates. I, however, hope that the rule of exclusion is not so strictly enforced as is popularly supposed; for in my research I found the following names given as magistrates in the "Directory," corresponding with names given for the same towns in the Law List. The gentlemen named were not, so far as shown by the "Directory," ex-officio magistrates, either as mayors or ex-mayors. It would be most interesting to know how the fact really is, and whether the rule is sufficiently flexible to admit some of our seniors to the distinction of having their names placed on the commission of the peace. I subjoin a list, and shall be glad if the gentlemen named (or some one knowing them) will inform the Profession, through you, whether they really are magistrates ex-officio, or are magistrates appointed by the Crown:—Carlisle—George Gill Mounsey, Esq.; Exeter—

C. H. Turner, Esq.; Portsmouth—George Cornelius Stigan, Esq.; Hereford—James Jay, Esq.; Leominster—James Bedford, Esq.; Rochester—George Essell, Esq.; Lancaster—John Hall, Esq.; Boston—Francis Thirkill White, Esq.; Newcastle-on-Tyne—Ralph Park Phillipson, Esq.; Bury St. Edmunds—H. Le Grice, Esq.; Worcester—J. H. Clifton, Esq.; Wakefield—Joseph Wainwright, Esq.; Cardigan—Thomas Davies, Esq. I have heard that the late eminent solicitor, Mr. John Hope Shaw, of Leeds, for many years acted as a magistrate, and I have also heard that an eminent solicitor at Liverpool (whose name I do not now remember) also had the honour of being appointed a magistrate. It would go far to destroy the rule of exclusion if authentic information could be obtained, showing that force of circumstances has from time to time compelled the Lord Chancellor of the day to make exceptions to the rule. All the Profession have a right to ask is, the abandonment of a rule of exclusion. Of course the appointment of an individual solicitor to the magistracy must depend upon his fitness for the honour, the public requirements, and those other conditions which generally regulate such appointments.

W. M.

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.

Queries.

14. STAMP—CONVEYANCE AND SETTLEMENT.—A, having contracted for the purchase of freeholds, the same were by her direction conveyed to trustees in trust to sell and invest, and hold the sale money in trust for payment of income to A. for life, and capital to her children. The conveyance and settlement is effected by the same deed. Will it be necessary to affix a 35s. stamp in addition to the ad. val. duty?

H.

15. STAMP.—Does the following document require a stamp?

"I hold for G. A., the sum of 20l. to be given into her hands on demand."

E. B.

June 6, 1867.

Would it amount to a declaration of a trust?

S.

16. BANKRUPTCY.—An action for libel is brought against A., and judgment given against him with costs. A. afterwards, but before final judgment is signed, makes himself a bankrupt and obtains his order of discharge, having scheduled the probable amount of costs incurred by the plaintiff in the above action. The plaintiff did not oppose A. in any stage of the bankruptcy, but now seeks to obtain payment of the above costs. Can the plaintiff legally hold A. responsible?

B. J.

17. MANSLAUGHTER—ADMITTING TO BAIL.—A. was committed to take his trial at the assizes, on the coroner's warrant, charged with manslaughter. The witnesses were bound over to prosecute, &c. Subsequent to the coroner's inquest, the charge against the accused was heard by the justices of the peace, who also committed him to the assizes, but let him out on bail. I shall thank you, or some of your readers, to inform me whether the justices had power to let A. out on bail, bearing in mind that he stood committed at the instance of the coroner.

Lex.

18. PASTURAGE.—Who has the right of pasturage along the sides of a high road (not a turnpike road) where it is not claimed by the lord of the manor? Does it belong to either the owner or the occupier of the adjoining land; and have the police any right to interfere with sheep or other cattle grazing on the sides of a high road (when such sheep, &c. do not belong to either the owner or the occupier of the land adjoining), provided they have a keeper and are not on and do not cause any obstruction to the highway?

B. D.

19. RECONVEYANCE—DOWER.—Is it absolutely necessary that the declaration to bar dower should be inserted in a reconveyance of mortgaged premises, if contained in the conveyance by the mortgagor; and, in the event of its omission, would the wife's right to dower attach if the husband was married after 1834?

J. D. E.

Answers.

(Q. 2.) COVENANT TO REPAIR IN LEASE.—Your correspondent "M. E. S.," in giving his opinion on the construction of the covenant to repair, set out by H. B. in the LAW TIMES, of May 1, has omitted all reference to the case of Payne v. Hayne (16 M. & W. 541, and 16 L. J. N. S. 130, Exch.). This case is more recent by five years, than the case of Walker v. Hatton (10 M. & W. 249) relied on by "M. E. S.," and, although it does not actually overrule Walker v. Hatton (nor, strange to say, even refer to it), yet it so qualifies the principle laid down in that case, as to make it almost a nullity. In Payne v. Hayne it was held that under a covenant to keep in good repair, a tenant is bound to put premises in good repair at the time of the demise into good repair and that the only qualification of the covenant is the "age and class" of the premises. Baron Alderson remarked, that the rule thus laid down is one very difficult of application. Would it not have been simpler not to have made it?

KAPPA.

(Q. 109.) TRANSFER OF MORTGAGE.—I am sorry that I did not read this query aright, having, as H. E. no doubt perceives, read "mortgagee" instead of "mortgagor." However, now that this has been corrected, perhaps I may venture to give my views on H. E.'s difficulty. I think that the executors should simply execute a declaration of trust of the mortgage money in favour of C., which should contain a recital that C. had consented to take the mortgage debt as part of his share of the residuary estate of the testator, such share being of greater value than the mortgage debt. If the other residuary legatees could be persuaded to acknowledge that C. was not taking more than he was entitled to, any difficulty arising from the rule that an executor cannot purchase from, or convey to himself, would be avoided.

M. E. S.

(Q. 3.) EQUITY OF REDEMPTION—MORTGAGE.—Probably in the case referred to by Mr. Angrove, the husband and wife granted, as well as appointed, the equity of redemption, in which case the acknowledgment was in order to confirm the grant. The vendor's solicitor should, however, have resisted this, and the conveyance should have been by appointment only.

M. E. S.

(Q. 5.) BOROUGH AND COUNTY MAGISTRATE.—The process of appointment to the magistracy, both for counties and boroughs, under the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, is as follows: For the county magistracy notice is given to the candidate, who has been recommended by the lord lieutenant (for, in practice, the Chancellor seldom, I believe, exercises his power of appointment suo motu), that his name has been put in the commission. This notice comes from the clerk of the peace. The candidate must then sue out a dedimus potestatem (which his solicitors can do for him), and the two persons to whom the de. po. is directed administer the oaths annexed to the writ, which is indorsed and returned to the Court of Chancery, the expense being six or seven guineas: (Stone's Petty Sessions.) Before, however, the new-made justice can act, he must qualify at the quarter sessions of his county by taking the oath relating to his estate; and it may here be added that "the clear yearly value of 100l. contemplated by this Act is that which comes into the pocket of the owner of the estate as such, after all other demands upon it are satisfied." The oaths of allegiance and supremacy have also to be taken within six months. Justices of the peace for boroughs are appointed by the commission of the sovereign under the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, and must reside in the borough, or within seven miles of it. They take the same oaths as the county magistrates, except the one as to qualification, and their oaths may be taken before the mayor or two aldermen, without a dedimus: (see Stone's Petty Sessions; Dickinson's Quarter Sessions, &c.)

Ringwood, May 19.

W. R.

(Q. 6.) WILL.—Upon the facts stated, it appears to me that the widow and the son can make a good title.

M. E. S.

(Q. 7.) CONVEYANCING—PRECEDENTS.—The variations from the ordinary forms of conveyances are so small in the first two cases given by "Inquirer," that I doubt whether he will find a precedent, ready cut and dried, in any of the books. In the first case, all that is necessary or expedient is to add a recital after the recital of the contract to the effect that the purchaser, being desirous of making a provision and advancement for his wife, had requested the vendor to convey the estate in manner thereinafter mentioned. The operative part will then be a grant at the request, &c., of the purchaser to the wife for her separate use, or to a trustee for her. In the second case, in the recital of the contract, the purchase-money should be stated to be part of the wife's separate estate, and the husband should be a party, though his concurrence is not absolutely necessary. "Inquirer" will find a precedent of a mortgage of the wife's estate in Rouse's Practical Conveyancer, though I cannot say that the form is one that I should use myself.

M. E. S.

(Q. 8.) CONVEYANCE.—The best thing A. can do is to appoint to himself, in fee. In default of such an appointment, A. would, at law, have only an estate for life; but I have no doubt that, upon a bill being filed for rectification of the conveyance, the omission of the limitation to the heirs of A. could be supplied as being simply a clerical error.

M. E. S.

(Q. 11.) MARRIED WOMAN.—The settlement in this case being a voluntary one, it is competent for A., if he be still alive, to defeat it by a conveyance of the property settled to a purchaser for value. Doe v. Manning, 9 East, 59. If A., however, be dead, or if there has been a conveyance for value made by the appointee under the power, there is no remedy, elopement and adultery not being, in themselves, an extinguishment of the power.

M. E. S.

(Q. 13.) LEASE AND COUNTERPART.—The lease and counterpart are usually prepared by the lessor's solicitor on behalf of both parties, and at the expense of the lessee, but frequently the draft lease is settled and approved of by the lessee's own solicitor, who sometimes claims the right to engross the counterpart: (Woodfall's Landlord and Tenant, 8th edit., p. 137.) In the absence of any express stipulation to the contrary, the expense of the lease falls upon the lessee, and of the counterpart upon the lessor.

B. D.

—The lessor, unless he has an agreement to that effect, cannot make the lessee execute a counterpart at his own expense, but if there be an agreement that a counterpart shall be executed, the lessee's solicitor may claim the work of preparing it. If there is nothing said about costs, the lessor must pay for the counterpart.

W. R.

LAW LIBRARY.

Precedents of Pleadings in Equity in the County Courts, &c., and an Appendix, &c. By P. M. LEONARD, Barrister-at-Law. London: Amer.

The equity business of the County Courts, though not so great as was expected by those who promoted this extension of their jurisdiction, is of necessity a growing business. Suitors, and solicitors perhaps, require to be educated to the uses of it, and as these are discovered by experience, they will more and more avail themselves of its facilities and comparative cheapness. Mr. Leonard, who has had considerable experience as a deputy-judge of one of the County Courts, and who is himself an equity lawyer, has found in practice the want of forms adapted to the uses of the County Courts, in the conduct of this important branch of their business, and it was to supply the want that he has made the collection of precedents before us, which cannot but be extensively useful to practitioners. Not only are all the forms and pleadings given, but the most minute and careful instructions for the employment of them, and for their adaptation to altered circumstances, are added, and notes refer to the decided cases upon which they are framed. It is a volume indispensable to all whose practice ever carries them into the County Courts.

Commentaries on the History, Constitution, and Chartered Franchises of the City of London. By GEORGE NORTON, formerly one of the Common Pleaders of the city of London. Third Edition, revised. London: Longman & Co.

"THE issue of this third edition," says the author, "is due to the Corporation of London, who have passed a resolution for taking 300 copies for the use of its members and officers." And well does the work deserve such encouragement. It is the history of the first in honour, importance and wealth of the municipalities which are the pride of the United Kingdom, and to which it is doubtless indebted in great part for the liberties which are the boast of our people, and which have maintained themselves against the oppression of monarch and aristocracy, and let us hope that in the coming times they will oppose the same resistance to the opposite danger that threatens from the despotism of democracy. Not merely is this a very useful book for reference upon all matters in which the special laws and customs of the City are concerned, and so a useful addition to the law library, but it is a book full of interest and instruction for the general reader, containing a vast quantity of curious information as to the manners and social lives of our ancestors, gleaned with most patient industry from the civic archives to which access was freely given. It commences with an historical account of the rise and progress of the City of London, to which the first book is devoted, the second containing a full account of all the many charters that have been granted to it by successive monarchs, the first being that of William the Conqueror, and the last that of Edward III.

LEGAL OBITUARY.

THOMAS SMITH, ESQ.

We deeply regret to record the death, in the prime of life, of one of the members of the legal profession in Sheffield, Mr. Thomas Smith, of the firm of Smith and Burdekin. He was only forty-eight years of age, but he had attained to a degree of eminence and success that placed him in the first rank among his local brethren. His father, Mr. Thomas Smith, lately deceased at Beever Hall, near Barnsley, was a Sheffield manufacturer in the early part of his life, but afterwards became a coalowner in partnership with Mr. Alderman Carr, opening first the Stanhope Silkstone Colliery, and afterwards the Stafford Main Colliery, the latter on the Wentworth Castle estate. He was identified with the early efforts to promote the Sheffield and Manchester Railway. When the Bill for that line was before Parliament in 1837, Mr. Smith articulated his son, now deceased, to Mr. George Wells, one of the solicitors for the Bill. He dying in the midst of the contest, Mr. T. Smith, jun., was transferred to the office of Mr. T. J. Parker, another of the solicitors for the Bill, with whom he finished his term. He then began practice, but soon entered into partnership with his late master, Mr. T. J. Parker, and took a very active part in the legal business connected with the lines through Nottinghamshire and Lincolnshire, and the subsequent amalgamation of those lines as the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire. He was also the solicitor for the line from Huddersfield to Penistone. At a late period Mr. Smith was connected with the projected line from Sheffield into Staffordshire, in opposition to the Midland scheme for putting Sheffield on the main line. In 1854 Mr. Smith's partnership with Mr. Parker terminated, and in Jan. 1855, he commenced a separate practice, but after two years was joined by Mr. Burdekin, with whom he continued in perfectly harmonious connection until now. Mr. Smith married at an early age one of the daughters of the late William Marsh, Esq., of the firm of Marsh Brothers, who, with seven children, survives him.

THE COURTS & COURT PAPERS.

SITTINGS AND CAUSE LIST IN TRINITY TERM 1869.

Equity Courts.

Court of Appeal in Chancery.
(Before the LORD CHANCELLOR.)

At Lincoln's-inn.

Saturday... May 22	Appeal motions and appeals
Monday	24 Petitions and appeals
Tuesday	25 Appeals
Wednesday	26 Ditto
Thursday	27 Appeal motions and appeals
Friday	28 Appeals
Saturday	29 Ditto
Monday	31 Ditto
Tuesday... June 1	Ditto
Wednesday	2 No sitting (Her Majesty's birthday kept)
Thursday	3 Appeal motions and appeals
Friday	4 Appeals
Saturday	5 Ditto
Monday	7 Ditto
Tuesday	8 Ditto
Wednesday	9 Ditto
Thursday	10 Ditto
Friday	11 Petitions and appeals
Saturday	12 Appeal motions and appeals

(Before the LORDS JUSTICES.)

At Lincoln's-inn.

Saturday... May 22	Appeal motions and appeals
Monday	24 Appeals
Tuesday	25 Ditto
Wednesday	26 Ditto
Thursday	27 Ditto
Friday	28 Petitions in lunacy, appeal petitions, bankrupt appeals, appeal motions and appeals
Saturday	29 Appeals
Monday	31 Ditto
Tuesday... June 1	Appeals from the County Palatine of Lancaster and appeals
Wednesday	2 No sitting (Her Majesty's birthday kept)
Thursday	3 Appeals
Friday	4 Petitions in lunacy, appeal petitions, bankrupt appeals, appeal motions and appeals
Saturday	5 Appeals
Monday	7 Ditto
Tuesday	8 Ditto
Wednesday	9 Ditto
Thursday	10 Ditto
Friday	11 Petitions in lunacy, appeal petitions, bankrupt appeals and appeals

Saturday

Each day as the Lord Chancellor shall be engaged in the House of Lords, and such days (if any) as the Lords Justices shall be engaged in the full court, or at the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, are excepted.

Rolls Court.

At Chancery-lane.

Saturday... May 22	Motions and general paper
Monday	24 General paper
Tuesday	25 Ditto
Wednesday	26 Ditto
Thursday	27 Motions and general paper
Friday	28 General paper
Saturday	29 Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Monday	31 General paper
Tuesday... June 1	Ditto
Wednesday	2 No sitting (Her Majesty's birthday kept)
Thursday	3 Motions and general paper
Friday	4 General paper
Saturday	5 Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses and general paper
Monday	7 General paper
Tuesday	8 Ditto
Wednesday	9 Ditto
Thursday	10 Ditto
Friday	11 Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Saturday	12 Motions and general paper

Unopposed petitions must be presented, and copies left with the secretary on or before the Thursday preceding the Saturday on which it is intended they should be heard, and any causes intended to be heard as short causes must be so marked at least one clear day before the same can be put in the paper to be so heard.

V.C. Stuart's Court.

At Lincoln's-inn.

Saturday... May 22	Motions and causes
Monday	24 Causes
Tuesday	25 Ditto
Wednesday	26 Ditto
Thursday	27 Motions and causes
Friday	28 Petitions and causes
Saturday	29 Short causes and causes
Monday	31 Causes
Tuesday... June 1	Ditto
Wednesday	2 No sitting (Her Majesty's birthday kept)
Thursday	3 Motions and causes
Friday	4 Petitions and causes
Saturday	5 Short causes and causes
Monday	7 Causes
Tuesday	8 Ditto
Wednesday	9 Ditto
Thursday	10 Ditto
Friday	11 Petitions, short causes, and causes
Saturday	12 Motions

No cause, motion for decree or further consideration can, except by order of the court, be marked to stand over, if it be within twelve of the last cause or matter in the printed paper of the day for hearing.

V.C. Mallins' Court.

At Lincoln's-inn.

Saturday... May 22	Motions and general paper
Monday	24 General paper
Tuesday	25 Ditto
Wednesday	26 Ditto
Thursday	27 Motions and general paper
Friday	28 Petitions and general paper
Saturday	29 Short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Monday	31 General paper
Tuesday... June 1	Ditto
Wednesday	2 No sitting (Her Majesty's birthday kept)
Thursday	3 Motions and general paper
Friday	4 Petitions and general paper
Saturday	5 Short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Monday	7 General paper
Tuesday	8 Ditto
Wednesday	9 Ditto
Thursday	10 Ditto
Friday	11 Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Saturday	12 Motions and general paper

V.C. James's Court.

At Lincoln's-inn.

Saturday... May 22	Motions and general paper
Monday	24 General paper
Tuesday	25 Ditto
Wednesday	26 Ditto
Thursday	27 Motions and general paper
Friday	28 General paper
Saturday	29 Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Monday	31 General paper
Tuesday... June 1	Ditto
Wednesday	2 No sitting (Her Majesty's birthday kept)
Thursday	3 Motions and general paper
Friday	4 General paper
Saturday	5 Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Monday	7 General paper
Tuesday	8 Ditto
Wednesday	9 Ditto
Thursday	10 Ditto
Friday	11 Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Saturday	12 Motions and general paper

Any causes intended to be heard as short causes before either of the Vice-Chancellors must be so marked at least one clear day before the same can be put in the paper to be so heard.

Common Law Courts.

Court of Queen's Bench.

SITTINGS AT NISI PRIUS—IN TERM.

Middlesex.

Monday	May 24	Monday	June 7
Monday	May 31

There will be no sittings in London this Term.

AFTER TERM.

Monday	June 14	Monday	June 28
Saturday... May 22	Motions and new trials
Monday	24 Ditto
Tuesday	25 Ditto
Wednesday	26 Ditto
Thursday	27 Enlarged rules, and motions new trials
Friday	28 Special paper
Saturday	29 Crown paper
Monday	31 Motions and new trials
Tuesday... June 1	1 Special paper
Wednesday	2 Crown paper
Thursday	3 Motions and new trials
Friday	4 Special paper
Saturday	5 Crown paper
Monday	7 Motions and new trials
Tuesday	8 Special paper
Wednesday	9 Motions and new trials
Thursday	10 Ditto
Friday	11 Ditto
Saturday	12 Ditto

NEW TRIAL PAPER.

For Judgment.

Poole v. Willats
West v. Dobb
For Argument—Moved Michaelmas Term 1867.
MIDDLESEX—Sharpe v. The London and North-Western Railway Company	[Lush, J.—Scrip. Balkantine]
Moved Hilary Term 1868.
MIDDLESEX—Cary v. Dawson	[Blackburn, J.—Mr. H. James]
Moved Easter Term 1868.
LONDON—Moore v. North London Railway Company	[L. C. J.—Mr. Field]
LONDON—Westwood v. Carter	[L. C. J.—Solicitor-General]
LONDON—Yunz v. The South-Eastern Railway Company	[L. C. J.—Mr. Field]
LONDON—Hartmann v. Osbeck	[L. C. J.—Sir G. Honyman]
LONDON—Richardson v. Dubois	[Hannan, J.—Scrip. O'Brien]
LONDON—Corner v. Kirkaldy	[Hannan, J.—Mr. Herschell]
LANCASTER—Gibson v. Mayor of Preston. (To be argued with demurrer)	[Hannan, J.—Mr. Coleridge]
SUSSEX—Lloyd v. Ingram	[Wilkes, J.—Mr. J. Brown]
SURREY—Tait v. Marshall	[Martin, B.—Mr. Hawkins]
SURREY—Whellock v. Home and C. M. I. Co.	[Martin, B.—Mr. C. Pollock]
SURREY—Medhurst v. Knockner	[Martin, B.—Mr. Prentice]
GLAMORGAN—Erskine v. Great Western Railway Company. (Stands for arrangement)	[Smith, J.—Mr. Michael]

Tried during Term.

MIDDLESEX—Welfare v. The London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway Company	[Blackburn, J.—Scrip. Bidartine]
MIDDLESEX—Harris v. Quine. (To be argued with demurrer)	[Blackburn, J.—Mr. Boyle]
MIDDLESEX—Gover and Wife v. Carr	[Blackburn, J.—Mr. Keane]
Moved Hilary Term 1868.
MIDDLESEX—Berridge v. Fitzgerald	[Blackburn, J.—Mr. Hodgson]
MIDDLESEX—Eddy v. Stevens	[Blackburn, J.—Mr. Kingston]
MIDDLESEX—Same v. Same	[Blackburn, J.—Mr. Torr]
MIDDLESEX—Bew v. London Steamship Company	[Blackburn, J.—Mr. D. Seymour]
LONDON—King v. Kelk	[L. C. J.—Mr. Gibbons]
LONDON—Holloway v. Lumsden	[L. C. J.—Sir G. Honyman]
LONDON—Darbishire v. Lieboet	[Blackburn, J.—Mr. Manisty]
LONDON—Jones v. Davies	[Blackburn, J.—Mr. Brown]
LONDON—Brailaugh v. Brooks	[Blackburn, J.—Mr. D. Seymour]
LIVERPOOL—Myers v. Veitch	[Lush, J.—Mr. Manisty]
ATLESDURY—Reg. v. Snowball	[Keating, J.—Mr. H. Mathews]

Tried during Term.

MIDDLESEX—Temple v. Davey	[Lush, J.—Mr. H. Lloyd]
MIDDLESEX—Cramer v. Harrison	[Lush, J.—Mr. Pike]
MIDDLESEX—Dobson v. Comfort and Wife	[Lush, J.—Mr. Lewis]
Moved Easter Term 1869.
MIDDLESEX—Saurin v. Starr	[L. C. J.—Mr. Mallick]
MIDDLESEX—Moriarty v. The London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company	[L. C. J.—Mr. Gifford]
MIDDLESEX—Barber v. Fleming	[L. C. J.—Mr. Milford]
LONDON—Davis v. Walker	[Hayes, J.—Mr. Smith]
SUSSEX—Arnold v. Blaker and another	[Bramwell, B.—Mr. C. Pollock]
SUSSEX—Austin v. Blaker	[Bramwell, B.—Mr. C. Pollock]
SURREY—Rack and Wife v. Wignmore	[J. Brown, Esq.—Mr. M. Chambers]
CARLISLE—Banks v. Goodfellow	[Brett, J.—Mr. Manisty]
NEWCASTLE—Hopper v. The North Eastern Railway Company	[Lush, J.—Mr. Davies]
DURHAM—Wanless v. The North Eastern Railway Company	[Brett, J.—Mr. Manisty]
MANCHESTER—Wren v. Wcale and another	[Lush, J.—Mr. Webster]
LIVERPOOL—Jones v. Hill, P. O. and Co.	[Brett, J.—Mr. Hodgson]
LIVERPOOL—King v. Bury	[Brett, J.—Mr. Holker]
LIVERPOOL—Hollwood v. The Australian Insurance Company	[Brett, J.—Mr. Quinn]
GLoucester—Williams v. Williams and another	[Hannan, J.—Mr. Huddleston]
WARWICK—Swain v. Jones	[Cleasby, B.—Mr. Field]
YORK—Redway v. The Tees Conservancy	[Cleasby, B.—Mr. Prior]
SWANSEA—Thomas v. The Rhymney Railway Company	[L. C. Baron.—Mr. Gifford]
HANTS—Gandy v. The Royal Insurance Company	[Byles, J.—Mr. Kingston]
WILTS—Diamond v. Haines	[Smith, J.—Mr. Kingston]
WILTS—Phelps and others v. The Great Western Railway Company	[Smith, J.—Mr. Kingston]
BRISTOL—Cairncross v. Schorndorf, Seed, & Co.	[Smith, J.—Mr. H. T. Cole]

Tried during Term.

MIDDLESEX—Burke v. East and West Junction Railway Company	[Mallor, J.—Mr. Williams]
MIDDLESEX—Cross v. Warter	[Mallor, J.—Mr. J. Brown]

SPECIAL PAPER.

For Judgment.

Stranger v. English and Scottish Marine Insurance Company. Special case
Smith v. Stocks. Special case
Playford v. The United Kingdom East India Company. Special case
Longbottom v. Berry. Special case
Francis v. Cockrell. Special case
Godard v. Gray. Demurrer

For Argument.

Robinson v. The Mayor, &c. of Cambridge. Demurrer
Hunt v. Ryde Commissioners. Demurrer
In a Petition of Right (Bushe) v. The Queen. Special case
Bradshaw v. James. Special case
Dawkins v. Paulett. Demurrer
Beckett v. Hull Local Board of Health. Special case
Birch v. Vestry of Marylebone. Demurrer.
Portilla v. Carr. Special case
Warner v. The London and North-Western Railway Company. Special case.
Holford v. Gamble. Demurrer
Lund v. Winfield. Special case
Harris v. Quine. Demurrer. (To be argued with new trial)
Bratt v. Molyneux. Demurrer
Simpson v. Yund. Appeal
Evans v. Bignold. Special case
Arthur v. Cole
Musgrave v. Inclosure Commissioners for England and Wales. Special case
Johnson v. Skaife. Appeal.
Comings v. Heard. Demurrer
Turnall v. Norwood. Appeal
Gibson v. Mayor of Preston. Demurrer. (To be argued with new trial)
Great Bridge I. & S. Company v. Berthon. Demurrer
Hattersley v. The Central Wales Railway Company. Special case
Kitchen v. Wheatley. Demurrer
Kilshaw v. Jump. Special case
Turner v. Cameron. Special case
Huntly v. Worms. Demurrer
Wright v. Pearson. Appeal
Allibane v. Bayton. Special case.
Ackland v. Clarke. Demurrer
Coundon v. Thompson. Demurrer
Zimmerman v. Browne. Appeal
Franklin v. Llantrisant and Taff Vale Railway Company. Special case
Allison and wife v. Smith. Demurrer
Blake v. Calder V. S. Company. Demurrer

Groves v. West India, &c., Steamship Company. Special case.
 Ireland v. Livingstone. Special case.
 Nelson v. Richardson. Appeal.
 Motion v. Tuck and others. Demurrer.
 Kynaston v. Hughes. Demurrer.
 Spittle v. Horton and others. Special case.
 Pascoe v. Young and another. Appeal.
 Nicholl v. Trinidad Petroleum Company. Special case.
 Pendergalt v. Watson. Demurrer.
 Mack v. Swann. Special case.
 Hudson v. The Thames Conservators and others. Special case.
 Brook v. Baxter and another. Demurrer.
 White v. The Mayor, Aldermen, and Burgesses of Sheffield. Demurrer.
 Fletcher v. The Mayor, &c., Borough York. Demurrer.
 Wolf and another v. Serjeant. Demurrer.
 Carpenter v. Alexander. Appeal.
 Dunc v. Bridges. Appeal.
 Bowring v. Shepherd. Special case.
 Macgregor v. Isle. Demurrer.
 Smith v. Buckingham. Demurrer.

ENLARGED RULES.

First Day.

Mander v. Crispin.
 Hathway v. Griffiths.
 In the matter of William Smith, Agent, &c.
 In the matter of J. C. E. Weigart.
 Yorkshire-Reg. v. The Skipton and Wharfedale Railway Company.
 [Mr. Philbrick; Mr. Grantham]

CROWN PAPER.

For Judgment.

Farrer v. Close.
 Reg. v. Wood.
 Reg. v. Kennett.

For Argument.

Margate—Margate Pier and Harbour v. Town Council of Margate.
 Yorkshire—Brook v. Dawson.
 Yorkshire—Reg. v. Burrow.
 Yorkshire—Reg. v. Bridgehouse.
 Yorkshire—Radcliffe v. Pattinson.
 Brighton—Black v. Sackett.
 Yorkshire—Hinchcliffe v. The Queen.
 London—Reg. v. Scott (Chamberlain of London).
 Essex—Field v. Thorne.
 Southampton—Milton v. Troke.
 Yorkshire—Wakefield Local Board of Health v. Perkins.
 Liverpool—Poor Law Commissioners for Ireland v. The Vestry of Liverpool.
 Middlesex—Guardians of Hendon Union v. Bowles.
 Middlesex—Reg. v. Diplock.
 METROPOLITAN POLICE DISTRICT—Circular Delivery Company v. Clark.
 METROPOLITAN POLICE DISTRICT—Clark v. The Vestry of St. Pancras.
 Cheshire—Reg. v. Inhabitants of Isle of Ely.
 Lancashire—Edwards v. Overseers of Rusholme.
 Yorkshire—Reg. v. Skelton.
 Lancashire—Freestone v. Casswell.
 Liverpool—Thompson v. Greig.
 Halifax—Bulmer v. Magson.
 Scarborough—Cooke v. Smales.
 Lancashire—Harrison v. Adams.
 Montgomeryshire—Guardians of Machynlleth Union v. Churchwardens of Lower Parish of Pool.
 Lancashire—Hall v. Potter.
 Surrey—London and Suburban Land and Building Company v. Guardians of Kingston Union.
 Bedfordshire—The Churchwardens of Luton v. Brickwood.
 Worcestershire—Mercer v. Woodgate.
 Surrey—Smith v. Mackie.
 Essex—Colls v. The Churchwardens of Lansdon.
 Middlesex—Reg. v. The Vestry of St. Luke's, Chelsea.
 Middlesex—Steele v. The Midland Railway Company.
 Bedfordshire—Reg. v. The Inhabitants of the Parish of Odell.
 Yorkshire—Cocker v. Cardwell and others.
 Camberton—Kent v. Astley.
 London—Daw v. Carter.
 Staffordshire—Deakin v. Deakin.

Court of Common Pleas.

Sittings at Nisi Prius—In Term.

Middlesex.
 Monday May 24 | Friday June 4
 Monday May 31

No London Sittings this Term.

AFTER TERM.

Middlesex. London.
 Monday June 14 | Friday June 25
 Sittings in Banco.
 Saturday .. May 22 Motions and new trials
 Monday 24 Ditto
 Tuesday 25 Ditto
 Wednesday 26 Ditto
 Thursday 27 Special paper
 Friday 28 Motions and new trials
 Saturday 29 Ditto
 Monday 30 Ditto
 Tuesday 31 Ditto
 Wednesday .. June 1 Special paper
 Thursday 2 Motions and new trials
 Friday 3 Special paper
 Saturday 4 Motions and new trials
 Monday 5 Ditto
 Tuesday 6 Special paper
 Wednesday 7 Motions and new trials
 Thursday 8 Ditto
 Friday 9 Ditto
 Saturday 10 Ditto
 Monday 11 Ditto
 Tuesday 12 Ditto

NEW TRIAL PAPER.—ENLARGED RULES.

Woolley v. The North London Railway Company.
 Same v. Same.
 Moved Michaelmas Term 1866.
 Surrey—Merchant Company v. Benthall.
 [Willes, J.—Mr. J. Brown]
 Moved Hilary Term 1869.
 Middlesex—Banghan v. Physick. (Part heard).
 [L. C. J.—Mr. Huddleston]
 London—Foster v. Mackinnon, Bart.
 [L. C. J.—Solicitor General]

LONDON—Buchholt v. Reif.
 LONDON—Llanfair Green and Blue Slate Company v. Man.
 [Smith, J.—Mr. Kelly]
 [Smith, J.—Mr. Joyce]

Moved Easter Term 1869.

MIDDLESEX—Jones v. Llewellyn [Byles, J.—Mr. H. James]
 MIDDLESEX—Hodges Distillery Company v. Smith. (On affidavits). [Byles, J.—Hon. A. Thesiger]
 MIDDLESEX—Bonwell v. Savin.
 [Byles, J.—Mr. Bosanquet]

MIDDLESEX—Corbyn v. Bandman.
 [Byles, J.—Mr. Pearce]

MIDDLESEX—Blackman v. The London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway Company.
 [Byles, J.—Mr. Laing]

MIDDLESEX—Wood v. Wood.
 [Byles, J.—Mr. Seymour]

MIDDLESEX—Willis v. Leslie.
 [Brett, J.—Mr. Joyce]

LONDON—Bencroft v. Pickering.
 [L. C. J.—Sir G. Honyman]

LONDON—Johnson v. Carvill and another.
 [L. C. J.—Sir G. Honyman]

LONDON—Field v. Megaro.
 [L. C. J.—Sir G. Honyman]

LONDON—Pearson v. Plucknett.
 [Byles, J.—Sir J. P. Perry]

LONDON—Younger v. Nettleton.
 [Keating, J.—Mr. Lopes]

BRISTOL—Pillar v. The Lynton Coal and Iron Company.
 [Smith, J.—Mr. Pridmore]

LIVERPOOL—Adams v. The Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company.
 [Brett, J.—Mr. Holker]

SURREY—Lavoice v. Scholefield, P. O., &c.
 [Mellor, J.—Sir G. Honyman]

MANCHESTER—Tatham v. Dania.
 [Lush, J.—Mr. Manisty]

MANCHESTER—Sagar v. The Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company.
 [Lush, J.—Mr. Pope]

LINCOLN—Musgrave v. The Manchester, &c., Railway Company.
 [Hayes, J.—Mr. Overend]

LINCOLN—Heffield v. Meadows.
 [Hayes, J.—Mr. Boden]

LEEDS—Trumble v. The Midland Railway Company. (On affidavits).
 [Hayes, J.—Mr. Stephens]

For Judgment.

Loder v. Gladstone.
 Same v. Same.
 Dungey v. The Mayor of London.
 Morris v. Ogden.

SPECIAL PAPER.

For Argument.

Thursday, May 27.

London Finance Association v. Waring. Special case.
 Mortimer v. Broadwood. (Part heard.) Special case.
 Btish v. Leese. Special case. (To stand over till issue in fact tried.)

Btish v. Bradford. Demurrer.
 Shrimpton v. Searle. Demurrer.
 Cracknell v. Mayor of Theford. Demurrer.

Smith v. Earl Dudley. Demurrer.
 The International Financial Company v. Burke. Special case.

Metropolitan Board of Works v. The Parish of St. Ann. Special case.

Financial Corporation v. Lawrence. Demurrer.
 Williams v. Greenough. Special case.

Clarke v. Crowder. Appeal.
 Vivian v. Mersey Dock and Harbour Board. Special case.

Neame v. Wilson. Special case.
 Sansom v. Vestry of St. Leonard's, Shoreditch. Special case.

Marshall v. Stanley. Special case.
 English Joint Stock Bank v. Beecham. Demurrer.

Yett v. London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway Company. Demurrer.

New Quebrada Company v. Carr. Demurrer.
 Homes v. Love. Demurrer.

Ames v. Waterlow. Demurrer.
 Roberts v. Bury Improvement Commissioners. Demurrer.

Zammet v. Gabrielli. Demurrer.
 Farrow v. Wilson and Wife. Demurrer.

Eastwood v. Green and others. Demurrer.
 Grant v. Grant. Special case.

The Great Eastern Railway Company v. Jacob. Special case.

Bristowe and another v. Booth. Special case.
 Barnes v. Johnson. Special case.

Eyton (clerk) v. Jones and others. Special case.
 Hooper v. Marshall. Demurrer.

London and South Western Railway Company v. Myers. Appeal.

Bovill v. Steel. Demurrer.
 Raben and another v. Ludgate. Demurrer.

Guardians of the Poor of Melling Union v. Graham. Special case.

The Southampton Imperial Hotel Company v. The London and South Western Railway Company. Demurrer.

Adams v. The Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company. Demurrer.

To be argued with New Trial.

Lodgill v. Secretan. Special case.

Tuesday June 1.

The Ilfracombe Railway Company v. Nash. Special case.
 Gregory and others v. The Metropolitan Railway Company. Demurrer.

Thursday June 3.

Tuesday June 5.

REGISTRATION APPEALS.

Barnes (app.); Peters (resp.).
 Perowne (app.); Same (resp.).
 Bakewell (app.); Same (resp.).
 Swarbrick (app.); Beswick (resp.).

Court of Exchequer.

Sittings at Nisi Prius—In Term.

Middlesex.
 Monday May 24 | Monday June 7
 Monday May 31

There will be no sittings in London this Term.

AFTER TERM.

Middlesex. London.
 Monday June 14 | Monday June 28
 Sittings in Banco.
 Saturday .. May 22 Motions per new trials
 Monday 24 Per motions and new trials
 Tuesday 25 Motions and new trials
 Wednesday 26 Ditto
 Thursday 27 Ditto
 Friday 28 Ditto
 Saturday 29 Ditto
 Monday 30 Special paper
 Tuesday .. June 1 Motions and new trials

Wednesday June 2 Special paper
 Thursday 3 Motions and new trials
 Friday 4 Ditto
 Saturday 5 Ditto
 Monday 7 Special paper
 Tuesday 8 Motions and new trials
 Wednesday 9 Ditto
 Thursday 10 Ditto
 Friday 11 Ditto
 Saturday 12 Ditto

NEW TRIAL PAPER.

For Judgment.

Prince v. Knowles.
 Nunns v. Wilkinson.

Mayor of Dorchester v. Ensor.

For Argument—Moved Hilary Term 1864.

LIVERPOOL—Brabner v. McCann. (To stand over).
 [Williams, J.—Mr. Temple]

Moved Easter Term 1866.

LONDON—General Steam Navigation Company v. British Colonial Steamship Company. (Stand over).
 [L. C. B.—Sir J. Karlake]

Moved Michaelmas Term 1866.

NOTTINGHAM—Sanderson v. Midland Railway Company. (To stand over).
 [Smith, J.—Mr. Field]

Moved Michaelmas Term 1867.

LINCOLN—Earl Beauchamp v. Inclosure Commissioners for England and Wales. (To stand over).
 [Pigott, B.—Mr. Field]

Moved Easter Term 1868.

CARLISLE—Mayor of Carlisle v. Graham.
 [Lush, J.—Mr. Mellish]

Moved Hilary Term 1869.

MIDDLESEX—Clarke v. Walker. (To stand over).
 [Martin, B.—Mr. Baylis]

Moved Easter Term 1869.

MIDDLESEX—Drew v. Myer. (Not to be argued till Hopkins v. Myer has been decided).
 [Bramwell, B.—Mr. Cohen]

LONDON—Walker v. Cory. (To stand over).
 [L. C. B.—Mr. Prentice]

CHESTER—Chapman v. Jones (Clerk).
 [L. C. B.—Mr. Giffard]

CHESTER—Walker v. Bradshaw.
 [L. C. B.—Mr. Giffard]

MAIDSTONE—Baker v. Taylor. (To stand over for parties to agree to set process).
 [Cockburn, L. C. J.—Mr. Denman]

KINGSTON—Darling v. Cooper. (To stand over till after trial of Beecham v. Cooper).
 [Bramwell, B.—Mr. Thesiger]

CLEASTER—Lewis v. Benton.
 [Channell, B.—Mr. H. Lloyd]

LEICESTER—Cox v. Lee.
 [Pigott, B.—Mr. Bulmer]

LINCOLN—Stainton v. The Gainsborough Local Board of Health.
 [Hayes, J.—Mr. Field]

YORK—Holmes v. The North-Eastern Railway Company.
 [Cleasby, B.—Mr. Overend]

YORK—Freeman v. The North-Eastern Railway Company.
 [Cleasby, B.—Mr. Overend]

LEEDS—Spendlove v. The Midland Railway Company.
 [Hayes, J.—Mr. Waddy]

DORCHESTER—Harvey v. The Mayor, &c., of the Borough of Lyme Regis.
 [Byles, J.—Mr. Kingdon]

BRISTOL—Bolkow, Vaughan, &c., Company v. The Chiltern Hills Spring Water Company.
 [Smith, J.—Mr. Cole]

BRISTOL—Hopkins v. Ware (Executors).
 [Smith, J.—Mr. Kingdon]

GLOUCESTER—The London and North-Western Railway Company v. Giles and others.
 [Keating, J.—Mr. Gray]

GLOUCESTER—The Kingswood C. and I. Company v. Monks.
 [Keating, J.—Mr. Powell]

NEWCASTLE—Hodgkin v. Brown and others.
 [Lush, J.—Mr. Davison]

LIVERPOOL—Hart v. The Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company.
 [Brett, J.—Mr. Manisty]

LIVERPOOL—Bennet v. Humphreys.
 [Brett, J.—Mr. Holker]

Moved after the Fourth Day of Easter Term 1869.

MIDDLESEX—Hodge v. O'Sullivan.
 [Channell, B.—Mr. Joyce]

MIDDLESEX—Lascelles v. Stopker.
 [Channell, B.—Mr. H. James]

MIDDLESEX—Johns v. The London and South Western Railway Company.
 [Channell, B.—Mr. H. James]

MIDDLESEX—Langstaff v. Baker.
 [Channell, B.—Mr. H. James]

EXCHEQUER SPECIAL PAPER.

For Judgment.

Davis v. Haycock.
 Kendal v. Wood.

For Argument.

Campbell v. Dufaur. Demurrer. (Part heard. To stand over).
 Vestry Mile End Old Town v. Humber. Demurrer. (Part heard. To stand over).

Downing v. Mowlem. Demurrer. (Part heard. To stand over).
 Riche v. The Ashbury Railway Company. Demurrer. (Stand over).

Smith v. Birkbeck. Demurrer. (To be argued with new trial).
 Secker v. The Credit Foncier and Mobilier of England. Demurrer.

Waugh v. The North British Company. Demurrer. (Part heard. To stand over).
 Case v. Storey. Appeal.

Mackay v. Arrowsmith. Demurrer.
 Larcombe v. March. Appeal.

Godwin v. Stone. Demurrer.
 The Financial Corporation v. Jervis. Special case.

Winn v. Mossman. Special case.
 Davies v. Taylor. Demurrer.

Dewhurst v. Midgley and others. Demurrer.
 Same v. Same. Demurrer.

Barrows v. Green. Demurrer.
 In the Matter of an Arbitration between Whitehouse and another v. The Wolverhampton and Walsall Railway Company. Special case.

Brereton v. De Simencourt. Appeal.
 Ferguson v. Vanden Brock. Demurrer.

Baines v. Swan. Special case.
 Wheeler and another v. the Metropolitan Board of Works. Special case.

Maxsted v. Morris. Special case
The Guardians of the Poor of East London Union v.
The Metropolitan Railway Company. Demurrer
Granville v. Finch. Special case
Wilson v. The Agricultural Hall Company. Demurrer
Norton v. Dixon. Demurrer
Dickinson v. The Metropolitan Board of Works. Demurrer

Exchequer Chamber.

This Court will sit on Monday, May 24, at 10 o'clock.
QUEEN'S BENCH ERRORS.

For Argument.

Engell v. Fitch and others
Smith v. Platt
Osgood v. Nelson
The Taff Vale Railway Company v. Boyle
Sadler v. Smith
Crawshaw v. Morgan
Reid v. Stokes
Frind v. Buckley
Huddart v. Rigby

COMMON PLEAS ERRORS.

For Judgment.

Astley v. Gurney
Potter v. Rankin. (Part heard)
Bradlaugh v. De Rin
South of Ireland Colliery Company (Limited) v. Waddell
Xenos v. Fox

EXCHEQUER ERRORS.

For Argument.

Niebuhr v. Pritchard
Barkham v. Du Thon and others
Climie v. Wood

Court of Criminal Appeal.

This Court will sit on Saturday, May 29, at 10 o'clock.

THE GAZETTES.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, May 14.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

ASHFOLD, AUGUSTUS, greengrocer, King's-pl. and Church-st., King's-rd, Chelsea. Pet. May 8. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham.
BARKHAM, EDWARD, bank manager, Ramsay. Pet. May 1. O. A. Stansfeld.
BENTON, CHARLES, journeyman carpenter, Smith-st., Clerkenwell. Pet. May 10. Reg. Brougham. O. A. Stansfeld. Spl. Craven, Dean's-ct, Doctors'-commons. Sur. June 2
BEST, JOSEPH, attorney-at-law, Burton-crescent. Pet. May 7. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Peckham, Doctors'-commons. Sur. June 3
BOWLES, GEORGE, timber merchant, Deptford. Pet. May 8. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sols. Sandon and Co., Adelaide-chambers, Gracechurch-st. Sur. June 3
BURTON, JOSEPH, grocer, Bourne-mouth. Pet. May 11. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Barrett, Bell-yd, Doctors'-commons. Sur. June 3
BUSSELL, JOHN, formerly cowkeeper, Flemming-st., Kingsland. Pet. May 1. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Harrison, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 2
CARVER, HENRY, accountant, Deptford-green, Deptford. Pet. May 11. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Robertson, Martin's-la, Cannon-st. Sur. June 2
CASTLE, HENRY, late cab proprietor, Edwards-sq, Kensington. Pet. May 11. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Pullen, Cloisters, Temple. Sur. June 3
CROFT, JAMES, formerly beer retailer, Jackson's-pl, Walham-green. Pet. May 12. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Drake, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 2
FREEMAN, WILLIAM JAMES, lithographic printer, Little Trinity-la. Pet. May 10. Reg. Brougham. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Kimberley, Scott's-yd, Bush-la. Sur. June 2
FULLER, CORNELIUS WETHERELL, currier, Northampton, and Bury-st, Mary-st, Grove-st, Commercial-rd, Peckham. Pet. May 10. O. A. Stansfeld. Sols. Miller and Stubbs, Eastcheap. Sur. May 26
GOODGE, JOSEPH, licensed victualler, Acton-green, Turnham-green. Pet. May 12. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Godfrey, Station-gate. Sur. May 26
GRIFFIN, WILLIAM, grocer, Gill-st, Fulham-fds. Pet. May 11. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Gostley, Bow-st, Covent-gdn. Sur. June 3
HILL, JOSEPH, formerly auctioneer, Brighton. Pet. May 12. O. A. Stansfeld. Sols. Bunklers and Co., Walbrook. Sur. May 26
HALLION, CHARLES THOMAS, of no business, Werrington-st, Oakley-sq, Camden-town. Pet. May 10. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Godfrey, South-sq, Gray's inn. Sur. June 3
HAYS, WILLIAM IVORY, commission agent, Riches-ct, Lime-st, and Ivy-bank, Fulham. Pet. May 8. O. A. Stansfeld. Sols. Blackford and Ruhes, Great Swan-alley, Moorgate-st. Sur. May 26
HODGSON, JOSEPH, trimming manufacturer, Noble-st. Pet. May 10. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sols. Blackford and Ruhes, Great Swan-alley, Moorgate-st. Sur. May 31
JONES, JAMES STRANGE, commission agent, Fen-ct, Fenchurch-st, and Leytonstone. Pet. May 11. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Lindus, Chesham-st. Sur. June 2
KNIGHT, WILLIAM LAKE, farmer, Telford Evis. Pet. May 10. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sols. Nickinson and Co., Chancery-la. Sur. June 3
REWMAN, OSCAR, commission merchant, Brixton, and Mason's-avenue, Coleman-st. Pet. May 5. O. A. Stansfeld. Sols. Messrs. Lewis, Ely-pl. Sur. May 26
RICHARDSON, ROBERT, grocer, Langley-pl, Commercial-rd east. Pet. May 12. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Gausseus, New Broad-st. Sur. June 2
RIGBY, FRANK DIXON, solicitor, Basinghall-st, and Mansion-st, Clerkenwell. Pet. May 4. Reg. Brougham. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Brown, Basinghall-st. Sur. May 26
RUSSELL, JOHN, journeyman pork butcher, Berwick-st, Soho. Pet. May 10. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Clarke, St. Mary's-sq, Paddington. Sur. June 2
SMITH, GEORGE HENRY, formerly gardener, Broad-green, Croydon. Pet. May 12. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Nind, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 4
TAYLOR, ROBERT, contractor, Graham-rd, Dalston, and Grosvenor-pl, Camberwell. Pet. May 6. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Blackpool, Pinner-lake, Old Broad-st. Sur. May 26
THOMPSON, WILLIAM, baker, Tottenham. Pet. May 12. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sols. Messrs. Lewis, Wilmington-sq, Clerkenwell. Sur. June 2

TURNER, JOHN, smith, Langford, near Biggleswade. Pet. May 12. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Godfrey, Hatton-gdn. Sur. June 2
TYARS, JAMES, omnibus proprietor, Devonshire-pl, Green-lanes, Stoke Newington, and Baiter-arch, Aubin-st, Waterloo-rd. Pet. May 10. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Earle, Bedford-row, Holborn. Sur. June 3
VANDENBERGH, JULIUS ARNOLDUS RYKE, shipowner, Ports-mouth. Pet. May 10. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sols. Link-lakers and Col. Walker. Sur. June 3
WHITE, FREDERICK, draper, Harwich. Pet. April 15. O. A. Stansfeld. Sur. June 2
WHYMPER, HENRY WILLIAM, music dealer, Tottenham. Pet. May 10. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Abbott, Worship-st, Finsbury. Sur. June 2
WILCOX, HENRY, plumber, South Norwood. Pet. May 10. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Crook, Moorgate-st. Sur. May 26
WILSON, STANLEY WYNHAM, retired officer of Indian army, Putborough. Pet. May 12. O. A. Carrick. Sols. Benoraft, Barstap, and Messrs. Rodgers, Exeter. Sur. May 26
ANTHONY, GEORGE, Godwin-park. Pet. May 8. Reg. O. A. Hubbersty. Sol. Smith, Derby. Sur. May 25
ARNOLD, ISAAC, innkeeper, Porchfield, Isle of Wight. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Blake. Sol. Beckingsale, Newport. Sur. May 26
BARR, WILLIAM, tailor, Devonport. Pet. April 13. Reg. O. A. Pearce. Sols. Beer and Rundle, Devonport. Sur. May 26
BALL, WILLIAM THOMAS BROWN, grocer, Dudley. Pet. May 10. Reg. O. A. Walker. Sol. Stokes, Dudley. Sur. May 27
BARTHAM, HENRY, painter, Leeds. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Marshall. Sol. Pickering, Leeds. Sur. May 21
BEWLEY, WILLIAM THOMAS FOX, Whitstable. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Callaway. Sols. Sankey, Son, and Flint, Canterbury. Sur. May 18
BLACKMAN, HENRY, victualler, formerly, Walsall. Pet. May 12. Reg. Tudor. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. Brevitt, Darlington. Sur. May 28
BLACKBURN, JOHN, labourer, Heckington. Pet. May 10. Reg. O. A. Peake. Sol. Harrison, Lincoln. Sur. May 24
BRIDGES, FREDERICK, fly stable keeper, Liverpool. Pet. May 6. Reg. O. A. Hime. Sol. Wood, Liverpool. Sur. May 24
BROADFIELD, ARNOLD, tea dealer, Highgate, near Birmingham. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Guest. Sol. Free, Birmingham. Sur. May 24
BUMPS, THOMAS, jun., tailor, Birmingham. Pet. May 12. Reg. O. A. Guest. Sol. Duke, Birmingham. Sur. June 4
BURGOYNE, THOMAS, lace makers, Nottingham. Pet. May 13. Reg. Tudor. O. A. Harris. Sol. Bell, Nottingham. Sur. May 25
CASD, JOHN, journeyman printer, Hull. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Phillips. Sol. Summers, Hull. Sur. May 31
CAIRNS, THOMAS, publican, Sunderland. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Ellis. Sol. Brown, Sunderland. Sur. May 27
CLAYTON, JOHN, jun., farm labourer, Hale, near Altrincham. Pet. May 12. Reg. O. A. Southern. Sol. Roberts, Manchester. Sur. May 25
CLEMONS, MARGARET, grocer, Manchester. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Hulton. Sol. Sutton, Manchester. Sur. May 29
COLL, MARK LANCEY, tailor, West Cowes, Isle of Wight. Pet. May 8. Reg. O. A. Blake. Sol. Joyce, Newport. Sur. May 26
COOMER, WILLIAM, shoemaker, Christchurch. Pet. May 8. Reg. O. A. Roberts. Sols. Tan and Wade, Newport. Sur. May 25
CORLEY, JOHN, farmer, Thebridge. Pet. May 8. Reg. O. A. Sparkes. Sol. Burrow, Cullumpton. Sur. May 26
DAY, WILLIAM, farm bailiff, Lincoln. Pet. May 30. Reg. O. A. Peels. Sol. Morris, Shrewsbury. Sur. May 31
DUMELLO, WILLIAM, commission agent. Pet. May 25. Reg. Tudor. O. A. Harris. Sol. Maples, Nottingham. Sur. May 25
DUNS, JOHN, grocer, Hull. Pet. May 12. O. A. Young. Sol. Jacobs, Hull. Sur. May 26
DURY, ANTOINE, decorative painter, Warwick. Pet. May 11. Reg. Hill. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. Passman, Warwick, and Messrs. Hodgson, Birmingham. Sur. May 26
ELLIS, JAMES, china dealer, Norwich. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Broughton. Sol. John, Apleton. Sur. May 27
FAIRLEY, ROBERT, rope manufacturer, Sunderland. Pet. May 10. Reg. Gibson. O. A. Laidman. Sol. Eglinton, Sunderland. Sur. May 25
FARKER, ROBERT, journeyman painter, Birchington. Pet. May 10. Reg. O. A. Isaacson. Sol. Dorman, Margate. Sur. May 25
FIELD, JOHN, banker's clerk, Norwich. Pet. May 12. Reg. O. A. Palmer. Sol. Pilgrim, Norwich. Sur. May 25
FOOT, EDWARD, widow, Lodge-chapel, Middlesex. Pet. May 10. O. A. Turner. Sols. Forshaw, Goodman, and Hawkins, Liverpool. Sur. May 27
FOULDS, JOSEPH, joiner, Halifax. Pet. May 12. Reg. O. A. Rankin. Sol. Storey, Halifax. Sur. May 25
FOX, WILLIAM, victualler, Baiter-arch, Middlesex. Sur. May 12. Reg. O. A. Challinor. Sol. Salt, Tunstall. Sur. June 5
FUTERS, THOMAS, draper, Crook. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Trotter. Sol. Brignall, jun., Durham. Sur. May 31
GAGE, WILLIAM, beerhouse keeper, York. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Cusley. Sol. Balmridge, Baiter-arch, Middlesex. Sur. May 31
GRAHAM, GEORGE, commission agent, Leeds. Pet. May 7. Reg. O. A. Marshall. Sol. Whitley, Leeds. Sur. May 24
GREENOUGH, REUBEN, collier, Wigan. Pet. May 12. Reg. O. A. Part. Sol. Leader, Wigan. Sur. June 24
GUTH, JOHN, grocer, Peterborough. Pet. May 12. Reg. O. A. Lanning. Sol. Adams, Pembroke. Sur. May 31
HALL, STEPHEN, broker, Hanley. Pet. May 12. Reg. O. A. Challinor. Sol. Welch, Hanley. Sur. June 5
HAWKES, JAMES, out of business, Great Harborne. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Watson. Sol. Parry, Birmingham. Sur. May 31
HEATLEY, JAMES, plumber, Whitehaven. Pet. May 10. Reg. O. A. Vere. Sol. Mason, Whitehaven. Sur. May 25
HERKETH, JAMES, farm labourer, Brightmet, near Bolton. Pet. May 10. Reg. O. A. Holden. Sols. Hall and Rutter, Bolton. Sur. May 26
HULSTON, WILLIAM, bootmaker, Birmingham. Pet. May 12. Reg. O. A. Guest. Sol. Walford, Birmingham. Sur. June 4
JOHNSON, WILLIAM, farmer, Sheerness. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Water. Sol. Willis, Solihull. Sur. May 31
JOLLY, HENRY, jeweller, Castle Donington. Pet. May 11. Reg. Tudor. O. A. Harris. Sol. Deane, Loughborough. Sur. May 12
KAY, ABRAHAM, woolstapler, Halifax. Pet. April 17. O. A. Young. Sur. May 31
KENNY, ELIZABETH, and KENNY, ROBERT WILLIAM, flour dealers, Great Nelson. Pet. May 11. O. A. Turner. Sol. Pemberton, Liverpool. Sur. May 31
KING, WALTON, out of business, Bath. Pet. May 10. Reg. Wilde. O. A. Acraman. Sol. Taddy, Bristol. Sur. May 24
LACE, CHARLES, KIPING, general merchant, Liverpool. Pet. May 10. O. A. Turner. Sols. Lacey, Banner, Gill, Newton, and Bushby, Liverpool. Sur. May 25
LATHAM, GEORGE, colour maker, Caverswall. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Daniel. Sol. Leech, Newcastle-under-Lyme. Sur. May 19
LEY, EDWARD, bill poster, Exeter. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Daw. Sol. Fryer, Exeter. Sur. May 24
LIDGE, BENJAMIN, commercial traveller, Birmingham. Pet. May 6. Reg. O. A. Guest. Sol. Parry, Birmingham. Sur. June 4
MANN, FREDERICK, music seller, Colchester. Pet. May 7. Reg. O. A. Barnes. Sol. White, Colchester. Sur. May 29
MARINER, GEORGE, operative cotton spinner, Bolton. Pet. May 10. Reg. O. A. Holden. Sols. Edge and Dawson, Bolton. Sur. May 26
MELHUISE, WILLIAM, carpenter, Shillingstone. Pet. May 10. Reg. O. A. Johns. Sol. Atkinson, Blandford. Sur. June 5
MEREDITH, ROBERT FITZGERALD, clerk, Halstock. Pet. May 8. O. A. Carrick. Sol. Campion, Exeter. Sur. May 25
MURPHY, GEORGE SPEDER, victualler, West Derby. Pet. May 10. O. A. Turner. Sol. Price, Liverpool. Sur. May 27
MITCHELL, JOSEPH, farmer, Whitehaven. Pet. May 11. Reg. Gibson. O. A. Laidman. Sol. Bousfield, Newcastle. Sur. May 25
MONROD, JOHN WILLIAM, commission agent, Roath. Pet. May 10. Reg. O. A. Langley. Sol. Ensor, Cardiff. Sur. May 29
NORVILL, WILLIAM, tailor, late Weston-super-Mare. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Davies. Sol. Smith, Weston-super-Mare. Sur. May 26
PARKER, WILLIAM, beer retailer, Bristol. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Harley and Gibbs. Sur. May 25
POWELL, JOHN, pitch heater, Pembroke-dock. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Lanning. Sol. Parry, Pembroke-dock. Sur. May 31
PRESCOTT, WILLIAM CHARLES, merchant, Hull. Pet. May 10. O. A. Young. Sols. Holden and Sons, Hull. Sur. May 26
REDMAN, WILLIAM, shipbroker, Newcastle. Pet. May 8. Reg. Gibson. O. A. Laidman. Sol. Joel, Newcastle. Sur. May 25
RICHARDSON, THOMAS, general merchant, Liverpool. Pet. May 11. O. A. Turner. Sols. Richardson, Oliver, Jones, and Billson, Liverpool. Sur. May 11

ROGERS, JAMES, labourer, Newport. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Roberts. Sol. Cathcart, Newport. Sur. May 25
SANDERSON, THORNTON WILLIAM, victualler, Grays Thurrock. Pet. May 3. Reg. O. A. Southgate. Sol. Brown, Baiter-arch, Middlesex. Sur. May 27
SHELLEY, CHARLES THOMAS, blacksmith, Sudbury. Pet. April 6. Reg. O. A. Andrews. Sol. Mumford, Sudbury. Sur. May 24
SHEPHERD, JOHN SNARY, journeyman scale fitter, Birmingham. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Guest. Sol. East, Birmingham. Sur. June 4
SIDAWAY, JOEL, spade manufacturer, Halesowen. Pet. May 12. Reg. Hill. O. A. Kinnear. Sol. Allen, Birmingham. Sur. May 29
SMITH, ROBERT (and not William as previously advertised), Devonport. Pet. April 15. Reg. O. A. Pearce. Sols. Sole and Gill, Devonport. Sur. May 26
SMITH, SIMON, jun., and SMITH, JOHN THOMAS, cotton spinners, Oldham. Pet. May 12. Reg. Fardell. O. A. M'Neill. Sols. Cobbett, Wheeler, and Cobbett, Manchester. Sur. May 31
TOWNSEND, RICHARD, Greenlocks, near Ripley. Pet. May 8. Reg. O. A. Hubbersty. Sol. Smith, Derby. Sur. May 25
WARNER, WALTER, out of business, Littlehampton. Pet. May 10. Reg. O. A. Holmes. Sol. Lamb, Brighton. Sur. June 5
WHEATLY, WILLIAM, innkeeper, Birmingham. Pet. May 6. Reg. Tudor. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. Barlow and Smith, Birmingham. Sur. May 28
WILKINSON, EDWIN ADOLPHUS JAMES, surgeon, Kingsnorton. Pet. May 12. Reg. Hill. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. Stubbs and Focke, Birmingham. Sur. May 26
WOOD, THOMAS, Aldermaston, Liverpool. Pet. May 11. O. A. Turner. Sol. Masters, Liverpool. Sur. May 31
WRIGHT, WILLIAM, Joiner, Oldham. Pet. May 10. Reg. Fardell. O. A. M'Neill. Sol. Storer, Manchester. Sur. June 2

Gazette, May 18.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

BROWN, GOODMAN, zinc worker, Bassett-rd, Notting-hill. Pet. May 14. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Drake, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 2
BUTCHER, FREDERICK ELLIOTT, grocer, Plumstead. Pet. May 6. O. A. Stansfeld. Sols. Howard and Co., Poultry. Sur. June 3
CLARK, CHARLES, commission agent, Western-villas, Paddington. Pet. May 13. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Buchanan, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 2
CHAPMAN, THOMAS, pork butcher Goldsmith's-row, Hackney-rd. Pet. May 12. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Cooke, Gresham-bldgs. Sur. June 4
COOPER, NORMAN, tailor, Oak-hill-pl, Peckham. Pet. May 7. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Durant, Guildhall-chimbs. Sur. June 3
COOPER, ALFRED, out of business, Queen-st, Twickenham. Pet. May 15. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sols. Treherne and Focke, Aldermaston. Sur. May 26
COLBORNE, CHARLES, commercial clerk, Forest Gate. Pet. May 12. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Kimberley, Scott's-yd, Cannon-st. Sur. June 2
DAVIS, ALFRED, glass shade merchant, High-st, Camden-town, and Kentish-town. Pet. May 13. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Godfrey, Hatton-gdn. Sur. May 31
DAY, JOHN, house agent, Bedford-rd, Tottenham-cr-rd. Pet. May 11. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Watson, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 3
EDWARDS, NORMAN FREDERICK FORESTER, out of employment, College-st, West Greenwich. Pet. May 13. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Watson, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 4
EDWARDS, JOHN, outfitter, Reigate. Pet. May 13. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Childley, Lincoln's-inn-fields. Sur. June 2
EYRE, JAMES, wine merchant, Bridport-st, Westminster. Pet. May 14. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Nettleship, Trafalgar-sq. Sur. June 4
EMERY, GEORGE, ham and beef shop keeper, Gray's-inn-rd, Kilburn. Pet. May 14. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Dennis, Southampton-old-rd, Holborn. Sur. June 2
ESCOTT, EDMUND, carpenter, Augustus-st, Regent's-park. Pet. May 15. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Greaves, Essex-st, Strand. Sur. June 7
EVERARD, JOB, builder, Yelvertoft. Pet. May 5. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sols. Reed, Phelps, and Sidgwick, Gresham-st, for Messrs. Jeffery, Northampton. Sur. June 2
GOODWIN, THOMAS, foreman to a meat salesman, Hampton-st, Walworth-rd. Pet. May 12. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Godfrey, Baiter-arch, Middlesex. Sur. June 2
HARDING, JOHN, builder, railway station and Providence-pl, Shepherd's-bush. Pet. May 14. Reg. Brougham. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Kimberley, Scott's-yd, Bush-la. Sur. June 7
HEATHER, THOMAS, clerk in the audit office of the G. W. R. Co., Bedford-st, Paddington. Pet. May 13. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Watson, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 4
HEWETT, EDWARD JAMES, no business, Rutland-ter, St. John's-wood. Pet. May 13. O. A. Stansfeld. Sols. Messrs. Lewis, Ely-pl. Sur. June 5
HOLMES, JOHN HENRY, publican, Waltham-green, Fulham. Pet. May 15. O. A. Stansfeld. Sols. Hancock and Co., Carey-st, Lincoln's-inn. Sur. June 7
HORN, GEORGE THOMAS, bookseller's assistant, Chapel-st, Bedford-row. Pet. May 10. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Lydall, Southampton-bldgs, Chancery-la. Sur. June 3
JOB, WILLIAM, butcher, Church-st, Greenwich. Pet. May 12. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sols. Hughes and Co., Bishopsgate-st-within and Woolwich. Sur. June 4
LAMB, HENRY, builder, Triton-st, Wandsworth. Pet. May 14. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Hicklin, Trinity-sq, Borough. Sur. June 7
LAWS, EDWARD, cab proprietor, Canterbury-pl, Maida vale. Pet. May 13. Reg. Brougham. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Kimberley, Scott's-yd, Bush-la. Sur. June 2
MILLEN, WILLIAM, sen., grocer, Sittingbourne. Pet. May 12. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sols. Gibson and Co., Abchurch-yd. Sur. June 4
MORLEY, HUGH WALTER, general merchant, Water-la. Pet. May 14. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Watson, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 4
MOULLE, LOUIS, commercial clerk, Westmoreland-pl, Camberwell. Pet. May 14. Reg. Brougham. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Watson, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 4
NOLAN, EDWARD, waiter, Thomas-st, Oxford-st. Pet. May 12. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Kimberley, Scott's-yd, Bush-la. Sur. June 4
PERMAIN, GEORGE THOMAS, miller, Sutton Scotney, near Winchester. Pet. May 15. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sols. Walcott, Teyford, and Bedford, Southampton-st, Bloomsbury, for Faithful, Winchester. Sur. June 7
POTGIETER, JEAN FRANCOIS, tailor, Air-st, Regent-st. Pet. May 12. Reg. Murray. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Cooke, Gresham-bldgs. Gresham-bldgs. Basinghall-st. Sur. June 2
PRESTON, JOHN WILLIAM, out of business, Wandsworth-rd. Pet. May 12. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Morris, Leicester-sq. Sur. June 2
RICKABY, ROBERT, no occupation, Beulah-ter, Leytonstone-rd. Pet. May 13. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Kent, Mitre-ct, Temple. Sur. June 2
SPARK, ALFRED, commission agent, Sun-st, Bishopsgate, and St. Marks-ter, Notting-hill. Pet. May 13. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Cooke, Gresham-bldgs, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 2
THOMAS, MORGAN, tea-crocker, High-st, Poplar. Pet. May 13. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Siedman, London-wall. Sur. June 4
THOMPSON, THOMAS, glass painter, Newington-green-rd. Pet. May 11. O. A. Stansfeld. Sols. Dubois and Maynard, Church-passage, Gresham-st. Sur. June 2
TURNER, JAMES WILLIAM, commission agent, Trump-st, and Manchester, and Priory Elm-grove, Peckham. Pet. May 12. Reg. Pepps. O. A. Graham. Sol. Harrison, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 4
WAKLEY, GEORGE, eating-house keeper, Tyers-st, Lambeth. Pet. May 14. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Kent, Cannon-st. Sur. June 2
WEBSTER, JOHN, general dealer, Union-st, Notting-hill. Pet. May 11. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Drake, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 2
YONG, PETER, carpenter, Upper Kennington-la. Pet. May 15. Reg. Roche. O. A. Parkyns. Sols. Heath and Parker, St. Helen's-pl. Sur. June 2

To surrender in the Country.

ASHENDEN, HANNAH, draper, Hanbury. Pet. May 14. Reg. Tudor. O. A. Kinnear. Sols. James and Griffin, Birmingham. Sur. May 28
ASPLEY, THOMAS, fishdealer, Liverpool. Pet. May 13. Reg. O. A. Hime. Sol. Thornley, Liverpool. Sur. May 31
ATTWOOD, JOSEPH, ironfounder, Coalway-la End, near Coleford. Pet. May 14. Reg. Wilde. O. A. Acraman. Sols. Henderson and Salmon, Bristol. Sur. May 28
BARNETT, JAMES, clothier, Brighton. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Blake. Sur. June 3

Assignment, Composition, Inspectorship, and Trust Deeds.

Gazette, May 14.

ALLAN, JOSEPH, saddler, Durham. May 5. 6s. by two equal instalments, on registration, and in 6 mos.

BRYANT, WILLIAM JAMES, tailor, Stratford-upon-Avon. April 18. 10s. by two equal instalments, on registration, and in 6 mos.

BURLEY, EDWARD, plumber, Balsall-leath. April 20. 2s. in 21 days.

CAVE, DOUGLAS GUILLAUME, Jeweller, Mount-pleasant, Grosvenor-st. April 27. Trusts. C. Martin, diamond merchant, Great Winchester-st.; W. H. Peake, goldsmith, Gerrard-st.; and R. Webb, Jeweller, Newman-st.

CHAMPION, JAMES BARLOW, and NIGHTINGALE, EDWARD, bleachers, Hollis-vale Bleach Works, near Bury. May 10. 6s. by three equal instalments, on registration, and in 6 mos.

CHAPPELL, THOMAS DARE, butcher, Bath. April 22. 5s. by two equal instalments, in 1 and 2 mos., secured. Trust. A. Hutchins, Kingston, near Taunton.

CHURCH, JAMES COKE, wine merchant, Liverpool. April 17. 5s. 14. 6d. in 3 mos. 2s. in 6 mos. and 1s. 6d. in 9 mos. Trust. C. Gatehouse, brewer, Birkenhead.

DEARDEN, JOHN, victualler, Manchester. May 4. 5s. by two equal instalments, first immediately, the other on Aug. 7.

DEPHAM, JOHN CHARLES, grocer, Dean-st, Soho. April 30. 2s. 6d. in 1 mo.

DOLEY, EPHRAIM; WHITE, JOSEPH; and DALE, FRANCIS, electro platers, Birmingham. April 14. Trusts. C. Taylor, manager for Evans and Askin, refiners; J. E. Baker, engineer; and E. Carter, accountant, all Birmingham.

EDWARDS, JOHN JONES, broker, Buckley. April 20. 7s. 6d. by two instalments, two-thirds in 21 days, and one-third in 2 mos from first payment.

FRANCIS, DEBIOUS, auctioneer, Old Bailey, and Devonshire-st, Great Portland-st. April 16. 6s. 3d. in 6 and 12 mos.

GIRLING, SAMUEL JAMES, builder, High-st, Bromley-by-Bow. May 10. 5s. in 7 days.

GISHAM, CHARLES, grocer, Exeter. April 14. 7s. 6d. by three instalments, 2s. 6d. in 3, 6, and 9 mos. Trust. O. Harris, accountant, Exeter.

GODWIN, ISAAC, grocer, Rampton. April 17. Trusts. W. Sotham, grocer, and V. Buckingham, auctioneer, both Witney.

HALSALL, PETER, provision dealer, Southport. May 12. 5s. by two equal instalments, in 7 days and 6 mos. Trust. E. Martin, accountant, Southport.

HAMERSLEY, LAMBERT JOHN; SPEAR, LOUIS; and NATHAN, SOLOMON, cigar manufacturers, Union-st, Spitalfields. April 15. Trust. A. Chalmers, tobacco broker, Fenchurch-buildings.

HERRING, THOMAS, out of business, Katharine-cr, Wandsworth. April 2. 1s. in 21 days.

HETHERINGTON, DAVID, farmer, High Consiliffe. April 7. Trusts. J. Greenwell, farmer, Thornton Hall, and J. Archer, mason, Dymchurch.

JACKSON, JOHN, tobacconist, Hull. April 18. 8s. by three instalments, in 3, 6, and 9 mos., secured. Assignee—J. Beaumont, jun., tobacco manufacturer, Huddersfield.

JAMES, ABRAHAM HENRY, sculptor, Newport. April 17. 5s. by two equal instalments, in 1 week, and 2 mos., secured. Trust. J. Davies, accountant, Bristol.

LAST, ROBERT CHARLES, painter, Purlidge. April 19. Trust. F. Ortelwell, ironmonger, Maldon.

LEA, JOHN, and LEA, JOHN, jun., shoe manufacturers, Stafford. April 10. 1s. 6d. 2s. 2d., and 1s. 6d., in 2, 4, 8, and 12 mos from April 10—secured.

LLOYD, WALTER FRANCIS, builder, Coronation-pl, West Hackney. April 14. 7s. 2d., 2s. 2d., and 1s. in 10, 15, Oct. 15, Jan. 15, and April 15.

MARSHALL, JOHN, fish merchant, Scarborough. April 17. Trusts. J. Sellers and H. Wyllie, fish salesmen, both Scarborough.

MAYES, WILLIAM AYRES, tailor, Birmingham. April 17. Trusts. J. Richardson, woollen manufacturer, Leeds, and A. F. Trigg, agent, London.

MENDEL, GEORGE, boot manufacturer, Chalk Farm-rd. April 20. 5s. in 2 mos.

NEWMAN, WILLIAM, fly proprietor, Brighton. April 23. 3s. 6d.

PAGE, JOHN OFFORD, cheesemonger, Old Kent-rd. May 5. 5s. by two instalments of 2s. 6d. in 3 and 6 mos.

PALMER, JOHN WATSON, ironmonger, Red. April 23. Trusts. F. Hill, factor, Birmingham, and J. W. Gidney, ironmonger's valuer, Gresham-st.

POOLE, ANN, widow, lodging-house keeper, New-st, Southwark. April 20. 2s. 6d. by two equal instalments, in 3 and 6 mos.

PULLER, CHARLES ALFRED, solicitor, Queen-sq, Holborn. May 1. 1s. by one instalment, on July 1.

PYEMITH, CHARLES FREDERICK, merchant, Liverpool. April 17. Trusts. G. Dearden; J. G. Wheelwright, bank manager; and R. Oatler, all of Halifax.

RANDALL, GEORGE, grocer, South-st, Walworth. April 20. 2s. 6d. in 14 days.

REY-OLDS, GEORGE, tailor, Bath. April 19. Trust. J. H. Smith, accountant, Bristol.

RUMFOLD, ROBERT, merchant, Hook. April 13. 2s. by two instalments of 2s. 6d. in 9 and 15 mos. Trust. C. Ward, printer, Heckmondwike.

SHAW, JAMES, paper dealer, Leeds. April 17. 2s. 6d. in 6 weeks—secured.

SILVERWOOD, WILLIAM, chemist, Stanley, and Liverpool. April 20. Trusts. T. Dod, wholesale chemist, Liverpool, and J. Shirley, accountant, Longport.

SILVERWOOD, JOHN, commission agent, Wakefield. April 20. 6s. 8d., 2s. 4d., 2s. 4d., and 2s. in 4, 8, and 11 mos.—guaranteed.

SMITH, JOHN, builder, Leicestershire. April 16. 10s. by two equal instalments in 6 and 12 mos.

SMITH, JAMES, carpenter, King-st, Hammersmith. April 13. Trusts. R. H. Davey, grocer, King-st, West Hammersmith, and J. J. Hirst, timber merchant, Brook-green, Hammersmith.

SMITH, SYDNEY, forge contractor, Church-st, Hampton. May 1. 1s. in 6 mos.

SOUTHER, THOMAS EDWIN, author, Ramsgate. May 3. Trusts. J. C. Teyman, and G. Blackburn, upholsterers, both Ramsgate.

STAMP, WILLIAM ROBERT, butcher, Honiton Cyst. April 16. 10s. by four instalments of 2s. 6d. on May 15, June 15, July 15, and Aug. 15.

SUNDERLAND, PICKLES, printer, Nelson. March 31. Trust. J. Heywood, bookseller, Manchester.

TURPIN, GEORGE HARRY, butcher. Brighton. April 22. 6s. 8d. 4s. on June 1, and 2s. 8d. on Nov. 1.

USHER, JOHN, grocer, Newcastle. April 16. Trusts. J. Kinsop, commission agent, and M. Usher, cattle salesman, both Newcastle.

WALKER, JOSEPH, woolstapler, Bradford. April 14. 6s. 8d. 2s. 6d., 1s. 8d., and 2s. 6d. in 1 week, and 3 and 6 mos.—secured.

WAYNE, ALBAN JOSEPH, tea dealer, Liverpool, and West Derby. April 20. 6s. by three equal instalments of 2s. on July 1, Sept. 1, and Nov. 1.

WILSON, ROBERT ALFRED, and WILSON, BENJAMIN THOMAS, tea dealers, Ipswich. April 27. 6s. 8d. in 7 days.

WITHERS, ROBERT, sen., baker, Dalston-l, Hackney. April 14. 2s. 6d. by three equal instalments, in 4, 8, and 12 mos.

WOOD, GEORGE SAMUEL, grocer, Portland-rd, Saint Norwood. May 10. 5s. 6d. by three equal instalments, on July 1, Oct. 1, and Dec. 1—secured.

YOUNG, ANN, widow, bookseller, Southampton-row. April 30. Trusts. G. A. Calder, St. Martin's-cr, Westminster, and T. J. Smith, Queen-st, Cheapside, both stationers.

Gazette, May 18.

ABRAM, JOHN HILL, cord dealer, Liverpool. April 26. Trust. J. Patterson and W. Steadman, merchants, Liverpool.

BARLOW, THOMAS, yarn dyer, Radcliffe-bridge, near Manchester. May 5. 2s. 6d. by instalments of 1s. 6d. and 1s. in 14 days and 6 mos from registration. Trusts. R. Ashworth, gingham manufacturer, Manchester, Middleton, and Radcliffe, and G. B. Cuff, public accountant, Manchester.

BIBLER, JOHN, provision merchant, Upper Thames-st; Canterbury, and Southampton. April 19. Trusts. J. Laining, and G. F. Seales, merchants, Mark-l, and R. Cook, accountant, Cheapside.

BOTTOM, WILLIAM; KIRK, ROBERT; and RAMSDEN, CHARLES, engineers, Huddersfield. April 15. Trusts. C. Taylor, iron-founder, and J. Brook, registrar, both Huddersfield.

BRADLEY, JOHN, draper, Sunderland. April 30. 12s. 6d. on May 12.

BROWN, RALPH, painter, Newcastle-under-Lyme. April 17. Trust. S. Cook, glass merchant, Birmingham.

COLVIN, GEORGE, draper, St. John's-wood-rd, St. John's-wood. April 23. Trusts. A. McGaw, wholesale clothier, Angel-cr, Friday-st, and J. Ellerton, warehouseman, St. Paul's-church-yard.

CHUTE, JAMES HENRY, theatrical lessee, Bristol. April 27. In full, by instalments of 700l. per annum. Trusts. G. Somerton, gentleman; E. Chilcott, wholesale ironmonger; F. Leverton, cabinet maker; J. Davis, builder, W. Howell, timber merchant; P. S. Macleiver, gentleman; W. H. Williams, accountant, all of Bristol; and C. Wadham, timber merchant, Bath.

CLARABUT, WILLIAM HENRY, draper, Whitstable. April 20. 12s. in 3, 6, and 9 mos from April 10—two last secured. Trusts. R. Pearce, warehouseman, Love-l, Aldermanbury; T. Appleton, sen., freeman of the oyster-fishery, Whitstable; A. Clarabut, widow, Canterbury; J. B. Clarabut, chemist, Deal; and W. Weir, gentleman, Canterbury.

COSH, RICHARD LAWRENCE, licensed victualler, Richmond Hotel, Hainemere. May 13. 5s. by two equal instalments, on Aug. 13 and Nov. 13—secured.

DIFFORD, SOLOMON, solicitor's managing clerk, Sutton-upon-Trent. April 28. 2s. 6d.

EVANS, SARAH, innkeeper, Troedyrhiw. April 15. 2s. 6d. by two instalments, in 7 days and 3 mos from registration. Trust. W. Evans, miner, Merthyr Tydfil.

FAWCETT, THOMAS, boot maker, Bradford. April 17. 4s. 6d. viz., 1s. 6d. in 2, 4, and 6 mos from registration. Trust. H. Ibbotson, accountant, Bradford.

FISHER, JAMES, joiner, Great Grimsby. April 20. Trusts. I. Good, sen., brickmaker, Clew, and S. Ellis, timber merchant, Great Grimsby.

FLETCHER, WILLIAM RIVERS, gentleman, Maldenhead. May 10. 2s. in 10 days from registration.

GREENWAY, CHARLES GREENWAY, factor, Wolverhampton. April 19. 4s. in 7 days from registration. Trust. S. A. Greenway, traveller, Wolverhampton.

HALLAM, JOHN, innkeeper, Leicester. April 22. Trust. H. Tarrant, accountant, Leicester.

HALEY, JOHN, woolstapler, Bradford. April 21. 7s. 6d. by instalments of 5s. and 2s. 6d. in 14 days and 4 mos from registration—last guaranteed. Trust. J. Hargrave, gentleman, Bradford.

HAWKESLEY, AARON, Oakerthorpe; and HAWKESLEY, JAMES, South Wigfield, coal proprietors. April 8. 3s. 4d. in 1 mo from registration.

HILLS, THOMAS, builder, Wansstead. April 12. 5s. by two equal instalments, in 3 and 6 mos.—secured.

HORROCKS, WILLIAM, and HORROCKS, JOHN, flax spinners, Bolton. May 4. 3s. 4d. by three instalments of 1s. 14s. 1s. 14s. and 1s. 14s. in 4, 8, and 12 mos from May 31—secured.

HUGHES, WILLIAM, cheesemonger, Leicester. April 28. Trust. T. M. Evans, cheesefactor, Leicester.

HUTCHINSON, GEORGE, draper, Woolwich. April 17. Trusts. T. Cooper, Cheapside; and G. P. Britten, Friday-st, both warehousemen.

IVE, ANTHONY, ironmonger, Albert-ter and Lonsdale-pl, Notting-hill. May 15. 5s. in 21 days from registration.

KILL, GEORGE, jun., grocer, Pandey, near Pontypridd. April 19. 6s. by three equal instalments, in 2, 4, and 6 mos. Trusts. G. Knill, sen., gardener, Mountain Ash; Rev. A. Rowland, clerk, Ystrad, near Pontypridd; and J. N. Flint, provision merchant, Cardiff.

LEWIS, FREDERICK, merchant, Cushion-cr, Old Broad-st, and Rotherhithe New-rd. May 13. Trust. T. Reed, Walthamstow.

LAWRENCE, WILLIAM, Harrington-st, Hampstead-rd; and BAUGH, BENJAMIN, University-st, Tottenham-cr, builders. April 19. 6s. by two instalments, in 15 days and 3 mos from registration.

LEAR, JAMES, watch manufacturer, Birmingham. April 20. Trusts. A. Arnold, jeweller, and H. Cook, silversmith, both Birmingham.

LOTT, WILLIAM, painter, Bridgend. April 13. 5s. by two equal payments, in 6 and 12 mos.

LYND, WILLIAM, oil merchant, Leeds. April 20. 10s. by four equal instalments, in 3, 6, 9, and 24 mos from registration—secured. Trust. J. W. Oxley, banker, Leeds.

MATCHAM, FREDERICK, innkeeper, Pailton. Feb. 16. Trust. D. Gresham, brewer, Leeds.

MEYER, THOMAS, grocer, Walsall. April 28. Trusts. J. Watson, wholesale grocer, and W. L. Harrison, accountant, both Birmingham.

PICKERING, JOHN FOSTER; and PICKERING, RICHARD BEISLEY, sugar refiners, Osborn-st, Whitechapel. April 20. Trusts. W. H. Bishop; C. Czarnikow; and D. Craven, colonial brokers, all Mincing-l.

RAVENSCROFT, THOMAS, cotton waste dealer, Manchester. May 12. 4s. in 7 days from registration. Trusts. G. R. Hayward, cotton broker, Liverpool, and J. Thomas, accountant, Manchester.

RICHARDS, JOHN, licensed victualler, Compton Gifford. April 22. Trusts. J. Reed, merchant, and G. Nicholls, ironmonger, both Plymouth.

RICHARDSON, GEORGE WILLIAM, elastic manufacturer, Chesterfield. May 7. 4s. by two instalments of 2s. 6d. in 2 mos, and 1s. 6d. in 3 mos from registration. Trust. G. A. Beadmore, gentleman, Basford.

ROBERTS, J. T. T. captain in H.M.'s Royal marine artillery, Scarborough. April 18. Trust. C. Stanley, gentleman, Roslyn House, Fulham.

SMITH, CHARLES, out of business, Buckley-st, Mile-end-rd. May 8. 3s. 4d. in 14 days from registration.

STEPHENS, WILLIAM, hay dealer, Hinxham. April 20. Trusts. M. A. Reay, corn factor, and R. Taylor, solicitor, both Birmingham.

VERITY, JOHN, boot manufacturer, Leeds. April 21. 5s. by two equal instalments, in 3 and 6 mos from April 21—last secured. Trusts. S. Bentley, innkeeper, and E. Shaw, nail manufacturer, Leeds.

WALKER, CHARLES GEORGE, corn merchant, Stockton-on-Tees. April 5. Trust. J. Greener, public accountant, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

WARD, HENRY, and WARD, ABRAHAM, grocers, Kilmahara. May 8. 10s. by three equal instalments, on Aug. 13, Dec. 13, and April 13. Trusts. T. Ward, colliery manager; S. Ward, colliery steward; and J. Carr, farmer, all of Kilmahara.

WARREN, WILLIAM, provision dealer, Nantwich. April 21. Trusts. G. Lewis, cheese factor, Market Drayton, and W. Sandford, grocer, Nantwich.

WHITE, MARY, innkeeper, Durham. April 19. Trusts. J. Mavin, ironfounder, Durham, and W. Southern, timber merchant, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

WILCOX, RICHARD, draper, Welshpool. May 12. Trust. J. H. Goodwin, merchant, Manchester.

WOOD, HERBERT, surgeon, Ashton-under-Lyne. March 5. 8s. by three instalments of 2s. 6d., 2s. 6d., and 2s. 6d. on May 1, Aug. 1, and Nov. 1. Trusts. H. Wood, surgeon, Ashton-under-Lyne.

WYATT, RICHARD HALL, accountant, Idon. April 22. 2s. 6d. in 2 mos from registration. Trust. F. Coode, gentleman, Mark-l.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES AND DEATHS.

BIRTHS.

TATTON.—On the 16th inst., at 24, Lower Phillimore-place, Kensington, the wife of Mr. Walter Tatton, solicitor, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

GOULD—SHARPE.—On the 13th inst., at Trinity Church, Milton, near Gravesend, Thomas Gould, jun., of Sheffield, solicitor, to Frances Harriett, eldest daughter of the late Captain John Edward Sharpe, 46th Bengal Native Infantry.

LEE—DODD.—On the 6th inst., at St. Michael's Church, Kingston, Jamaica, William Rastick Lee, solicitor, to Sophia Isabella, only daughter of the late John Dodd, of Glassonby, Cumberland, formerly of Uppingham, Rutlandshire.

MARSHALL—GARDNER.—On the 28th ult., at the Parish Church, Huxley, near Birmingham, John Marshall, of Thornton, Cheshire, Esq., Bachelor-at-Law, to Elizabeth, the youngest daughter of the late Joseph Gardner, of The Rectory, Huxley, Esq.

TRISIGER—STOFFORD.—On the 13th inst., at St. Paul's, Knights-bridge, the Hon. Edward Thesiger, fourth son of Lord Chelmsford, to Georgina Mary, third daughter of Wm. Bruce Stofford, Esq., of Drayton House, Northamptonshire.

DEATHS.

CATTLOW.—On the 17th inst., at Dorrington, Market Drayton, Salop, aged 33, William Ford Cattlow, solicitor.

GOODY.—On the 12th inst., aged 38, John Cuttle Goody, Esq., of City, Bank Chambers, 20, Threadneedle-street, E.C., and Leatherhead, Surrey, solicitor.

JOHNSTON.—On the 12th inst., at 27, Royal-terrace, Edinburgh, Robert Johnston, Esq., Writer to the Signet.

NUTT.—On the 5th inst., Mrs. Mary Ann Nutt, relict of John Nutt, Esq., solicitor, late of Canterbury.

BISCH, JACOB, carp manufacturer, Sheffield. Pet. May 14. Reg. & O. A. Wake and Rodgers. Sol. Tattershall, Sheffield. Sur. June 1.

BRENDLE, GEORGE, provision dealer, late Church. Pet. April 15. Reg. Fardell. O. A. M'Neill. Sur. June 1.

BROWN, JOSEPH NORRIBURY, grey cloth merchant, Manchester. Pet. May 13. Reg. Fardell. O. A. M'Neill. Sols. Grundy and Coles, Manchester. Sur. June 3.

BROWN, JAMES, draper, Tow Law. Pet. May 11. Reg. Gibson. O. A. Laidman. Sols. Hoyle, Shipley, and Hoyle, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, or Messrs. Watson, Durham. Sur. June 7.

ETTL, GEORGE, pensioner for Her Majesty's Royal Navy, Iskey. Pet. May 14. Reg. & O. A. Pearce. Sols. Messrs. Elmdon, Plymouth. Sur. June 2.

CAVE, JAMES CHARLES, publisher, Brighton. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Baker. Sur. June 3.

CAWLEY, GEORGE SUTCLIFFE, out of business, Halifax. Sur. May 12. Reg. & O. A. Rankin. Sol. Storey, Halifax. Sur. May 28.

CARROLL, JAMES, jun., and CARROLL, WILLIAM HENRY, bookbinders, Liverpool. Pet. May 14. O. A. Turner. Sols. Woodburn and Pemberton, Liverpool. Sur. May 28.

CROFT, ELIZABETH, grocer, Cardiff. Pet. May 12. Reg. & O. A. Langley. Sol. Morgan, Cardiff. Sur. May 29.

DART, FREDERICK WHITLOCK, out of business, Brighton. Pet. May 11. Reg. & O. A. Baker. Sur. June 1.

DAVIS, THOMAS, shipowner, M. M. S. dockyard, Pembroke Dock. Pet. May 13. Reg. & O. A. Lanning. Sol. Parry, Pembroke Dock. Sur. May 31.

DEAR, JOHN, draper, Merthyr Tydfil. Pet. May 13. Reg. Fild. O. A. Acraman. Sols. Benson and Elletson, Bristol. Sur. May 27.

EVANS, JOSEPH, clerk in holy orders, Llanover. Pet. May 15. Reg. W. W. O. A. Acraman. Sols. Jones, Llandysul, and Henderson and Salmon, Bristol. Sur. May 29.

EVANS, JOHN, bookbinder, Worcester. Pet. May 15. Reg. O. A. Trotter. Sol. Stafford, Durham. Sur. May 31.

FLEMING, PATRICK, builder, Batley. Pet. May 13. O. A. Young. Sol. Simpson, Leeds. Sur. May 31.

FLETCHER, JAMES ROY, writing clerk, Wrexham. Pet. May 11. Reg. W. W. O. A. Harcourt. Sol. Jones, Wrexham. Sur. June 1.

GAY, DAVID, shipwright in H.M.'s dockyard, Pembroke Dock. Pet. May 13. Reg. & O. A. Lanning. Sol. Parry, Pembroke Dock. Sur. May 31.

GILBERT, FREDERICK WILLIAM, out of business, Sheffield. Pet. May 12. O. A. Young. Sol. York. Sur. June 1.

GRIFFIN, ARTHUR, attorney, Middlesbrough and East Coatham. Pet. May 14. Reg. & O. A. Crosby. Sol. Dobson, Middlesbrough. Sur. May 31.

HALL, WILLIAM, labourer in a stone quarry, Unby. Pet. May 14. Reg. & O. A. Patten. Sol. Crook, Nottingham. Sur. June 3.

HARDING, WILLIAM, shopkeeper, Much Marcle. Pet. May 14. Reg. & O. A. Kinnear. Sol. Reece, Ledbury. Sur. May 28.

HAYWARD, ROBERT, butcher, Dorchester. Pet. May 14. O. A. Carrick. Sol. Symonds, Dorchester, and Messrs. Rodgers, Exeter. Sur. May 28.

HOBBS, ISAAC, corn factor, Dover. Pet. May 12. Reg. & O. A. Gresham. Sol. Minter, Dover. Sur. May 29.

HOW, WILLIAM, corn factor, Darlington. Pet. May 14. Reg. & O. A. Brown. Sol. Clayhills, Darlington. Sur. May 29.

BRUCE, WILLIAM, slater, Liverpool. Pet. May 13. O. A. Turner. Sol. Gifford, Liverpool. Sur. June 1.

JONES, JOHN, late shopkeeper, Lichefield. Pet. May 13. Reg. & O. A. Daw. Sol. Griffith, Holyhead. Sur. June 3.

LEACH, HENRY, POOLMAN, shoe manufacturer, Shrewsbury. Pet. May 14. Reg. O. A. Kinnear. Sol. Chandler, Shrewsbury, and James and Griffith, Birmingham. Sur. June 2.

LEWIS, JOSEPH, and LISTER, FREDERICK, curriers, Leeds. Pet. May 14. O. A. Young. Sols. Messrs. Middleton, Leeds. Sur. May 28.

LOWRY, THOMAS, carpenter, East Peckham. Pet. May 10. Reg. O. A. Sudamore. Sol. Palmer, Tonbridge. Sur. May 21.

MILES, CHARLES, clockmaker, Calne and Laycock. Pet. May 13. Reg. O. A. Bowers. Sol. Rawlings, Melksham. Sur. May 27.

MILES, EDWARD, beer-seller, Bolton. Pet. May 14. Reg. & O. A. Edin. Sols. Hall and Butler, Bolton. Sur. June 2.

OTTON, REEVE, chemist, Cannock. Pet. May 14. Reg. & O. A. Spencer. Sol. Baron, Wolverhampton. Sur. May 29.

PRIME, THOMAS, builder, late Lancaster-rd, Notting-hill. Pet. May 11. Reg. & O. A. Bick. Sol. Bick. Sur. May 28.

PHILLIPS, DAVID WILLIAM, tailor, Merthyr Tydfil. Pet. May 10. Reg. & O. A. Russell. Sol. Rosser, Aberdare. Sur. June 1.

PRY, CHARLES JEFFERY, farrier, Halstead. Pet. May 10. Reg. & O. A. Harris. Sol. Cardinall, Halstead. Sur. May 28.

SPENCER, HARRIETT LOUISA, and SPENCER, MATILDA JANE, teachers, Spillgate. Pet. May 12. O. A. Thompson. Sol. Main, Grantham. Sur. May 25.

SMITH, WILLIAM; STOTT, GEORGE; and MAUDE, JOHN, cotton weavers, Brighton. Pet. May 15. O. A. Young. Sols. Lancaster, Bradford, and Simpson, Leeds. Sur. June 2.

SPODEN, JAMES, ironmonger, Leeds. Pet. May 13. O. A. Young. Sol. Walker, Leeds. Sur. May 31.

TILLOT, DAVID, cotton waste dealer, Oldham. Pet. May 13. Reg. Fardell. O. A. Cobbett. Sol. Cobbett, Wheeler, and Cobbett, Manchester. Sur. June 1.

WATKINS, JAMES, labourer, Hemsworth, near Pontefract. Pet. May 14. Reg. & O. A. Coleman. Sol. Freeman, Huddersfield. Sur. June 1.

WATSON, CHARLES, chemist, Stockton-upon-Tees. Pet. May 15. Reg. Gibson. O. A. Laidman. Sol. Clemmet, Stockton. Sur. June 2.

WHITE, WALLACE, out of business, Hanley. Pet. May 13. Reg. & O. A. Challinor. Sol. Welch, Hanley. Sur. June 5.

WILLIAMS, HENRY, mining engineer, Swansea. Pet. May 13. Reg. W. W. O. A. Acraman. Sols. Price, Haverfordwest, and Price, Bristol. Sur. May 28.

WILLIAMS, GEORGE, joiner, Seacombe. Pet. May 13. O. A. Turner. Sol. Richardson, Oliver, Jones, and Billson, Liverpool. Sur. June 1.

WILLIAMS, DAVID, building contractor, Ystradgynnydd. Pet. May 13. Reg. & O. A. Spickett. Sol. Thomas, Pontypridd. Sur. May 29.

WILLIAMS, ISRAEL, hawker, Bray. Pet. May 14. Reg. & O. A. Darrell. Sol. Spicer, Great Marlow. Sur. May 29.

WILLIAMS, WILLIAM HENRY, bookmaker, Louth. Pet. May 11. Reg. O. A. Wallis. Sol. Wood, Louth. Sur. May 31.

WILDER, JAMES, and WILDER, JOSEPH BARKER, scribblers, Leeds. Pet. May 15. O. A. Young. Sols. Messrs. Middleton, Leeds. Sur. May 31.

WILDER, WILLIAM, miller, Appleby. Pet. May 13. Reg. & O. A. Redin, jun. Sol. Cant, Penrith. Sur. June 4.

BANKRUPTCIES ANNOUNCED.

Gazette, May 11.

BRIDMAN, RICHARD, beer retailer, Wingfield. March 10, 1869

Dividends.

BANKRUPT'S ESTATES.

The Official Assignees are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Ang. W. John, first, 44, Turner, Liverpool.—Budd, E. grocer, 1st, 44, Stansfeld, London.—Bugg, G. flour merchant, first, 1st, 44, Stansfeld, London.—Cartwright, C. N. dresser, further, 1st, 44, Stansfeld, London.—Daly, W. G. flour dealer, first, 2s. 10s. 10s. Newcastle.—Ehlers, J. ropemaker, second, 1s. 7d. Turner, Liverpool.—Fox, W. corn merchant, first, 1s. 7d. Parkyns, London.—Gardner, C. D. and Garbutt, W. dealers in wines, first, 6s. 8d. Newcastle.—Huntley, J. grocer, first, 44d. Laidman, Newcastle.—Kirkby and Petty, printers, first, 7d. Laidman, Newcastle.—Merr, E. print publisher, first, 11s. 4d. Stansfeld, London.—Murray, C. J. merchant, first, 6d. Parkyns, London.—Preston, J. W. jun. wine dealer, first, 6s. 7d. Stansfeld, London.—Robson, E. first, 1st, 44, Laidman, Newcastle.—Scotson, J. victualler, 1st, 44, Laidman, Liverpool.—Sillwell, R. clerk in Somerset, 1st, 44, Laidman, London.—Thomas, W. cabinet maker, 1st, 44, Laidman, Liverpool.—Wade, G. De V. scrivener, second, 1st, 44, Laidman, London.—West, H. brewer, first, 3s. Stansfeld, London.—Wentworth and Turner, wire workers, second, 11s. 4d. Stansfeld, London.—Wieser and Deutschland, merchant, first, 54d. Stansfeld, London.

PARTRIDGE AND COOPER

WHOLESALE & RETAIL STATIONERS,

92, FLEET-STREET, AND 1 & 2, CHANCERY-LANE, LONDON, E.C.

Carriage paid to the Country on Orders exceeding 20s.

DRAFT PAPER, 4s. 6d., 6s., 7s., 7s. 9d., and 9s. per ream
BRIEF PAPER, 17s. 6d., and 23s. 6d. per ream.
FOOLSCAP PAPER, 10s. 6d., 13s. 6d., and 18s. 6d. per ream.
CREAM LAID NOTE, 3s., 4s., and 5s. per ream.
LARGE CREAM LAID NOTE, 4s., 6s., and 7s. per ream.
LARGE BLUE NOTE, 3s., 4s., and 6s. per ream.
ENVELOPES, CREAM OR BLUE, 4s. 6d., and 6s. 6d. per 1000.
THE "TEMPLE" ENVELOPE, extra secure, 9s. 6d. per 1000.
FOOLSCAP OFFICIAL ENVELOPES, 1s. 6d. per 100.
THE NEW "VELLUM WOVE CLUB-HOUSE" NOTE, 9s. 6d. per ream.

"We would direct particular attention to their New Club-house Paper; in our opinion it is the very best paper we ever wrote upon."—London Mirror.

INDENTURE SKINS, Printed and Machine-ruled to hold twenty or thirty folios, 1s. 9d. each, 20s. per dozen.
SECONDS or FOLLOWERS, Ruled 1s. 6d. each, 17s. per dozen.
RECORDS or MEMORIALS, 6d. each, 5s. 6d. per dozen.

LEDGERS, DAY-BOOKS, CASH-BOOKS, LETTER or MINUTE-BOOKS
An immense stock in various bindings.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE-LIST of Inkstands, Postage Scales, Copying Presses, Writing Cases, Despatch Boxes, Oak and Walnut Stationery Cabinets, and other useful articles adapted to Library or Office, post free.

Established 1841.

TO SOLICITORS.—Messrs. FORRESTER'S PRIVATE INQUIRY OFFICE, 6, DANE'S-INN, Strand. Mr. John Forrester, late Principal Police Officer at the Mansion-house, City of London. Confidential inquiries made in England and abroad.

PRIVATE DETECTIVE OFFICE: established 1857.—THOMAS BALCHIN, 21 years city detective officer, is prepared to undertake PRIVATE INQUIRIES in divorce and other cases with secrecy and despatch.—35, Carter-lane, Doctors'-commons, E.C.

Sales by Auction.

Plumstead, Kent. Valuable Freehold Ground-rents, amounting together to nearly 2000l. per annum, and arising out of about 400 shops, dwelling-houses, and premises, and presenting to trustees and capitalists undeniably secure and first-rate investments.

MESSRS. NORTON, TRIST, WATNEY, and Co., have received instructions from the trustees under the will of the late Lewis Davis, Esq., to OFFER for SALE, at the MART, Tokenhouse-yard, on FRIDAY, JUNE 11, at Two o'clock precisely in Thirty Lots, valuable well-secured FREEHOLD GROUND-RENTS, amounting together to nearly 2000l. per annum, and arising out of numerous shops, dwelling-houses, and premises, situate at Plumstead, in the county of Kent, and comprising part of the Park Estate. They will be offered as follows, viz.:

- Lot 1.—267. 15s. per annum secured upon Nos. 92 to 96, Plumstead-road.
- Lot 2.—384. 2s. secured upon Nos. 10 to 26, Plumstead-villas-road and nine houses in Deadman's-lane.
- Lot 3.—1837. secured upon the Walmer Castle and numerous dwelling-houses in Walmer-road, Plumstead-villas-road and Deadman's-lane.
- Lot 4.—707. secured upon thirty houses in Plumstead-villas-road and Cross-street.
- Lot 5.—300. 3s. secured upon Nos. 97 to 106, Plumstead-road, Nos. 2 to 42, Ann-street, and Nos. 1 to 23, Plumstead-villas-road.
- Lot 6.—1497. 10s. secured upon Nos. 25 to 77, Plumstead-villas-road, and Nos. 46 to 102, Ann-street.
- Lot 7.—1724. 15s. secured upon Nos. 79 to 89, 93, 95, and 99 to 137, Plumstead-villas-road, Nos. 104 to 115, 124, 125, and 132 to 170, Upper Ann-street, Nos. 1 to 7, Cross-street, and Nos. 1 to 9 and 23, Rose-street.
- Lot 8.—394. 2s. secured upon Nos. 108 to 119, Plumstead-road, and Nos. 5 and 6, Thomas-street.
- Lot 9.—777. 4s. secured upon Nos. 3 to 43, Ann-street, and Nos. 2 to 36, Robert-street.
- Lot 10.—1807. secured upon Nos. 9 to 19, Walmer-road, Nos. 45 to 99, Ann-street, Nos. 35 to 84, Upper Robert-street, and Nos. 2 to 8, Glyndon-street.
- Lot 11.—1332. 3s. secured upon Nos. 101 to 185, Upper Ann-street, Nos. 1 to 5, Belvidere Cottages, Glyndon-street, and Nos. 1 to 6, Lincoln-terrace, Brewery-road.
- Lot 12.—77. 10s. secured upon Nos. 4, 6, and 8, Rose-street.
- Lot 13.—617. 3s. secured upon twenty-five houses, Nos. 1 to 25, Waverley-terrace.
- Lot 14.—364. 1s. secured upon Nos. 1 to 13, and No. 17, Park-road East.
- Lot 15.—337. secured upon ten houses, Nos. 1 to 10, Lower Park-place.
- Lots 16, 17, and 18.—67., 67., and 127. secured upon Nos. 1, 3, 5, and 6, Park-villas.
- Lot 19.—707. 15s. secured upon Nos. 120 to 128, Plumstead-road, Nos. 1 to 27, Robert-street, and Nos. 1 to 13, Station-street, and Thomas-street.
- Lot 20.—154. secured upon No. 1, Bamfield-street.
- Lot 21.—172. 6s. secured upon Nos. —, Glyndon-street, and Nos. 2, 4, 10, and 12, Bamfield-street.
- Lot 22.—157. 12s. secured upon Nos. 1 to 7, Brewery-terrace, Caze-lane.
- Lot 23.—67. 2s. secured upon Nos. 8, 9, 10, and 11, Brewery-terrace.
- Lot 24.—1347. 5s. secured upon Nos. 20 to 34, Walmer-road, Nos. 29 to 71, Upper Robert-street, Nos. 11 to 43, Earl-street, and Nos. 13 to 17, Glyndon-street.
- Lot 25.—1264. 6s. secured upon Nos. 36 to 46, Walmer-road, Nos. 2 to 34, and No. 50, Earl-street, Nos. 2 to 12, and 36 to 50, Elm Grove-street, and Nos. 18 to 26, Glyndon-street.
- Lot 26.—1157. 10s. secured upon Nos. 47 to 58, Walmer-road, Nos. 1 to 39, Elm Grove-street, Nos. 1 to 13, Station-street, and Nos. 27 to 30, Glyndon-street.
- Lot 27.—234. 4s. secured upon Nos. 153 to 158, Plumstead-road.
- Lot 28.—582. 2s. secured upon Nos. 59 to 68, Walmer-road, Nos. 2, 4, 6, and 8, Station-road, and Nos. 1 and 3, Griffin-road.
- Lot 29.—377. 10s. secured upon Nos. 1, and 6 to 11, Derby-terrace, Plumstead-road.
- Lot 30.—447. 12s. per annum secured upon seventeen houses Nos. 2, 4, 6, and 8, Griffin-road, Nos. 26 to 42, and Nos. 29, 31, 33, and 48, Orchard-road.

May be viewed, and particulars had shortly of Mr. PARKES, the Park Estate office, Plumstead; the Lord Paunsey, Plumstead-road; Mitre Inn, Woolwich; the Crown, Erith; or at the Mart; and of the Auctioneers, 62, Old Broad-street, E.C.

MESSRS. DRUCE, SONS, and JACKSON, Solicitors, 10, Billiter-square;

Watford, Herts, in a beautiful and very healthy district, on a dry, gravel subsoil, close to Cassiobury-park, within five minutes' walk of the station, and having all the advantages of a country house, with the protection of a pleasant town and great facility for direct access to Euston-square, also to Broad-street, Kensington, &c., via Willesden Junction, with possession.

MESSRS. DEBENHAM, TEWSON, and FARMER will SELL, at the MART, on TUESDAY, JUNE 1, at Two, in Four Lots, viz. — Lot 1. The present, built and carefully finished FREEHOLD FAMILY RESIDENCE, known as Lansbury-house, situate at the junction of Lansley-road and Stratford-road, and containing five good bed-rooms, a bath-room, a dining-room, a library, and drawing room opening by French casements to lawn, kitchen, scullery, and complete domestic offices. There are road pleasure and kitchen gardens, entirely enclosed by wall and park fence, and the house is approached by a carriage sweep; ample space is left for stabling.

Lots 2, 3, and 4, three eligible pieces of freehold building land, adjoining Lot 1, and possessing important frontages to Stratford-road and Lansley-road, and suitable for the erection of first-class residences, or would be valuable adjuncts to the grounds of Lansbury-house. Watford is in the midst of a good hunting district, and the walks and drives in all directions are of unsurpassed beauty. This property is only three minutes' walk from church shops, and post office. No cottages or small houses can be built upon or near it. Possession on completion.

Particulars of
Messrs. VALPY and LEDSAM, Solicitors, 60, Carey street, W.C. ; and of the Auctioneers, 80, Cheapside.

MESSRS. DEBENHAM, TEWSON, and FARMER'S MAY LIST OF ESTATES and HOUSES, including landed estates, town and country residences, hunting and shooting quarters, farms, ground-rents, rentcharges, house property and investments generally, may be obtained free of charge, at their offices, 80, Cheapside, E.C., or by post for one stamp. Particulars for insertion in the June List must be received by the 29th May at latest.

Harrow-on-the-Hill. — Valuable Freehold Residences, Ground-rent, and Building Land.

MESSRS. PRICKETT and SON will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, Tokenhouse-yard, Bank, on THURSDAY, JUNE 3, at Two o'clock precisely, in Seven Lots, the valuable FREEHOLD ESTATES, situate on the Harrow Park Estate, High-street, Harrow-on-the-Hill, about a third of a mile from a contemplated station on the proposed Harrow, Edgware, and London Railway (now in Parliament), the same being particularly worthy the attention of gentlemen desirous of availing themselves of the advantages of the Harrow School, and of obtaining building sites in one of the most delightful positions in the county of Middlesex, comprising three detached residences, with good gardens, let to highly respectable tenants, and of the estimated value of 2000l. per annum; a Freehold Groundrent of 12l. 10s. per annum; also 3a. 1r. 23p. of very valuable Building Land, commanding fine views over the adjacent country.

May be viewed by permission of the tenants, and particulars obtained at the Auction Mart; at the King's Head, Harrow; or of Mr. W. WINKLEY, High-street, Harrow; or of

Messrs. PRIOR and BIGG, Solicitors, 33, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane; and of Messrs. PRICKETT and Son, Land Agents, &c., 62, Chancery-lane, W.C., and Highgate, N.

Fortis-green, Muswell-hill. — Leasehold Houses.

MESSRS. PRICKETT and SON will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, Tokenhouse-yard, City, on THURSDAY, JUNE 3, at Two o'clock precisely, in One Lot, THREE LEASEHOLD brick-built HOUSES, known as Nos. 1, 2, and 3, Clissold-cottages, situate on the north side of Fortis-green, Muswell-hill, let to respectable tenants, at rents amounting together to 48l. 12s. per annum, and held direct from the freeholder, for a term of sixty years from the 25th Dec. 1854, at the yearly rent of 27l. 8s. each house.

May be viewed, and particulars obtained on application to Mr. GEORGE TURNER, opposite the property, Fortis-green; at the inns in the neighbourhood; at the Auction Mart; or of

Messrs. RANDALL and SON, Solicitors, 9, Tokenhouse-yard, City; and of Messrs. PRICKETT and Son, Auctioneers and Surveyors, 62, Chancery-lane, W.C., and Highgate, N.

In Chancery: Bastow v. Bastow, and Bastow v. Bastow — Blackman-street, Borough; at Park-street, Camberwell, and Kingsland-road. — Desirable Leasehold houses and improved Rents, late the property of Robert Bastow, Esq., deceased.

MR. GEORGE PRICKETT will SELL by AUCTION, pursuant to an Order of the High Court of Chancery, made in the above causes, with the approval of the Master of the Rolls, at the AUCTION MART, Tokenhouse-yard, near the Bank of England, on THURSDAY, JUNE 3, at Two o'clock precisely, in Three Lots, the desirable LEASEHOLD INVESTMENTS, arising out of the following properties, namely: — Nos. 89 and 90, Blackman-street, Borough; Nos. 21, 22, 23, 29, 30, and 31, Park-street, Southampton-street, Camberwell, with two cottages adjoining, known as Leaburn-cottages and Claremont-lodge; Nos. 351, 353, 355, and 357, Kingsland-road. The whole property estimated to produce an aggregate rental of about 880l. per annum, and held under various leases at moderate rents.

May be viewed by permission of the respective tenants, and particulars obtained at the Auction Mart; or of

Messrs. GODWIN and PICKETT, Solicitors, 3, King's Bench-walk, Temple; of Messrs. ALLEN and SONS, Solicitors, 17, Carlisle-street, Soho; or of Messrs. BLISS and SONS, House Agents, &c., 123, Church-street, Bethnal-green; and of Messrs. PRICKETT and Son, Land Agents and Auctioneers, 62, Chancery-lane, W.C., and Highgate, N.

Friern-park, Finchley-common. — Desirable Leasehold Villa Residences and Plot of Building Land.

MESSRS. PRICKETT and SON will SELL by AUCTION, at the AUCTION MART, Tokenhouse-yard, Lothbury, on THURSDAY, JUNE 3, at Two o'clock precisely, in one or three Lots, a desirable LEASEHOLD ESTATE, situate in Torrington-road, Friern-park, within a mile of the Finchley and Hendon Station on the Edgware, Highgate, and London Railways; comprising a pair of villa residences, with forecourts and gardens, estimated when finished to produce a rental of 1400l. per annum; likewise a Plot of Building Land, situate in Torrington-place, Torrington-road, Friern-park, the whole held for a long term at a low ground rent.

May be viewed, and particulars obtained on application to Mr. WHITE, Friern-park, near the property; at the inns in the neighbourhood; the Auction Mart.

of Messrs. HAMMOND, Solicitors, 8, Furnival's-inn, E.C., of R. N. SPICER, Esq., Solicitor, 5, Staple-inn, W.C.; and of Messrs. PRICKETT and Son, Land Agents and Surveyors, 62, Chancery-lane, W.C., and Highgate, N.

Thwaytes, deceased. — City of London. — The highly-important and very valuable Freehold Estate, in Fenchurch-street, one of the MART, Mining-lane, comprising the extensive and well known premises, conspicuous among the adjacent palatial buildings as a specimen of the trading establishments of a former age. — By order of the Trustees.

MESSRS. EDWIN FOX and BOUSFIELD are favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, Tokenhouse-yard, Bank of England, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 2, 1869, at One o'clock precisely, in one Lot, by direction of the Trustees of John Thwaytes, Esq., deceased, a most important FREEHOLD ESTATE, consisting of the premises Nos. 44 and 45, Fenchurch-street, one door from Mining-lane, presenting unaltered the appearance they bore when occupied by the late Mr. Thwaytes and his predecessors, Messrs. Davison and Newman, rendering them conspicuous among their noble surroundings, and affording the most convincing evidence that the time has come when this relic of ancient London must give place to the expansion of modern trade. The position in the heart of the Colonial and Produce Market, close to "the Lane," and in one of the chief thoroughfares of the city, is so commanding and important as to stand without a rival, while the area is of such extent as to warrant the adoption of a structure, with the requirements of the age. It contains about 3900 feet superficial, and has a frontage of over 47 feet to Fenchurch-street, abuts on the Clothworkers'-hall in the rear, and is entirely uncontrolled by ancient lights. It is let on lease for a term expiring in 1870 at the low rent of 6000l. a year.

May be viewed by permission of the tenants and particulars, with plans, of Messrs. GRAY, JOHNSTON, and MOUNSEY, Solicitors, 5, Raymond-buildings, Gray's-inn; at the Mart; and of Messrs. EDWIN FOX and BOUSFIELD, 24, Gresham-street, Bank, E.C., corner of Coleman-street.

Stamford-hill, in the high road. — Spacious Freehold detached Family Mansion, with out offices, conservatories, pleasure and kitchen gardens, and grounds of nearly six acres.

MESSRS. EDWIN FOX and BOUSFIELD are directed to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, Tokenhouse-yard, on WEDNESDAY JUNE 16, at One o'clock, a valuable FREEHOLD ESTATE, most advantageously situate on the rise of Stamford-hill, comprising a capital family residence, very substantially built, standing back from the road, at an agreeable distance, screened by a well-grown plantation, and approached by a carriage drive; containing about ten or twelve principal and secondary chambers, handsome dining room, breakfast room, and an elegant suite of reception rooms forty feet in length, with appropriate domestic offices. The grounds occupy five or six acres, and are beautifully laid out in lawn, adorned with stately shrubs and evergreens, walled fruit and kitchen gardens, orchard and meadow; excellent out-offices, gardener's cottage, stabling for four horses, and every requisite accommodation for an extensive household of position. The increasing facilities of access to this favourite locality, and the consequent demand for houses therein, point to the prospect of a more profitable development of the extensive area of this property in the future.

May be viewed by orders only, obtainable of the Auctioneers, and particulars of

Messrs. GROVER and HUMPHREYS, Solicitors, 4, King's Bench-walk, Temple; and of Messrs. EDWIN FOX and BOUSFIELD, 24, Gresham-street, Bank.

The Tyssen Amhurst Estate, within the parish of Hackney, Freehold Ground and Rent arising from estates at Clapton, Hackney, Dalston, and Kingsland, amounting to 21000l. per annum, with Reversions to the Rack Rentals (estimated at many thousands a year) on the expiration of existing leases, the majority of which have but very few years to run; also numerous capital Houses in possession (including the whole of Clapton-square), several taverns, shops, business premises, &c., being unusually the most important sale of this description of property which has occurred of late, and affording to capitalists, trustees, investors generally unusual scope for acquiring the most reliable and improving of all securities.

MESSRS. EDWIN FOX and BOUSFIELD have the honour to announce that they are favoured with instructions to prepare for SALE by AUCTION, at the MART, in Tokenhouse-yard, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 2, and following day, at 1 o'clock precisely, each day, a portion of the TYSSEN AMHURST ESTATE, within the parish of Hackney, in the county of Middlesex; comprising about 300 freehold houses, forming the whole of Clapton-square, and also several situated in Clapton-place, Dorset-terrace, Clarence-road, Clapton High-road, High-hill Ferry, Upper Clapton, Kingsland High-road, and streets leading therefrom, Dalston High-road, and streets adjoining, Tyssen-terrace, Dalston-lane, Dalston-rise, Navarino-place, Navarino-grove, Lee-bridge-road, &c.; including mansions with grounds and out-buildings, gentlemen's residences, detached and semi-detached villas, capital shops and business premises, first-class old-established taverns, ranges of stabling, wharf and dock workshops, cottages, &c. Part of the above properties are leased at peppercorn and ground rents amounting to about 10000l. per annum, for terms, which in many cases will shortly expire, and in most instances have only from 12 to 20 or from 20 to 40 years to run, while some extend to 80 or 90 years. The rack rentals probably approximate 10,0000l. per annum, and the reversions to the rack rentals render the interim security more reliable than any other class of investment, but in themselves form an important element of value. The houses in possession (being chiefly those in Clapton-square) produce, from a first rate tenancy, low rents at present amounting to about 11000l. per annum. More descriptive advertisements will shortly appear.

Particulars and plans are preparing, and when ready may be obtained of Messrs. CHESTON and SONS, Solicitors, 1, Great Winchester-street buildings, London, E.C.; or of CHESTER CHESTON, Esq., junior, surveyor to the estate, at the Manor-office, Hackney, and of Messrs. EDWIN FOX and BOUSFIELD, 24, Gresham-street, Bank, E.C., corner of Coleman-street.

CHAMBERS. — To BARRISTERS and OTHERS. — One room in Lincoln's-inn-fields, with use of clerk's office if required. Gas laid on. Furnished or unfurnished. — B. A., care of Mr. Thomas, Law Stationer, 43, Southampton-buildings.

OFFICES or RESIDENCES in CLIPTON CHAMBERS TO LET, at No. 2, Post's-corner, Westminster. — For particulars apply to the Hon. Mr. Justice on the premises, or MERRIMAN and Co., Solicitors, 23, Queen-street, City, E.C.

LINCOLN'S-INN CHAMBERS, No. 40, Chancery-lane. Suites of large, light, and convenient OFFICES TO LET, in this new fire-proof building, at rents from 40l. to 1000l. per annum. — Apply to the porters on the premises, or to Mr. F. CHIFFERLIE, Law Stationer, 33, Cursitor-street, Chancery-lane.

CHAMBERS TO LET opposite Lincoln's-inn Gateway (Chancery-lane). — A Barrister is desirous of LETTING one large ROOM (with use of Clerk's room, furnished or unfurnished). The chambers are quite new and lighted with gas. Rent to a desirable tenant would be very moderate. — Apply to H. W. C. REYNELL, Esq., 44, Chancery-lane, W.C.

CONTENTS—REPORTS.

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL. SPRAGUE v. THE EAST INDIA RAILWAY COMPANY— Petition for special leave to appeal—Questions turning on particular facts—Sale by sample.....	501
COURT OF APPEAL IN CHANCERY. WHITE v. SPRINGETT— Will—Construction—Gift to next of kin at a stated time exclusive of A.....	502
MATTHEW v. ELDERFIELD— Mortgage to permanent building society—Power of sale ...	503
Ex parte OSEYTON, re PRIOR— Bankruptcy Act 1861, sects. 192, 198—Registration of com- position-deed thereunder.....	505
ROLLS COURT. THE HUMBER IRON WORKS AND SHIPBUILDING COMPANY (LIMITED), ex parte THE WARRANT FINANCE COMPANY (LIMITED)— Winding-up—Debt—Principal and interest.....	508
OWYSE v. GELL— Real estate charged with debts—Wrongful possession.....	508
Re SMITH, KNIGHT, AND CO. (LIMITED)— Winding-up—Special examiner.....	510
V. C. STUART'S COURT. Re ADAMS'S SETTLED ESTATES— Entrenchment—Ecclesiastical leaseholds.....	511
HARRINGTON v. HARRINGTON— Landlord and tenant—Tenants' crops damaged by rabbits	512
FALLOWS v. SLATTERY— County Court—Costs of appeal—Costs of successful appel- lant disallowed.....	513
V. C. MALINS' COURT. STUART v. COCKERELL— Will—Construction—Remoteness.....	513
GIBBS v. EYDEN— Will—Construction—Specific devise.....	514
PAGE v. WARD— Production of documents—Privilege—Architect and solici- tor.....	518
REYES v. WILKINSON— Will—Construction—"Issue".....	518
COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH. Re E. EDWARD PELLEW PLENTY— Municipal corporation—Voting papers—Initial letters for christian name.....	521
Re E. TWISS— Consecrated ground—Faculty to desecrate—Ecclesiastical Court.....	522
DODD v. SLATER— Notice of action—Metropolis Local Management Acts Amendment Act 1857 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 104.....	525
HEDSTON v. THE MIDLAND RAILWAY COMPANY— Railway—Carriers—Personal luggage of passengers.....	526
COURT OF EXCHEQUER. CAINROSS (P. O.) v. WILLS— R.A. 1861—Composition-deed under sect. 192—Not made with all the creditors.....	529
PREMAS v. JEFFRIES— Money paid under mistake of fact—Action for money received.....	533
EXCHEQUER CHAMBER. PARKES v. PRESCOTT AND ELLIS— Libel—Publication in a newspaper of proceedings at a board of guard and.....	537
CROWN CASES RESERVED. Re E. HEAKIN— False pretences—Representation that goods were unen- umbered.....	544
COURT OF PROBATE. PARKES v. DURHAM— Administration granted on false allegation of intestacy ...	545
DIVORCE AND MATRIMONIAL CAUSES COURT. WORSLEY v. WORSLEY AND WIGNALL— Decree—Dissolution of marriage—Post-nuptial settlement	546
COURT OF BANKRUPTCY. Ex parte BROOKER, re HAMMOND— Principal and factor—Breach of trust by factor.....	547
LEADING ARTICLES, SUMMARIES, CORRESPONDENCE, &c.
TO CORRESPONDENTS.....	81
LEADING ARTICLES— Topics of the Week.....	81
City Jurisdictions.....	81
Law Courts in Liverpool and London.....	82
The Limited Authority of Agents.....	82
Retrospective Legislation—The Mercantile Law Amend- ment Act.....	83
The Tally System Defended.....	83
Prudent Preference by Insolvent Partner.....	84
Mutual Rights.....	84
SALUS AND DOINGS OF THE COURTS.....	84
ELECTION LAW— The Parliamentary Elections Act.....	87
Correspondence.....	88
LEGISLATION AND JURISPRUDENCE— Married Women's Property.....	88
ESTATE AND INVESTMENT JOURNAL— Stock and Share Markets.....	88
Public Companies.....	88
Reports of Sales.....	89
SOLICITORS' JOURNAL— Notes of New Decisions.....	89
Petition to Mr. GORDON.....	89
Rolls Court.....	90
List of Gentlemen applying to be Admitted as Attorneys.....	90
Creditors under Estates in Chancery.....	90
Creditors under 26 & 27 Vict. c. 35.....	91
Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the Bank of England.....	91
THE BENCH AND THE BAR— Dinner to Her Majesty's Judges.....	91
MAGISTRATE AND PARISH LAWYER— Notes of New Decisions.....	92
Landport Police Court.....	92
REAL PROPERTY LAWYER— Notes of New Decisions.....	93
Elementary Precedents in Conveyancing.....	93
JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL— Notes of New Decisions.....	94
NEWEASTLE LAW— Notes of New Decisions.....	94
LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL— Answers to the Final Examination Questions.....	95
COURT COURTS— Kingdon-on-Thames County Court.....	95
Farnsworth County Court.....	96
EXCHEQUER LAW— Notes of New Decisions.....	96
Liverpool Court of Bankruptcy.....	96
NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.....	97
ECCLESIASTICAL LAW— Answers.....	97
THE LAW LIBRARY— Guthrie's Savigny's Private International Law.....	97
LEGAL ORATORY— Chief Justice Lefroy.....	97
J. Foulton Smith, Esq.....	98
LAW SOCIETIES— Liverpool Law Students' Debating Society.....	98
PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS.....	98
THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS— The Summer Circuits.....	98
Cases List for Trinity Term 1869.....	98
THE GAZETTES.....	99
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.....	100

To Readers and Correspondents

ARTICLED CLERK.—Land Conveyancing Company.—We should say there is every objection.

SUBSCRIPTION TO THE LAW TIMES.

Paid in advance:—	£	s.	d.
One year	2	13	0
Half-a-year	1	7	6
On credit or for separate numbers:—
Single numbers (stamped)	0	1	1
" " (unstamped)	0	1	0
Double numbers (stamped)	0	1	7½
" " (unstamped)	0	1	6

NOTICE.

The Nineteenth Volume of the LAW TIMES REPORTS is now complete, and may be uniformly and strongly bound at the LAW TIMES Office, price 4s. 6d.

THE Law and the Lawyers.

THE three election petition Judges—Mr. Justice BLACKBURN, Mr. Justice WILLES, and Baron MARTIN—whose term of office will expire next Michaelmas Term, will probably be succeeded for the ensuing twelvemonth by Mr. Justice MELLOR, Mr. Justice BYLES, and Baron BRAMWELL; but, unless there should be a general election, their duties will be very light.

It is proposed to form a new Law Society for Hampshire and West Sussex. The objects are to be—1. To protect and sustain the interests and character of the legal profession and to promote fair and honourable practice. 2. To originate, watch, discuss, and, if necessary, petition in relation to measures affecting the legal profession, or producing changes in the law. 3. To found and maintain a law library. 4. To adopt such measures and do such acts as are incidental or conducive to the attainment of the above objects. The following gentlemen have been appointed to form a committee: Mr. C. B. Hellard, Mr. G. C. Stigant, Mr. H. Ford, Mr. C. J. Longcroft, Mr. G. P. Joyce, Mr. W. F. Burrell, Mr. S. S. Long, Mr. J. J. Webb, Mr. J. Soames, Mr. C. Cole, Mr. E. Goble, and Mr. Thomas Cousins, who is also the honorary secretary. We wish the society every success.

THE Irish Law Times has a claim to have its remarks on the subject of the Election Petition scale of costs transferred to our columns. "If," says our contemporary, "the LAW TIMES, when printing these costs, had, with its usual frankness, stated that they were reprinted from the Irish Law Times, and that we had printed them expressing 'our belief' that such would be the scale adopted by the master, the necessity of forcing that gentleman into print would have been obviated. As it is, we hardly consider the learned gentleman's letter satisfactory. He does not say that it is not the scale he intends to tax by, but he writes, 'that no scale whatever has been either issued or settled.' We never stated that the scale in question had been 'issued or settled,' we simply printed in good faith what, we were informed on excellent authority, would be the scale of costs allowed. How far wrong we have been is amply shown by the fact that although these costs are not 'issued or settled,' they are nevertheless in force in Ireland. We may perhaps ask the question—Will any scale be 'issued or settled' by Master Gordon? The 41st section of the Parliamentary Elections Act 1868 directs that 'the costs may be taxed in the prescribed manner, but according to the same principles as costs between attorney and client are taxed in a suit in the High Court of Chancery.' This direction to the officer is clear and precise, and we doubt very much whether Master Gordon can do better than use the scale already printed, and now in force here. The Act is an Imperial one, the procedure should be the same in both countries, the rules are identical in England and Ireland; why, then, should there be a difference in the scale of costs? We never knew a case in which assimilation was more imperatively demanded, or a better opportunity afforded to an English official for profiting by Irish precedent."

The report of the Land Transfer and Middlesex Registries Commission has not yet made its appearance. What is the cause of the delay? Is it that scarcely two or three of the learned commissioners can agree upon a recommendation in common? Then why do they not publish their opinions separately? Or is it, that whilst one or more of these learned persons, being fully engaged in public employments, refuses to work in term time, others, equally hard worked, not unreasonably decline to give up their vacations to the task? No meeting of the commission appears to have been held since the beginning of February, and though it was stated in the House of Commons before Easter that the report was in draft, nothing has since been heard of it. Whilst this state of things lasts, of course no intending applicant can be advised to resort to the Land Transfer Office, all the proceedings are at a standstill, and an important public duty remains undischarged by the commissioners.

THE Solicitors' Benevolent Association will have its annual dinner on Wednesday, the 9th June, under the presidency of the Lord Justice SELWYN. There is no society that better deserves the cordial support of the Profession. It is designed to assist that very class to whom timely benevolence is most useful, the families of solicitors who have fallen into want through death, sickness, or lack of employment, the latter cause being, we have too much reason to fear, a growing one. To the wife and the children who cannot work, and are unaccustomed to beg, the association comes, and with considerate care relieves the distress, and lets not its left hand know what its right hand doeth, for strict privacy is the rule of its conduct. We trust that all who can afford to help it in their hours of prosperity will do so to the utmost of their ability. Even the most prosperous of us cannot say what adversity may not be in store for him. The bread cast on the waters now may come back to ourselves after many days.

CITY JURISDICTIONS.

It will be a matter much to be regretted if the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench in Leveson v. The Queen be allowed to stand without further discussion. As the law is now laid down, it is uncertain whether the presence of an alderman at the trial of a prisoner is necessary or not, although the charters of the City make the aldermen justices of the peace, as well as justices of Oyer and Terminer, and those charters are expressly confirmed by statute. That the aldermen have exercised the powers of justices of Oyer and Terminer in a more decided manner than by merely passively sitting beside the Judge, is proved by the case of Elizabeth Canning, reported in Howell's State Trials, and we believe there are many other instances on record. That it may seem inconvenient that two aldermen should have power to try a prisoner for murder is no real argument, except against the existence of the statute, and cannot be used for the purposes of construction. The judgment is therefore based on a presumed analogy between the practice at assizes and the former practice of the Old Bailey. Now, as regards the ancient practice of the Old Bailey, the aldermen sat by virtue of their chartered rights, and, although they were, in fact, for the most part traders, there was nothing to prevent their being men of law and otherwise duly qualified to act as Judges. But the charter must be taken to be a concession to popular rights; and the presence of the aldermen at the trial of prisoners, and their right to try as a privilege both of the citizen and the prisoner of a nature similar to the right to be tried by a jury from the vicinage. No one will dispute that the right to be tried by a jury is a substantial privilege, which belongs to every subject of this kingdom, and so, too, is the right to be tried by two aldermen the privilege of the citizens of London.

In Canning's case the aldermen interposed to save the prisoner from the extreme sentence about to be passed by the Judge, and it is to be presumed that in every case where an alderman is associated with the Judge he will interpose on the side of mercy. The statute says most clearly that the aldermen shall be Judges, and gives power in equally clear terms to two or more. In police matters an express power is given by statute to one alderman to act as two justices, and if the law is allowed to stand as now laid down, one alderman, in heavier criminal cases, may, without any express power given by statute, act as a Judge of Oyer and Terminer, and exercise the jurisdiction given by the statute to two or more. The doctrine of constructive presence is even more dangerous, seeing that, if applied to justices of the peace, it will virtually give to one justice the power of two or more, and overrule what has been settled law for centuries. It is not difficult to see that if a prisoner were tried by one alderman, the objection that two ought to have been present would come with extreme force, and yet in Leverson's case the prisoner was in fact tried by a commissioner who was not necessarily a man of law any more than an alderman; for there is no law or custom of London which requires that the Judge of the Sheriffs' Court should be a barrister or even an attorney. It is not singular that the prejudices of a Judge of the Queen's Bench should be shocked at the idea of interference by an alderman of London, and yet the early records of the country show numerous instances of trials presided over by laymen, associated with men of law, in all of which the laymen took the most prominent part, and the lawyer was merely aidant. The City of London is the great stronghold of the people, and until late years the Corporation have been the great exponents of popular rights. The aldermen of the present day, however, bear but little resemblance to the men who obtained the privileges now secured by statute, although if the municipal boundaries of London were enlarged to cover the real metropolis, there is no reason why the Corporation of London should not in all respects be worthy of the great men by whom its power was built up and consolidated.

LAW COURTS IN LIVERPOOL AND LONDON.

THAT very intelligent body of professional gentlemen, the Liverpool Law Society, has given us its views on the question of the site for the new Law Courts, and produced arguments from the condition of things in their own town. It is urged as a matter of the highest importance that the offices of the attorneys should be as near the courts as possible, the very cogent argument being used that in all similar cases centralisation is the first object. The distance between an office and the court has to be travelled, not once, but many times in the day. This journeying to and fro is avoided by the stockbrokers. The Liverpool Exchange, we are told, is closely surrounded on all sides by the offices of merchants and brokers, and if of two offices, equally eligible in other respects, one be twenty and the other fifty yards from the exchange, the rental of the one will greatly exceed that of the other. And we are further informed that "nearly the same eagerness for concentration which exists among the mercantile classes of Liverpool exists among the lawyers there, and the tendency of the last few years both in mercantile and legal circles has been towards still further concentration. Probably in few large towns are the attorneys' offices so close together as in Liverpool. Out of 256 attorneys whose names are in this year's Law List as practising in Liverpool, the offices of 142 are situate within a space of less than ten acres, i.e., in the block of land bounded by Castle-street, Lord-street, North John-street, and Dale-street, including both sides of those streets." And the conclusion is that clients are greatly benefited by this arrangement, since personal interviews between the attorneys can be much more easily resorted to, and business is done far more speedily and satisfactorily than would be the case if the usual channels of communication were by means of letters or by clerks. Moreover, these personal interviews frequently simplify legal proceedings, and sometimes render the institution of them unnecessary. As further evidence of the importance which is attached to having the offices of the courts close to the attorneys' offices, we are referred to the anxiety which the Profession has lately evinced that the office of the registrar of the Passage Court may be retained at the Town Hall, instead of being removed some 200 yards into Dale-street, and that the office of the registrar of the Palatine Chancery Court may be brought to the Town Hall from South John-street, and to the fact that the Treasury is trying to find a site for the County Court in the immediate neighbourhood of Castle-street for the very same reason. And the result of this concentration is, that the attorneys themselves are able to attend appointments in the law offices, which they would have to leave to their clerks if the distance were greater. In London it is anticipated the result will be the same; the work will be done by more competent persons, and, therefore, suitors and the public will gain by this at least as much as the lawyers.

Another person to be considered is the country attorney. Of him and his interests the Liverpool society remark that when called up to London to attend a trial at the sittings at Westminster or Guildhall, he would often, while waiting for his cause to come on, be glad to attend to some other legal business, were he not afraid to go a great distance from the court lest he should be out of reach when wanted, and that it is obvious, therefore, that the more completely in the centre of the legal district of London the New Courts and offices are, the more business can be dispatched by the country practitioner in London in a given time, and the public must necessarily benefit by this as well as the Profession.

The society comes to a conclusion strongly in favour of the Carey-street site on the following grounds:

1. Because the Carey-street site is in the very heart of legal London, while the Government site is at the southern extremity thereof, and is far removed from all the Inns of Court and attorneys' chambers, except the Temple and Essex-street.
2. Because the close concentration of barristers and attorneys round the new law courts and offices will tend, as shown above, to facilitate the administration of justice and the transaction of legal business; and such concentration will be best attained by adopting the Carey-street site, which is already surrounded by the chambers of barristers and attorneys, while only two sides of the Government site, viz., the north and east, are available at all for these purposes—the south and west sides being shut in by the river and Somerset House, and even on the north side the existing houses must be diverted from their present uses, and many of them doubtless rebuilt, before they can be made available for purposes of the law.
3. Because on the Carey-street site the courts and offices about to be erected can be subsequently extended, if necessary, much more easily than on the Government site.
4. Because the Carey-street site is already acquired and ready for building on and the plans approved, and the Government site is for the most part covered with houses which will have to be bought at an uncertain cost, and at more or less delay.

Our country readers who are not acquainted with the localities of the two sites wish us to give them some notion of them by means of a map. There being difficulties in the way of doing this, we may state that Fleet-street and the Strand run in one continuous length from east to west, Temple-bar standing about midway. On the right hand side of the thoroughfare, and abutting on Temple-bar, is the Carey-street site of six acres of cleared ground. If you look towards the north, New-inn and Clement's-inn are on the left, Carey-street forms the northern boundary of the site, beyond which lie Lincoln's-inn and Lincoln's-inn-fields. On the right lies Chancery-lane. The Temples lie on the southern side of the thoroughfare, and might easily be made to communicate with the courts by a subterranean passage.

The Government site, known as the Howard-street site, on the other hand, lies on the left of the Strand as you look from east to west. To the south it faces and borders on the Thames, between which and the courts runs the Embankment, and the not yet completed Metropolitan District Railway. The eastern side may be called the legal side, for it is the only portion of the site which borders on any locality occupied entirely by lawyers. That side abuts upon Essex-street, beyond which, to the east, lie the Temples inhabited principally by common law barristers. To the north runs Howard-street, which is reached from the Strand by three other streets, namely, Surrey-street, Norfolk-street, and Arundel-street. In the matter of approach, therefore, from that great artery of London, the Strand, the Howard-street site is not to be compared with its rival, the Carey-street site. And there is this important fact as regards the practical advantages of the two sites that the London business of above 5000 country solicitors is transacted immediately north, east, and west of the Carey-street, or Parliamentary site, whilst the London business of not more than 700 is transacted in the immediate neighbourhood of the new Government site.

There are 123 barristers in Parliament, and it should be in a great measure the fault of the Profession, led as it is by Sir ROUNDELL PALMER, if it does not obtain the site, upon which, almost to a man, it has set its heart, the old Parliamentary site in Carey-street.

THE LIMITED AUTHORITY OF AGENTS.

A DECISION given in the Queen's Bench last Monday in the case of Hartmann v. Osbeck has created some consternation in the City. The action was brought to enforce payment of a bill of exchange which had been properly left for acceptance at the office of the person upon whom it was drawn, and there accepted "per procuration" by his clerk, who at once entered it in his employer's bill-book. This was in August, and the bill did not fall due until December, when payment was refused on the ground that the clerk had no authority, although it was shown that the employer was made aware in September of the fact of the acceptance, and that he then took no steps to disclaim his liability. The plea, however, was admitted by the court, who gave judgment for the defendant.

It has been mentioned by a correspondent of the Times that this is very dangerous, inasmuch as it is a common practice in the City to authorise the acceptance of bills, per procuration. The only point is as to the reasonableness or unreasonableness of special authority, and who ought to suffer supposing that special authority is transgressed. The courts have been disposed to put it upon persons dealing with agents having a limited authority to make every necessary inquiry. In the case of Attwood v. Mannings, 7 B. & C. 278, the agent was authorised to accept "as occasion shall require." The court said, "It would be dangerous to hold that the plaintiff in this case was not bound to inquire into the propriety of accepting. He might easily have done so by calling for the letter of advice; and I think he was bound to do so." Mr. Justice Holroyd in the same case said, "The powers in question did not authorise this acceptance; the word procuration gave due notice to the plaintiffs, and they were bound to ascertain before they took the bill that the acceptance was agreeable to the authority given."

The principle upon which this doctrine is based is pointed out more clearly in Withington v. Herring, 5 Bing. 442, where a special power was given to raise money. Mr. Justice Gaselee, said, "I presume that persons in the situation of the plaintiff would look at the power before they advanced money, and it would be prejudicial to mercantile interests to restrain a power where the object in view requires an extensive authority." So it would be prejudicial to mercantile interests to restrain the accepting of bills per procuration, simply because persons who deal with an agent will not find out the nature of his authority before dealing with him.

We can see no hardship or injustice to anyone in this state of things. It is very different to a somewhat analogous position regarding the authority given to a factor, and which it has been held a principal may revoke without giving notice to persons accustomed to deal with the factor. The injustice of holding bonâ fide pledgees responsible for the advance of money by them upon goods which the factor pledged after his authority has been secretly revoked, was carefully pointed out by Mr. Justice Willes, in Fuentes v. Montis, 18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 25, which case was recently affirmed in error.

The question of ratification of an act done in excess of authority is not devoid of importance, but in our view the Court of Queen's Bench correctly decided that the fact that the principal knew that the bill had been accepted by his clerk could have no effect upon the original illegality of the acceptance, that being contrary to the clerk's authority. The City correspondent before referred to is apparently quite unconscious that the law as to procuration is not a law made yesterday, for he says: "Here is a man absenting himself from his business, and leaving it in charge of another, whom he trusts, declared to be justified in repudiating the liability which the trustee has incurred on his behalf. What becomes of the doctrine 'Qui facit per alium facit per se'?" The writer clearly shuts his eyes to the meaning of "per procuration." Mr. Osbeck did not authorise the clerk to incur the liability on his behalf. His authority to him amounted to something short of accepting this bill; and, as he did not do the act by another he did not do it by himself, and the maxim fails in its application.

The same correspondent raises the general question very widely. He says, "Practically it is a matter of impossibility to ascertain in every case whether a party signing by procuration actually does hold the power. If he, being intrusted by his employer, exceeds his trust, is it not more correct that the employer who trusted him should suffer than the party who did not trust him, but trusted the employer—did not put confidence in his individual signature, but in the per proc.?" The difficulty of getting at the authority in each case we fully recognise. This is a matter for commercial men. It is for them to say on which side lies the balance of convenience—whether it is better to be able to give a limited authority to an agent, and thus create the necessity that persons dealing with the agent should ascertain his authority or risk their money, or whether procuration should be abolished. The remark about putting confidence in the per proc. in the last passage quoted is peculiar, and we should certainly be called ungentlemanly if we applied the appropriate epithet to a merchant who takes an authority to be unlimited, which on the face of the very document itself is declared to be limited.

For our part we think the practice a convenient one, and the decision of the Court of Queen's Bench is certainly in strict accordance with the law as previously established.

RETROSPECTIVE LEGISLATION — THE MERCANTILE LAW AMENDMENT ACT.

It is remarkable that several cases should have arisen with reference to Statutes of Limitation on the question whether such statutes were retrospective or only prospective; and Parliament having left its intention ambiguous, it is not surprising that Judges should have differed concerning the effect of Acts containing no definite expression of intention.

An Act illustrating the importance of such an intention being expressed is the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, the 10th and 14th sections of which have caused the litigation to which it is our present intention to refer. The 10th section says that no person shall have a longer time for prosecuting his suit than was allowed by the previous Acts of James, Anne, Will. 4., and Victoria, by reason only of such person being at the time when such suit accrued beyond the seas, or by reason of such person being imprisoned at the time the cause of action or suit accrued. Now did that section refer to actions brought on transactions anterior to the passing of the Act? That this is still a matter of importance is shown by the case of Pardo v. Bingham, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 464, in which Lord Chancellor Lord Hatherley came to the conclusion that the intention of the Legislature was to prevent actions, whether on past or future transactions, after the lapse of a certain period from the accruing of the cause.

This decision is in accordance with that in the case of Cornill v. Hudson, 30 L. T. Rep. 130; 8 Ell. & B. 429, a decision of the Queen's Bench, which did not go to error, and which must henceforth be regarded as sound law. That it has not been so regarded up to the present time will appear from the fact that in a recent text-book on the Statutes of Limitation (by Messrs. Darby and Bosanquet), at p. 38, it is said: "But the authority of Cornill v. Hudson may be thought to be somewhat shaken by the decision of the Exchequer Chamber with reference to the 14th section of the same statute, in the case of Jackson v. Woolley." This observation raises a point which the Lord Chancellor refers to in his judgment in Pardo v. Bingham, namely, whether there is an inconsistency in holding the 14th section to operate prospectively only, whereas the 10th is to be allowed to operate retrospectively?

There is in the consideration of this matter the preliminary difficulty of the general rule of law laid down by Coke, and adopted in Moon v. Durdan, 2 Ex. 22, that except there be a clear indication either from the subject-matter or the wording of a statute, that statute is not to have a retrospective operation. We have quoted the operative portion of the 10th section. The 14th enacts that "when there shall be two or more co-contractors or co-debtors, whether bound or liable jointly only or jointly and severally, or executors or administrators of any contractor, no such co-contractor or co-debtor, executor or administrator, shall lose the benefit of the said enactments, or any of them, so as to be chargeable in respect or by reason only of payment of any principal, interest, or other money, by any other or others of such co-contractors or co-debtors, executors or administrators." We will see upon what ground this section has been held prospective only whilst the 10th has been held retrospective.

It is to be observed that the decision as to the character of the 14th section was not arrived at without dissension among the Courts.

The first decision was that of Vice-Chancellor Kindersley in favour of the retrospective operation of the 14th section. His Honour said (Thompson v. Waithman, 4 Drew. 631): "Now it appears to me to be the clear intention of the statute that notwithstanding any payment by a co-contractor, the executor of the deceased contractor is to have the benefit of the 3rd section of the statute of James. The language of the Act of the Queen is generally, no doubt, future in its language in reference to the payment of interest by a co-contractor." Therefore, as to one part of the rule recognised in Moon v. Durdan, namely, the wording of the statute, the Vice-Chancellor ought to have decided against the retrospective operation of the section. But as to the matter he said: "The effect of the statute is simply that where there are co-contractors, the executor of one of them shall not lose the benefit of the enactment of the former statute, so as to be chargeable by reason of any payment made by another co-contractor."

Then Jackson v. Woolley, 8 Ell. & B. 778, was decided in the Queen's Bench in the same way, and in accordance with the decision of the Vice-Chancellor in Thompson v. Waithman, but when taken to the Exchequer Chamber the result was that these authorities were overruled. Mr. Justice Williams, in delivering judgment, said that he could not coincide with the Vice-Chancellor in his interpretation of the statute. He said: "He seems to have decided that although all the other sections were from their language necessarily prospective, yet sect. 14 is retrospective because there is nothing future in the language of that section as to payments by co-contractors. But, in coming to such a conclusion, he does not seem to have regarded Lord Coke's well known canon, Nova constitutio futuris formam imponere debet non præteritis. This is the ordinary rule as to the interpretation of all legislative enactments, and is to be observed unless there is something in the terms of a particular enactment to prevent its operation."

These were the decisions on the 14th section. Intermediate between the cases of Thompson v. Waithman and Jackson v. Woolley, a case was decided on the 10th section, namely, Cornill v. Hudson, 8 Ell. & B. 429, in which the decision of Vice-Chancellor Kindersley was recognised (by Erle, J.) as directly analogous. Lord Campbell in delivering judgment held that this section had no retrospective effect on actions already commenced, but had such effect as regarded rights of action accrued, but in respect of which no proceedings had been instituted. His Lordship's words are these: "I am of opinion that the 10th section prevents any action being commenced after the period has elapsed within which, if the prisoner had been at large he must have sued. This is the grammatical construction of the section, as it appears to me, that after the day on which the statute receives the Royal assent, no person who shall be entitled to any action, with respect to which the limitation is fixed by the statutes mentioned, shall be entitled to any time within which to commence the action, beyond the period fixed by those statutes, by reason only of his having been imprisoned when the cause of action accrued. There is no retrospective operation on actions already commenced. We must here consider the plaintiff, in the contemplation of the enactment, as one who should be entitled to the action, and, commencing it after the Act came into operation, he clearly is within the scope of the enactment according to its grammatical and natural construction. The cases cited merely show that we are to find out the intentions of the Legislature in each particular Act; that is all which the decisions establish; and by that rule I construe the stat. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, sect. 10. The intention was to prevent actions, thereafter to be brought whether on past or future transactions. Does that tend to injustice? I see none. It only carries out what was probably the intention of the Legislature; namely, that persons should not, by merely remaining abroad, now that travelling is so easy, and directions are so readily transmitted, be enabled indefinitely to prolong the time within which they may commence their actions. The period might extend to fifty years."

It was in accordance with this view that Lord Hatherley upheld Cornill v. Hudson, and he spoke of the case before him, Pardo v. Bingham, as a most remarkable instance of what the effect would have been had he held, contrary to Cornill v. Hudson, that the Act was not to be retrospective as regarded persons residing abroad. "Here is a gentleman," said the Lord-Chancellor, "residing in Venezuela, who had a debtor on the same spot with him, where he might have sued him for years—that is, in Venezuela—who himself has appropriated a portion of this very fund, which came to this gentleman in a proceeding which has taken place in this court. The trustees had paid the money into court, and some part had been paid out to this gentleman in respect of his debts. He has had every facility of suing extended in his case, not merely theoretically, as Lord Campbell puts it, with reference to the facilities of communication by the expeditious means of travelling, and so on, according to his construction of the Act of Parliament, but actually. This gentleman having left in 1847, in 1861 came over and claimed the right to institute his action. Of course that period so extended to 1861 might have been extended, if this gentleman's life was prolonged, some ten or twenty years further."

It is satisfactory that the law should be thus established, but the litigation which we have noticed only proves how much more efficient legislation would be were it to say exactly what it means. We must take leave to express surprise that, with over one hundred legal gentlemen having seats in the House, Parliament should so frequently fail to express itself accurately.

THE TALLY SYSTEM DEFENDED.

THE Judge of the Merthyr County Court has issued, in a pamphlet form, a judgment delivered by him upon the well-ventilated subject of a husband's liability for a debt contracted by his wife. To that judgment he appends a note, commencing thus: "Since the establishment of County Courts the business of tallymen has increased. Why? Because security in the giving of credit has increased."

The argument contained in this note is based on an essay by Mr. ELLIOTT, entitled "Credit, the Life of Commerce," wherein that writer contends that "although it should be at an advanced price, it is much better that the wife of a mechanic who earns thirty shillings per week should get a shawl or a cloak upon credit, which must be paid for by instalments of three shillings per week, than that she should wait until she has ready money in her hand," a time which he says will never come, because the weekly wages will be dissipated if not bound by a pre-contract. "The humble class of shopkeepers called tallymen," he observes, "are not altogether so useless or so mischievous as they may appear to be. They charge a high price for their goods; but they charge in addition to the ordinary profits of the stock, a commission for securing punctuality and abstinence among the great mass of their customers. Those who have the capacity to save money in their own pockets, get, of course, the advantage; they buy their cloak for twenty shillings instead of twenty-four; their own virtue puts four shillings back into their own pocket, while those who have not the virtue, pay four shillings to him who has the virtue, and uses it in their behalf, and lets them have a cloak, which they would never have had if dependent entirely upon themselves."

We confess that this is to us entirely new, and we should be very surprised to hear that any County Court Judge had decided that compelling another to virtuous courses by the moral influence of the familiar County Court process in futuro was a good consideration for a promise to pay something in excess of the proper price of goods. And we approach the ridiculous if we think of a tallyman possessing in himself the accumulated virtue which his customers ought to have, and retailing it to them at a price proportioned to the goods they want. Our argument would rather be that those who have not the virtue to save their money to buy what they want had better go without it. And there is only one argument against this view, and that is, as stated in this note, that though the business of tallymen has increased since the establishment of the County Courts in 1847, the number of debtors imprisoned has not increased. This may be regarded as showing that the class of persons whom tradesmen would not trust before the institution of the County Courts is a more honourable class than those to whom credit had been previously given, only, in many cases, to be abused. But the writer to whom we are referring has not so high an estimate of their virtues that he thinks it "needless that persons should be instructed respecting the course they may honourably pursue when a yielding temptation may cause them to be involved in debts, through which they may become hopelessly insolvent." This is the weak point of the tally system. The tallyman tempts the poor, and the County Court has not the opportunity of instructing them not to yield to temptation until the mischief has been done. On this ground we think the system should be condemned.

FRAUDULENT PREFERENCE BY INSOLVENT PARTNER.

A CASE was last week reported from the Court of Common Pleas which carries the doctrine of fraudulent preference somewhat farther than it has been carried before. That case was Heilbut and others v. Nevill, at p. 490, and the facts were these. One Spill was in partnership with a man named Briggs, and Spill, being in an insolvent condition as regarded his separate creditors, indorsed two bills of exchange which were the property of the partnership to a creditor of his own, who was the defendant in the action, and knew that the bills were partnership property, and that they had been indorsed without the knowledge of Briggs. Spill became bankrupt and his assignees joined with Briggs in an action of trover against the creditor whom they alleged had been fraudulently preferred, to recover damages for the conversion of the bills. At the trial the plaintiffs were nonsuited on the ground that the solvent partner and the assignees of the bankrupt partner could not sue jointly.

It is clear, as observed by the court, that before the bankruptcy of Spill he and his partner could not have sued jointly in such an action as this. Spill would have been estopped as regarded his share in the bill and Briggs would have been without a remedy, as a bill cannot be split, so as to give a separate action to separate parties. But then the assignees of Spill could have no larger rights than he himself had. The real question, therefore, was whether the fact of the fraudulent preference removed the difficulties which otherwise existed. "The effect of the bankruptcy," said Willes, J., "is that the assignees of Spill's creditors are entitled to Spill's share of the partnership property, and the general rule for distributing joint and separate property would apply. And under such circumstances as these I apprehend the law of fraudulent preference would apply to that share in the bills which is claimed by the assignees. That law is, that when an intention to prefer a particular creditor is established, as in this case it is admitted Spill preferred Nevill, the assignees are entitled to say the transaction shall be void. Here the assignees have said the indorsement of these bills shall be void, that is, the transaction is to be treated as if it never took place. This defeats the estoppel, to which, if Spill had been suing, he would have been exposed. There can, therefore, be no estoppel against the bankrupt, which would be binding upon the assignees if the creditor was aware of fraud, and the assignees are substituted for Spill in the tenancy in common of the bills."

And M. Smith, J., said "there was a fraud upon Briggs, because of the appropriation by Spill of partnership property to his private debts; and there was a fraud upon the body of creditors, because of the preference of one of them. The defendant might have held the bills if he had not known of the fraud, but as he was aware of it, he had not, at the moment he took them, any equitable right in the bills. No action founded on the property could be brought by Briggs alone; it may be, however, as was thrown out in the course of the argument, that an action by Briggs for conspiracy and fraud may have lain against Spill and Nevill. When Spill became bankrupt the assignees might take advantage of the fraudulent preference, and disaffirm the transaction; they might treat the act of Spill as void, and then the state of the title to the bills would be altered; the assignees would represent Spill, and Briggs would be remitted to his right of joint action with them. The title of the assignees and Briggs is that of tenants in common, and the property in the bills did not pass."

No previous case, as already observed, goes as far as this. In the case of Thomson v. Frere, 10 East, 418, two of three partners affecting, but without authority, to bind the firm, assigned a debt due to them from a correspondent abroad, without his privity, to a creditor at home, and afterwards, by direction of such correspondent, drew a bill of exchange in the name of the firm upon his agent here, which was accepted, payable to their own order for the amount of the debt; and then the two partners, having in the meanwhile committed acts of bankruptcy, indorsed such bill to the creditors of the firm in part satisfaction of his debt; and afterwards separate commissions were sued out against the two partners, who were declared bankrupts, and their effects assigned, the other partner being all the time abroad. It was held, first, that by such indorsement of the bill by the two, after acts of bankruptcy committed by them, though before the commission issued, nothing passed to the creditor, on the ground that the bankrupt partners had by relation ceased at the time of such indorsement to have any control over the joint stock as partners, and, therefore, could not bind either the property of their assignees or their solvent partner. And it was held, secondly, that the solvent partner might join with the assignees of the other two in maintaining an action for money had and received, to recover back from the creditor the amount of the bill received by him from the acceptor. The case of Burt v. Moul is to a similar purport as to the joinder of plaintiffs.

Jones v. Yates, 9 B. & C. 532, would at first sight appear to militate against the above view, but there it was held that there was no fraudulent preference. The court then drew the distinction. "The defrauded party," they say, "may perhaps have a remedy in equity, by a suit in his own name against his partner and the person with whom the fraud was committed. Such a suit is free from the inconsistency of a party suing on the ground of his own misconduct. There is a great difference between this case and that of an action brought against two or more partners on a bill of exchange fraudulently made or accepted by one partner in the name of the others, and delivered by such partner to a plaintiff in discharge of his own private debt." The party participating in the fraud could not sue on the bill, nor could he set up a defence against the parties defrauded. And as to the right of the assignees, Lord Tenterden says: "The right of the assignees to sue in this case was said to be analogous to the rights of assignees to sue for and recover back property voluntarily given by a bankrupt to a particular creditor, in contemplation of his bankruptcy, in favour of such creditor and in preference to him, in which case the bankrupt could not have sued, if no commission had issued, yet the assignees are allowed to do so."

Although there is no authority for the length the court has gone in Heilbut v. Nevill, the decision is one which is thoroughly consistent with legal principles and every sense of justice.

MANORIAL RIGHTS.

THERE seems to be some prospect that the great fight which went on vigorously between the late Lord of the Manor of Hampstead and the various persons claiming rights upon his heath, will be compromised with the new Lord by the creation of a park. If this expectation be realised, the probability is that the very important questions affecting manorial rights which are raised in the suit of Hoare v. Wilson will not be decided. That this is very greatly to be regretted, after the enormous expense which has been incurred, everyone must admit, and the more readily so when it is perceived that cases are almost every day arising in which the question what rights Lords of Manors can claim has to be considered.

In the last number of our reports, two cases appear affecting the rights of lords of manors. One arose in the Court of Referees in Parliament, and there a lessee of the lord of a manor to whom had been leased certain rights of shooting and a right to dig minerals, claimed, and was allowed, a locus standi as a petitioner against a water bill, on the ground that his manorial rights would be injuriously affected, and his property injured by diversion of streams, and endangered by the possible overflow or bursting of certain reservoirs. It was incidentally mentioned in the course of this case that a commoner could not have such a locus standi, being possessed of a mere easement and having no interest in the soil. Now, we think, this is a point which ought not to be so easily conceded. A right of common cannot be said to be an easement, it being a right to take some part of any natural product of the land of another. Indeed, in many instances, a commoner may be said to be as much an owner of common land as a person who is lessee of the manorial rights. There is a dispute as to whether all the tenants of a manor have not a common law right to common on the waste. If they have, and can establish a claim to exercise the usual commonable right, are they not, to the extent of their requirements, owners of the turf, the pasture, the loam, the gravel, and the sand? And if their property in these matters were threatened, should not they be allowed to protect it to the same, and even a farther, extent than the lessee of the manorial rights? However, the claim is hardly likely to be made, as the lord in every instance will probably take care that that which every lord now hopes to gain eventually is duly protected.

The other case, that of Knight v. King, at p. 494, brought into question a custom claimed by inhabitants within a manor, having a tenement within the manor, to have common of pasture for all their horses and commonable cattle levant and couchant upon the said tenements respectively, from the 15th May until Candlemas in each year. Undoubtedly a claim of common by a mere inhabitant must be prescribed for, but we observe that Baron Bramwell makes the interlocutory observation, "How could a tenant of a cottage have a right of common for cattle levant and couchant?" This is a very important point, and we think that the answer to be given should be one framed with considerable care. It really involves the question whether a right which diminishes the rights of the lord can be lost by altering the purpose for which the land is used. For a considerable period every cottage was bound to have four acres of land annexed to it, and it has always been assumed by the courts that the least cottage had a yard or curtilage attached to it. Now it was held in Tyringham's case, 4 Rep. 37, that a man did not lose his common appendant, which strictly is confined to arable land, because he built a house on it, or converted part of it into pasture or meadow. So may it not be said, in the case of cottages to which a curtilage or yard must once have attached, that the rights which such attachment conferred on the tenant remain, although he may have altered the nature of his premises?

It may be replied to this that a tenant having no ground or premises attached to his cottage upon which cattle can be accommodated could not exercise the right, and that it would be lost by disuse. The right is one which cannot be let to a stranger; and if disuse is to extinguish the right there could be no help for it. The authorities, we regret to say, are in favour of disuse working an extinguishment.

This doctrine is most objectionable, for the nature of things necessarily changes with time, and a tenant may wish to change his user of the waste. The waste was originally given him for his own purposes, and the substitution of an equivalent purpose for a purpose abandoned ought to be held sufficient to bar the appropriation of the land by the Lord. Unless the doctrine is modified, it is very clear that there will soon be very little common land in Great Britain.

SAYINGS AND DOINGS OF THE COURTS

[CONTRIBUTED BY THE REPORTERS OF THE SEVERAL COURTS.]

ROLLS COURT.

Since the beginning of Term the following cases have occurred worthy of notice:

Harrington v. The Milwall Ironworks Company was a suit instituted by the plaintiff, who was the owner of a portion of the ship Scotia, and was entitled to a charge on the remaining portion of the ship, to compel the company to procure an entry on their register of the discharge of a certain mortgage on the ship which had been paid off. The circumstances of the case were as follows: On the 22nd Jan. 1866 a Mr. Lumley, who was then the manager of the company and the owner of 48.64ths of the ship Scotia, mortgaged his shares in the ship to the company to secure the payment of 300l. The mortgage was registered in the names of Messrs. O'Beirne and David Ward Chapman, as trustees for the company. Soon afterwards Lumley mortgaged his shares in the ship to a Mr. Ardall to secure the payment of 3000l., which was due to Ardall on a previous account. In March 1866 the company, on paying Lumley his salary, which was then due, deducted 300l., the amount of their mortgage, from his salary, and paid him the balance. The company, however, omitted to enter the discharge of the mortgage on their register in compliance with the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act. In the following month Ardall sold his charge of 3000l. to the plaintiff for 450l. The plaintiff subsequently acquired the remaining 16.64ths of the ship, and called upon the trustees for the company to release the first charge and procure the entry of the discharge on the register. Mr. O'Beirne was willing to do so, but Mr. David Ward Chapman, who was out of the jurisdiction of the court, refused to do so, and the present suit was accordingly instituted. His Lordship said that the present suit had been occasioned solely by Mr. Chapman's refusal to concur with his co-trustee in the release of the mortgage for 300l. The plaintiff's only object was to get the discharge entered on the register, and this would have been done at once if Mr. Chapman had done what the company requested him to do, and what Mr. O'Beirne actually did—namely, execute the necessary instrument for the purpose. There must be a decree that the company and their trustees should do what was necessary to enable the discharge to be entered on the register, but there would be no costs on either side, as the plaintiff did not ask for costs against Mr. Chapman, and therefore Chapman could not be directed to pay any costs, but he could not, on the other hand, be allowed his costs, as it was his ill-advised obstinacy which had occasioned the suit.

In Jervis v. Allen, Mr. Batten moved for leave to appeal from a decision of his Lordship's in chambers to the Lords Justices. His Lordship stated the motion, and said that he had seen it printed in one of the newspapers that there was a practice in his chambers that appeals should go from the chief clerk direct to the Lords Justices. He wished it to be known that there was no such practice, and that he should on no account allow it to be done. The misconception had probably arisen from the fact that when a matter had been argued before himself in chambers he was in the habit of allowing the appeal to go direct from himself in chambers to the Lords Justices, without rehearing the matter in court.

In Boscomb v. Beckwith was a suit instituted by a vendor and his mortgagees for the specific performance of a contract entered into by the defendant in May 1867, for the purchase of a house and grounds situate at Chislehurst. The premises in question were part of the Manor House estate, which was put up for sale by auction in lots in May 1867; the lot purchased by the defendant comprised the Manor House, and the rest of the estate was divided into building lots. The contract was signed, and after many requisitions the title was accepted, the only question now in dispute between the parties being the construction of one of the conditions of sale, which contained certain restrictions as to building, it being provided, amongst other things, that no public-house should be erected on the estate. The vendor contended that this restriction affected only the lots comprised in the sale, but the defendant contended that it extended to the whole of the vendor's property, and in particular to a plot of land at the corner of the Croydon-road (where it is met by another road) which belonged to the vendor but was not comprised in the sale. The vendor intended to build a public-house on this plot of land, and as it was within 120 yards of the lot purchased by the defendant, his purchase would be much depreciated in value by the erection of the public-house. The defendant consequently refused to complete the purchase, whereupon the plaintiffs filed their bill for specific performance. On behalf of the defendant it was argued that this was a case of mistake, the plan annexed to the conditions of sale did not show that the plot of land in dispute belonged to the vendor, and if the purchaser had known that it belonged to him, and that it was his intention to erect a public-house on it, he would not have entered into the contract, to enforce which this suit was instituted; the purchaser ought, therefore, it was submitted, to be relieved from his contract, as it was entered into under mistake. This case was heard towards the end of last term, and it was now in the paper for judgment. His Lordship, after stating the facts of the case, said that on looking at the plan annexed to the conditions of sale, it appeared that the vendor's whole property was put up for sale, but in reality a small plot of land was excepted from the sale, namely, the plot on which the vendor now proposed to erect a public-house. There was nothing on the plan to show that this plot belonged to the vendor; the lots put up for sale were coloured, but this plot was uncoloured, and there was no name written on it, while on the remaining uncoloured portions of the plan the names of the adjoining owners were written; it was not a usual practice for a vendor to give the names of the owners of adjoining property and to omit his own name on the part of his own land not put up for sale. This conduct on the part of the vendor had led to the defendant's mistake, and he must be relieved from the consequences of it. If it had appeared on the conditions of sale that the vendor reserved this plot for the purpose of building a public-house on it, his Lordship had no doubt that such reservation would have materially diminished the price obtained for the lot purchased by the defendant. There would be a decree for specific performance if the vendor should elect to extend the restrictive covenant as to building to the plot in question; but, unless the plaintiff so elected, the bill must be dismissed, and, in either case, the plaintiff must pay the costs of the suit.

In Norris v. The Caledonian Insurance Company was a suit instituted by the legal personal representative of the late John Sadleir, praying that the plaintiff might be declared to be entitled to an absolute lien on certain moneys in court, for premiums paid by him and by the late John Sadleir, in respect of a policy of assurance, of which the moneys now in court were the proceeds. The policy was granted in 1840, by the Caledonian Insurance Company, to one Richard Lalor, to secure 4999l. 19s., on the lives of three persons, and was assigned to John Sadleir in 1850, by Lalor's administratrix, as security for a debt of 900l., due by Lalor. In 1868, on the expiration of the last life in the policy, the sum of 4716l. 5s. 9d. (being the policy moneys less certain sums for costs, &c., which they were by order of the court entitled to retain) was paid into court by the insurance company. In addition to the plaintiff there were several other claimants of the fund in court, who were made defendants to the present suit. His Lordship decided against their claims at the time of the hearing (during last term), with the exception of that of Vincent Scully, who claimed under an equitable assignment of the policy. His Lordship reserved his judgment on the question of priority between Scully and the plaintiff, in respect of the amount paid by him and the late John Sadleir in premiums to keep on foot the policy. The case was now in the paper for judgment. His Lordship held that the plaintiff was entitled to priority over Scully for the amount paid by him in premiums since Sadleir's death, but that as to the amount paid in premiums by Sadleir during his life, and the amount of Scully's claim under the equitable assignment, they should be discharged pari passu out of the residue of the fund which remained after payment of the sum in respect to which the plaintiff was entitled to priority.

In Preston v. Preston was a suit by a son to set aside an appointment by his father in favour of another son, in exercise of a power of appointment contained in the father's marriage settlement, on the ground that the appointment was made for the purpose of raising money, partly for the benefit of the father, in fraud of the power. On attaining his majority, the plaintiff had signed his name to a deed of confirmation; but he alleged that when he did so he was under his father's power, and was ignorant of the purpose for which the appointment had been made. At the conclusion of the argument, which occupied two entire days, his Lordship reserved judgment.

V. C. STUART'S COURT.

The only cases worthy of notice during the past week were the following:—

In Fallows v. Slatter, which involved a question as to whether a successful appellant from the County Court was entitled to his costs of the appeal. The Vice-Chancellor, in delivering judgment, said that he was not disposed to follow the rule of the common law courts upon the question. The respondent was in possession of an order made by the County Court judge, and to make him pay the costs of the appeal would be to make him pay for an order which this court was of opinion was wrong. The appellant must, therefore, pay his own costs of the appeal. (See reports of the week.)

In The Union, Cement, and Brick Company (Limited) was a motion to compel the late solicitor of the official liquidator of the above company, which was in the course of being wound-up, to deliver up all the documents in his possession relating to the affairs of the company. The motion was resisted on the ground that the solicitor had a lien on the documents for unpaid costs. The Vice-Chancellor, in deciding the question, said he had no doubt about the case. The solicitor was appointed by the official liquidator, and had been removed, and another appointed with the sanction of the court. The duties of the solicitor were to proceed with the winding-up of the company; but as those proceedings had not gone on satisfactorily another solicitor had been appointed. The order would be that the documents must be delivered up on oath, and that the solicitor pay the costs of the application.

Ex parte The London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company, re The London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Arrangement Act 1867 was an adjourned summons brought by way of motion on the part of W. Hartridge and Geo. Alexander, the persons appointed by an order, dated the 5th Aug. 1868, under the provisions of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company's Arrangement Act 1867, to be representatives of the stockholders and shareholders of the general undertakings of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company, that they might, as such representatives, oppose the passing of the Bill now before Parliament, intitled An Act to confer Additional Powers on the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company for the Construction of Works, and otherwise in relation to their own undertakings, and the undertakings of other companies, and for other purposes, or that Grosvenor Hodgkinson, Esq., and the other directors (all named) of the company might be restrained from further prosecuting or promoting the said Bill in Parliament in the name of the company, and from using the name of the company in introducing, prosecuting, or promoting any other Bill in Parliament affecting the rights and interests of the stockholders and shareholders in the general undertaking of the said company without the previous sanction of the court, and that the costs of this application, and of opposing the said Bill and incident thereto, might be costs in this matter, and that payment thereof might be reserved. The Vice-Chancellor, at the conclusion of the arguments, which occupied the whole day, said he would reserve his judgment.

V. C. MALINS' COURT.

On the last day of Easter Term a motion was made in the suit of Robson v. Dodds to commit Mr. R. Ward, the printer and publisher of the North of England Advertiser, for an alleged contempt of court, in printing and publishing a certain article in that journal on the 1st inst., with reference to the Northern Counties' Benefit Building Society, whose affairs were the subject of this suit. The motion stood over and came on on the first day of the present term. The article in question was as follows: "It will be remembered that at the last election of officers, the members of the Northern Counties Building Society refused to reappoint Mr. W. L. Harle as solicitor. This unusual course was adopted at the recommendation of the directors, unanimously arrived at, but the grounds of the decision were never made public, as Mr. Harle threatened one of the members with an action for libel if he did so. We understand that Mr. Harle is the solicitor to bills in Chancery which have been filed both against the Northern Counties and the Newcastle Societies for the purpose of preventing them from borrowing money. In one case the husband of the woman who cleans Mr. Harle's offices is the ostensible party to the proceedings. Of course we are bound to suppose that this person is acting from the very best of motives, but it is a very curious coincidence that a solicitor under whose advice the Northern Counties Society has borrowed so much money, is now engaged to demonstrate its illegality, and by a person who occupies towards him so humble a relationship. The Northern Counties has borrowed and invested immense sums of money under one of its rules, devised and approved by Mr. Harle himself, and which has been sanctioned by Mr. Tidd Pratt. The Newcastle Society, although established more recently, has had a most successful career, and has borrowed under the more approved process of preference shares; and it is satisfactory to know that, whatever the result of Mr. Harle's efforts, both societies have been conducted with so much care that although their usefulness may possibly for a time be crippled, their stability cannot be affected in the slightest degree. We refrain from predicting what may be the effect of the proceedings upon Mr. Harle himself, but we think it is peculiarly unfortunate that his duty to his clients should have forced him into a position of antagonism to societies which have done so much for working men, whose champion he has so long professed to be." The Vice-Chancellor, without hearing a reply, said that these cases were of a very embarrassing character, and several of a like nature had come before the court within a recent period. The principles applicable to them were of considerable nicety, and of the highest importance to the public and no one appreciated that more than he did. The press should, as much as possible, have an opportunity of treating public matters so as to give life and vigour to their comments, but it was also necessary that nothing should be published tending to impede the course of justice. His Honour had occasion recently, in the case of the Cheltenham and Swansea Railway Carriage and Waggon Company (Limited), to consider this question with reference to printing in extenso a petition to wind-up containing gross imputations upon the directors, which subsequently, on adjudicating on the petition, he had held to be utterly groundless. This was an illustration of the great importance of comments injuriously affecting character, and hastily written, not being permitted. The principles controlling these cases were clearly laid down by Lord Hardwicke in the case of the St. James's Evening Post, where he held that anything scandalising the court itself (not the case here), prejudicing mankind against forthcoming cases, or injuring character, was not permissible. His Honour then referred to the articles, and observed that, although originally he believed Mr. Ward acted from no improper motive, there were passages in the article which clearly came within the principles he had referred to; there was reference to a gentleman in a manner calculated to create prejudice, and subjects were entered into which ought to have been left to the society itself to deal with at the proper time, which was not now. The course pursued was clearly improper, and held Mr. Harle up to the contempt of his friends and neighbours; and no one could read the article without seeing that it was in strong condemnation of the plaintiff, and still stronger of the solicitor. Instead of instructing counsel to oppose the motion, Mr. Ward ought at once to have apologised; but not having done so, there must be an order for committal with costs, not to be enforced if an apology were inserted within three weeks.

The above has been almost the only case of any general interest which has occurred in this court during the past week.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

The case of Zunz v. The London and South-Eastern Railway Company, which came before the court on the 22nd inst., raised a question of great importance with reference to the responsibility of railway companies for passengers' luggage. The plaintiff had taken a ticket (or book consisting of various coupons) at Charing-cross for conveyance to Paris, and took with him a hat-box and portmanteau, which were lost on the journey, and in respect of which he brought the action against the company. It was proved at the trial that these articles were not lost on this side of the Channel, and the question then arose whether the London and South-Eastern Railway Company could be held liable for a loss which took place after they had conveyed the passenger to the end of their line, viz., Dover. The railway company relied, as a defence, on the special conditions printed on the coupons to the effect that they would not be responsible for any detention of passengers or loss of luggage beyond the limits of their own line. It was also argued on their behalf by Mr. Field, Q. C. and Mr. F. M. White that the contract made by the company with passengers was only to carry them as far as Dover, and that they received the fare for the remainder of the journey merely as agents for the Great Northern Railway Company of France. The court seemed much opposed to this argument, but it was necessary to decide on its validity. The main question was whether the provisions of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act (17 & 18 Vict. c. 31), applied to the case of railway companies which carry beyond the limits of their own line. Sect. 7 enacts that "every company shall be liable for the loss of, or for any injury done to any horse, cattle, or other animals, or to any articles, goods, or things, in the receiving, forwarding, or delivering thereof occasioned by the neglect or default of such company or its servants, notwithstanding any notice, condition, or declaration made and given by such company thereto, or in anywise limiting such liability; every such notice, condition, or declaration being hereby declared null and void . . . provided that no special contract between such company, and any other parties respecting the receiving, forwarding, or delivery of any animals, articles, goods, or things as aforesaid shall be binding upon or affect any such party, unless the same be signed by him or by the person delivering such animals, articles, goods, or things respectively for carriage." If this provision were held applicable to railway companies which carry beyond the limits of their own line, then, as the plaintiff in the present case had not signed any contract with the London and South-Eastern Railway Company, they would not be exonerated by reason of their special conditions from liability for the loss. Mr. Henry James, Mr. Baker Greene, and Mr. Moir argued on behalf of the plaintiff, that the enactment does apply to railway companies which contract to carry beyond the limits of their own line. However the court (consisting of the Lord Chief Justice, and Justices Mellor, Lush, and Hayes) held that the provisions of the 7th section of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act did not apply to the present case, and, therefore, that the railway company were protected by their special conditions, though no written contract had been signed by the plaintiff.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

At the opening of the legal campaign for Trinity Term, on Saturday, the 22nd inst., there was not a single motion in this court, and accordingly their Lordships (Chief Baron Kelly, and Barons Bramwell and Cleasby) proceeded at once with the new trial paper, and the first case which came on for argument was that of Chapman v. Jones, a case which involved a question of considerable interest, both in an antiquarian and an ecclesiastical point of view. The plaintiff, it appeared, claimed to be the owner, under a grant from the Earl of Stamford and Warrington, of a private chapel or chancel aisle, in the parish church of Mottram, with exclusive right to its possession and user. The defendant was the rector of the parish of Mottram, and the action was brought against him for a trespass by him, in his having removed the lock of the outer door of the said chapel, and so having obtained access to the church through the said door, to which the plaintiff claimed the exclusive right as sole grantee as above-mentioned. The defendant, on the other hand, as rector, claimed to have right of access to the church through the chapel or chancel in question. The pleas were: Not guilty; and not possessed. At the trial before the Lord Chief Baron and a special jury, at the last winter assizes at Chester, the plaintiff obtained a verdict for nominal damages of 40s., leave being reserved to the defendant to move to enter a nonsuit. A rule was accordingly obtained in Hilary Term last by Mr. Giffard, Q. C., on the part of the defendant, to set aside the plaintiff's verdict, and to enter a nonsuit, on the ground that there was no evidence of any exclusive right as against the defendant, to the door of the alleged chapel, and no proof that the said alleged chapel is not a portion of the parish church of Mottram; that the plaintiff had no legal right to the chapel, if there be one, inasmuch as it was and is appurtenant to the manor of Stayley; and that the said manors and the manor house thereto belonging, are still the property of the Earl of Stamford and Warrington; or, in the alternative, for a new trial, on the ground of the improper reception in evidence of a certain faculty and award. The facts, as they appeared, were, that the Earl of Stamford was, and his predecessors in title had been, the lords of several manors within the parish of Mottram, and among them of the manors of Stayley and Hattersley, but neither the parish church of Mottram nor the chapel in question were within either of those manors. The chapel in question was in its form a sort of small chancel or side aisle to the parish church, being under the roof of the church, and the outside wall of it being also the outside wall of the church. It was not in any way separated from the rest of the body of the church, but it had a separate entrance or door in the outer wall leading from and into the churchyard. From immemorial time it had been, and had been used as, a private chapel of the Lords of Stamford, and had been kept in repair by them, and was known by the names (indifferently) of the "Stayley," and the "Stamford" chapel. Some time ago Lord Stamford sold the manor of Hattersley and also the chapel in question to the plaintiff, and by the same deed of conveyance he conveyed to the plaintiff the said manor of Hattersley, and also conveyed to him in gross the said "Stayley" or "Stamford" chapel. It was under this conveyance that the plaintiff claimed to be entitled, as grantee of the lord of the manor of Stayley, to the exclusive right of ownership and occupation of the said chapel, the defendant, on the other hand, denying such right and title, and claiming for himself as rector a right to enter the church through the door of the chapel; and it was in the assertion and exercise of such last-mentioned alleged right on the defendant's part that the trespass complained of by the plaintiff in this action was committed. The main question in the case turned upon the validity of the above conveyance by Lord Stamford to the plaintiff, so far as it purported to convey the chapel in question; the contention on the part of the defendant being that the chapel was and could only be held or occupied as appurtenant to the manor; and further that it could only be an incident to the occupation of the manor house, which latter still remained in the possession of Lord Stamford, and that the chapel could not be severed therefrom, and could not, therefore, be conveyed in gross. Dr. A. J. Stephens, Q. C., Mr. McIntyre, and Mr. B. Shaw, of the Equity Bar, for the plaintiff, now showed cause against the rule, and Mr. H. Giffard, Q. C., and Mr. Horatio Lloyd appeared on the defendant's part to support it. The learned counsel for the plaintiff, in a long and learned argument, which lasted the entire day, went back to pre-Reformation times, and traced the origin and history of these private chapels, which, they said, were originally built by the founders of churches to whom, at the time of consecration, the right, not only of the soil on which the chapel stood, but also the exclusive ownership and use of the chapel itself for the sole use of themselves and their families in their private devotions, was for ever reserved, and that such chapels had always been treated and disposed of, by will and other wise, as the exclusive private property of the lord or owner; and that, in the present case, the evidence of acts done by the Earls of Stamford in repairing the chapel, in permitting burials there, and the delivery by them of the keys to the sexton, &c., was overwhelming proof of their exclusive ownership. Amongst the many recondit authorities which were "familiar in their mouths as household words" (albeit not often ventilated on this side of Westminster-hall) were "Pope Nicholas's Inquisition for Taxation of Churches for Peter's Pence," temp Edw. I.; Godolphin's Repertorium; Gibson's Codex; Degg's Parson's Counsellor; Johnson's Vade Mecum; Ayliffe's Parergon; Highmore on Mortmain; and the Canons of 1604. The discussion of these, with a host of other ancient and modern authorities from the earliest times, down to the recent cases of Griffin v. Deighton and another in the Queen's Bench, 8 L. T. Rep. N. S. 500 (affirmed in error, 9 Ib. 814), and Churton v. Frewen, before Vice-Chancellor Kindersley, 14 Ib. 846, occupied the court the whole day, and on Monday the 24th Mr. H. Giffard, Q. C. and Mr. Horatio Lloyd were heard in support of this rule. On the conclusion of the arguments the court gave judgment for the plaintiff. Chief Baron Kelly said that the principal legal questions were two in number, viz., first, whether a chapel forming a portion of a parish church, as the chapel in question did, could be the freehold of inheritance of a private person; secondly, whether, if so, the right could be conveyed away like any other property, or, as contended for the defendant, must be appurtenant or appendant to a manor or other reality. The only question that remained then was the conclusion to be drawn from the evidence as to matters of fact. With respect to the question whether such a chapel could be private property, the court were clearly of opinion on the authorities that such a chapel might at law be, and in point of fact very frequently was, the property of a private individual. Many ways might be suggested in which this could come about. When a landowner in the first instance dedicated the soil on which a church stood to religious uses, he might retain a portion immediately adjacent for the purposes of a private chapel, and this chapel would naturally be frequently held together with large property in the neighbourhood, and so might come to be considered, in a popular sense of the term, as appurtenant. But really the terms appurtenant, and appendant, and in gross, were quite inappropriate. Such a freehold was like any other freehold, and might be conveyed either with or without any other property. It therefore had been well conveyed, if it existed, to the plaintiff. A confusion had been created in argument by not observing the distinction between the authorities relating to such a chapel as that in question, from those relating to pews or the mere right of occupying a pew, which might be annexed to the occupation of a messuage. With respect to the facts, the court, having the power to draw inferences, were distinctly of opinion that the plaintiff had made out his title to this chapel. The repairs had, with one solitary exception of recent date, always been done by him or his predecessors in title. They had had the keys of the door, and there were various other acts of user all pointing in the same direction.

On the same day the arguments in The Mayor and Corporation of Carlisle v. Graham were commenced, Mr. Manisty, Q. C. and Mr. Jones, Q. C. appearing to show cause against the rule. The verdict had been entered at the trial for the defendants, who were lessees, from Lord Lonsdale, of a certain fishery in the river Eden, which plaintiffs claimed to be entitled to. Mr. Manisty had not proceeded far with his argument when Baron Bramwell pointed out a serious inconvenience in the way in which the matter had shaped itself. Mr. Manisty was meeting a case which had not yet been made, having to show cause against the rule to enter a verdict for the plaintiff. The Chief Baron thought it would be best, under the circumstances, to call on Mr. Mellish, who appeared for the plaintiffs, to give an outline of his case, which he accordingly did. The case involved an enormous amount of documentary evidence, dated from the very earliest times, principally consisting of ancient charters and royal grants. The point was briefly this. It appeared that up to 1690 it was undisputed that the corporation of Carlisle had a fishery in a bend of the Eden, but about 1690 an alteration took place in the river's course, owing, as contended by the defendant, to certain proceedings on the part of the corporation themselves. The effect was that the part of the water in which the fishery existed was shifted to a wholly different channel out of the manor in which it originally existed into a manor of Lord Lonsdale's. The question briefly was whether the right of fishery still existed in the new substituted channel, or was lost. Mr. Mellish said he was prepared to contend that it did shift with and follow the river. There was also a secondary and less important question, viz., whether there had been a prescriptive title gained by user of the fishery. The main question, however, was that above indicated.

EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

In this court on Friday, the 14th inst., a case some nicely and considerable interest as bearing upon the law of libel, and the question of what is or not evidence of malice for a jury, in a case where the occasion on which the words were written was such as to invest them with the protection of privilege, unless actual malice were shown to exist, or from the words themselves must be reasonably presumed to have existed, came on for discussion in the case of Spill v. Maule, upon error on a bill of exceptions to the ruling of Baron Martin, at Nisi Prius in Middlesex, on the trial of the action for the libel in question, in Trinity Term 1868. The words which the defendant had written of and concerning the plaintiff, and which constituted the alleged libel, were, that the plaintiff's conduct "had been most disgraceful and dishonest," and they were written under the circumstances following:—The plaintiff and one Briggs had been in partnership, and carried on business together as waterprooers at Stepney since 1861, at which time the plaintiff was solvent. After some time the plaintiff had reason, as he alleged, to complain of Briggs' proceedings with reference to the moneys of the firm and his management of the accounts. In 1866, the firm being in some pecuniary difficulties, a deed of insolvency was prepared which it appeared the plaintiff refused to execute, and alleged that he had never consented to it, notwithstanding that it had received the assent of the necessary statutory majority of the creditors of the firm. In Dec. 1866, the plaintiff, as he stated in his evidence at the trial, having reason to suppose that Briggs was "helping himself" too freely to the cash, took away from the cash-box of the firm a bundle of bills and notes amounting to between 1200*l.* and 1300*l.*, at the time he did so desiring a clerk in the office to inform Briggs of what he (the plaintiff) had done, and to tell him to debit his account with the amount. In the succeeding March the plaintiff was arrested at the suit of a firm who were creditors of the firm of Spill and Briggs, the defendant being a member of such arresting firm, and consequently a creditor of the plaintiff, and subsequently to such arrest the plaintiff was made a bankrupt. A firm of the name of Messrs. Collier and Co., of Manchester, who were also creditors of the firm of Spill and Briggs, having threatened to take certain proceedings against Briggs, the defendant Maule on the 12th July 1867 wrote to Collier and Co., the letter containing the libel in question, and from which letter the following is an extract:—"Gentlemen, I think it right to inform you that Mr. Briggs has consulted Mr. Spill's assignees and myself, as to certain letters which you have addressed to him. The proceedings which Mr. Briggs has been advised to take are quite in accordance with our views, and although I have no right and no wish to dictate to you any particular line of conduct, I cannot help saying that your proceedings entirely contradict the spirit of your letters, in which you profess to act only for the benefit of the general body of creditors. I may state that the conduct of Mr. Spill has been most disgraceful and dishonest, and the result has been to diminish materially the available assets of the estate." There was no cross-examination of the plaintiff, and no other witness was called, and that being the plaintiff's case, the learned Baron ruled that the above letter was a privileged communication, and that there was no evidence to go to the jury in support of the plaintiff's case, and thereupon he directed them to find a verdict for the defendant, which was accordingly done; whereupon the plaintiff tendered a bill of exceptions to such ruling which now came on to be argued, and Mr. Huddleston, Q. C. (with him was Mr. J. O. Griffiths) for the plaintiff, appeared to support the exceptions, and contended that the letter should have been left to the jury to say whether or not on the face of it it did not show that the defendant was going out of his way, and acting maliciously towards the plaintiff. The occasion may have been privileged, but the letter in its tone and terms so far exceeded what was necessary to be written, as to import the existence of malice in the mind of the writer. At all events the jury should have had the opportunity of considering the matter. For the defendant, Mr. Brett, Q. C. (with whom were Mr. Serjeant Ballantine and Mr. Giffard, Q. C.) contended that the circumstances of the case, and the plaintiff's conduct fully warranted the defendant in writing the letter, and justified him in the use of the words in question; and that, in the absence of express actual malice, it was the duty of the judge to withdraw the case from the jury. After a long argument the judgment of the court (Chief Justice Cockburn, and Justices Keating, Lush, Hannen, Brett, and Hayes), was delivered by Chief Justice Cockburn, upholding the ruling of Baron Martin; their Lordships being of opinion on the whole that the direction of the learned Baron was right, although it might have been well had the matter been submitted to the jury. Although such a letter might, in some cases, be proof of actual malice, yet here the defendant was a creditor of the plaintiff's firm, and interested in, and entitled to take a part in, the proceedings of the winding-up. The occasion, therefore, was privileged, and the question is, was the language too strong? The occasion being privileged, absence of malice will be presumed, and it is for the plaintiff, therefore, to show actual malice on the defendant's part, which he may do by showing that the language used was far beyond the necessity of the occasion. The facts proved show what the defendant referred to, and the plaintiff's conduct certainly may bear a twofold aspect—one consistent with honesty, the other with dishonesty. The presumption of an innocent construction is in favour of the defendant, and it must be assumed that he was giving expression to an honest belief of the truth of what he was writing, and we cannot say that he had no ground for entertaining such a belief. It is not for the court to say whether the plaintiff acted honestly or dishonestly, but whether the defendant stated that which he honestly believed. We think the learned judge was right, and that the letter in question was not sufficient evidence of actual malice to render it necessary to be laid before the jury. The exceptions, therefore, will be disallowed, and the ruling below upheld.

LEGISLATION AND JURISPRUDENCE.

MARRIED WOMEN'S PROPERTY.

The Bill, as amended in committee, to amend the law with respect to the property of married women. It proposes to enact that—

A married woman shall be capable of holding, acquiring, alienating, devising, and bequeathing real and personal estate, of contracting, and of suing, and being sued, as if she were a feme sole.

No woman shall be liable to be taken in execution upon any judgment founded upon a contract made or act done by her during coverture, and no such judgment or execution thereon shall bind or affect any property except such personal estate (if any) as she may be possessed of or entitled to for a present interest during her coverture.

Every woman who marries after this Act has come into operation shall, notwithstanding her coverture, have and hold all real and personal property, whether belonging to her before marriage, or acquired by her in any way after marriage, free from the debts and obligations of her husband, and from his control or disposition, in all respects as if she had continued unmarried.

Every woman married before this Act has come into operation shall, notwithstanding her coverture, have and hold all the real and personal estate, her right to which shall arise after this Act shall have come into operation, free from the debts and obligations of her husband, and from his control or disposition, in all respects as if she had continued unmarried.

The earnings of a married woman in any trade or other occupation carried on by her as a principal separately from her husband shall be deemed to be her property acquired after marriage.

A husband shall not by reason of any marriage which shall take place after this Act has come into operation be liable for the debts of his wife contracted before marriage, but the wife shall be liable for such debts as if she had continued unmarried.

No husband shall by reason of the marriage be liable in damages for any wrong committed by his wife during the coverture.

No husband or wife shall be entitled to sue the other in any action at law for a tort, except in respect of property.

If a wife shall contract a debt as the agent of her husband, she shall be liable to be sued for the same, together with him, but as between the husband and wife she shall be deemed his surety, and shall be entitled to the same remedy over against her husband for indemnity as in the ordinary case a surety has against the principal debtor; and if a husband shall contract a debt as the agent of his wife, he shall be liable to be sued for the same, together with her, but as between husband and wife he shall be deemed her surety, and shall be entitled to the same remedy over against her for indemnity as in the ordinary case a surety has against the principal debtor.

Where the husband of any woman having property of her own becomes chargeable to any union or parish, the justices having jurisdiction in such union or parish may, in petty sessions assembled, upon application of the guardians of the poor, issue a summons against the wife, and make and enforce such order against her for the maintenance of her husband as by the 33rd section of the Poor Law Amendment Act 1868, they may now make and enforce against a husband for the maintenance of his wife, who becomes chargeable to any union or parish.

A married woman having property of her own shall be subject to all such liability, for the maintenance of her children, as a widow is now by law subject to for the maintenance of her children; provided always, that nothing in this Act shall relieve her husband from any liability at present imposed upon him by law to maintain her children.

Property, whether real or personal, settled to the separate use of a married woman, without restraint against anticipation, shall be subject in equity to the same liabilities as her personal property in possession not so settled would be subject at law under the provisions of this Act.

Any woman during her minority may, with the consent of her parent or guardian and of her intended husband, make or enter into any settlement or agreement for a settlement in contemplation of marriage, and the settlement or agreement for a settlement so made or entered into shall be as binding upon her, and those claiming under her as if she had been of full age at the date thereof.

Upon the death of a wife intestate her husband shall take the same distributive share in her personal estate as a wife would take in the personal estate of her husband if he died intestate, and, subject thereto, her personal estate shall go to her next of kin according to the Statute of Distributions.

Nothing contained in this Act shall affect the right of any husband to hold as tenant by the curtesy any real estate to which his wife shall be entitled at her death.

The Act is not to extend to Scotland.

COUNTY ADMINISTRATION BILL.—The Government Bill for establishing administrative boards for the transaction of county business in England proposes that there shall be established in each county a county board, consisting of the justices acting in and for the county, and of elective members, holding office for five years, and retiring by rotation, but eligible for re-election. The elective members are to be representatives of unions, chosen by the elected members of the boards of guardians, excluding unions in towns or boroughs with separate quarter sessions. The number of representatives of each union is to be in proportion to its gross estimated rental; one where it does not exceed 50,000*l.*, two where it is between 50,000*l.* and 100,000*l.*, three between 100,000*l.* and 150,000*l.*, four where it exceeds 150,000*l.*, but only half these values is to suffice in the instances of the Welsh counties, Monmouthshire, Rutland, Westmoreland, and the Liberties of Ely, Peterborough, and St. Albans, which are to be deemed separate counties. The person elected must be a member or qualified to be a member of the board of guardians of the union he represents. He must not hold office under the county board or participate in the profits of work done by order of the board, or be concerned in any contract with the board; but this clause is not to apply to a member being a shareholder in a company contracting with the board, or being interested in any sale or lease of lands or loan of money to the board, save that such member must not then vote on questions connected with these matters. The Bill proceeds to reserve exclusively to the justices in quarter sessions the trial of offenders, the hearing of appeals, and all other judicial business; also the making regulations for the government of prisons, the nomination of visiting justices of prisons, and the making rules with respect to the duties of visiting justices; but, save as thus excepted, all powers, duties, &c., of the justices in quarter sessions are to vest in the county board. The clerk of the peace is to be the clerk of the county board. "Judicial business" is to include the hearing of any application of any third person in relation to the granting of a licence or the giving or withholding any right or privilege, or in relation to any other matter in respect of which such person is authorised by law to make an application. For the purposes of this Bill a "county" is to include a division having a separate commission of the peace; and where a county has one commission, but is divided for the purposes of a county rate, each division shall be deemed to be a separate county. If any question arises as to whether any business is within the jurisdiction of the county board or of the quarter sessions the question is to be decided by the Court of Quarter Sessions; but any person aggrieved by their decision may appeal to the Secretary of State. Three schedules are annexed to the Bill containing regulations for the elections to the county board, and for the proceedings of the county board and of any committee appointed by it.

ELECTION LAW.

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT.

The following analysis of the petitions presented under the new law, with the result in each case, will be of interest on the reassembling of the House of Commons. The experiment of referring election petitions to the common-law judges (without juries) was made for the first time. Of seventy-three petitions filed in the Common Pleas, only one—a new petition for Brecknock—remains to be heard. The list has been compiled by Mr. Edwin Charles Cooke, of the Rule Office, Common Pleas.

ELECTIONS DECLARED VALID.

Borough or County.	Petitioner.	Respondent.	Judge who tried Petition.
New Windsor.....	Gardner	Eykyn	Justice Willes.
Coventry	Berry and others	Eaton and Hill	Justice Willes.
Warrington	Crozier and others	Rylands	Baron Martin.
Guildford	Elkins and others	Onslow	Justice Willes.
Salford	Anderson and others	Cawley and Charley	Baron Martin.
Bodmin	Adams and others	Hon. L. Gower	Justice Willes.
Bradford	Storey and another	Forster	Baron Martin.
Penryn	Broad and others	Fowler and Eastwick	Justice Willes.
Lichfield	Hon. A. Anson	Dyott	Justice Willes.
Wallingford	Dilke, Bart.	Vickers	Justice Blackburn.
Cheltenham	Gardner	Samuelson	Baron Martin.
Oldham	Cobbett and others	Hibbert and Platt	Justice Blackburn.
Stalybridge	Ogden and others	Sidebottom	Justice Blackburn.
Tamworth	Hill and another	Peel, Bart., and Bulwer, Bart. ...	Justice Willes.
Wigan	Brayshaw and another	Woods and Lancaster	Baron Martin.
Westminster	Beal and others	Smith	Baron Martin.
King's Lynn	Annes and another	Bourke	Baron Martin.
Manchester	Royse and another	Birley	Special case before Court of Common Pleas.
Northallerton	Johns	Hutton	Justice Willes.
Hastings	Hon. Calthorpe and another	Brassey, jun.	Justice Blackburn.
Hastings	Sutton and another	North	Justice Blackburn.
Dover	Helliott	Dickson	Baron Martin.
Southampton	Pegler	Gurney and Hoare	Justice Blackburn.
New Sarum	Ryder	Hamilton	Special case before Court of Common Pleas.
York (County of)	Hon. S. Wortley and another ...	Lord Milton and Beaumont	Baron Martin.
Southern Division of West Riding)	Stanhope	Beaumont	Baron Martin.
Ditto	Colman	Hon. F. Walpole and Sir E. Lacon	Justice Blackburn.
Norfolk (N.)

ELECTIONS DECLARED VOID.

Borough or County.	Petitioner.	Respondent.	Judge who tried Petition.
Norwich	Tillett	Stracey, Bart.	Baron Martin.
Bewdley	Sturge and another	Glass, Bart.	Justice Blackburn.
Bewdley	Hon. A. Anson	Cunliffe	Justice Blackburn.
Bridgwater	Westropp and another	Kinglake and Vanderbyl	Justice Blackburn.
Hereford	Thomas and others	Wyllie and Clive	Justice Blackburn.
Bradford	Haley and another	Ripley	Baron Martin.
Beverley	Hind and others	Edwards, Bart. and Kennard	Baron Martin.
Waubury	Laverton	Phipps	Justice Willes.
Taunton	Williams and another	Cox	Justice Blackburn.
Blackburn	Potter and another	Hornby and Fielden	Justice Willes.
Brecknock	Lucas and another	Gwyn	Baron Martin.
Stafford	Chawner	Meller	Justice Blackburn.
Stafford	Wile and another	Pochin	Justice Blackburn.

ELECTION PETITIONS WITHDRAWN.

Borough or County.	Petitioner.	Respondent.
Gloucester	Niblett	Monk and Price.
Stockport	Hallam & another	Tipping.
Hartlepool	Walton & another	Smith.
Hull	Gray and others	Jackson.
Taunton	Pease and others	Norwood & Clay.
Preston	Dyke and another	Barclay.
Pembroke	Toulmin & another	Hermion & Sir F. Hesketh.
Pembroke	Hughes	Meyrick.
York	Gladstone	Lowther.
York	Burrill	Westhead.
Cambridge	Lloyd and another	Torrens & Fowler.
Horsham	Hurst	Aldridge.
Horsham	Dickins & another	Hurst.
Boston	Jones	Malcolm and Collins, jun.
Thirsk	Bell and others	Galloway, Bart.
Christchurch	Popham and others	Burke.
Shrewsbury	Young and another	Figgins.
Hants, S. Div.	Castleman	Rt. Hon. Cowper.
Hants, S. Div.	Drew	Lord Hy. Scott.
Warwick, S. Div.	Colley and others	Hardy.
Durham, S. Div.	Hendy	Pease and Beaumont.
Derby, N. Div.	Longsdon & others	Arkwright.
Derby, N. Div.	Coates	Lord Cavendish.
Bradford	Storey and another	Forster.

FURTHER PROCEEDINGS ORDERED TO BE STAYED (BY RULE OF COURT OF COMMON PLEAS) IN THE PETITION FROM—

Borough or County.	Petitioner.	Respondent.
Taunton	Waygood & another	James.

Correspondence.

REGISTRATION OF VOTERS.—An amendment of the law with reference to the registration of voters will soon engage the attention of Parliament. As solicitors are so largely engaged in the conduct of registration and electioneering business, it would be desirable for them to express through your columns their opinions on the amendments required. Acting on this principle, I beg to suggest that the register of each parish in cities and boroughs should not be made out, as now, in alphabetical order, but in the order in which the voters reside. The overseers necessarily have to take the names of voters from the rate books, in which they are arranged in streets, and in the order in which the voters live in such streets. The existing law requires the overseers to put the names in alphabetical order in the lists for publication, and they have to appear in like order in the register. Much trouble is thus given to the overseers and town clerks. The election agent in preparing his canvass books has to arrange the names of the voters in the streets in which they reside; and, without very extensive local knowledge, he cannot put them in the order in which the voters live, and thus much trouble is given to candidates and canvassers in going from one part of the street to another. To remedy this, I would suggest that the order in which the names occur in the rate books should be adhered to throughout, but to facilitate reference an alphabetical list of the names in each parish should be appended to every list made out by the overseers, and to the register. A. B.

Worcester, 25th May, 1869.

COSTS—TAXATION.—The defeated litigants in the election petition trials are not likely soon to forget their misfortunes. They are now reminded of them by the attorneys' bills of costs. Some of these are of formidable proportions, and the unhappy candidates betake themselves for relief and sympathy to the Court of Common Pleas. The case of the Drogheda Election Petition came before their Lordships at the instance of Mr. Whitworth, who appealed from the taxation settled by the taxing officer, and sought to have it fixed upon a less liberal scale. The motion excited interest, as it raised the question of the right of the court to review its officer's decisions as to costs, and created a precedent to govern other cases. Mr. Hamill, Q.C., who made the application, stated that junior counsel had been paid 75 guineas with their briefs, and senior counsel 100 guineas. Those sums were thought excessive, also the charges allowed for the attendance of the solicitor and of witnesses, process-servers, and others. Messrs. Butt, Q.C., and Ryland, contended that there was no appeal given in the Act from the decision of the master, but that, even if there was, the Act said that the costs were to be taxed on the same principle as costs between attorney and client in the Court of Chancery, by which was meant the Court of Chancery in England, and not the Irish court. Chief Justice Monahan delivered judgment to the effect that the court had ample jurisdiction to review the master's taxation, and that the principle of taxation adopted should have been that of the Irish Court of Chancery. The costs were accordingly remitted to the taxing-officer for amendment. In the matter of the Derry petition the same order will be made.—Times.

ESTATE AND INVESTMENT JOURNAL.

STOCK AND SHARE MARKET.

ALTHOUGH the attendance at the Stock Exchange has been decidedly small, the tone has slightly improved, some considerable purchases of Consols having been made, in anticipation of the July dividend.

The following are the fluctuations of the week:

ENGLISH FUNDS.	Fri.	Sat.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thur.
Bank of England Stock	245	245	244½	246
3 ½ Cent. Red. Ann.	91½	91½	92½	92	92½	...
3 ½ Cent. Cons. Ann.	93	93½	93½	93½	93½	93½
New 2 ½ Cent. Ann.
Do. do. Jan. 1894.	76½	...
New 3 ½ Cent. Ann.	91½	91½	...	91½	92½	92½
5 ½ Cent. Ann.
5 ½ Cent. Jan. 1873
Ann. 30 years exp.
April 5, 1885
Do. exp. Jan. 5, 1890
Do. exp. July 1890
Rad Sea Tele. Ann. 1908
Consols, for Acc.	93½	93½	93½	93½	93½	93½
India 5 ½ Cent. for Acc.	114½	...	114½	115
Do. 5 ½ Cents. July 1880	115	114½	...
India Stock, July 1880	212	...	212	...
India 5 ½ Cent.
India 4 ½ Cent. 1888	100½	...	100½	100½	100½	100½
India 5 ½ Cent. 1870
India Bonds (1000l.)	...	4s. d	...	5s. d
Do. (under 1000l.)
Ex. Bills, 1000l.	a	b	c	e	a	...
Do. 500l.	c	c	...
Do. 100l. and 200l.
3 ½ c.	c	c	...

a 24 and 22 per cent. 3s. dis. d Premium.
b 24 and 22 per cent. 10s. dis. e 24 and 22 per cent. 2s. dis.
c Par.

PUBLIC COMPANIES.

RAILWAY COMPANIES.

A sale by auction is announced by Mr. F. Inman Sharp, in a matter in Chancery, between Charles Stevens and the Crystal Palace and South London Junction Railway Company, of a part of the permanent line or way of the Crystal Palace and South London Junction Railway Company, forming the railway bridge on the Forest-hill-road, in the parish of St. Giles', Camberwell, in the county of Surrey, and running a distance of 933ft. to the east of the bridge, and containing 2a. and 34p., little more or less. The sale is pursuant to an order made in the above cause, with the approbation of his Lordship the Master of the Rolls, the judge to whose court this cause is attached; and the solicitors are Mr. Charles Stevens, 35, Bucklersbury, and Messrs. Maynard, Son, Markby, and Denton, Coleman-street.

BANKS.

Anglo-Egyptian.—An interim dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum.

Chartered Mercantile of India, London, and China.—Two half-yearly dividends, equal to 6 per cent. per annum.

Imperial Ottoman.—A dividend of 12½ per cent. for 1868.

Provincial of Ireland.—A half-year's dividend at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum.

Union of Scotland.—Two half-years' dividends at the rate of 11 per cent. per annum.

MISCELLANEOUS COMPANIES.

Anglo-American Telegraph.—A further dividend of 17s. per share, making 47s. per share, or over 24 per cent.

Towns Drainage and Sewage Utilisation Company (Incorporated by Act of Parliament).—The object is to provide small towns or villages with the means of collecting and applying the sewage to the improvement of land.

Trust and Loan of Upper Canada.—A dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum.

MINING COMPANIES.

Wheat Buller.—A call of 1l. per share has been made.

REPORTS OF SALES.

(Note.—The reports of the Estate Exchange are officially supplied in the following list. Auctioneers whose names are registered there will oblige by reports of their own sales.)

Friday, May 21.

By Messrs. FULLER, HOBBS, SON, and Co., at the Mart. Freehold mineral property, known as Cusley Wood Colliery, situate near Burton-on-Trent, Derbyshire, and containing about 50a. 3r. 10p., with plant, &c.—sold for 8000l.

Tuesday, May 25.

By Messrs. DANIEL SMITH, SON, and OAKLEY, at the Mart. Freehold manor farm, Long Sutton, Lincs, comprising a farmhouse, homestead, buildings, and about 410 acres of land—sold for 21,000l.

One moiety of a leasehold rectorial tithe rentcharge, computed at 400l. 2s. 1d., with an extraordinary tithe rentcharge of about 25l. per annum, held for the life of a lady aged 62 years, at 8l. 13s. 6d. per annum—sold for 15000l.

By Messrs. DENEHAM, TEWSON, and FARMER. Leasehold, two residences, Nos. 27 and 28, Somersford Close Stoke Newington, producing 584l. per annum, term 57½ years from 1833 at 7l. 10s. per annum—sold for 2900l. each. Leasehold residence, No. 3, Mountfort-crescent, Barnsbury-square, term 60 years from 1839 at 6l. per annum—sold for 1000l.

Leasehold house and shop, No. 16, Upper Berkeley-street West, Edware-road, let at 61l. per annum; term 96½ years, from 1835, at 9l. per annum—sold for 8500l.

Leasehold house and shop, No. 18, Upper Berkeley-street west, let at 73l. 10s. per annum; term 96½ years from 1826, at 8l. 8s. per annum—sold for 9200l.

The manor or lordship, or reputed manor or lordship, of Woodhouse End, in the parish of Grafton Hyford; an estate called the Hill Court estate, in the parish of Grafton Hyford, Worcester, comprising a residence called Hill Court, with stabling and outbuildings; an estate called Alberto, comprising two pieces of pasture land, three cottages and gardens, the whole comprising 213a. 0r. 27p. Freehold estate called "Jasper," situate as above, comprising a farmhouse buildings, and 37a. 1r. 27p.—sold for 17000l. Freehold 12a. 3r. 7p. of woodland, situate as above.—sold for 3000l.

Freehold property known as "Golder's Hill," North End, Hampstead, comprising a mansion with stabling, pleasure grounds, paddocks, 4 cottages, &c., containing 77a. 0r. 13p.—sold for 13,000l.

Freehold 12a. 2r. 3p. of building land situate at Cowhouse Green, Cricklewood-lane, Hendon—sold for 13000l.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

NOTES OF NEW DECISION.

SUIT FOR DISSOLUTION—CUSTODY OF CHILDREN.—In a suit for dissolution, the petitioner had obtained a decree nisi, and before the decree absolute the Queen's Proctor intervened and charged the petitioner with connivance, and concluding to the respondent's adultery. On an application by the respondent for an order for the custody of the children, and the payment of an allowance for their maintenance, the court refused to treat it on the same principles as an interim order, and, on the ground that the suit had gone far enough to convict the respondent of adultery, refused to make the order: (Shewell v. Shewell, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 404, Div. & M.)

PRACTICE—NONSUIT.—The jury upon the trial of an action found, in answer to certain questions left to them, in favour of the plaintiff. The judge nevertheless directed a nonsuit, reserving leave to the plaintiff to move to enter a verdict upon the findings of the jury. The defendant, upon the argument of a rule obtained by the plaintiffs, accordingly objected that the verdict, if entered, would be against the evidence: Held, that it was open to him to take the objection, although he had not informed the court of his intention to do so within the time limited for moving for a new trial: (Walker v. Cory, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 453. Ex.)

COPYRIGHT—DATE OF FIRST PUBLICATION—NOVELTY.—L. and Sons registered a cricketing scoring-sheet, dating it 1851, and on dissolving partnership again registered it in L.'s own name, dating it 1863. P. having published the same thing, L. threatened an action. P. continued to publish, and on L. becoming bankrupt, purchased it of the assignees for 20l. W., who had bid 10l., purchased the sheet of P. for some time, but ultimately printed and published and sold the left-hand half, containing the totals of runs, but not an analysis of bowling, which was on the right-hand half. On bill filed to restrain the alleged infringement of the copyright: Held, that the second registration was fatal, not showing the real first dated publication; that there was no novelty or sufficient subject for copyright, and bill dismissed with costs: (Page v. Wisden, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 435. V.C. M.)

DEMURRER—PRACTICE.—Where a fatal objection appears on the face of a bill, and a demurrer is not put in, in dismissing the bill it will be without costs, except in the case of an injunction bill: (Ibid.)

REMOTENESS OF DAMAGE—NEGLIGENCE.—The defendants were proprietors of a cut for conveying water from the Middle Level into the River Ouse, protected by banks and a wall, and by their negligence the cut burst, and the water flooded the neighbouring land. The plaintiff was in occupation of a farm, which the water did not at first reach, but as the tides daily became higher, the plaintiff, in order to keep the water from his land, closed a culvert, which had been constructed by the defendants, in pursuance of their Act for the purpose of draining the water from the land about the plaintiff's farm into the lower ground, which was first flooded. The proprietors of the lower ground, fearing this might cause greater damage to their property, opened the culvert, and the plaintiff's farm became flooded, and his crops injured: Held, that, whether the proprietors of the lower ground were justified or not in opening the culvert, the primary and substantial cause of injury was the defendants' negligence, and the defendants were therefore liable for the damage to the plaintiff: (Collins v. The Middle Level Commissioners, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 442. C. P.)

OCCUPIERS UNDER DIFFERENT TENANTS IN COMMON—ACTION EX DELICTO.—Plaintiff and defendant in an action of trespass and trover held the same land under two tenants in common respectively: Held that the action would not lie: (Jacobs v. Seward, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 448. C. P.)

ERROR—SPECIAL CASE—COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT 1854, s. 32.—An action for obstruction of ancient light was referred by judge's order to arbitration, and the order of reference provided that the arbitrator should, if required by either of the parties, state a special case for the opinion of the court, and that judgment should be entered according to the opinion of the court. He stated a special case raising the question whether the plaintiff was entitled to the flow of light, on which the judgment of the court was for the plaintiff: Held, that there was no judgment upon which error could be brought: (Courtauld v. Legh, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 496.)

PETITION OF MR. OSGOOD.

To the Honourable the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled.

The humble petition of George Osgood, an attorney of the Superior Courts at Westminster, a solicitor of the High Court of Chancery, and late registrar of the Sheriffs' or City of London Court, in the city of London.

Sheweth,—That your petitioner served his articles of clerkship with Messrs. Clarke, Fynmore, and Flagdate (now Messrs. Flagdate, Clarke, and Finch), of Craven-street, Strand.

That your petitioner was admitted an attorney of all the Superior Courts at Westminster, and a solicitor of the High Court of Chancery, in Trinity Term 1842, and has since been appointed a commissioner for taking oaths in Chancery, the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, and is a member of the Incorporated Law Society of the United Kingdom, and of Clifford's-inn.

That on the 31st July 1856 your petitioner was elected by the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, aldermen, and commons of the city of London in common council assembled, to the office of chief clerk of the Sheriffs' Court of the said city of London (which is in fact the County Court for the said city), under the provisions of the London (City) Small Debts Act, at a salary of 400l. a year, which was, two years afterwards, increased to 500l. per annum, when, in consequence of the nature and duties of such office, and the time they required from your petitioner, he was virtually compelled to give up all private practice.

That by sect. 11 of stat. 15 Vict. c. 77 (which is a private Act obtained by the corporation of the said city of London), the chief clerk of the said Sheriffs' Court was and is required to be "an attorney of one of Her Majesty's Superior Courts of Common Law, who shall have practised as an attorney for at least five years," and the power of appointment and of removal for cause of such clerk is vested in the said Lord Mayor, aldermen, and commons of the said city of London, in common council assembled.

That after the election of your petitioner to the said office (now called registrar of the City of London Court), which is an office for life, and tenable during good behaviour, as an office created by statute and connected with the administration of justice, the said Lord Mayor, aldermen and commons of the said city of London endeavoured to, and as far as in them lay did limit the tenure of the said office to the term of one year, and by a standing order made by them in that behalf compelled your petitioner to present himself once in every year for election, and elected him from time to time for one year only, until the 8th Feb. 1866, when they elected your petitioner for a period of three months only, and on the expiration of that period for a further period of three months, until the day when they wrongfully removed your petitioner from his said freehold office, without any reasonable or probable cause, as is hereinafter set forth.

That your petitioner was not aware of any reason or object on the part of the said Lord Mayor, aldermen, and commons in thus limiting your petitioner's said office; but various members of the said common council were, and are still, in the habit of practising as attorneys in the said City of London Court, and many sue and are sued in the said court, of which court your petitioner was also the taxing officer, and many of his other duties were of a judicial character.

That the said court has a very large, important, and, in many instances, an exclusive jurisdiction, especially since the passing of the County Courts Equitable Jurisdiction Bill and the Act of Parliament and Her Majesty's order in council consequent thereon, giving Admiralty jurisdiction to it over nearly the whole of the river Thames, and the several counties adjacent thereto.

That during the eleven years your petitioner held the said office he conducted himself diligently in his said office, and no complaint was ever made against him, either by the judges of the said court or by any suitor in the said court, or by any attorney or other person practising in the said court; but, on the contrary thereof, a voluntary testimonial, signed by twenty-five barristers (among whom were two County Court judges, two Queen's counsel, three sergeants-at-law, and seven deputy County Court judges), and fifty attorneys practising in the said court, was presented to your petitioner in April 1866, testifying to the efficient, expeditious, and very satisfactory manner in which the official business of the said court was conducted by your petitioner, and to the personal attendance, attention, facility, and courtesy shown by him.

That on several occasions during the said period of your petitioner's holding his said office the officers' and clerks' committee of the said common council recommended that your petitioner's salary should be raised, and otherwise expressed their approbation of your petitioner's conduct and service.

That in the month of Aug. 1866, the high bailiff of the said court suddenly objected to hand up to the judge certain notices which theretofore he had been accustomed to hand up with the plaints, and, in consequence of his making such objection, the judge of the said court made an order dispensing with his attendance in court, and ordering an inferior bailiff to attend and perform the said duty.

That on the 3rd Oct. 1866, the said high bailiff (unknown to your petitioner) addressed a letter to the Lord Mayor asking for an investigation into the causes which had led to the before-mentioned order, and alleging that the duty of handing up the said notices belonged to your petitioner.

That on the 18th Oct. 1866, the said Lord Mayor laid the said correspondence before the said common council of the said city of London, and it was thereupon referred by them to the said officers' and clerks' committee to report thereon, which said committee had before them, and heard the ex parte statements of the said high bailiff and a great number of clerks out of the office of your petitioner, who was not allowed to be present, and the said committee then and there required the said high bailiff to put certain charges into writing against your petitioner, the said high bailiff and clerks so examined, being all annually elected and appointed by the said corporation, and not by your petitioner as such registrar as aforesaid, as in all the metropolitan and other County Courts, although your petitioner was held responsible for the whole of the staff of his said office.

That your petitioner was afterwards desired to attend before the said committee and make explanation.

That your petitioner did attend before such committee at several meetings thereof, and was then repeatedly told that there was no charge against your petitioner, and the learned judge of the said court also attended, and then informed the said committee that he had no complaint whatever to make against your petitioner, and that he was well satisfied with the manner in which your petitioner had performed the duties of his said office.

That afterwards, notwithstanding all that had occurred, the said committee reported to the said common council that the duties of your petitioner's said office had not been properly performed by him, although such duties were laid down and were most clearly defined by the Act of Parliament constituting the said court, and the said common council thereupon called upon your petitioner to show cause why he should not be removed from his said office.

That your petitioner thereupon, by the advice of counsel, addressed by his attorneys a letter to the said common council, asking for a statement of the specific charge or charges against which he should show cause; but the only reply he received thereto was a reference to the minutes of what was termed the evidence taken before the said committee, but which consisted of viva voce and written statements not upon oath.

That such committee consisted of forty-three members, but the said meetings were not attended by all such members or a majority thereof, and differed in its constituent parts on every occasion when it so met as hereinbefore stated, and many of the members thereof who did attend, attended at irregular intervals from time to time, and the same members did not attend all the meetings of the said committee, nor did those members of the said committee who attended all the meetings attend at the commencement of the proceedings at those meetings, or continue during the whole proceedings, so as to be present and hear all the proceedings during the whole time of such meetings; and of the said forty-three members thereof only sixteen signed the report, of which sixteen members so signing, seven only attended all the said meetings or parts of all the said meetings of the said committee at which such evidence was taken as aforesaid; one attended three such meetings, or parts thereof; five attended two such meetings, or parts thereof; one attended one such meeting, or a part thereof; and two such members did not attend any of the meetings of the said committee.

That afterwards, on the 2nd May 1867, your petitioner was heard by counsel before the said Lord Mayor, aldermen, and commons in common council assembled, and thereupon a resolution was passed removing your petitioner from his said office, and a further resolution appointing the city solicitor, Mr. Thomas James Nelson, to fill the said office pro tempore.

That afterwards your petitioner applied to the Court of Queen's Bench at Westminster for an information in the nature of a quo warranto to test the legality of such proceedings.

That afterwards, at the suggestion of the Court of Queen's Bench, the form of the proceedings was changed, and a special case stated between your petitioner and the said city solicitor, he being the recognised legal representative of the said Court of Common Council, in which all the facts were set out in detail, and the Court of Queen's Bench put in possession of all that had occurred.

That the case came on again for argument during Hilary Term 1869, and occupied three days in the discussion, when the court gave judgment for the defendant, on the ground that, as the said statute had given the power of removal to the said Lord Mayor, aldermen, and commons for inability, misbehaviour, or for any other cause which may appear reasonable to the mayor, aldermen, and commons, the court could not interfere on the merits and with them in the exercise of their jurisdiction, so long as the proceedings had before them appeared to be regular.

The Lord Chief Justice (with the other judges) in delivering judgment, said, "that he believed the decision of the Court of Common Council to have been a most mistaken one; that if it had been the verdict of a jury it could not have stood; that if he had tried the case at Nisi Prius, and a verdict had been found against your petitioner so far as his (the Lord Chief Justice's) influence could avail that verdict should not have stood; that he regretted exceedingly that as jurisdiction had been given to the Court of Common Council they could not interfere upon the merits, he wished that they could, because certainly he should say that the result of the inquiry had not been as regarded the justice of the case satisfactory; that the judgment of the Court of Common Council was not one which they, the judges of the Court of Queen's Bench, should have pronounced, and certainly was not one which they could then approve, and that neither that court nor any other judicial tribunal would have so dealt with one of its own judicial officers."

That your petitioner craves leave to refer to the reported judgments of the several judges of the Court of Queen's Bench in reference to this matter as showing the opinion of the said judges on the said common council towards your petitioner.

That your petitioner has been oppressively deprived of his said freehold office by an unjustifiable exercise of authority on the part of the said common council, and without any fault on his part, or neglect of duty in his said office, it being contended on the part of the said corporation that the words "or for any other cause which may appear reasonable to the mayor, aldermen, and commons," gives to them an absolute and unbounded jurisdiction, and an uncontrollable and unqualified power of removal which cannot be questioned in any way, but no such words are in any of the County Court Acts.

That there is nothing now to distinguish the said City of London Court, of which your petitioner was the registrar, from the metropolitan and other County Courts, save and except in the much larger and more important business done, the much smaller salary paid to, and the power of appointment and removal of your petitioner being in the said common council of London, instead of the power of his removal being solely vested in the Lord High Chancellor as in the case of the registrars of all the other County Courts.

That it is manifestly for the public advantage, and for the proper and impartial administration of justice that the registrar of the said City of London Court as a public legal officer should be rendered independent of all private or party influences, prejudices, intrigues, and cabals which alternately govern the movements of a body constituted like the said Common Council of London, consisting of 232 members, of whom 40 form a quorum, and your petitioner conceives that no good or sufficient reason exists why the powers of appointment and removal given by the said private statute should not be taken away from the said Common Council of London, and be vested in the said Lord High Chancellor, and exercised as in the case of all the other County Courts, and the registrar of the said City of London Court placed now and from time to time in all other respects upon the same footing as the registrars of the other metropolitan County Courts.

That on the 9th Feb. 1869 your petitioner addressed the following letter to the said Court of Common Council:—

To the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled.

31, The Cedars, Putney, 9th Feb. 1869.

My Lord and Gentlemen,—The judges of the Court of Queen's Bench having in their recent judgment in the case of myself v. Nelson (as will be seen on reference to the shorthand writer's notes), unanimously decided that I had given "a complete answer to the accusations" that were brought against me, I venture most respectfully to address your honourable court, and to express a hope that you will deem it not unworthy of your high position and dignity to reconsider the resolution passed by you on the 2nd May 1867, removing me from my office.

The judges of the Court of Queen's Bench expressly stated that such decision was arrived at "after twice going through the evidence carefully," such evidence being the same evidence as was submitted to your honourable court on the 2nd May 1867. I do not hesitate to express my very deep and sincere regret that any circumstances should have arisen to cause such an unhappy difference between your honourable court and myself, especially after the many years I had the honour to be in your service.—I have the honour to remain, my lord and gentlemen, your most obedient and humble servant.

That on the 25th Feb. 1869 such letter from your petitioner was read in open court to the said Court of Common Council, when a resolution was passed that the said letter be ordered to lie upon the table.

That as the law now stands there is no redress open to your petitioner, save and except what may be granted by your honourable House.

Your petitioner, therefore, most humbly prays that your honourable House may be graciously pleased to take into consideration your petitioner's case, and the expediency of repealing so much of the stat. 15 Vict. c. 77, as relates to the salary of and to the powers of appointing and removing the registrar of the said City of London Court, and of enacting that the powers of appointment and removal of the registrar of the said City of London Court shall be, and be vested in the Lord High Chancellor, and exercised by him, as in the case of the Metropolitan County Courts, and that the registrar of the said City of London Court shall be placed now, and from time to time, in all other respects upon the same footing as the registrars of the Metropolitan County Courts. And that your honourable House will pass such measures to restore your petitioner to his said office, or to grant such other relief to your petitioner as your honourable House may deem expedient.

And your petitioner will ever pray, &c.

ROLLS COURT.

Wednesday, May 26.

Re JAMES GRAY (a solicitor): Ex parte THE INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY.

His LORDSHIP gave judgment in this matter, which some time since came before the court at the instance of the above society, and of which the object was to investigate the conduct of Mr. Gray in respect to professional transactions. It was alleged that Mr. Gray had filed a bill for specific performance in the name of the assignee of a bankrupt without his knowledge, and also that he had allowed a client to make an affidavit, the contents of which he knew to be false. The bill was dismissed with costs, and as it had been filed without the sanction of the Court of Bankruptcy, the assignee was liable for the costs, which amounted to 140*l.*, and which he paid. He sued Gray for the amount, but obtained only a composition of 2*s.* in the pound.

Haynes appeared for the Law Society.

Gray conducted his own defence.

His LORDSHIP, after remarking upon the importance of solicitors investigating the statements of their clients as to facts and dates, said that here the client had been allowed to swear to gross falsehoods. After stating some of the circumstances, showing no authority to file the bill had been given, his Lordship said, in the present practice a retainer from the client should be had in every case—indeed, Lord Langdale thought a written retainer was proper in each instance of a bill being filed; but the course was for the court to rely on the honour of the Profession, and experience justified it. Mr. Gray must be suspended from practising as an attorney or solicitor for ten years, though, if reparation were made to the injured party, the case might be reconsidered. In conclusion, his Lordship observed upon the value to the Bench and the Profession in both branches, of the services rendered by the Law Society in matters of this description.

LIST OF GENTLEMEN APPLYING TO BE ADMITTED AS ATTORNEYS.

Trinity Term, 1869, pursuant to Judges' Orders.

Bateson, Andrew Malcolm, Masham, article to J. Fisher, Masham
Eastham, William, 5, Park-row, Knightsbridge; and Clitheroe—J. Eastham, Clitheroe
Harvey, Frank Jacob, Torquay; and 151, Warwick-street, Hanover-square—B. Hooper, Torquay
Kennedy, Charles, Birmingham—E. H. Collis, Birmingham
Lind, Charles Henry, 9, Travers-road, Holloway—J. Guscotte, 19, Essex-street, Strand

Trinity Vacation, 1869, pursuant to Judges' Orders.

Gray, Frederick John, Louth; and 12, Montague-place, Poplar—W. Grange, Great Grimsby; and E. Byrne, Whitehall-place
Blake, Charles, Newport; and 32, Fitzroy-street—H. J. Davis, Newport; G. Blakey, Newport; and W. J. Lloyd, Newport
Buller, William Templer, Richmond—H. A. Templer, Bridport
Collins, James Duppa, Wisbech; and 8, Pembroke-gardens, Notting-hill—J. Bowker, 6, Bedford-row
Comins, Thomas Melhuish, the Younger, Witheridge; and 1, Caroline-street, Bedford-square—T. M. Comins, sen., Witheridge
Davidson, James Henry, 22, Basinghall-street—S. Davidson, 22, Basinghall-street
Edwards, Edmund George, Pontypool; and 12, Compton-street—E. B. Edwards, Pontypool
Funston, James, 57, New North-road, Hoxton—H. Webster, 10, Basinghall-street; and G. E. East, 3, Sion College-gardens
Greening, Joseph Robert, 12, Arthur-road, Brixton—J. S. Bennett, 37 and 38, Mark-lane
Heelis, John Alcock, 28, Cambridge-terrace; and Appleby—E. Waugh, Cockermouth
Jackson, Henry James, Bardsley-gate, Cheshire—H. Hall, jun., Ashton-under-Lyne
Lucas, Lionel Richard, jun., Louth; and 19, Keppel-street, Russell-square—W. Allison, Louth
Morgan, William, 36, Great Western-terrace, Bayswater; and Mordan, Rhyl—J. P. Jones, Denbigh; and G. Kendrick, 10, King William-street
Payne, William Griffin, 8, Ampton-street, Gray's-inn-road; and Worcester Eynesbury, Hunts—S. M. Beale, Worcester
Rendell, William Francis, 42, Great Ormond-street—R. Francis, Newton Abbot
Sampson, Joseph, Manchester—J. Lamb, Manchester
Williams, David Theodore, B.A., Wigan—E. Scott, Wigan; and E. Scott, Wigan
[For former names see page 491 of last volume.]

Applications to be re-admitted in Trinity Term 1869.

Evans, John, Wrexham
Leigh, Alfred, Baguley, near Manchester

Applications to take out or renew Certificates on the 14th day of June 1869.

Andrews, James Haddfield, 59, Maitland-park-road, Haverstock-hill
Buckingham, William Fletcher, Croydon; 3, Abingdon-villas, Kensington; and Congleton (for 24th May) Crickmore, William, Brookdish, Norfolk
Eley, John, 22, Central Avenue, Oxford-market; 11, Newport-court, Newport-market; 329, High Holborn; and 13, Took's-court
Knocker, William Wheatley, Sevenoaks; Anerley; Upper Norwood; and Dover (for 31st May) Messiter, Frederic, Aston; and Birmingham
Morris, William Hughes, Carmarthen; and 11, Maddox-street
Nelson, John, Wath-upon-Deane
Newington, George, Goudhurst; and Catford-bridge
Openshaw, James, Manchester
Symonds, Joseph Hargrave, Tottenham; and Lower Edmonton

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY. LAST DAY OF PROOF.

BOWYER (James), Peterchurch, Hereford. June 25; G. Games, solicitor, Hay, Brecon. July 6; V.C. S., at one.
KAY (Samuel), Monk's Coppenhall, Chester. June 19; E. S. Bent, solicitor, Winsford, Chester. July 5; V.C. S., at twelve.

MORTIMER (William), Albion public-house, Thornhill-road, Barnsbury, July 1; Martineau and Reid, solicitors, 2, Raymond-buildings, July 15; V.C.S., at twelve.
 REED (Elizabeth), Alvaston-house, Derby, June 21; T. M. Clabury, 68, Cheapside, E.C. July 5; V.C.J., at twelve.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. C. 35.

Last day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.
 ALMOND (Emma), Telford-lodge, Lower Tulse-hill, June 30; W. Holland, solicitor, 30, Bedford-row.
 BENNETT (Jno. S.), 37 and 38, Mark-lane, London, Aug. 1; G. R. Longden, solicitor, 37 and 38, Mark-lane.
 CALTHORPE (Hon. Frances Elizabeth G.), 11, Chesham-place, July 1; Whitley and Whitley, solicitors, 41, Waterloo-street, Birmingham.
 COMBER (Andrew), Stand-house, Lancaster, June 24; Cunliffe and Leaf, solicitors, Brown-street, Manchester.
 DEW (Capt. Rodrick), Whitney-court, Hereford, July 1; Rogers, Jull, and Co., solicitors, 40, Jernyn-street, St. James's, W.
 DILLING (Wm.), Waggon and Horses, Surbiton, victualler, June 24; Edward Fuller, solicitor, 39, Hatton-garden.
 DENNAGE (Wm.), Albion House, Surbiton, Surrey, July 1; Jno. Evans, 39, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
 EARP (Ann), Wolverhampton, July 20; F. Gough, solicitor, Wolverhampton.
 EDWARDS (George N.), 20, Finsbury-square, June 30; Brooks and Co., solicitors, 7, Goddian-street, Doctors'-commons.
 EYTON (Robert J.), Manor-house, Whitestunton, Somerset, July 1; Tucker and Forward, solicitors, Chard, Somerset.
 FRERE (John), Whitechurch, Southampton, June 30; J. Lott, solicitor, 12, Great George-street, Westminster.
 HARRISON (John), 34, Melton-street, Euston-square, June 24; Pews and Irvine, solicitors, 31, Mark-lane.
 LASKELLES (William), 3, Clifford's-inn, June 30; F. Kearsey, solicitor, 35, Old Jewry, London.
 LAW (John), West Melton, Wath-upon-Dearne, York, Aug. 1; Nicholson, Saunders, and Co., solicitors, Wath, near Rotherham.
 LOVINGHAM (William), Paradise, Chardstock, Dorset, July 1; Tucker and Forward, solicitors, Chard, Somerset.
 LOWER (Jno.), Bilston, Staffordshire, July 20; F. Gough, solicitor, Wolverhampton.
 LUTMAN (Jno.), Portsea, Southampton, July 1; Pearce and Marshall, solicitors, 13, Union-street, Portsea.
 MACLAURIN (Elizabeth L.), 27, Pelham-street, Thurlow-square, July 20; Boodle and Partington, solicitors, 53, Davies-street, Berkeley-square.
 MCBRIDE (Thos.), 43, Upper Grosvenor-street, July 7; W. Day, solicitor, 1, Queen-street, Mayfair.
 MONK (Thomas B.), Rosherville, near Gravesend, June 24; T. Cheesman, solicitor, 103, Parrock-street, Gravesend.
 OLLIVY (Sir Joshua F.), 12, Chichester-terrace, Brighton, and Paris, June 1; Jno. Evans, 39, Lincoln's-inn-fields, W.C.
 POTTER (Mary Ann), 16, Mortimer-street, Cavendish-square, June 24; Jno. Wells, solicitor, 23, Percy-street, Bedford-square.
 QUINCY (Richard Fairlight), West-hill, Sydenham, July 21; Thomas and Hollams, solicitors, Mineing-lane, London.
 SHERRESON (William), Kingston-upon-Hull, Aug. 1; Lightfoot, Earnshaw, and Co., solicitors, 12, Bowl-alley-lane, Hull.
 SEWARD (William), 15, Medburn-street, St. Pancras, July 5; T. W. Marchant, solicitor, Deptford.
 STROEN (Henry), Long-lane, July 10; W. H. Haycock, solicitor, 4, College-hill.
 THOMAS (Thomas), 8, Addison-terrace, Kensington, July 1; W. F. Haycock, solicitor, 4, College-hill, E.C.
 WATSON (William), 80, Piccadilly, July 3; W. H. Haycock, solicitor, 4, College-hill, London.
 YATES (Joanna), Norfolk-road, Sheffield, June 21; Charles G. Eam, solicitor, 7, George-street, Sheffield.

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDENDS IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each, in three months, unless other claimants sooner appear.]

HAWKINS (Captain A. M.), Royal Navy, Dividend on 4000/. Reduced Three per Cents. Claimant, Christopher S. Hawkins, executor of the late.
 TELL (Elizabeth G.), Charlton, Middlesex. Dividend on 200/. Reduced Three per Cents. Claimant, said Elizabeth G. Tell.
 TURNER (Eliza Ann), Lewes, Dividend on 1217. 11s. 3d. Reduced Three per Cents. Claimant, R. Turner.

NEW CHANCERY CHIEF CLERK.—Mr. Pritchard, the additional chief clerk at Vice-Chancellor Malins's chambers, took his seat on Friday week for the first time, and will hear cases from G to N in the alphabet of causes.

LIFE ASSURANCE.—A petition in favour of Mr. Cave's Life Assurance Bill, to which Mr. Cogan intends, pursuant to notice, to call attention in the House of Commons after the recess, sets forth that a particular company named has, as the petitioners are informed and believe, assumed the liabilities of about twenty other offices, and that policy-holders transferred without their leave being asked or given can get no information as to what those liabilities are. On the petitioners proposing to surrender their policies, one who had paid in premiums nearly 600l. was offered 84l. 6s. 6d., while a gentleman who had paid nearly 370l. was offered the sum of 34l. 9s. 2d. The office which has so freely assumed the liabilities of other companies, and which, we may add, is one of the most largely advertised, has, it is alleged, no recognised legal existence at all, except under a title which it has abandoned.

THE NEW COURTS OF JUSTICE.—The Act of the Courts of Justice (Embankment Site) Bill has been issued. It is indorsed by Mr. Layard, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Mr. Ayrton. The Bill declares that it is expedient that the courts of justice should be built on or near that portion of the land reclaimed by the embankment of the river Thames which lies between the Temple and Somerset House; and it will enable the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Works and Public Buildings to acquire that site for the erection and concentration of the courts of justice and of various offices belonging thereto. The amendment of existing Acts relating to the courts of justice is also provided for in the bill. The commissioners are to be invested with the necessary powers by the Act. The limit for the compulsory purchase of land is to be three years, and all expenses are to be defrayed out of moneys to be provided by Parliament. No building is to be commenced until a contract for the completion of the whole of the buildings proposed to be constructed on the prescribed lands has been entered into and laid before Parliament; nor unless it appears that the total amount of money to be paid under the contract, together with the cost of purchasing the lands, will not exceed 1,600,000l. The words "Courts of Justice" are intended to include the Superior Courts of Law and Equity, the Probate and Divorce Courts, the High Court of Admiralty, and such other courts for the administration of justice as may be prescribed by the Treasury.

THE BENCH AND THE BAR.

DINNER TO HER MAJESTY'S JUDGES.

On Wednesday evening the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress entertained Her Majesty's judges, several members of Parliament, the aldermen, metropolitan police magistrates, many of the more prominent members of the Bar, and the high officers of the Corporation, at dinner at the Mansion-house, which was served in the Egyptian-hall. The guests were upwards of 260 in number, and included, among others, Lord Justice Selwyn and Lady Selwyn, Mr. Baron Bramwell, Mr. Justice Blackburn and Miss Blackburn, Mr. Justice Keating, Mr. Justice and Lady Lush, Mr. Justice Montagu Smith, Mr. Justice and Lady Hannen, Mr. Justice and Lady Brett, Mr. Baron and Lady Cleasby, Vice-Chancellor and Lady Malins, Sir William and Lady Erle, the Right Hon. Spencer Walpole, M.P., Sir Roundell Palmer, M.P., and Lady Laura Palmer, Sir Richard and Lady Bagallay, Sir Thomas Henry, Mr. Craufurd, M.P., and Mrs. Craufurd, Mr. Thomas Hughes, M.P., and Mrs. Hughes, Mr. John Locke, Q.C., M.P., and Mrs. Locke, Mr. Amplett, Q.C., M.P., the Hon. George Denman, Q.C., M.P., and Mrs. Denman, Mr. Jessel, Q.C., M.P., and Mrs. Jessel, Mr. Roebuck, Q.C., Mr. Greenwood, Q.C., Mr. Bliss, Q.C., Mr. Southgate, Q.C., Mr. Keene, Q.C., Mr. Serjeant and Mrs. Parry, Mr. Serjeant Tindal Atkinson, Mr. Serjeant Robinson, Mr. Serjeant Simon, M. P., and Mrs. Simon, Mr. Serjeant Cox, Mr. Serjeant Sargood, Mr. Alderman and Sheriff Cotton and Mrs. Cotton, Mr. Sheriff and Miss Hutton, Mr. Oke, Chief Clerk to the Lord Mayor; Mr. Under-Sheriff and Mrs. Crossley, Mr. Under-Sheriff Slee, Mr. Selfe, Mr. Cooke, Mr. Burcham, Mr. Partridge, Mr. Patteson, Mr. Poland, Mr. Besley, Mr. Daly, Mr. R. N. Philipps, Mr. De Tracy Gould, of the American Bar; Mr. James Vallentin, Mr. C. K. Freshfield, Solicitor to the Bank of England, and Mrs. Freshfield; Mr. Avory, clerk of arraigns, Central Criminal Court; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Brewer, Mrs. Gregory Foster, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ashurst, Mr. A. R. Bristow, Solicitor to the Admiralty, and Mrs. Bristow; Mr. Richard Mullens, Mr. C. O. Humphreys.

On the removal of the cloth the usual loyal and constitutional toasts were given from the chair, the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress having previously, according to custom, drank to their guests in a loving cup.

Major-General Boileau responded to the toast of the Army, Admiral Sir George Back to that of the Navy, and Captain Pawson to that of the Volunteers.

The Lord Mayor, in proposing the toast of the evening, "Her Majesty's Judges," said the city of London had been long and intimately connected with them, and his brother magistrates and himself had regarded that association as most beneficial to themselves and most advantageous to the administration of justice within the city. One of the most distinguished judges the other day had been pleased to say the advantage was not all on the side of the magistrates, and that the judges themselves reciprocated the kindly feelings which the magistrates had invariably manifested towards them. From all time the judges had exercised their functions regardless of all political or other consideration save that of doing justice between man and man, and the name of an English judge was held in respect by the people of all nations who had had opportunities of observing how justice was administered in this country.

Mr. Baron Bramwell, whose name had been coupled with the toast, said he hoped and believed it was not a mere formal compliment that had been paid the judges, but the expression of substantial goodwill, and, excepting his unworthy self, he thought they deserved such a compliment. (A laugh.) Some people were prone to praise bygone days, but he ventured to think there never was a better set of men filling judicial offices than at the present time. Who knew better the good qualities of his judicial brethren than he did? The Lord Mayor had said they discharged their duties without any other desire than to do justice between man and man. Though formally called to the discharge of those functions by the Crown, they were in reality appointed by the people, for it was public opinion which designated them for the office (hear, hear), and he ventured to think, therefore, the compliment paid them that evening was a real one. There was one thing, however, they could not do; they could not decide in favour of both parties, and they occasionally gave a very great deal of dissatisfaction. (A laugh.) The rogue generally got the better. He had put a hand in his pocket and found nothing. He had tried and failed. But where there were two litigants one could not understand why he was beaten, and he was prone to find fault with the judge, observing that if he had only a little more brains or a little more law the result might have been different. To another man it might be said, "Are you not obliged to Mr. Justice So-and-So for ruling as he did?" "Not in the least," was the reply; "he would have been out of his senses if he had not decided in my favour." (A laugh.) So the judges often got into trouble. He did not know any way of reconciling those anomalies than by expressions of goodwill by their fellow-subjects such as had been witnessed that evening. He was sure that what might be called the impartial public were satisfied with the way in which the judges discharged their duties. (Hear, hear.) There was no place where they discharged those duties to so large an extent as in the City of London, and while sitting at the Central Criminal Court he had often received great assistance and comfort from the aldermen sitting by his side when his own judgment failed him. It was generally a great satisfaction for a judge to know he had by his side practical men from whom he should derive assistance at times. He thanked the company on behalf of the judges of the land for the honour that had been paid them, and which was eminently calculated to animate them in the discharge of their duty.

Sir Roundell Palmer, speaking to the toast of "The House of Commons," which had been proposed by the Lord Mayor, said on most occasions he might feel almost oppressed with the duty of returning thanks for that house in the presence of so many members of it; but perhaps on that occasion he might be permitted to see some degree of propriety in calling on a member of his own profession to respond for that house, because on that occasion that great City of London, at all times foremost in the vindication of the public liberties of this country, met according to its annual custom to do honour to the administration of the law as represented in the persons of its judges. As the judges were in this country the representatives of the law, so the members of the House of Commons had cast on them in an especial manner the duty of being the representatives of public liberty, and therefore such a toast as that invited them to regard, above all other things, as the great happiness and glory of this country, the union and the consolidation of the law and of liberty. (Cheers.) Liberty was as the air we breathed, without which we could not live for any purpose worthy of a true or noble life; but if it were made the instrument of every gust of popular caprice or passion, it would no longer deserve the name. Liberty, therefore, to be worthy of the name, must be placed under the guarantee of law. It must show respect for all law. It must aim at establishing and securing itself only on legal foundations, and by legal means, and he was happy to think that spirit pervaded the House of Commons at this day as strongly as at any former times. The late House afforded a remarkable instance of their confidence in the administration of the law by referring for the first time the determination of the great question of the right to sit in that House to the ordinary tribunals of the country. A most difficult duty it was, and he would only say that from one end of the country to the other all persons were sure that that duty had been discharged with the same integrity and fidelity as all other duties of the Judges were invariably performed. (Cheers.) They did not all agree in that House of Commons, but, whether in a majority or a minority, those who had the honour to belong to the present House would universally say that they did not recognise in it features of a character less worthy of the country, less full of security in the present and hope in the future, than those which existed in the former House. There was the same spirit of English gentlemen pervading it, the same spirit of discipline and self respect, the same loyalty to the Crown, the same intention and determination to maintain law and order, and to go forth animated by the desire of continual progress, but still adhering to the old paths of the great Constitution under which it was our happiness to live. (Cheers.)

Lord Justice Selwyn briefly responded to the toast of "The Equity Judges;" Mr. Baron Bramwell, in complimentary terms, proposed "The Health of the Lord Mayor;" the Queen's Advocate (Sir Travers Twiss) replied to the toast of "The Bar of England;" Sir Thomas Henry to that of "The Metropolitan Magistrates;" Mr. Alderman Sidney to that of "The Aldermen of London;" Sir William Erle proposed "The Health of the Lady Mayoress."

MAGISTRATE AND PARISH LAWYER.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

HIGHWAY—CATTLE STRAYING—RIGHT OF PASTURAGE.—The Highways Act (27 & 28 Vict. c. 101, s. 25), inflicting a penalty on suffering cattle to stray on a highway, excepts any right of pasturage that may exist on the sides of any highway. The owner was held to be liable to the penalty, though having such right of pasturage, if the keeper in whose charge the cattle are, suffer them to stray from the sides upon the highway: (Golding v. Stocking, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 479. Q. B.)

POOR-RATE—APPEAL—NOTICE—ASSESSMENT COMMITTEE.—An appellant, before appealing to the quarter sessions against a rate, must in all cases first appeal to the assessment committee, and this is necessary for every separate rate though made according to the same valuation list. A railway company objected before the assessment committee to a rate made on the 15th May, and, having failed to obtain relief, appealed to the quarter sessions, who stated a case for the opinion of the Queen's Bench. Another rate was made on Oct. 19 on the same valuation list, and the company, without again appealing to the committee, gave notice of appeal to the quarter sessions against that rate, and applied to enter and register it, on the ground that the first appeal had not been disposed of and that the same question was involved. The quarter sessions was held rightly to have refused to do so: (R. v. Great Western Railway Company, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 481. Q. B.)

DRUNKENNESS—23 & 24 VICT. c. 27, ss. 30 AND 40.—B. preferred an information against C. for drunkenness and indecent behaviour in the street under the above statute. On examination B. admitted that he was not a constable or peace officer of the borough, on which the charge was dismissed, and no certificate of dismissal was given. An information for the same offence was then preferred by a constable, and the defendant applied for a certificate of dismissal from the former charge, which the justices refused on the ground that it had not been heard and decided on the merits. They were held to have rightly proceeded to hear the second information: (Foster v. Hull, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 482. Q. B.)

ALBHOUSE—GAMING—PLAYING AT TENPINS FOR BEER—LICENCE.—B., an alehouse keeper, and three of his customers, played at tenpins for a pint of beer each game, the beer being supplied as it was won or lost, and being drunk by all the players, but paid for only by the losers. Held to be an offence against the tenor of the licence, as allowing gaming upon the premises: (Darnford v. Taylor, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 483. Q. B.)

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES—STORE—FARMER'S BARN.—B., a farmer, had in his barn or out-house a balance or portable weighing machine and two iron weights which were light. The inspector saw no produce about the premises, and could not prove that B. exposed or kept for sale or weighed for carriage any goods or produce. He was held not to be liable to the penalty: (Griffiths v. Place, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 484. Q. B.)

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT—CONSTITUTION OF COURT—PRESENCE OF TWO JUDGES AT TRIAL—COMMISSIONERS.—By the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 1 (Central Criminal Court Act), it is enacted that the Lord Mayor for the time being, the Lord Chancellor and Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, and all the judges for the time being of His Majesty's Courts of King's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer . . . the Aldermen of the City of London, the Recorder, the Common Serjeant, the Judges of the Sheriffs' Court . . . shall be the judges of a court to be called the Central Criminal Court. By sect. 2, after describing the limits of the said Act as to area and classes of offences, it is enacted that "it shall be lawful for the justices and judges of the Central Criminal Court aforesaid, or any two or more of them, to inquire of all such treasons, murders, felonies, and misdemeanors," &c. The plaintiff in error was tried at the Central Criminal Court upon an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences. The trial lasted several days, and was had before Mr. Kerr, who was originally appointed judge of the Sheriffs' Court, and who upon that court being afterwards constituted the London Small Debts Court, became the judge of such last-named court. The only other judge who was present at the trial was an alderman; but although several attended on different days, no one and the same alderman attended on each day of the trial. At the time the trial was proceeding other criminal courts were being held as branches of the Central Criminal Court. The plaintiff in error having been convicted, she brought error upon the grounds, first, that the same two justices and judges did not inquire of, hear, determine, and adjudge the misdemeanor alleged; secondly, that the said misdemeanors were inquired of by certain of the said justices in a room separate and apart from the others of the said justices then in general sessions assembled and sitting as usual in their ordinary place of sitting, the said room not having been a place duly appointed, &c.; thirdly, that the said Robert Malcolm Kerr was not at the time one of the judges of the Sheriffs' Court of the city of London. Held, 1st, that the court was properly constituted by the presence throughout the trial of one and the same judge; 2nd, that two or more courts were properly held at the same time; 3rd, that Mr. Kerr was a lawful judge of the said court: (Leveson v. The Queen, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 485.)

CRIMINAL LAW—BANKRUPTCY—EVIDENCE.—To render an examination of a bankrupt admissible under the seal of the court, pursuant to 24 & 25 Vict. c. 134, s. 203, it must appear that his answers, after they were reduced into writing, were signed and subscribed by the bankrupt: (R. v. Kean, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 498. Cr. Cas. Res.)

FALSE PRETENCES.—B. was indicted for obtaining goods in a market by falsely pretending that a room had been taken, at which to pay the market people for their goods. The jury found that the practice was for buyers to engage a room at a public house, and B. conveyed to the minds of the market people that he had such a room, and thereby induced them to intrust their goods to her. This was held not to be a sufficient false pretence, inasmuch as there was no evidence that the prisoner knew of such a practice, and the case being inconsistent with a promise on her part to engage such a room and pay for the goods there: (R. v. Burrows, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 499. Cr. Cas. Res.)

LANDPORT POLICE COURT.

(Before J. McCHEANE and G. CURTIS, Esqrs.)

Re MARSH.

Beer licence—Re-assessment—3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 1. Sect. 1 of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61 says that no licence shall be granted to a person (inter alia), unless the house with the premises occupied therewith, be rated in one sum to the rate for the relief of the poor of the parish or place on a rent or annual value of 15l. per annum at least, if situated in a certain way. A licence was granted to the defendant on Feb. 18, when the rateable value of her house was 6l. 10s. On the 1st April the house was re-assessed at 15l.

Held that the defendant was guilty of selling beer without a licence, and she was accordingly convicted in the mitigated penalty of 5l.

Mrs. Elizabeth Marsh was charged by Mr. John White, an officer of excise, upon an information, alleging that "within six calendar months last past, to wit, on the 12th April last past, at the parish of Portsea, in the borough of Portsmouth (she then and there being a person not duly licensed to sell beer, cider, or perry as the keeper of a common inn, alehouse, or victualling-house) did sell a certain quantity (to wit, one half pint) of beer by retail, to be drunk and consumed in and upon the house and premises where sold, without having an excise retail licence in force authorising her to do so; contrary to the form of the statute in that case made and provided, whereby she had forfeited the sum of 20l."

Mr. John White, supervisor of excise for the Portsmouth district, appeared in support of the information.

Cousins appeared for the defence.

Mr. White called Ambrose Westbrook, an officer of Inland Revenue, who said he knew the premises occupied by the defendant in Mary-street, Landport. On the 12th April he went there and purchased a glass of ale, for which he paid. The defendant served him personally. He drank the beer on the premises.—Cross-examined: I visited this house for the purpose of detection, and not because I wanted the beer. I asked for a cigar, and the answer I received was that they had no licence, and did not sell them. The name of the licence is "The Little Wonder."

Mr. White said he did not deny that a licence was granted to the defendant on the 18th Feb., but it was not in force. The licence was declared null and void, and the defendant was in the position of a person who had no licence at all. The licence was rendered void under the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 1, which said, "No licence to sell beer or cider by retail under 1 Will. 4, c. 64, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, or this Act, shall be granted to any person who shall not be the real resident, owner, and occupier of the house in which he shall apply to be licensed, nor unless the house, with the premises occupied therewith, be rated in one sum to the rate for the relief of the poor of the parish or place, on a rent or annual value of 15l. per annum at least, if situated in the cities of London or Westminster, or within the bills of mortality, or within any city, cinque port, town corporate, parish, or place, the population of which, according to the last Parliamentary census, shall exceed 10,000, or within one mile, by the nearest public street or path, from any polling place used at the last election for any town having the like population, and returning a member to Parliament; nor shall such licence be granted in respect of a house which shall not, with the premises occupied therewith, be rated in one sum to the rate for the relief of the poor of the parish, or place, on a rent or annual value of 11l., if situated within any city, cinque port, town corporate, parish, or place, the population of which, according to such last Parliamentary census shall extend over 2500 and shall not exceed 10,000, or be within one mile of any polling place used at the last election for any town having the like population as last aforesaid, and returning a member to Parliament, nor shall such licence be granted in respect of any house which shall not, with the premises occupied therewith, be rated in one sum to the rate for the relief of the poor of the parish, township, or place, on a rent or annual value of 8l., if situated elsewhere; licences granted contrary hereto shall be void."

Mr. S. Edwards produced the rate-book with the rate made in January. The rateable value of the house occupied by the defendant was 6l. 10s. The defendant was not the same party who was rated on that question. The last rate previous to the 15th Feb. was 6l. 10s. On the 1st April the house was reassessed at 15l.

Mr. McCHEANE said the magistrates could take cognisance of no rating except that prior to the granting of the licence.

Cousins then read the 2nd section of the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, which was as follows: "And be it enacted that every person who shall apply to be licensed to retail beer or cider shall produce to the proper officer of excise authorised to grant such licences, a certificate in writing from an overseer of the township, parish, or place in which he shall reside, certifying that such applicant is the real resident, holder, and occupier of the said house, which with the premises occupied therewith is rated in one rate to the poor-rates, according to the last sum or rate made and allowed in such township, parish, or place for the relief of the poor, and every such certificate shall be deposited and left with the proper officer of excise, by whom such licence shall be granted, and a duplicate thereof shall be deposited and left with the clerk of the peace for the county, riding, or city, within which such township, parish, or place is situate." What he submitted was that the licence was granted on a certificate which was perfectly true, and which was granted by the overseers. A little knowledge of law was a bad thing, although a good knowledge of it was very useful, but in this case a little legal knowledge had evidently led the officers of excise into some little difficulty. He contended that it was only necessary for the premises to be rated to the relief of the poor, and he maintained that the overseers had the power of altering, adjusting, fixing, and determining the assessments, and their acts would fix the rating at once. Supposing that a man had a hut, and it was pulled down, and a splendid mansion was built in its place—would not a re-assessment take place, and the rate go on from that moment? The property in question was re-assessed, and the licence was granted on a truthful certificate. He held that the Act should be construed strictly in favour of the defendant, and stated that if the overseers were to blame for giving the certificate his client should not suffer, and there was a remedy against the overseers under the 5th section of the same Act of Parliament, which read as follows:—"And be it enacted, that every overseer of the poor who shall refuse to grant a certificate of the rating or assessment of any rated house and premises, when demanded, or of any person having claimed to be rated in respect of any newly-erected houses not yet rated, or who shall falsely certify any house to be rated when the same was not duly rated at the time of the making and allowance of the last rate made and allowed for the relief of the poor, and every overseer or other person who shall falsely certify any person to be the real resident, holder, and occupier of any house, contrary to the fact, or falsely certify the rent or annual value at which any dwelling-house and premises are now or will be rated, or the rent paid for the same, or the annual value thereof, or shall grant any certificate which shall in any other respect be wilfully false, shall forfeit twenty pounds." In addition to the house there were some premises at the back which were connected with the house, and these together would make up the rating. He was sure the magistrates would think with him that this was a case which never ought to have been brought into court at all. He then called the overseers, Messrs. Williams and Hogg, who proved assessing the property at 15l., and giving a certificate.

Mr. Windsor was called, and stated that the property was worth being rated at 15l.

Mr. Webb, manager to Messrs. Simmons and Co., proved that the premises spoken of by Mr. Cousins were rented by the defendant, and were attached to the house.

This was the case, and the magistrates retired, and after a short absence returned into court, when Mr. McCHEANE said the magistrates had carefully considered the case, and had come to the conclusion that they were bound by the 1st section of the Act, and they felt that they were bound under that Act to convict. The penalty was 20l., but in this case it would be mitigated to 5l.

Cousins asked for a case, but the application was refused.

STRANGE TRIAL.—The trial of Mumler, a photographer in New York, for obtaining money under false pretences, by professing to photograph spirits, has naturally ended in the discharge of the accused. It is impossible to protect all the fools in the world. The judge, in giving his decision, intimated his belief that the whole thing was a trick. The pleadings were extraordinary. The counsel for the accused read from the Bible the accounts of spiritual appearances in the case of Balaam, the witch of Endor, &c., and the prosecution ventured no other reply than that such cases were limited to ancient times. During the trial the counsel of Mumler asserted that there are 11,000,000 spiritists in the United States.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.—Mr. Mansfield, sitting magistrate at Marylebone, has removed, or done his best to remove, a cruel oppression. Under the existing law, a tradesman whose scales are false as against himself, is as liable to be fined as if they were against his customers. He is, in fact, liable to be ruined for being needlessly liberal. Mr. Edward Ward, greengrocer, of Hampstead-road, was so fined, refused to pay, and was summoned before the magistrate. It was argued that no statute existed punishing a man for giving more than he promised, and Mr. Mansfield, declaring that was his view of the law, dismissed the complaint. If he is right, a good many tradesmen have been very much ill-used. Nothing has tended to make the leet juries so unpopular as this absurd confusion between swindling and liberality, which is always quoted by the tradesmen who oppose inspection.

FRIENDLY LOAN SOCIETIES.—At the South-west Police-court, the treasurer and secretary of the Pride of Bermondsey Friends of Labour Loan Society was summoned by one of the members to show cause why they refused to pay him 9l. 10s., which sum he had deposited, and had given the usual notice of withdrawal.—Mr. Edwin who appeared for the complainant, said that his client had been for some time a member of the society, and having deposited 9l. 10s., he felt anxious to withdraw, as the society was not going on so well as might be expected. Upon giving the usual notice he was told that there were no funds for distribution, but his client had ascertained that the treasurer had 10l. 17s. in hand. The treasurer told his worship that he could not pay the complainant out of that sum, inasmuch as there were other claimants before him. Unfortunately for the society they had had a dishonest secretary, who was trusted by a member owing to his holding a situation in the Council of Education. His misconduct became known, and he was suspended from that position. The late secretary had lent money to his own friends, who were defaulters.—The magistrate thought the best thing would be to wind-up the society.—The secretary said that they had gone through the books, and found that 10l. 10s. was due to the society, and when that was got in there would be a surplus of 43l. odd. The notices of withdrawal came in quicker than the funds, and as the complainant was sixth on the list, he must wait till it came to his turn.—The magistrate observed that it was quite clear the defendants were willing to pay every one, therefore he thought it better to adjourn the case for a month, and he advised them to communicate with Mr. Tidd Pratt, who, he was sure, would assist them in winding-up the society.

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

TRUST ESTATE—CONSTRUCTIVE NOTICE—DISCHARGE OF DEBT BY ONE OF TWO EXECUTORS.—At the death of a testator T. G. in Jan. 1849, 5000l. was owing to him by the trustees of Lord Durham's estate, upon the bond given in 1846. Upon Lord Durham's coming of age in 1849, his bond for 5000l. to the executors of T. G. was substituted for that given by the trustees of the Durham estate. T. G.'s will was proved in Dec. 1849. In 1859, 2500l. of the money due upon the bond was paid off by Lord Durham, for which he received the joint receipt of C. and W. as executors of G. In 1862 the remaining 2500l. was paid to W. (who was in the habit of receiving the interest upon the bond and giving receipts "for self and co-executor"), and the bond was returned to Lord Durham, with a receipt for the money, by C. and W. indorsed upon it. It turned out that C.'s signature was forged by W., who had appropriated the money, and was now undergoing penal servitude, upon his own confession, for the forgery. The suit was instituted by C., and the persons interested in the testator's estate to compel Lord Durham to make good the loss occasioned by W.'s fraud, on the ground that the money was trust money, and that the payment to one of the trustees did not operate as a discharge to the person indebted, who had notice of the trust: Held (affirming the decision of James, V.C.), that there was no equity to affect the Earl of Durham. Although the earl might have intended, as was usual, to have the receipt of two executors, the receipt of one was in fact sufficient. It had been argued that at the time when the payment was made all the testator's debts had been paid, and the executors had become trustees, but it was not proved that the Earl of Durham had notice of this, and he had a right to treat them still as executors. Bill dismissed with costs: (Charlton v. The Earl of Durham, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 467. L. C.)

WILL.—B., who prepared his own will, after writing his name in the attestation clause, signed his name a second time after the signatures of the attesting witnesses. The court granted probate without the second signature on affidavit of the attesting witnesses that the signature of the testator was in the attestation clause when they witnessed the will: (Re Casmore, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 497. Prob. Ct.)

MANOR—COMMON OF PASTURE ON WASTES—CLAIM OF OCCUPIERS—CUSTOM.—In an action to recover possession of certain horses of the plaintiff's, seized and impounded by the defendant, the latter pleaded, first, that the said horses were wrongfully in a certain close within the manor of S., the freehold of the lord of the said manor, and were seized, damage feasant, by the defendant, by the order of and as bailiff of the said lord; and, secondly, that there was within the said manor an ancient custom there used for the said lord to take and seize all horses, &c., being wrongfully upon the waste or common lands of the manor, and to detain and impound the same until payment by the owners of the amount of damage done and costs of keep, and that at the time, &c., the said horses were wrongfully in and upon certain common lands within the said manor, and thereupon, the defendant, by the order and as bailiff of the said lord, seized, and detained, and impounded the said horses, &c. To these pleas the plaintiff replied, first, an ancient custom for the tenants respectively of tenements and premises in the said manor (one of which such tenants he alleged himself to be), of right to have common of pasture for all their horses and commonable cattle levant and couchant upon the said tenements and premises respectively in and upon the said close (which he alleged to be waste land in and part of the said manor), on and from the 15th May until Candlemas every year; and that the plaintiff, as such tenant, before the time, &c., put the said horses in and upon the said close, in due right and enjoyment of the said common of pasture, and the said horses so being in and upon the said close were wrongfully seized, &c.; and secondly, a like custom for such tenants to have common of pasture for the like period in every year in and upon the commonable lands of the said manor: Held, on demurrer, by the Court of Exchequer (Kelly, C. B., and Bramwell, Pigott, and Cleasby, BB.), that the custom claimed by the plaintiff in this replication was bad: (Knight v. King, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 494. Ex.)

ELEMENTARY PRECEDENTS IN CONVEYANCING. (a)

A Collection of practical Forms designed for professional Use, and suited to the Emergencies of actual Practice, with Notes.

(Continued from page 14.)

PRECEDENTS.

PARTNERSHIP ARRANGEMENTS.

104. Articles of partnership.

Articles of agreement made, &c., between A. B., of &c., of the one part, and C. D., of &c., of the other part. Witnesseth that the said parties, having agreed to enter into partnership, do hereby agree the one with the other of them as follows:—

1. They shall become and remain co-partners in the business of _____ for the term of _____ years, from the _____ day of _____ 18____, under the style or firm of _____

2. The business shall be carried on at No. _____ in _____ street, _____ of which premises the said partners have obtained as part of their partnership estate a lease for a term of _____ years, or at such other place or places as shall be agreed upon between them.

3. The said partners shall be true and faithful to each other, and each partner shall devote his whole time to, and diligently employ himself in, the business of the partnership, and carry on the same for the greatest advantage; and neither partner shall directly or indirectly engage in any business except the business of the partnership, and upon account thereof.

4. The capital of the said partnership shall consist of the sum of £ _____, now brought into the business by the said A. B., and of the sum of £ _____ now brought into the business by the said C. D., and such further sums of money to be advanced by the said partners in equal proportions as shall be required from time to time for carrying on the same, each partner to be allowed interest after the rate of £ _____ per cent. per annum on all capital employed, advanced, or brought in by him.

5. The clear profits of the partnership, after paying thereout all rents, rates, taxes, wages, salaries, and expenses of carrying on the business, and the interest in respect of capital, shall be divided equally between the said partners, and all losses shall be borne by them in equal proportions, unless incurred through the wilful neglect or default of either, in which case the loss shall be made good by the defaulting partner.

6. The said partners shall be at liberty to draw out of the profits for maintenance any sum not exceeding £ _____ per each, all such sums to be entered in the cash book, and to be duly accounted for by them respectively on every settlement of accounts and division of profits; and any excess of drawings beyond the profits shall be repaid when ascertained, and, until paid, shall be considered a debt due to the partnership.

7. Neither partner shall, without the written consent of the other, employ any partnership moneys or effects, nor sign or use the name of the firm, nor engage the credit thereof, except for ordinary partnership purposes; nor, without the consent of the other, buy or enter into any contract for the purchase of any stock for the purposes of the business exceeding the price of £ _____; nor transact any business or enter into any contract with, or give credit to, any person after he shall be requested by the other not to do so; nor, without the consent of the other, compound, release, or discharge any debt owing to the partnership, or draw, accept, or indorse, any bill of exchange or promissory note, or contract any debt on account of the partnership out of the regular course thereof; nor, without such consent, employ or discharge or enter into any engagement with any clerk, foreman, or other servant whatsoever, or enter into any bond, or become bail, surety, or security for any person.

8. Books of account shall be kept, and proper entries made therein daily of all sums received or paid, all work done, and all goods bought, sold, received, or delivered, and all other transactions usually entered into books of account, kept by persons engaged in the like business.

9. On the _____ day of _____ next, and on the _____ days of _____ and _____ in every subsequent year of the said term, a general account shall be made and taken of all moneys, stock, effects, debts, and things belonging or due and owing to the partnership, and of all moneys, debts, and liabilities due or owing by the partnership, and of all other things included in like accounts, and a just valuation made of the particulars in such account capable of valuation, and two copies of the account and valuation shall be made, and each copy signed by both partners, who shall each keep one such copy and be bound thereby; but if any manifest error be found therein by either, and signified to the other within six calendar months after the same shall have been signed, such error shall be rectified.

(a) By THOMAS WILKINSON, Esq., Liverpool.

10. If either of the said partners shall desire to terminate the said partnership, and shall give six calendar months' previous written notice of such desire to the other, or leave it at the place of business for the time being, then the partnership shall determine at the expiration of such six calendar months.

11. On the expiration of the said term of years, or on the earlier dissolution of the said partnership (as in clause 10 provided), the stock, credits, and effects, and the debts and liabilities of the partnership shall be ascertained, and in case the parties cannot agree, the same shall be valued by competent persons to be appointed as follows: Each partner shall appoint one such person, and the persons so appointed shall appoint a third valuer, and the valuation of such three persons, or any two of them, shall be final; and in case the said partnership shall be dissolved by notice as aforesaid, the partner to whom such notice shall be given shall have the option of purchasing the share and interest in the partnership of the partner giving such notice, and if he shall purchase it, then he shall pay and discharge all the debts and liabilities of the partnership, and indemnify the other therefrom. But if the partner to whom such notice shall be given shall decline to purchase, then the partner giving such notice shall have the option of purchasing the share of the partner receiving notice, and if he shall purchase it, then he shall pay and discharge all the debts and liabilities, and indemnify the other therefrom; but in case both partners decline to purchase then, and in the event of the determination of the partnership by effluxion of time, or in any other manner than by notice or by the death of either partner (as in clause 12 provided for), the said stock, credits, and effects, with the goodwill of the said business, shall be forthwith collected or converted into money, and thereout all debts and partnership liabilities shall be discharged, and it shall be ascertained what amount of profits each partner shall be then entitled to, and the surplus moneys (if any) shall be employed in or towards payment rateably of the respective amounts then due to the said partners.

12. If either partner shall die during the said term, the stock, credits, and effects, and the debts and liabilities of the partnership shall be forthwith ascertained, and in case of difference as to the value thereof, the same shall be valued by competent persons to be appointed as follows:—Each of them, the surviving partner and the representatives of the deceased partner, shall appoint one such person, and the persons so appointed shall appoint a third valuer, and the valuation of such three persons, or any two of them, shall be final, and the surviving partner shall have the option of purchasing the share and interest of the deceased partner at the amount of such valuation, and if he shall so purchase them he shall pay to the executors or administrators of the deceased partner one of the purchase-money within calendar months after the date of such purchase, another part thereof within calendar months after such date, and the balance thereof within calendar months after the date of such purchase with interest for the same sums respectively after the rate of £ per cent. per annum to be computed from the death of the partner to the date of payment, and shall give security for such purchase-money and interest to the satisfaction of the executors or administrators of the deceased partner; and the surviving partner shall also pay and discharge all the debts and liabilities of the partnership, and indemnify the said executors and administrators therefrom, but if the surviving partner shall decline to purchase and secure the payment thereof as aforesaid, then the stock credits and effects shall be forthwith collected or converted into money, and thereout all debts and partnership liabilities shall be discharged, and it shall be ascertained what amount the surviving partner, and the representatives of the deceased partner shall be respectively entitled to, and the surplus moneys (if any) shall be applied in or towards payment of the respective amount then due to such partner and representatives as aforesaid.

13. If at any time during the said term of years the said partners shall find it necessary to add to or amend these presents, or any article or thing herein contained, or to extend the said term, it shall be lawful for them so to do, by any writing signed by them respectively, and such additions, amendments, or extension of term shall be observed and performed in the same manner as if originally herein inserted.

14. And lastly, in case any dispute shall arise on the construction of these presents touching the business or the conduct and management thereof, or the settlement of the books and accounts, or the settling, dividing, or applying the profits or losses of the said partnership, or any other cause, matter, or thing relating to the same, then all such disputes shall be referred to arbitration in the usual manner. As witness, &c.

105. Receipt for purchase-money of half-interest in business and explaining articles of partnership.

Received the day of 18, from A.B. of, &c. [purchaser], the sum of £, and his acceptance to my draft [or his promissory-note, as the case may be] for £ in payment of the sum of £, the price as agreed for the purchase by him of one equal half part or share of the stock-in-trade, machinery, plant, fixtures, and goodwill of the business of, carried on by me in premises in, the whole whereof is this day agreed and valued between us at the sum of £. And it is agreed that notwithstanding the arrangement mentioned in our articles of partnership bearing even date herewith for the equal division of the profits and losses between myself and the said A.B., the said A.B. is to be entitled to only one th of profits and losses until the payment by him at maturity of the said acceptance [or promissory-note] for £, but from the date of payment of such £ the said A.B. is to share equally with me the profits and losses as mentioned in the said articles of partnership. And it is also agreed that until the payment to me of the said £ the said A.B. shall be only entitled to draw weekly on account of profits for maintenance the sum of in respect of every £ paid by him to me on account of the said sum of £ notwithstanding the arrangement in the said articles in reference thereto.

C. D. and A. B.

106. Memorandum cancelling articles of partnership (to be indorsed).

Memorandum of agreement that we have this day adjusted and settled all accounts between us relating to the within mentioned partnership business, and have paid and discharged, or otherwise provided for, all the debts and liabilities thereof, and hereby dissolve and put an end to the within written agreement of partnership. And we agree that the business heretofore carried on by us shall hereafter belong to the undersigned C. D. alone, and he shall be entitled to the whole of the stock-in-trade, implements, utensils and effects of the partnership, and the goodwill thereof, and be entitled to receive all the outstanding debts, assets, rights, and credits of the said business, and shall pay thereout all the liabilities (if any) of the same. And we further agree to execute mutual releases to each other in respect of the said business, and all matters arising thereout upon demand.

Dated the day of 18 A. B. and C. D.
(To be continued.)

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

LIFE ASSURANCE—CHANGE IN THE STATE OF HEALTH BEFORE PAYMENT OF PREMIUM.—The Court of Appeal has confirmed the decision of Malins, V.C., that where a change has taken place in the health of the life to be assured between the acceptance of the proposal and the payment of the premium, and which is not communicated to the officers, the policy is void: (The British Equitable Assurance Company v. The Great Western Railway Company, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 422. L. J.J.)

RAILWAY—RENTCHARGE—PRIORITY.—Lands were conveyed to a railway company by various persons in consideration of rentcharges created by sects. 10 and 11 of the Lands Clauses Acts; their holders were held to be entitled to priority over the holders of debentures issued to the company: (Eyton v. The Denbigh, &c. Company, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 388. M. R.)

WINDING-UP—CONTRIBUTORY—TRANSFER OF SHARES TO AN INFANT.—B. transferred shares to C., an infant, in whose name they were registered; but neither B. nor the company knew that C. was under age. A year afterwards the company was wound-up, and two years afterwards C. came of age. He was placed on the list of contributories, but took no steps to repudiate his liability until a balance-order was served upon him ten months after he had attained twenty-one. On an application to remove his name and substitute those of the executors of B., who was then dead, an order was made accordingly, and confirmed on appeal: (Sassoon's case, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 424. L. J.J.)

WINDING-UP—PRACTICE—JURISDICTION.—The court has no power, under its winding-up jurisdiction, to decide as to the validity of the transfer of the business of a joint-stock company. A petition to wind-up a company which was mainly based on an allegation that a transfer of its business which had been effected was ultra vires and surrounded by circumstances of fraud, was ordered to stand over until the question as to the transfer should have been decided in a suit properly instituted for that purpose, with liberty to the petitioner or other interested parties to apply at chambers for leave to file a bill: (Re The International Life Assurance Society, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 433. V.C. M.)

RAILWAY—AWARD—LANDS CLAUSES ACT.—Sect. 35 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 18), as to awards made under that Act by arbitrators in cases of disputed compensation, enacts that "the arbitrators shall deliver their award in writing to the promoters of the undertaking, and the said promoters shall retain the same, and shall forthwith on demand, at their own expense, furnish a copy thereof to the other party to the arbitration, and shall at all times, on demand, produce the said award, and allow the same to be inspected or examined by such party, or any person appointed by him for that purpose." To a writ of mandamus commanding a railway company to take up an award made under the arbitration clauses of the above Act, the railway company made return that the prosecutor's interest had not been injuriously affected by the defendants' works within the meaning of the said Act. The prosecutor having demurred to the return: Held, that as the demurrer admitted the truth of the statement in return that the prosecutor's interest had not been injuriously affected within the meaning of the statute, the award must be taken to be valueless, and the court would not compel the railway company to take it up: (Reg. v. The Cambrian Railway Company, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 437. Q. B.)

RAILWAY FARES.—The South Eastern Railway Company charge the same fare from Waterloo junction to Cannon-street as from Charing-cross to Cannon-street, though the distance is a mile greater. Mr. Ambrose Moore, of Wandsworth, took a return ticket from Waterloo to Cannon-street, and used it on the return journey as far as Charing-cross, which he contended he had a right to do, inasmuch as he had paid the same sum as he would have been charged if he had originally taken a return ticket from Charing-cross. The company's officers, however, demanded 3/4. excess fare, and as Mr. Moore declined to pay it, he was summoned at the Bow-street police-court. Mr. Vaughan, in giving judgment, said that in taking the ticket the defendant had accepted the conditions printed on that ticket. And after carefully reading the Act, he could only come to the conclusion that the defendant was not entitled to travel a longer distance with a ticket issued for a shorter distance, even though the fare might be the same. It was a case, however, in which the defendant had clearly not acted with any fraudulent intent, but with an honest desire to enforce what he believed to be his just right. It was, therefore, not necessary to impose the full penalty of 40s., but only such a penalty as would be sufficient to mark his decision that the law was not as the defendant wished to interpret it. This purpose would be sufficiently met by imposing a fine of 1s. and costs.

MERCANTILE LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

MERCANTILE LAW AMENDMENT ACT, s. 10—RETROSPECTIVE—LIMITATIONS.—Where an Englishman residing in Venezuela executed an instrument to secure repayment to G. of 1600*l.*, and G. afterwards registered the instrument in the form prescribed by the law of Venezuela, and by virtue of such registration became entitled, according to that law, to be paid his debt out of the general assets of the debtor in priority to other creditors: Held, nevertheless, that a fund in this country, constituting equitable assets of the debtor, must be divided among the creditors without regard to any such priority. The English Statute of Limitations binds everyone who comes to sue in this court. A temporary sojourn in this country by a foreigner is a "return" within sect. 10 of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act: (Pardo v. Bingham, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 464. L. C. See an article on this subject in another column.)

MARAVILLA COCOA FOR BREAKFAST.—The cocoa (or cacao) of Maravilla is the true Theobroma of Linnaeus. The Globe says: "Taylor Brothers' Maravilla Cocoa has achieved a thorough success, and supercedes every other cocoa in the market. For homeopaths and invalids we could not recommend a more agreeable or valuable beverage." Sold, in packets only, by all grocers.

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.

ANSWERS TO THE FINAL EXAMINATION QUESTIONS.

EASTER TERM 1869.—SECOND DAY.

IV. PRELIMINARY.

Questions 36 to 40 inclusive.

IV. EQUITY AND PRACTICE OF THE COURTS.

41. Plea and demurrer.—A plea is special matter pleaded by the defendant to a bill, on which an objection is not apparent so as to admit of a demurrer. A plea shows cause why the suit should be dismissed, delayed, or barred. Pleas are generally considered as of three sorts: to the jurisdiction of the court, to the person of the plaintiff or defendant, and in bar of suit. Unless the plea be of some matter of record, it must be upon oath. A demurrer is a mode of defence used by a defendant when he insists on some defect or objection apparent on the face of the bill, either from matter contained in it, or from defect in its frame, or in the case made by it, and prays the judgment of the court whether he can be compelled to answer the plaintiff's bill: (Ayck. Pr. 98, 105, 7th edit.; Digest, 363, 5th edit.) A defendant should plead or demur instead of answering when his interest in withholding discovery is equal to his interest in defending the suit.

42. Discovery.—(1.) That the plaintiff is not entitled to discovery by reason of some personal disability. (2.) That the plaintiff has no interest in the subject-matter, or title to the discovery required, as when he is heir apparent. (3.) That the discovery relates to the defendant's case and not to the plaintiff's. (4.) That the defendant is a mere witness. (5.) That giving the discovery would subject the defendant to a penalty or forfeiture, or criminal prosecution, or to ecclesiastical censure: (Sm. Man. 446 et seq., 8th edit.)

43. Evidence—Cross-examination.—If the cause be one in which issue is joined, apply by summons at chambers for an order that the evidence in chief as to any facts or issues (which are to be distinctly and concisely specified in the summons) may be taken viva voce at the hearing; and if the order is made then as to these facts and issues no affidavit or evidence taken before an examiner will be admitted at the hearing. Subject to this, however, and the 11th of these rules, each party in a case in which issue is joined may at his option verify his case either wholly or partially by affidavit, or by the oral examination of witnesses ex parte before an examiner. A witness may be cross-examined on his affidavit or depositions. If issue is joined the cross-examination takes place before the court. If issue is not joined it is before an examiner. Notice must be given to the defendant to attend to be examined. And a fourteen days' notice must be given to the party whose witness has made an affidavit, &c., to produce him for the purpose of being cross-examined, and forty-eight hours' notice should be given the witness: (Smith's Pr. 622, et seq. 7th edit.; Digest 373, 5th edit.)

44. Cross bill.—When he wishes for discovery against the plaintiff, and also relief consequent on such discovery: (Digest 348, 5th edit.)

45. Chattels.—Yes; where it is of such a nature that damages would not compensate for the non-delivery thereof: (Digest 301, 5th edit.)

46. Increase of interest.—No; the stipulation is regarded as a penalty.

47. Tacking.—Tacking is the uniting of two incumbrances in order to postpone an intermediate one which is prior in point of time to the incumbrance tacked. Thus if a third mortgagee who has made his advance without notice of a second mortgage can purchase the first legal mortgage he may tack his third mortgage to the first, and so postpone the intermediate incumbrancer. For when the equities are equal the law prevails: (Story's Eq. Jur. 412, 413; Digest 184, 185, 5th edit.)

48. Assets.—Legal assets are property which creditors may make available in a court of law for the payment of debts, as having devolved upon or been recoverable by the executor or administrator as such. Equitable assets are property which creditors can only make available in a court of equity. Legal assets even in equity are administered according to their legal priorities. But equitable assets, with the exception of antecedent liens and charges in rem, are administered pari passu, without regard to the priority of debts: (Story's Eq. Jur. 554–556; Silk. v. Prime, 2 Tud. L. C. Eq. 88, in notes, 2nd edit.; Digest 304, 5th edit.)

49. Executor advertising.—The 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35 enacts that where an executor or administrator has given such notices as would have been given by the Court of Chancery in an administration suit for creditors and others to send in their claims against the estate of the deceased, the executor or administrator may, on the expiration of the time named in the notices, distribute the assets amongst the parties entitled, first paying the debts, of which he has notice; he is then freed from responsibility as to claims of which he had not notice. But the Act provides that creditors and claimants may still as heretofore follow the assets in the hands of legatees: (Sect. 29; Digest 309, 5th edit.)

50. Infant's maintenance.—If the infant has a father living capable of maintaining him according to his expectations, the court will not make any order for an allowance out of the infant's property. If the infant has no father, it is otherwise, as there is no one to maintain him. The order for maintenance is obtained without a suit, on summons at chambers, showing the infant's age, property, relations, &c. And by the 23 & 24 Vict. 145, s. 26, trustees may, without the authority of the court, make allowances out of the infant's income for his maintenance: (Sect. 27; Digest 310, 4th edit.)

51. Specific performance.—Equity will decree specific performance in the first case, because damages would not compensate, and the accident is not unavoidable. But not where the subject-matter of the contract did not exist at the time the contract was made, there being no life in existence: (Tud. L. C. Eq., 717, 3rd edit.; Sug. Conc. V. 209.)

52. Ademption.—The ademption of a legacy is an implied revocation of it. As if a testator bequeaths a specific legacy as a particular ring, and afterwards parts with it, the legacy is adeemed. So if he bequeaths a pecuniary legacy to a child, and afterwards advances the child in the same or a less amount in his lifetime, the legacy is either wholly or partially adeemed: (See Digest 297, 4th edit., and cases there cited.)

53. Rule of interpreting statutes.—There is not a single rule of interpreting laws, whether equitably or strictly, that is not equally used by the judges in the courts both of law and equity. True, a case is sometimes said to fall within the equity, or at others to be out of the equity, of an Act of Parliament. But here by equity is meant nothing but the sound interpretation of the law. Neither court can enlarge, diminish, or alter the sense of the Act in a single title: (St. Eq. s. 15; Digest 272, 5th edit.)

54. Equitable waste.—It is such waste as is not punishable at law, as pulling down the family mansion, or cutting ornamental timber. A tenant for life, a tenant in tail after the possibility of issue extinct, or even a tenant in fee with an executory devise over, will be so restrained: (Digest 329, 330, 5th edit.)

55. Intestacy.—Before those advanced in the intestate's lifetime take their share, they must bring the amount advanced into hotchpot. A child advanced in part brings in the amount thereof only among the other children; and no benefit will accrue from it to the widow. The administrator must therefore divide the 20,000*l.* among the widow and two children on this principle: (Digest 409, 5th edit.)

COUNTY COURTS.

KINGSTON-ON-THAMES COUNTY COURT.

(Before H. J. STONOR, Esq., Judge.)

KEMP v. THE LOCAL BOARD OF TEDDINGTON.

Foreshore of river—Right of way—Powers of local board.

This case was argued at the two last courts, and took up more than half the day on each occasion.

Dixon and Pearce, both of the common law bar, appeared respectively as counsel for the plaintiff and defendants.

A great number of witnesses were examined on either side.

Like many other cases in this court, and at the neighbouring courts of Croydon and Wandsworth, it was precisely of the character of a heavy Nisi Prius case. It will be seen that it involved very nice points of real property law.

The facts of the case appear in the judgment, which his Honour delivered on Friday as follows:—The plaintiffs in this case are the three daughters and devisees of Samuel Kemp, formerly of Teddington, innkeeper, and the defendants are the local board of the same place. The action is brought to recover nominal damages for the removal, by the defendants, after notice, of certain posts and chains, the property of the plaintiffs, erected on a piece of land which the plaintiffs assert is their property, or the property of the Thames Conservators, and which the defendants assert to be a highway, from which they, as the Local Board of Teddington, and possessed of the powers of the surveyors of highways, have the right to remove all obstructions. It appears by the evidence that about forty years ago the plaintiffs' father, Samuel Kemp, was possessed of an inn, called the Anglers' Arms, and land extending to the river side, and that about that time he obtained permission from the Lord Mayor and Corporation of the city of London to erect, for his own use, a landing-place on the side of the river, extending about twenty feet in length along the whole frontage of his land, and that about twenty-five years ago he obtained the like permission to extend the landing-place thirty feet farther in front of the adjoining land, of which I shall presently speak, and likewise to campshed a considerable part of such land off from the river, so as to protect his land and landing place. In the year 1862 Samuel Kemp purchased an adjoining cottage, called Ferry-cottage, and an enclosed piece of land held therewith, and between which and the river there lay an unenclosed piece of land, usually covered with water at high tide, but not at low tide, and in front of or upon part of which was the extended landing place, as also the campshedding. Prima facie this land would undoubtedly be part of the "shore" of the river, according to the rule of common law, and the interpretation clause in the Thames Conservancy Act 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 147, s. 1), but there seems to be much doubt whether it was not, in fact, part of the waste of the lord of the manor, although flooded, and was not recognised as such by the Lord Mayor and Corporation, and the Thames conservators, in whom the rights and powers of the Lord Mayor and Corporation subsequently became vested under the last mentioned Act. Some proof of acts of ownership by the lord of the manor or his agents was given, and in particular in respect of the extension of the landing place, and in the conveyance of Ferry-cottage there was expressly conveyed to Samuel Kemp, "all the right and interest of the lord of the manor" in this piece of land. In the year 1863, shortly after the purchase of Ferry Cottage, and again in the year 1868, Samuel Kemp and the plaintiffs respectively obtained the written permission of the Thames Conservators to repair "the landing-place leading to the Anglers' Hotel," and "the campshed off the plaintiff's premises" (being the landing-place and campshed previously authorised by the Lord Mayor and corporation, and sanctioned or permitted by the lord of the manor and his agents, and which were accordingly repaired), and on the later occasion, viz., in the year 1868, the plaintiffs also erected posts and chains from the extreme front of the extended landing-place, in a straight line to the inclosed piece of land purchased with Ferry Cottage. The defendants, as the local board of Teddington, and in the alleged exercise of their powers as surveyors of highways, removed these posts and chains, and for this removal damages in trespass are now claimed. Against the title of the lord of the manor and his grantees, it was shown that by the Teddington Inclosure Act and Award, more than fifty years ago, certain lands were allotted to the lord of the manor "as a compensation for his right and interest in the waste land" of the manor, and it was contended that the lord of the manor was therefore wholly dispossessed of any right or interest therein. But to this it was forcibly replied, that the land in question, if it were waste, not having been allotted to anyone under the Act, must still remain in the lord of the manor, according to the dictum of Baron Parke in the case of Poole v. Huskisson, 11 Me. & Wels. 830; and a third alternative indeed only remains, viz., to hold that the land became vested in the Crown for want of a tenant by a species of escheat, which I do not think to be the case. Whether, however, this land be vested in the Thames Conservators, the grantees of the lord of the manor, or the Crown, the defendants have equally to show their right to enter upon and remove the posts and chains, and this they have attempted to do, by asserting that over the land in question there was highway or public right of way from which, as the local board of Teddington, and in respect of the powers of surveyors of highways vested in them as such, they had a right to remove all obstructions. Now, upon the evidence before me, I do not consider that there is any highway or public right of way on or over the spot in question. That there is an old-established highway down to the high water mark, but no public ferry, is admitted; that there is a qualified right of way from the high water mark to the low water mark, across the shore or waste land, must also be conceded, but I think that such right of way must continue of a uniform or reasonable breadth, and not extend itself on the right or left along the adjoining shore or land as contended; and I am further of opinion that such right of way across the shore is not a highway at common law, nor within the meaning of the Highway Acts or Public Health Acts. I think that at common law the parish could not be called upon to repair it, and would have been trespassers if they had attempted to do so, and the surveyors and local board can be in no better position; and on the other hand the Conservators of the Thames are authorised and bound to prevent any obstruction or nuisance upon it. Of course, if the owners of the soil (whoever they may be) have given to the public a right to use the shore as a species of wharf, or if the public have acquired such a right by user, it may be asserted in various ways by anyone obstructed in its legitimate use (as also the right of way across the shore); but on the evidence before me, it does not appear to me that the public have any such right of user of this shore, and even if they have such a right, there is no evidence of actual obstruction by the plaintiffs of its legitimate exercise by the defendants. I am, therefore, clearly of opinion that the defendants had no right, as the local board of Teddington, to remove these posts and chains, or otherwise to interfere with the plaintiffs in respect of the land in question; but with regard to the conflicting rights of the plaintiffs, the Thames Conservators, the public, and possibly the Crown, in respect of the same, I think that there are great difficulties, and I think it right to suggest that some fair mutual arrangement might be entered into so as to prevent further litigation. In this action there must be a verdict for the plaintiffs for 40s. damages, and costs on the scale fixed for actions in which the title is at issue, under the 11th and 12th section of the County Courts Act 1867, although the damages are under 5*l.*, according to my decision in the case of Sir Robert Gyll v. Squire, in the Chertsey Court, reported in the County Courts Chronicle (Sept. 1, 1868, vol. 1, N. S. 224,) a legal publication of great value to practitioners in these Courts.

PORTSMOUTH COUNTY COURT.

(Before C. J. GALE, Esq., Judge.)

COUSINS v. WHEELER.

Action by a solicitor.

Wallis appeared for the plaintiff.
Field for the defendant.

From the plaintiff's statement it appeared that the account was for law costs and payments, the chief portion of which related to the conveyance to the defendant of some property at Brighton. The reasonableness of the charges was not disputed.

The defence was, that Mr. Wheeler had, in March last, executed a deed of composition for the benefit of his creditors, which had been assented to by the necessary proportion of such creditors.

Field produced the deed and the protection under the Bankruptcy Act in support of the defence.

Wallis said that Mr. Cousins would have accepted the composition with the other creditors, had he not considered that Mr. Wheeler had acted fraudulently towards him. He therefore declined to be bound by Mr. Wheeler's arrangement with his other creditors. He quoted the case of Bramble v. Moss, L. Rep. 3 C. P. 458; 18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 241, to show that the affidavit and accounts filed, with the deed or office copies of them, and the Gazette and other particulars must be produced. He also contended that by the Bankruptcy Amendment Act 1868, the defendant's attorney should have produced the list and statement required to be filed, or office copies, and the original assents of the creditors and their proofs, or office copies, with the local daily paper containing the advertisement required by the General Orders to be inserted in it. He also made several other objections.

His Honour ruled that Mr. Wallis's objections were fatal, and said that Mr. Field could appeal against his decision if he pleased.

Judgment for the plaintiff, with costs on the higher scale, to be paid in a week.

Field applied for stay of execution to give time to appeal, but his Honour refused the application.

DAMAGE TO CROPS BY RABBITS.—At the Wakefield County Court, on Tuesday, before Mr. T. H. Marshall, his Honour gave judgment in a case which was heard before him on the 22nd ult. The plaintiff was Mr. John Oates, a farmer at Middles-town, a village between Wakefield and Huddersfield, and he sued Captain Stansfeld, of the Manor-house, Flockton, for 9*l.* 17s. for damage to his crops by rabbits from a large warren adjoining his farm belonging to the captain. It was stated by the plaintiff, on the hearing of the case, that Captain Stansfeld had requested him not to kill the rabbits which went on his land, and he would compensate him for any loss he might sustain; but the defendant, on the other hand, called witnesses to prove that he had rescinded this agreement, and had told the farmers in the neighbourhood that they might kill the rabbits which went on their land. After a long hearing his Honour recommended the parties to take counsel's opinion on the matter, and reserved his decision until this had been done. On the case being called on on Tuesday, Mr. Barratt read an opinion which he had taken from Mr. Littler. That gentleman stated that he thought the defendant, by keeping an excessive quantity of destructive creatures, was guilty of a nuisance, and liable for the damage done, irrespective of any other considerations.—His Honour said that he had looked into the law on the matter; and, after doing so, he did not consider Captain Stansfeld was liable to pay any damages, and therefore he gave a verdict in favour of the defendant.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

JOINT ACTION BY SOLVENT PARTNER AND ASSIGNEES OF BANKRUPT PARTNER—FRAUDULENT PREFERENCE.—One of two partners indorsed the name of the firm upon partnership bills, and handed them over to a private creditor in payment of a separate debt; the creditor knew that the indorsement was without the authority of the other partner, and the proceeding was a fraudulent preference of this creditor to others. The partner who indorsed the bills was adjudicated bankrupt for lying in prison under the 71st section of the Bankruptcy Act 1861; his assignees disaffirmed the indorsement of these bills, and joined the solvent partner in an action of trover, and money had and received against this creditor: Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to sue jointly: (Heilbut v. Nevill, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 490. C. P.)

LIVERPOOL COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

(Before Mr. Acting-Commissioner THRING.)

Ex parte FRANGHIADI AND DUNN, re A TRUST DEED.

Trust-deed under sect. 192 B.A. 1861—Jurisdiction of court to cancel registration—Insufficiency of assents ground enough to support such an application—Acceptance by creditor of a debtor's covenant to pay a composition concludes his right to sue debtor except upon the covenant—Ex parte Clarke, 19 L. T. Rep. N. S. 327, and Re Wilde, 19 L. T. Rep. N. S. 752, followed.

This was an application involving the moot question of the jurisdiction of the Court of Bankruptcy to cancel the registration of a trust-deed, which had been executed by a debtor for the benefit of his creditors.

Pemberton appeared for the applicants, who were non-assenting creditors.

Forrest for the trustee.

Etty for the debtor.

The ground of the application to cancel the registration of the deed, was that it had been insufficiently assented to, inasmuch as the greater portion of a debt of 31*l.* had been omitted from the list of creditors, and that several debts due to the brothers of the bankrupt had been over-stated. Evidence upon those points was adduced on the 12th inst., from which it appeared that with respect to the debt of 31*l.* it had been properly stated, but as to the amounts of the brothers' debts it depended upon the question whether by their assenting to a prior trust-deed executed by the debtor some twelve months since, they had not debarred themselves from claiming more than the amount of composition they then agreed to accept. The clause in the deed of composition ran as follows: "And the said creditors do, and each of them doth, hereby, in consideration of the covenant hereinbefore contained, agree to accept the said composition in full discharge of their several and respective debts and demands against the debtor, and agree, subject to the said covenant, to release the debtor from all debts and demands." There was no clause rendering the deed void and of non-effect in case of the debtor failing to carry out the terms of the covenant.

With reference to the effect of this clause, long arguments were addressed to the court by the respective advocates, the contention on the one side being that by the failure of the debtor to pay the composition as agreed, the creditors were remitted to their original rights; and that of the other, that the acceptance by the creditors of the covenant to pay the composition in satisfaction of the debts was binding upon them, and in the absence of any clause in the deed rendering it void in case of default on the part of the debtor they could only rank for the amount of the composition.

His Honour said the important question, to his mind, was as to the jurisdiction of the court to cancel the registration of a trust-deed at all, and he desired the learned gentlemen to address themselves to that point.

Pemberton referred to Ex parte Savin, 15 L. T. Rep. N. S. 150, and Re Wilde, 19 L. T. Rep. N. S. 752, and argued that it was clear from the dictum of Lord Justice Knight Bruce, in the former case, that it was competent for the Court of Bankruptcy to decide in favour of the validity of an objection made to the sufficiency of the registration of a trust-deed. The first section of the Bankruptcy Act 1861, conferred upon the court power to make all such orders as were necessary for carrying out the provisions of the Act, and of those provisions one required that prior to the registration of a trust-deed a debtor must comply with the conditions specified in the 192nd section. The present debtor, as he submitted, was in default in that respect, and had improperly registered his deed, and therefore it became the duty of the court, having regard to the requirements of the statute, to cancel such registration.

Etty, in reply, contended that the court was the creature of statute, having no jurisdiction beyond that therein specified, and the first section which had been referred to, only conferred power to make such orders as were necessary for carrying out its provisions, all of which were silent as to cancelling the registration of a trust-deed. In the case of an order of discharge, which in effect was equivalent to a certificate of the registration of a deed, there was an express section, namely 163, which gave the court power to recall the same when obtained by fraud or suppression of evidence, but there was no such provision as to a trust-deed, and it might therefore be fairly inferred from its absence that no such power was intended to be conferred upon the court. Further, he submitted that the chief registrar who had issued the certificate was not an officer of the Liverpool Court of Bankruptcy, but of the Court of Bankruptcy in London, and therefore any application to review or cancel his order or certificate ought to be made to that court.

His Honour, who had reserved his judgment, for the purpose of looking into the authorities cited, now said: In this case an application has been made to the court to cancel the registration of a trust-deed registered on April 14, 1869, in pursuance of sect. 192, Bankruptcy Act 1861, and Bankruptcy Amendment Act 1868, whereby Henry Moss, the debtor, assigned all his estate to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors. It was contended before me that the deed was invalid for want of the requisite assents, on the following grounds:—1st. That the debt of Daley, a dissenting creditor, was inserted in the schedule for 4*l.* 18s. 6d. only, instead of 31*l.* 6s. 2d. 2nd. That the debts of the bankrupt's two brothers, Frederick and Joseph Moss (being assenting creditors) were improperly inserted for the respective amounts of 260*l.* 19s. 6d. and 75*l.*, whereas 183*l.* 10s. 10d., part of the former and the whole of the latter debt, had been released by deed in 1868. The first ground entirely failed, as Daley's debt appeared to have been inserted at the proper amount. In support of the second, a registered deed of composition, dated July 1, 1868, and made between Henry Moss and his creditors, was put in evidence, under which the creditors, in consideration of a covenant by the debtor to pay a composition of 2s. 6d. in the pound on the 14th of the following August, released the debtor from all liabilities. Frederick Moss and Joseph Moss were assenting parties to this deed for the sums above mentioned. The composition in question was never paid. It was argued that the creditors were, on non-payment of the composition, remitted to their original rights, and reliance was placed on the judgment in Leake v. Young, 5 Ell. and B., 963; but in that case, and Ray v. Jones, 34 L. J. 307, C. P., and others of a similar class, there were covenants on the part of the creditors not to sue the debtors until default was made in the payments of the compositions, so that the remedy for the recovery of the original debts was only suspended, instead of extinguished. Here there is no such covenant, and the non-performance of the covenant to pay the composition gave a right of action for that alone, and not for the original debt: (See Ex parte Clarke, 19 L. T. Rep. 327.) I am therefore of opinion that the deed of April 1869 is invalid, inasmuch as the debts of Frederick and Joseph Moss have been inserted for the sums of 183*l.* 10s. 10d. and 75*l.* respectively, when they were only entitled to a composition of 2s. 6d. in the pound on those amounts under the deed of 1868. It was further contended in support of the deed, first, that the deed, although invalid under sect. 192 of the Bankruptcy Act 1861, might well be held to be properly registered under sect. 194 of the Bankruptcy Act 1861; secondly, that this court had no power to cancel the registration of a deed. As regards the first point, it is perfectly clear that registration under sect. 192 does not include registration under sect. 194. The distinction between the two forms is fully pointed out by the Lord Chancellor, in Ex parte Morgan, 7 L. T. Rep. 729. On the second point I entertained some doubt, as other modes of procedure are specifically indicated by the Bankruptcy Act, but the authorities on this head are decisive. In Ex parte Bonfield, 12 L. T. Rep. 728, Lord Cranworth, L. C., observes, "I am of opinion that the cancelling of the registration of a deed, and the giving leave to a creditor to take in execution the property of the debtor, are matters within the discretion of the court." Again, in Ex parte Savin, 15 L. T. Rep. N. S. 150, where the certificate of registration had been cancelled under the order of Mr. Commissioner Goulburn, Knight Bruce, L. J., says, "for the purpose of the present controversy, I think that the registration is open to objection, and that it was competent to the learned commissioner in point of law to decide against its validity." I find further that Mr. Commissioner Bacon has carried out these decisions practically (Re Wilde, 19 L. T. Rep. N. S. 752), where the registration of a deed was cancelled by his order, on the ground that the deed was not duly assented to by the necessary majority of creditors.

There can be no question but that the same power is inherent in this court, as the district courts constitute an integral part of "the Court of Bankruptcy," under the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act 1861. I therefore order the registration of this deed to be cancelled, and that the debtor pay the applicant's costs, limited to the attendance of his advocate and witnesses in this court in support of his second ground of application.

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY ACT.—This Bill has been reprinted to show the amendments made in it. As it stood originally it omitted from its lists of acts of bankruptcy those which are popularly designated by the phrase "keeping out of the way." It is now proposed to declare it an act of bankruptcy if a debtor absconds, or with intent to defeat or delay his creditors goes abroad. The Bill makes a distinction between traders and other persons, certain things being acts of bankruptcy only in the case of a trader; and the definition of a trader is now altered by expressly including certain occupations which might not come within the general words employed, such as the business of apothecaries, auctioneers, bankers, brokers, carriers, innkeepers, market gardeners, printers, scriveners, victuallers, &c. It is now proposed that the paid trustee of the bankrupt's property to be appointed by the creditors, need not himself be a creditor. The power of a trustee to disclaim onerous property, unprofitable contracts, unmarketable shares, is not to be lost by the trustees' taking possession of the property, exercising any act of ownership, or endeavouring to sell it. In regard to the status of the undischarged bankrupt, whom the original Bill left liable to have his old debts enforced against him after five years from the close of the bankruptcy unless he had paid a 10s. dividend, the Bill, as now amended, proposes that any debt proved in the bankruptcy shall be deemed to be a subsisting judgment-debt; and, subject to the rights of new creditors, may be enforced against the property of the debtor, but only with the sanction of the court, and to the extent and in the manner directed by the court. No judge, registrar, &c., is to sit in the House of Commons. A creditor is to have power to appoint a person to represent him in all matters relating to the bankruptcy. The trustee of a bankrupt is to sue and be sued in his official name of "trustee;" acting in his official capacity he is to be liable only to the extent of the assets coming to his hands. The words making a bankrupt liable to arrest if he changes his place of residence without leave of the trustees are struck out of the Bill. The clause protecting bona fide dealings with a bankrupt before notice of an act of bankruptcy is remodelled. The clauses authorising liquidation by arrangement are now to apply where liquidation is consented to by a majority of the creditors in number, and three-fourths (not five-sixths) in value. The country district courts of bankruptcy are to be abolished from the commencement of the Act.

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.

(N.B.—None are inserted unless the name and address of the writers are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.)

Queries.

20. COUNTY COURTS ACT 1867, s. 2.—Goods were sold and delivered by A. to the firm of "B., C., and D." to be dealt with in the way of their trade. B. and C. afterwards die. Can A. issue a special summons under sect. 2 of the County Courts Act 1867, against D. the surviving partner? If A. cannot, but does issue such summons against D., can D. treat it as a nullity?
MARTON.

21. STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—A., a tradesman, supplied goods to B. from the 1st Jan. 1860, to 1st June 1863, amounting to 50l., on account of which B. has paid 40l., leaving a balance of 10l. due to A. No money has been paid by B. since Jan. 1863 (more than six years ago), but the last lot of goods of the value of 20s. were supplied on 1st June 1863. An administration suit is commenced in the County Court by A. Can B. plead the Statute of Limitations?
Q.

22. RAILWAY.—Is not a railway company bound when it issues first, second, and third class tickets to provide first, second, and third class carriages? And if it advertises a certain train to be Parliamentary in its timetable, is it lawful for the railway company to provide only first and second class carriages, and to place the third class passengers in the same compartments as those of the second class?
H. S.

23. WILL—VESTING OF PERSONAL LEGACY.—A., by his will, directed his trustees to stand possessed of certain moneys upon trust thereout (amongst other things) to put and place the sum of 1000l. out at interest, and the annual proceeds to pay and apply for the maintenance and support of B. during her life. "And after her decease upon trust to pay the said sum of 1000l., and all unapplied interest thereof unto and between all her children, share and share alike, at their respective ages of twenty-one years." A. died in 1847, and B. in 1859, having had five children, one of whom, C., died in 1855, an infant of the age of nine years. Had C. a vested interest in one-fifth part of the 1000l.? It will be observed that the only gift is in the direction to pay. Cases bearing upon the point are collected in 1 Jarm. Wills, 711, 722, 2nd edit.; but I shall be much obliged by a reference to more recent cases. J. L. H.

24. STAMPS.—What is the proper stamp or stamps on an assignment of an ordinary lease, where the term has seven years to run, the rent being 45l., and the consideration for the assignment 50l.; and what would be the additional stamp or stamps if the assignment was thirty-five folios in length?
LEX.

25. ARTICLED CLERK.—A., who has been under articles of clerkship to B. for three years and a half, wishes to be assigned over to the London agent, or to a firm in London, for the remaining one year and a half of his articles. Would the stat. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 6, be a bar to such assignment?
R. K.

ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.

ADVOWSONS.

AN incident reported last week from the Auction Mart gives indisputable proof of the opinion of two important classes upon the prospects of the Established Church in England. The capitalists and the clergy show their conviction that its days are numbered, by the surest test—reluctance to purchase its property; and, moreover, they look for a speedy consummation, for they have permitted their fears to diminish by one-half the value of a next presentation, to be possessed within some eighteen or twenty years at the utmost. Messrs. DRIVER, who conducted the sale, endeavoured to remove the objection, manifestly felt by buyers, that the Protestant Church will have but a short lease of life, by citing the case of the abolished Irish Church in proof that full compensation will certainly attend the coming verthrow of the Establishment in England, and therefore that no alarm need be felt by buyers for confiscation of the property they were offering for sale; but such cold comfort did not reassure the audience, and in the end the advowson was bought in, no purchaser having been found to offer more than half its calculated value.

This little incident curiously confirms the conclusion at which all reflective minds had arrived, but which so few have had the courage or the honesty to avow, that the Church in England must follow swiftly the fate of the Church in Ireland. It is well and wise to face the fact, and prepare for the inevitable change. Nobody who has eyes to see and ears to hear can doubt that Protestantism is doomed. Between Romanism on one side, and Rationalism on the other, it cannot hope to hold its own. In the Church, it is abjured by a large section of those who call themselves Churchmen, and, out of the Church, the Dissenters have permitted Protestantism to give place to politics. Thus assailed on all sides, and with false friends in her own ranks, it is not possible that the day of doom can be long averted; and that so think the most sagacious calculators, who prove their faith by their purse strings, is shown by the fact that an advowson now cannot obtain nearly such a price as it could have commanded eighteen months ago.

LAW LIBRARY.

Private International Law; a Treatise on the Conflict of Laws and the Limits of their Operation in respect of Place and Time. By FREDERICK CARL VON SAVIGNY. Translated, with notes, by William Guthrie, advocate. Edinburgh: T. and T. Clark; London: Stevens.

SAVIGNY'S System of Modern Roman Law is, perhaps, the greatest work on jurisprudence which our age has produced, and Mr. Guthrie has done good service by introducing one section of it in an English dress to English lawyers and students. Few among us are sufficiently masters of German to be enabled to read easily a work necessarily abounding in technical language, and therefore they who desire to make acquaintance with the researches of the most laborious and profoundly reflective of German writers on law, will give a cordial welcome to the fragment of the great treatise which has been thus tentatively submitted to them. We say tentatively, because we hope that success will induce the translator to continue his useful labours, and that other parts of the same work will be produced, until the whole of it is made accessible to the Profession in England.

The portion here given constitutes the eighth volume of the original work. It is devoted exclusively to private international law, known among us by the title of "The Conflict of Laws," a subject on which the opinions of foreign jurists are always received as authorities in the British courts. It has, indeed, been largely cited by English and American writers on this branch of the law, and the references made to it in so many of our books must have whetted the appetites of their readers to form an acquaintance with the original in a complete form.

Here is material for an elaborate review, but it would be impracticable in our limited space, therefore we can do no more than briefly present an outline of the contents, to inform the reader of the plan of the work and the subjects it embraces. The first chapter treats of the local limits of the authority of the rules of law over the legal relations; and the second, of the limits in time of the authority of rules of law over legal relations; and these are sub-divided into conflicting territorial laws; domicile; personal status; the law of things; the law of obligations; succession; the law of the family, including the marriage law; the forms of judicial acts; and the laws as to the acquisition and existence of rights; the object being to show how these laws, as existing in one country, are, or ought to be, recognised by the laws and tribunals of other countries.

LEGAL OBITUARY.

CHIEF JUSTICE LEFROY.

Judge Lefroy, who died a few days ago, was, we believe, the oldest member of the legal profession in the three kingdoms, and for many years Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench in Ireland.

The deceased judge was a thorough impersonation of the better class of Irish Tory of the old school; even so far back as '98 he was already a barrister; he well remembered the men who had been foremost in the Irish rebellion; and he was nearly the last survivor of those who had seen the streets of Dublin stained with the blood of Lord Kilwarden. Sprung from an old Flemish, and, we believe, Huguenot family, which had sought the hospitable shores of England under the persecutions of the Duke of Alva in the low countries, the late judge inherited from his forefathers a strong feeling in favour of the reformed faith, a feeling which no doubt was considerably strengthened by a residence for two or three generations in a country like Ireland, where the strong Protestant so easily and readily blossoms into the still stronger Orangeman.

The future Lord Chief Justice was born in the year 1776. He was the eldest son of the late Mr. Anthony Lefroy, of Carrickglass, who was sometime Lieutenant-Colonel in the 9th Dragoons, and who lived till the year 1819. His mother was Anne, daughter of an Irish gentleman named Gardiner. His grandfather, who had settled at Leighorn, was the son of one of those foreign refugees who resided at Canterbury, enjoying the privilege of having their own church and pastors in the crypt of Canterbury Cathedral, under the special protection of the English Crown, and whose industry, as Mr. Smiles tells us, went far to enrich our national wealth. Mr. Lefroy himself took his Bachelor's degree at Trinity College as far back as 1796, and proceeded to the degree of M.A. in due course. His call to the Bar of Ireland dates from the year 1797, three years before the Union, of which Mr. O'Connell in his own day, and the Fenians in our own time, have so zealously laboured to effect the "repeal." When he entered on his profession he brought with him the highest University reputation, as he obtained during his undergraduate course at Trinity the four annual prizes and seven certificates, besides the gold medal awarded on taking his degrees. Accordingly, he soon obtained a lucrative equity practice, which he retained for many years, without entering upon the more ambitious line of Parliamentary honours. In 1819 we find him a Bencher of the King's Inns, and he had already obtained the dignity of a King's Serjeant. This honour, however, he resigned, and in due course was nominated a King's Counsel; but in the House of Commons and in Hansard he was generally known by his University distinction of "Doctor" Lefroy.

He does not appear to have entered Parliament until after he had attained and well nigh passed the middle age, having been first chosen in 1830 as one of the representatives of the University of Dublin in the strong Tory interest. Roman Catholic Emancipation had been conceded in the previous year, and the Test Act had already been repealed, or else, no doubt, history would have told us how fiercely he opposed both these meatures. That he voted against the Reform Bill of 1832, and against Mr. Stanley's measure for pruning and lopping the Irish Established Church of some superfluous bishoprics in the following year; that he consistently opposed the leading measures of Lords Grey and Melbourne, and as zealously supported the Premier of his choice, Sir Robert Peel, whose personal acquaintance he had made some years previously when that statesman was in Dublin as Chief Secretary for Ireland—these are nearly all the points in his political career which the biographer can record. He always regarded the Reform Act of his own time as a political pestilence; and he could scarcely have entertained any great partiality for that Reform Bill of which he heard in extreme old age that it had been proposed by so sound a Tory as Mr. Disraeli. As a speaker in the House of Commons he succeeded but indifferently; his manner was not attractive, and he knew less of the graces of diction than most of his fellow-countrymen. In the earlier part of his Parliamentary career he spoke frequently, more especially on Irish subjects and against Mr. O'Connell; but his chief success lay in emptying the benches. A strong and decided Tory, and a strenuous opponent of the interests of the Roman Catholics, he was still entitled to the credit of being one of the best tempered men who ever took a strong line in Parliament. In his public and private character he was always greatly respected; and, high as party politics ran in Ireland thirty years ago, no word of reproach was uttered against Mr. Serjeant Lefroy. He sat for the University of Dublin as the colleague of the Right Hon. Frederic Shaw down to the year 1841.

When Sir Robert Peel returned a second time to place and power, it was not to be expected that the claims of Serjeant Lefroy would be overlooked, and no time was lost in appointing him to the first vacancy on the Irish Bench as one of the Barons of the Exchequer, whence he was promoted in 1852 by Lord Derby to the post of Lord Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench, from which he always resolved that neither ill-health nor failing years should force him as long as the Liberals were in power. Accordingly, he continued to take his seat on the bench and to hear causes until his 90th year, when the return of Lord Derby to place gave him the opportunity of gracefully resigning his post, to be filled by a younger—we can scarcely say more vigorous Tory. He then bade adieu to public life, and thenceforward lived in the bosom of his family, strong and hale beyond his years, and with very little consciousness of failing faculties.

Judge Lefroy was the author of some Reports in the Irish Court of Chancery under Lord Redesdale, and also of an Irish law pamphlet published so long ago as 1802, on Proceedings by Elegit, in which the effect of a late Decision is considered, and a new Method of Proceeding is proposed; but the pamphlet and the occasion which called it forth have passed away out of the memory of living lawyers. He married, in 1799, Mary, the only daughter and heiress of Mr. Jeffrey Paul, of Silver Spring, in the county of Wexford, by whom he had three daughters, and also four sons, of whom the eldest, Mr. Anthony Lefroy, has been M.P. for the University of Dublin for the last ten years, and previously represented the county of Longford in Parliament. He is married to a daughter of the late Lord Longford, and granddaughter of Robert, late Earl of Kingston.—The Times.

J. TOULMIN SMITH, ESQ.

THE late Mr. Joshua Toulmin Smith, barrister-at-law, whose death occurred on the 28th April, whilst bathing in the sea, most probably through a fainting fit, was in the 53rd year of his age. He was born in 1816, and was called to the Bar at Lincoln's-inn in the year 1849. He was for many years a resident in Wood-lane, Highgate, in which neighbourhood he was much respected, and where he will long be remembered as the originator of most of the parochial improvements in the way of sewage and drainage; and he will be especially missed by those who used to meet him at the old Highway Board, and also at the Local Board of Highgate, of which he was recently chairman. He was in possession of considerable practice before Parliamentary committees; but he was best known to the public, perhaps, as a writer of great ability upon all subjects connected with parish or sanitary affairs. To his administrative energy and legal ability we are indebted for more than one important sanitary Act of Parliament. It may be added, too, that he was, as everyone who enjoyed an acquaintance with him knew, wonderfully conversant with most subjects of the day, and particularly well informed upon literary and antiquarian matters. Mr. Toulmin Smith had long been in failing health, the result of too constant attention to the matters in which he took so keen an interest, and it is certain that his labours hastened his early and premature death. At the time of his decease he was staying at Lancing, a village about half-way between Brighton and Shoreham, in the hope of restoring his shattered health.

LAW SOCIETIES.

LIVERPOOL LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

The tenth meeting of the session was held at the Law Library on the 14th May, Mr. Birrell presiding. The question for discussion was No. 25, legal. "A trustee, by deed under his hand and seal, accepted the trusts of a will, and afterwards committed a breach of the trusts. Are the cestuis que trustent entitled to rank as specialty creditors in the distribution of his assets?" Mr. Radcliffe opened the debate in the affirmative, but the negative side was ultimately carried.

PROMOTIONS & APPOINTMENTS.

[N.B.—Announcements of appointments being in the nature of advertisements, are charged 2s. 6d. each, for which postage stamps should be inclosed.]

WHITEHALL, April 5.—The Lord Chancellor has appointed Francis Fenwick Pearson, of Kirkby Lonsdale, in the county of Westmorland, Gentleman, to be a Commissioner to administer oaths in the High Court of Chancery in England.

WHITEHALL, May 7.—The Lord Chancellor has appointed Edward Draper, of Prescott, in the county of Lancaster, Gentleman, to be a Commissioner to administer oaths in the High Court of Chancery in England.

THE COURTS & COURT PAPERS.

THE SUMMER CIRCUITS.

The judges assembled on Thursday at Westminster, and made the following arrangements for the summer assizes:

NORFOLK.—Lord Chief Justice Cockburn and Mr. Justice Byles.

HOMER.—The Lord Chief Baron and Mr. Justice Mellor.

WESTERN.—Mr. Justice Keating and Mr. Justice Lush.

OXFORD.—Baron Pigott and Mr. Justice Smith.

NORTHERN.—Mr. Justice Hannen and Mr. Justice Hayes.

MIDLAND.—Mr. Justice Brett and Baron Cleasby.

NORTH WALES.—Lord Chief Justice Bovill.

SOUTH WALES.—Baron Channell.

Baron Bramwell remains in town.

CAUSE LIST IN TRINITY TERM 1869.

Equity Courts.

Court of Appeal in Chancery.

(Before the LORD CHANCELLOR and the LORDS JUSTICES.)

Appeals.

Finch v. Bishop
Finch v. Davis
Branker v. Carne—Carne
v. Branker
Gray v. Lewis
Petty v. Willson
Taylor v. Dowlen
Mullens v. Hussey
Slaymaker v. Syer
Foakes v. Syer
Gray v. Lewis

Bower v. The Societe des Affreteurs du Grand Eastern a Responsabilite
(Limited)
Namur and Liege Railway Company v. Cary and others
Wolff v. Vanderzee
Wright v. Wright
Wright v. Wright

Rolls Court.

Causes.

Greenhow v. Price
Lamb v. Potter
Morris v. Edmunds
Walton v. Groombridge
Lawson v. Racine
Fletcher v. Fletcher
Atherley v. Isle of Wight
Railway Company and City Bank
Crickmore v. Freestone
Stansfeld v. De Crespigny
Cartwright v. Ridley
Balderson v. Woods
Clark v. Shirley
Foard v. Watkins
Wilson v. Kenrick
Bailey v. The Great Eastern
Railway Company
Sharp v. Wright—Granger
v. Wright
The Watford and Rickmansworth Railway Co.
v. London and North-
Western Railway Co.
Nurse v. Green
Preston v. Preston
Cardwell v. The Seaman's
Hospital Society
Jelley v. Taylor
Warhurst v. Broadbent
Walker v. Smith
Lees v. Hibbert
Wright v. Jackson
Gregory v. Beauchamp
Ponton v. Hawkins

Maltby v. Ware
Seipp v. McWreath
Moore v. Smith
Tyson v. Thomson
Curlewis v. Abrahams
Yorke v. Head
Markham v. Hutt—Markham v. Hutt
Re Mundy—Barwell v. Bar-well
Hirst v. Webb
Re Camac—Oldfield v. Briscoe
Martin v. The Millwall Iron Works, Shipbuilding and Graving Docks Company
(Limited)
Re Sutton—Vernon v. Palmer
Re Phillips—John v. Phillips
Corder v. Hammond
Forbes v. Arnold
Lord Brougham v. Cauvin
Langlands v. Stowe
Wallisroft v. Slaney
Law v. Carmichael
Golding v. Bell
The London and South-
Western Railway Company v. Pulein
Hubbard v. Worraker
Little v. Hope
Bowers v. Bankart
Crook v. Crook

V.C. Stuart's Court.

Causes, &c.

Mortlock v. Mortlock
Neill v. Midland Rail. Co.
Malcolm v. The Dock Co. at Kingston-upon-Hull
Mackenzie v. Martin
O'Malley v. Blaise
Fox v. Amherst
Clerihew v. Lascelles
Phillips v. Homfray
Harrison v. Swanston
Cottrell v. Cottrell
Picard v. Hine
Holbrow v. Drew
Moore v. Franklin
Jack v. Jack
Wilde v. Sennett
Alchin v. Rogers
Grayburn v. Clarkson
Consitt v. Darrell
Sharp v. De St. Sauveur
Wootton v. Wootton
Foord v. Thomas
Salkeld v. Salkeld
Beaumont, Et. v. The Colne
Valley & Halstead Ry. Co.
Price v. Peppercombe
Skidmore v. Bradford
Hammonds v. Barrett
Galt v. London and South-
Western Bank
Giffard v. Williams
Hunt v. The Tending
Hundred Railway Co.
Swan v. Swan
Brader v. Kerby
Dunn v. Brodie
Locke v. Satchell
Miller v. Miller
Beasley v. Austin
Tucker v. Wallbridge
White v. White
Dicks v. Batten
Davidson v. Coats
Mackenzie v. Martin
Young v. Dallimore
Rooke v. Grant
Omber v. Omber
Colvin v. Colvin
Cheesewright v. Thorn
Dashwood v. The Witney
Railway Company
Chapman v. The Witney
Railway Company
Sibthorp v. The Witney
Railway Company
Chapman v. London and North-Western Ry. Co.
Bailey v. Hobson
Lazenby v. Lazenby
Platt v. Walter—Walter v.
Platt
Cosens v. Rowlandson
Teed v. Purnell
Burdick v. Garrick
Carr v. Rose
Gibbs v. Harding
Collins v. Brader
Mainwaring v. Gilkes
Atkinson v. Gaskarth
Fyfe v. Lascelles
Denison v. Abbott
Masen v. Senior
Collingwood v. Russell
Dibbin v. Hume

Roberts v. Roberts
Re David Thomas's Estate
—Thomas v. Thomas
Middleton v. Dadds
Robson v. Robson
Cook v. Payne
Christian v. Adamson
Williams v. Williams
Cooke v. Metropolitan
Railway Company
North v. Haslam
Knox v. Turner
Bottom v. Codd
Forshaw v. Mottram
Horn v. Horn
Duguid v. Fraser
Lucas v. Lucas
Rose v. Rowe
Collins v. Lewis
Johnston v. Johnston
Pugh v. Clark
Cook v. Rivington
Greenslade v. Carthew
Cowell v. Acraman
Barnes v. Woods
Dixon v. Neaves
Price v. Jenkins
Jones v. Rhind
Rhind v. Jones
Kavanagh v. Willink
Baple v. Holbrook
Hope v. Midland Counties and South Wales Railway Company
Hood v. North-Eastern
Railway Company
Spawforth v. Burnell
Bradford v. Bradford
Muckalt v. Muckalt
Day v. Sittingbourne Railway Company
Heathcote v. Whall
Hughes v. Seanor
Robinson v. Wood
Emsley v. Robinson
Re Evans—Evans v. Evans
Elkin v. Hamilton—Half-hide v. Hamilton
Purchas v. Stallard
Herring v. Pocock
Hambrough v. Hart
Willats v. Flint
Smith v. Lee
Hymers v. Lord
Davidson v. Walker
Farquhar v. Farquhar
Powell v. Roberts
Lewis v. Evans
Whitehouse v. Washbourne
Lees v. Becker
Hunt v. Reynolds
Marshall v. Crowther
Turton v. Turton
Hobson v. Hobson
Williams v. Turnbull
Millington v. Holland
Gibson v. Gibbon
Clarke v. Stanley
Vickers v. Todd
Mack v. Postle
Gibbons v. Gibbons
Perry v. Sargent
Baker v. Bannister

V.C. Malins' Court.

Causes, &c.

Dore v. Hayes
International Bank (limtd)
v. Gladstone
Hubbard v. Boughey, Bart
Dickinson v. Barclay
Perrin v. Burbey
Inglis v. Cave
Hill v. Royds
Lewis v. Matthews
Briant v. Tedbut
Peek v. Peek
Brune v. Sawle
Wilson v. Tottenham and Hampstead Junct. Ry. Co.
Barclay v. The Metropolitan Railway Company
In Re Peterson's Estate—
Peterson v. Peterson
Jodrell v. Stratton
Stolworthy v. Sanicroft
Shuter v. Hill
Butler v. Gray
Townend v. Metcalfe
Johnston v. Brown
Earl Beauchamp v. Winn
Ridgway v. Graves
Allen v. Bonnett
Sutcliffe v. Howard
The Portsmouth, Portsea,
Gosport and South Hants
Banking Co. v. Beldham
Lawton v. Parker
Dickinson v. Burgess
Weeks v. Jackson
Empson v. Rhodes
Breckon v. Russell
Mackie v. European Assurance Society
Keightley v. The Hoylelake
Railway Company
Mason v. Benson
Thornton v. Daventry
Railway Company
Roberts v. Moore
Southwell v. Martin
Loxley v. Donne
Hayhow v. George

Roepe v. Metropolitan District Railway Company
Steele v. The Midland Railway Company
Capper v. Simonides
Pearse v. Dobinson
Adamson v. Chadwick
Senior v. Senior
Flexon v. Polliott
Phillipson v. Gibbon
Howard v. Hodson
Vickers v. Holmes
Strying v. Berry
The London and South
Western Bank, (Limited)
v. Nash
Roberts v. Baseley
McMurray v. Spicer
Cottrell v. Coombe
Bousfield v. Bousfield
Holden v. Hart
Poupard v. Fardell
Smith v. Shipman
Vigers v. Butson
Herington v. The Metropolitan Railway Company
Gillett v. Gane
London and South-Western Bank (Limited) v.
Fairlie
Wild v. Wild
Coutts v. Ackworth
Poupard v. Stones
Fothergill v. Davies
Stephens v. Hasluck
Critchell v. The Commissioners of Her Majesty's Works and Public Buildings
Chadwick v. McKenna
Redgrave v. Stevens
Pugh v. Arton
Duke of Bedford v. Botham-ley
Earl St. Germans v. Fox
Slatter v. Samuel

To surrender in the Country.

DELL JOHN, watchmaker, Richmond. Pet. May 20. Reg. & O. A.
Tomlin. Sol. Teale, Leyburn. Sur. May 23

BLIZZARD, ALFRED HENRY, auctioneer, Bristol. Pet. May 21.
Reg. & O. A. Harley and Gibbs. Sols. Benson and Elletson.
Sur. June 7

BROWN, HENRY, saddler, Doncaster. Pet. May 22. O. A. Young
Sol. Tattershall, Sheffield. Sur. June 16

CLOSE, EDWIN, hosier, Sheffield. Pet. May 20. Reg. & O. A.
Wake and Rodgers. Sols. Messrs. Binney, Sheffield. Sur.
June 16

CODD, CHARLES ROBINSON, attorney-at-law, Kingston-upon-Hull. Pet. May 21. O. A. Young. Sol. Summers, Hull. Sur.
June 9

COUSINS, HENRY, butcher, Godalming. Pet. May 20. Reg. &
O. A. Gesser. Sol. Gosch, Godalming. Sur. June 7

DALBY, WILLIAM, journeyman joiner, Barrow-upon-Soar. Pet.
May 21. Reg. & O. A. Brook. Sol. Goode, Loughborough. Sur.
June 7

DAUBNEY, WILLIAM, wheelwright, Sheffield. Pet. May 18. Reg.
& O. A. Wake and Rodgers. Sol. Micklethwaite, Sheffield. Sur.
June 9

DUDLEY, HENRY, out of business, Birmingham. Pet. May 19
Reg. & O. A. Guest. Sol. Duke, Birmingham. Sur. June 4

DUNKELLEY, WILLIAM, machinist, Ashton-under-Lyne. Pet.
May 22. Reg. Fardeell. O. A. McNeill. Sols. Sutton and Elliott,
Manchester. Sur. June 9

FEAR, WILLIAM JOHN PITT, out of business, Wolverhampton.
Pet. May 21. Reg. Hill. O. A. Kinnear. Sol. Green, Wolver-hampton. Sur. June 9

GROVES, LEMUEL GULLIVER, out of business, Milton. Pet.
May 22. Reg. & O. A. Sharp. Sol. Sharp, Christchurch. Sur.
June 15

HOLLIS, MILES SLATER, joiner, Henton, Norris. Pet. May 19.
Reg. Fardeell. O. A. McNeill. Sol. Burton, Manchester. Sur.
June 7

HOUGHTON, JAMES, jun., dealer in coals, Bishop's Waltham. Pet.
May 20. Reg. & O. A. Gunner. Sol. Maakey, Southampton. Sur.
June 9

IRISH, BENJAMIN GEORGE, labourer, late Gloucester. Pet. May 12.
Reg. & O. A. Wilton. Sur. June 5

[illegible]

BIRTHS

CARTER.—On the 24th inst., at 21, Ashley-place, the wife of J. Bonham Carter, Esq., M.P., of a son.

HOPWOOD.—On the 23rd inst., the wife of James Thomas Hopwood, Esq., of Lincoln's-inn, barrister-at-law, of a daughter.

LAKE.—On the 23rd inst., at Rose-green House, Kingsbury, N.W., the wife of B. G. Lake, Esq., of Lincoln's-inn, of a son.

MARRIAGES

KILBY-WRIGHTON.—On the 19th inst., at the Parish Church, Hemelton, Northamptonshire, by the Rev. C. F. Baylis, M. A., Mr. Harry Kilby, solicitor, Banbury, to Susan, eldest daughter of the late John Wrighton, Esq., Stradbury Lodge, Northamptonshire. No cards.

KILLICK-FINCH.—On the 25th inst., at St. Mary's Church, London, near Leeds, by the Rev. R. Howard, Vicar, assisted by the Rev. J. H. Finch, Rector of St. Andrew's, Leeds, Mr. George Killick, Esq., of Leeds, to Miss Annie, third daughter of T. S. Finch, Esq., solicitor, of Leeds.

WEBB-PERHAM.—On the 26th inst., at Writington, Co. Wilts, William, youngest son of the late Edward Webb, Esq., of Bath, to Louisa Sylvia, only daughter of the late John Perham, Esq., of Writington, Wilts.

DEATH

ALLEN.—On the 19th inst., at Instow, North Devon, aged 74, Francis Thomas Allen, Esq., barrister-at-law, formerly Grovesnor House, Bath.

BEDWELL.—On the 18th inst., at East Moulsey, aged 81, the Joannetta, widow of the late Fredk. Bedwell, Esq., of 10, St. James's Place, W. C.

BENNETT.—On the 20th ult., at 37, Mark-lane-chambers, and John Savern Bennett, solicitor.

ROSS.—On the 23rd inst., at Tain, Ross-shire, N.B., David Ross, Esq., solicitor, and Commaeary Clerk for the counties of Ross and Cromarty.

SMITH.—On the 28th inst., at his residence, Hyde-park, aged 46, John Edwin Smith, of the firm of D. & J. Fawdon, and Low, 12, Broad-street, Chancery, E.C., solicitor.

BREAKFAST—EPPS'S COCOA—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success with Mr. Epps attained by his homeopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experiment. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, by a careful application of the fine properties of the selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which saves us many heavy doctors' bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by the Trade only in 1lb., and 1lb. tin-lined packets, labelled "JAMES W. EPPS & CO., HOMEOPATHIC CHEMISTS, LONDON."

WHOLESALE & RETAIL STATIONERS,

92, FLEET-STREET, AND 1 & 2, CHANCERY-LANE, LONDON, E.
Carriage paid to the Country on Orders exceeding 3*l*.

DRAFT PAPER, 6s. 6d., 6s., 7s., 7s. 9d., and 9s. per ream
 DRAFT PAPER, 17s. 6d., 13s. 6d., and 12s. 6d. per ream.
 FOOLCAP PAPER, 6s. 6d., 6s. 9d., and 18s. 6d. per ream.
 CREAM LAID NOTE, 3s., 4s., and 5s. per ream.
 LARGE CREAM LAID NOTE, 4s., 6s., and 7s. per ream.
 LARGE BLUE NOTE, 3s., 4s., and 6s. per ream.
 ENVELOPES, CREAM OR BLUE, 4s. 6d., and 6s. 6d. per 1000.
 "THE TEMPLE" ENVELOPE, extra secure, 5s. 6d. per 1000.
 BUREAU OFFICIAL ENVELOPE, 6s. 6d. per 100.
 THE NEW "VELLUM WOVEN CLUB-ROUND" NOTE, 3s. 6d. per 1000.

"We would direct particular attention to their New Chouse Paper: in our opinion it is the very best paper we wrote upon."—London Mirror.

INDENTURE SKINS, Printed and Machine-ruled to hold two or thirty folios, 1s. 9d. each, 20s. per dozen.
SECONDS or FOLLOWERS, Ruled 1s. 6d. each, 17s. per doz
RECORDS or MEMORIALS. 6d. each. 5s. 6d. per dozen.

LEDGERS, DAY-BOOKS, CASH-BOOKS, LETTER OR MINUTE-BOOKS.
An immense stock in various bindings.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE-LIST of Inkstands, Postage & Copying Presses, Writing Cases, Despatch Boxes, Oak Walnut Stationery Cabinets, and other useful articles adapted to Library or Office, post free.

Established 1841

BANKRUPTS' ESTATES.

The Official Assignees are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

Duke, S. surgeon, first, 93^d. Kinnear, Birmingham.—Mottershead, E. victualler, first, 2s. 7½^d. Kinnear, Birmingham.—Newton, R. D.A. advertising agent, second, 5½^d. Stansfeld, London.—Wilson, J. builder, first, 1s. 4½^d. Kinnear, Birmingham.

Assignment, Composition, Inspectorship, and Trust Needs.

Gazette, May 21.

ANDERSON, ALFRED, agent, Bythorne-ter, Briston. April 5.
TRUST. W. T. Butler, printer, Paternoster-row. May 10.
BALDWIN, WILLIAM, builder, Cateham. May 10. 10s. Trusts. A. P. Ryan, timber merchant; W. P. Wenham, gas filter, both Croydon; and H. Williams, commission agent, Old Fish-st. BERNARD, CHARLES, iron merchant, Buxton. April 21. Trusts. C. Wilkinson, ironmonger, Buxton.
BILL, LEWIS, hosier, Clarendon-rd, Notting-hill. April 23. 5s.—2s. 6d. in 2 and 4 mos.—secured.
BROOKLEY, WILLIAM, Trusts. 1. manufacturer, Shelf, near Halifax. April 1. Trusts. P. Speak, stuff manufacturer, Queensbury, near Halifax; W. Wilson, worsted spinster, Looe, Moor, near Bradford; and F. Andrew, dyer, Manchester.
BRANTON, GEORGE HENRY, cab proprietor, Hull. April 28. 10s. by three equal instalments of 2s. 6d. in 3, 6, 9, and 12 mos. Trusts. A. Siple, widow, Hull.
BRIGGS, JOHN, clothier, Ryde. March 23. 10s. by three equal instalments in 3, 6, and 9 mos. Trusts. J. Bridgen, grocer, Westnear.
CAMERON, FERDINAND FERGUSON, boiler maker, Deptford. May 19. 6s. in 7 days. Trusts. G. A. Cape, accountant, Old Jewry; F. B. Camroux, gentleman, Commercial-ter, Peckham; and G. Oliver, ironmonger, Wapping.
COOPER, JOHN, rubber dealer, Buxton. April 29. 4s. in 1 mo. Trusts. J. Eglington, accountant, Reading.
CRAMPTON, ELIZABETH PENNEY, innkeeper, Harborne. May 12. 5s. by two payments of 2s. 6d. in 3 and 6 mos. Trusts. G. B. Nichols, architect, West Bromwich.
CROFT, DANIEL, gun, wool-stapler, Halifax. April 21. Trusts. J. Scarborough; J. Thomas; and W. Blagrough, woolstaplers, all Halifax.
DAVIES, WILLIAM, saddler, Neath. April 20. Trusts. F. Gottwaltz, saddlers' ironmonger, Buxton.
EASTWOOD, ROBERT, GOODWIND, grocer, Dunkinfield. May 14. 5s. Trusts. J. Norton, gardener, Dunkinfield.
EVANS, ROBERT, formerly builder, Lillington - st, Pimlico. April 23. 7s. 6d. by instalments of 4s. and 3s. 6d. in 6 and 10 mos.
FELLOWS, EDWARD, commission agent, Cheetham-hill. April 14. 3s. by equal instalments, in 1, 4, and 8 mos.
FORD, THOMAS PAUL, printer, Great Yarmouth. May 8. 10s. by two equal instalments on May 27 and Aug 27.
GOLDMAN, MICHAEL, iron, wool-stapler, in wearing apparel, Partridge-st, Houndsditch. May 14. 1s. on Aug 1.
HALKETT, PATRICK, merchant, Mincing-la. April 20. 6s. by two equal instalments, in 2 and 4 mos.
HOLMES, H. Watson, wholesaler, Newcastle-under-Lyme. April 15. 5s. by two equal instalments, on date of deed and on Aug 15.
HYDE, EDMUND, butcher, Cheitenham. May 13. 5s. by two equal instalments, in 1 and 12 mos.
KENWARD, THOMAS, KENWARD, draper, Battle. April 29. 6s. by two equal instalments, in 1 and 9 mos. Trusts. J. Kenward, draper, Saint Yves, and G. H. Ladbury, accountant, Cheshire.
KNIGHT, DANIEL, grocer, Newcastle-under-Lyme. April 6. Trusts. H. Watson, wholesaler, Newcastle-under-Lyme.
MACHIN, ALFRED, innkeeper, Hanley. March 2. Trusts. S. Beadmore, yeoman, Hanley, and J. T. Smith, commission agent, Stoke-upon-Trent.
MOORE, WILLIAM, boot manufacturer, Havant. April 23. Trusts. W. T. Hooker, shoe maker, Church-st, Shorehitch, and W. Edmonds, accountant, Portsea.
MORPHY, HENRY, and SMITH, MICHAEL, clothiers, Oxford-st. April 9. Trusts. J. Midgley, woollen warehouseman, King Edward-st, and J. H. Williams, trimming seller, Aldermanbury.
PASCHEN, FRIEDRICH WILHELM, merchant, Dittmer, ADALBERT, Mexico; and PASCHEN, CONRAD GUSTAV, Schwerin, all merchants. May 17. 2s. 6d. in 14 days, and Mexican debts exceeding the sum of 300l., in lieu of comp. of 8s. under deed of 1000l. Trusts. F. Spencer, and E. Delius, mer-

Gazette, May 23.

ABRAHAM, ELIAS, bootmaker, Notting-hill. 5s. by two equal instalments on S. pt. 13 and Dec. 13. Trust. B. Davies, picture dealer, Notting-hill.

ADEY, WILLIAM, tailor, Seymour-st. St. Pancras. April 30. 4s. In 3 mos.

ADRIAN, SAMUEL, wine merchant, Vine-st. Minorities. May 10. 1s. by three equal instalments on Aug. 10, Nov. 10 and Feb. 10, -last guaranteed. Trust. J. Salmon, biscuit manufacturer, Phoenix-ld, Ratcliff.

ASPIN, ALFRED, woodstapler, Bradford. May 7. 8s. 6d. by instalments of 1s. 6d. on 1, 3 and 6 mos.

BAKER, JOHN WOODALL, hatter, Liverpool. May 4. 8s. 8d. by two equal instalments on Oct. 1, and Feb. 1.

BARNETT, JAMES, bootmaker, Backfasteigh. May 19.

BIRKHEAD, THOMAS, innkeeper, Ashton-under-Lyne. May 14. 5s. In 3 mos from registration.

BOOTH, WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE, venetian blind manufacturer, Birmingham. April 30. 3s. by two equal instalments, in 3 and 6 mos from registration.

CALVERT, J. S. dealer in hardware, Southsea. April 29. 5s. by equal instalments, on June 21 and Sept. 21. Trusts. J. Cantle, house carpenter, Southsea, and W. Kimonda, accountant, Portsea.

COOPER, HENRY, machinist, Bethnal-green-rd. May 6. 5s. by instalments of 1s. 6d. on 1, 3 and 6 mos from registration.

CORNER, CHARLES THOMAS, bootmaker, Park-rd. Old Ford-rd. April 21. Trust. D. Davis, wholesale boot manufacturer, Hackney-rd.

DRAKE, CHARLES AUGUSTUS, surgeon dentist, Ipswich. May 3. 10s. by two equal half-yearly payments on Nov. 3 and Feb. 3. May 1 in every year, first on Nov. 1. Trust. G. Fairhead, gentleman, Colchester.

DUNNING, JOHN, grocer, Longham. May 13. 8s. -5s. In 1 week, and 5s. in 4 mos from registration, -secured. Trust. G. Clarke, grocer, Longham.

EAST, WARREN, draper, Broughton. May 3. Trusts. J. Wells, grocer, and J. Gossey, draper, both Kettering.

ELDER, ALEXANDER, West India merchant, Bush-ls, Cannon-st; Barbadoes; and Antigua. May 19. 2s. in 1 mo from registration.

FARRAR, HOWARTH, accountant, Manchester. May 14. 5s. in 1 mo from registration, -secured. Trust. S. C. Farrar, yarn agent, Todmorden.

FEARDELL, HENRY, mungo dealer, Ossett, near Wakefield. May 10. Trusts. J. Davies, oil merchant, Leeds, and B. Priestley, mungo dealer, Ossett.

FRY, FREDERICK, farmer, Westfield. April 23. Trusts. A. Dunk, hop merchant, Maidstone-bldgs, Southwark, and W. Ranger, farmer, Westfield.

FRY, RICHARD HENRY, farmer, Lowden. April 26. Trusts. D. Collier, miller, W. Austin, butcher, both Chippenham.

FYNN, HENRY, and FYNN, EDWARD, china dealers, Bristol. April 17. 13s. 4d. by four equal instalments, at 3, 6, 9, and 12 mos, from registration. Trust. J. Fynn, manager to china dealer, Bath.

GOSNOLD, GEORGE, draper, Freshford. May 17. Trust. S. Littleton, accountant, Bath.

GINGER, GEORGE, builder, New Barnett. April 21. Trust. J. Layley, builder, New Barnett.

HARRIS, JOHN, wine and spirits grocer, Birmingham. April 24. 4s. by two equal instalments, on registration, and in 2 mos from registration.

HAIGREAVE, LAWRENCE, builder, New Wortley, near Leeds. May 11. 5s. in 7 days from registration.

HALL, FREDERICK, clothier, Broad-st. grocer, Birmingham. May 1. 7s. 6d. by three equal instalments, at 1, 4, and 7 mos, -from registration.

HEWLETT, WILLIAM, hat manufacturer, Bristol. May 6. 5s. by three equal instalments.

HOBKIN, THOMAS, draper, Sunderland. April 17. Trusts. W. E. Hobkin, draper, Sunderland, and W. George, travelling draper, Bradford.

HODGSON, THOMAS, SHAW, JAMES, and DENT, ROBERT, dyers, Belle Isle, Wakefield. April 13. 10s. by three instalments, viz. -5s. on Aug. 1, 2s. 6d. on Nov. 1, and 2s. 6d. on Feb. 1, 1870, -last guaranteed.

HOWLETT, SAMUEL, shop fitter, Mount-pleasant, Whitechapel, and North-st. Mile-end. May 21. 3s. by three equal instalments, in 3, 6, and 9 mos.

HUGHES, RICHARD, cabinet maker, Liverpool. May 15. 15s. 6d. by instalments of 5s. 6d. on 1, 3, 6, 9, 12 mos, and in 3, 6, 9, and 12 mos. Trusts. A. Hale, builder, and J. Walker, gentleman, both Liverpool.

IFFICE, CHARLES, commission agent, Warwick. April 30. 30s. on Dec. 30, and 1s. in each year. Trust. F. P. Fox, Birmingham.

IVER, WATER EDMUND, confectioner, Ipswich. May 11. 2s. 6d. on registration. Trust. M. Ives, widow, Great Yarmouth.

KENDALL, WILLIAM JACKSON, broomaker, Chatham. May 4. 6s. by two equal instalments, at 3 and 6 mos.

LEITCH, JOHN, and JAMES, proprietors of "Ladies' seminary keepers, Clapham-rise, Clapham. April 22. In full, by three equal instalments, on Sept. 30, Dec. 30, and March 30. Trust. E. Howard, gentleman, Poultry.

MCPHERSON, JOHN, manufacturer, Faison-st. Aldergate-st. Dec. 30. 3s. 6d. in instalments of 3s., 3s., and 3s., on June 1, Aug. 1, and Oct. 1, -secured.

MUNDILL, FREDERICK CHARLES, contractor, Birkdale. May 10. Trust. W. Barron, accountant, Southport.

PENNEY, WILLIAM SEALY, commission agent, Middlebrough. Trust. W. Foster, accountant, Middlebrough.

RITHERDON, CHARLES TALBOT, gentleman, Lime-vie, Lewis-ham. April 23. Trusts. J. Melton, Margaret-st, Cavendish-square, and E. T. Hammond, gentleman, Cornhill.

SALMON, W. THOMAS, draper, Old Ford-rd. April 29. 8s. 6d. by two equal instalments, in 6 and 12 mos from registration.

CONTENTS—REPORTS.

ROLLS COURT.

HEATH v. BUCKNELL—
Easement—Ancient lights—New building 549

V.C. STUART'S COURT.

CATT v. TOURLE—
Demurrer—Conveyance in fee—Covenant for the exclusive right of supplying beer 551

V. C. MALINS' COURT.

THE MERCANTILE TRADING COMPANY; STRINGER'S CASE—
Joint-stock company—Winding-up—Practise 553

V. C. JAMES'S COURT.

ESTATE v. THOMPSON—
Practice—Plea of coverture—Leave of court 555

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

HARROWER and OTHERS v. HUTCHINSON—
Policy of insurance—Concealment—"Port or ports" 556

MEYER (app.) v. THORNE (resp.)—
Bread—Selling otherwise than by weight—Evidence of 563

FIELD (app.) v. THORNE (resp.)—
Highway—Encroachment—Erecting a fence on the site of a ditch 563

THE COMPANY OF PROPRIETORS OF MARGATE PIER AND
HARBOUR (apps.) v. THE TOWN COUNCIL OF THE BOROUGH
OF MARGATE ACTING AS THE LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH
(trgs.)—
Sediments removal—Seaweed left by the action of the sea —Duty of removal 564

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

BUTTS v. THOMPSON—
Seamen's wages—Ship's articles sanctioned by Board of Trade—Leaving ship before end of voyage 568

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

MERRILL (app.) v. THE ECCLESIASTICAL COMMISSIONERS
FOR ENGLAND (resps.)— Landlord and tenant—Lease by a corporation—Absence of corporate seal 573

EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

ROFFELWELL v. HODGKINSON—
Right to support—Land supported by subterranean water 578

NICHOLSON v. POWER—
Maritime insurance—Concealment—Material fact 580

THE GENERAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY v. THE BRITISH COLONIAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY—
Ship and shipping—Negligence—Collision 581

BAIL COURT.

IRVING v. ASKEW—
Bale to compel a County Court judge to do his duty—
Absolute or qualified refusal 584

RE v. THE COMMISSIONERS FOR IMPROVING THE TOWNS AND HARBOURS OF SOUTHAMPTON—
Security for costs—Power of Queen's coroner—Lapse of time 585

WYTON v. ABRAHAM—
Fiduciary partnership—Averment in excess of proof 586

COURT OF ADMIRALTY.

THE TORRENT—
Damage—Arrest of part of cargo—Lien for freight 586

THE EST-DE GITANA—
Damage—Lights—Vessel at anchor moving 587

DIVORCE AND MATRIMONIAL CAUSES COURT.

MORGAN v. MORGAN and PORTER—
Dissolution—Husband and wife both guilty of adultery 588

LEADING ARTICLES, SUMMARIES,
CORRESPONDENCE, &c.

TO CORRESPONDENTS 101

LEADING ARTICLES:—
Topics of the Week 101

The Profession in the Colonies 101

Foreign Subscribers 102

The Limits of Privilege 102

Creditors' Remedies under Trust-Deeds 103

Professional Incomes 103

Manual of Leading Cases in Common Law 103

The Liability of Insurers for Loss by Jettison 104

SATISFACTION AND DOINGS OF THE COURTS 107

ELECTION LAW:—
The Variation of Costs 111

The Parliamentary Elections Act 1868 111

LEGISLATION AND JURISPRUDENCE:—
House of Commons 112

STATE AND INVESTMENT JOURNAL:—
Stock and Share Markets 113

Public Companies 113

Reports of Sales 113

SUMMARY JOURNAL:—
Notes of New Decisions 113

Professional Touting 114

Notes at Law and Next of Kin 114

Creditors under Estates in Chancery 114

Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35 114

Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the Bank of England 114

THE BENCH AND THE BAR 114

MAGISTRATES AND PARISH LAWYERS:—
Notes of New Decisions 114

Notary Public Justices—Cromer 114

Habitual Criminals Bill 115

REAL PROPERTY LAWYERS:—
Notes of New Decisions 115

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL:—
Notes of New Decisions 116

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL:—
Answers to the Final Examination Questions 116

Examinations at the Incorporated Law Society 117

General Examination 117

Examination for Honours 117

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION 117

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE 118

LAW SOCIETIES:—
Law Students' Debating Society 118

Solicitors' Benevolent Association 118

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS 118

THE LAW LIBRARY:—
Editor's Manual of the Law relating to the Office of Trustee 118

Foster's Doctors' Commons, its Courts and Registries 118

THE GAZETTES 118

NOTES, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS 120

CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

Four lines or thirty words 3s. 6d.

Every additional ten words 0s. 6d.

Advertisements specially ordered for the first page are charged one-fourth more than the above scale.

Advertisements must reach the office not later than five o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

VOL. XLVII.—No. 1366.

To Readers and Correspondents.

All anonymous communications are invariably rejected.

SUBSCRIPTION TO THE LAW TIMES.

Paid in advance:—
One year £ s. d.
2 13 0
Half-a-year 1 7 6

On credit or for separate numbers:—
Single numbers (stamped) 0 1 1
" (unstamped) 0 1 0
Double numbers (stamped) 0 1 7 1/2
" (unstamped) 0 1 6

NOTICE.

The Nineteenth Volume of the LAW TIMES REPORTS is now complete, and may be uniformly and strongly bound at the LAW TIMES Office, price 4s. 6d.

THE
Law and the Lawyers.

THE respective standings of the new silks are as follow:—Mr. HENRY JAMES, 17 years and 6 months; Mr. LOPES, 17 years; Mr. BERE, 19 years and 1 month; Mr. EDLIN 22 years; Mr.
POPE, 11 years; Dr. ADAMS, Recorder of Birmingham, 30 years and 6 months; Mr. KAY,
21 years; Mr. FOOKS, 26 years; Mr. OSBORNE
MORGAN, 16 years; Mr. FRAY, 15 years; Mr.
EDDIS, 24 years; Mr. T. HUGHES, 21 years and 6 months; Mr. BOYLE, 33 years and 6 months;
Mr. DOUGLAS BROWN, 22 years; and Mr. Fox
BRISTOWE, 22 years.

THE Bill introduced into the House of Commons by Mr. SHERIDAN and Mr. Serjeant SIMON, to facilitate compromises and arrangements between creditors and shareholders of joint-stock companies in liquidation, proposes to enact:—Where any compromise or arrangement shall be proposed between a joint-stock company in liquidation and its creditors, or any class of creditors, or between the shareholders, or any different class of shareholders, it shall be lawful for the Court of Chancery to order that a meeting of such creditors, or class of creditors, shareholders, or class of shareholders, be summoned in such manner as the court shall direct; and, if a majority in number representing three-fourths in value of such creditors, or class of creditors, shareholders, or class of shareholders, present, either in person or by proxy, at such meeting shall agree to a proposed arrangement or compromise, it shall, if duly confirmed by the order of the court, be binding on all such creditors, or class of creditors, shareholders, or class of shareholders. THE LORD CHANCELLOR may from time to time make, and from time to time revoke, general rules for the effectual execution of this Act and the objects thereof.

Mr. BOYD KINNEAR is not satisfied with the Bankruptcy Bill as amended. He points out that it contains the defect of leaving many of the essential details to be regulated by rules to be framed by the LORD CHANCELLOR; and that another defect is to be found in the restraints placed on the creditors' discretion in dealing with what, by the mere fact of bankruptcy, has become their property. He sums up his objections in a series of questions. Thus: Why should it be necessary to prove an act of bankruptcy in a case where the debtor appears and confesses the debt, or where its existence is beyond dispute? Why should the decision of all actions against the debtor, after bankruptcy, be taken from the proper court and imposed on the Bankruptcy Courts? They will have no greater powers of ascertaining the truth, and no greater rapidity of proceeding, while some, at least, may possibly not inspire the same respect. Why again should the exceptional favour shown to Crown debts be continued? Why should the declaring of a dividend at any time be left (sect. 39) to the pleasure of the trustee, subject only to the duty of "explaining his reasons" for no dividend once in six months? Why should the Act be obscured with the addition (sect. 75) of the impracticable clause declaring that one court should be "auxiliary" to another? How can a court which knows nothing of a case be safely directed to act as if it had the case before itself, except in relation to such specific matters as examination of witnesses or backing of warrants, which are provided for in separate sections? Why should there be no attempt to include the administration of the affairs of deceased insolvents, or of partnerships of more than seven members, seeing that experience in Scotland has proved the great convenience of extending the law of bankruptcy to such cases? And Mr. KINNEAR concludes that a committee of merchants, aided by a solicitor experienced in commercial wants, could during the recess frame a measure which would be more sound, better adapted to actual requirements, and far less liable to create and prolong litigation than that which has now been laid before Parliament.

THE PROFESSION IN THE COLONIES.

WE are sorry to receive from New Zealand an account of a professional scandal of no mean importance as affecting the admission of persons into the legal profession in that colony. Mr.
WILLIAM FOX, a barrister of the Inner Temple, practising in the Supreme Court of New Zealand, has published a letter on the subject, from which we glean the following facts.

By an Act of the Colonial Parliament passed in the year 1866, it was enacted that "if any person who has or shall have been convicted in any part of the British dominions of forgery, or perjury, or subornation of perjury, shall be enrolled or shall practise as a barrister or solicitor of the Supreme Court of New Zealand, such person shall be liable to pay a penalty of five hundred pounds."

Before the passing of this Act it appears that a person named SMYTHIES who had been a practising solicitor in England, and before his resort to the colony had been convicted of forgery, applied to be admitted to practise as a barrister and solicitor in the Supreme Court.
Mr. Fox tells us that the Judges of that court appear to have had full knowledge of his former delinquency, but nevertheless they permitted his enrolment, and Mr. SMYTHIES proceeded to practise both branches of his profession in the Courts of Law at Otago.

Fortunately for the Profession there was a member of it, namely, Mr. JOHN JOHNES, of Dunedin and Waikaiti, with sufficient spirit to lay an information against SMYTHIES for practising in contravention of the provisions of the Act of 1866.

The magistrates before whom the case was heard convicted SMYTHIES and awarded the full penalty, which they had no power to mitigate.
He appealed from their decision, and moved
Mr. Justice WARD to quash the conviction. Of the fact of SMYTHIES having been convicted of forgery there was no doubt, for he confessed it; and the fact of his having practised since the Act was passed was equally patent. He rested his appeal on grounds of a purely technical character, and these having been overruled by Mr. WARD, the conviction was sustained.
SMYTHIES, however, has appealed to the "Court of Appeal" against the ruling of Mr. Justice WARD.

It is most unfortunate that the Supreme Court should have rendered such a condition of things possible. We quite agree with Mr. Fox when he says, "That a person previously convicted of forgery, within the knowledge of the Judges of the Supreme Court, should have been permitted by them to assume the functions of a barrister and solicitor, and to clothe himself with those testimonials of integrity and respectability which are usually supposed to attach to members of the legal profession, has something not a little startling in it. If there is a crime which peculiarly disqualifies a man for enrolment in the honourable profession of the law, it is precisely that of which Mr. SMYTHIES has been guilty, because it is precisely that to which a needy unscrupulous or unprincipled lawyer would be likely to be tempted, and its consequences are such as might most readily result in ruin to those who, confiding in the character implied by an admission to practise as a lawyer, might have entrusted their property or their rights to his professional management. The honour of the Profession and the safety of the public are both placed under the guardianship of the Judges, to whose discretion and watchful-ness the highly responsible duty of keeping the Profession pure is entrusted."

We are not enlightened as to the technical grounds upon which SMYTHIES founds his appeal.
One of them, we assume, is that having been admitted before the passing of the Act of 1866, he is not affected by its provisions. If we have it rightly, it precludes any convict from practising, for its words are "shall be enrolled or shall practise." But whatever the grounds, we hope the Judges will feel themselves able to correct so serious an error, for as Judge WARD bitterly said in his summing up, "The result of the admission of Mr. SMYTHIES has been, that of all the realms ruled by the law of England, New Zealand has become the solitary spot where, by a solemn decision of the Judges, the roll of solicitors, the Bar, and consequently the Judicial Bench, have been opened as a locus penitentie to the forgers and felons of Great Britain."

PAUPER SUITORS.

It has been recently strongly remarked by Vice-Chancellor Malins, that the liability to have a bill filed against you by a person who, if he fails cannot pay you any costs, is one of the common evils of life. He held it to be clear that the mere poverty of the plaintiff, his humility of position in life, is no ground whatever for a motion to stay the proceedings, and that a bill may be carried on by a man who is in point of fact a pauper, and when the proper day comes for getting rid of the litigation with costs, nominally, no costs can be obtained in consequence of the want of means of the plaintiff.

That the existence of this state of things is a great hardship upon defendants in many instances cannot be denied, but that it will continue so long as suing in forma pauperis is trammelled with the existing provisions as to costs is perfectly clear.

A pauper ought not to be allowed to sue unless it is certified by a competent person, who risks his professional reputation upon the certificate, that the pauper has a good cause of action or ground of proceeding. This is a necessity if it is desired to escape liability for all costs and court fees, but the course is very rarely taken, because of the provisions as to costs. These provisions are, that "a person admitted to sue in forma pauperis shall not in any case be entitled to costs from the opposite party unless by order of the court or a judge" (R. 28, Hilary Term, 1853). And a similar rule prevails in equity. And what are the costs obtainable by such leave? Merely, it is believed, costs out of pocket; the pauper pays only costs out of pocket, and how, it is asked, can more costs be recovered? This argument is sufficiently forcible to deter respectable solicitors from taking up the cases of persons without means.

And what are the results? One result is, that we hear of speculative proceedings, proceedings on behalf of paupers by attorneys—who, we know, do not purchase this journal, or, at any rate, do not attend to the doctrine of honourable dealing which we endeavour to inculcate—for the sake of possible costs. Another result is such as we find illustrated in a case before Vice-Chancellor Malins on Thursday week, namely, fighting causes in the names of nominees. This case is thus described by the Vice-Chancellor in his judgment:—"I have here," he said, "a case in which a bill is filed by Mr. Thomas Barron Robson, who is described in the bill as a joiner. He files the bill as a shareholder or member of a benefit society, and the complaint made against the society is that they have borrowed a large sum of money, and lent it out again, which, it is said, is not within the province of the society—that it is ultra vires, and, therefore, remedies are sought against those who have been engaged in the transaction. It has been brought to my attention by the affidavits of the defendants, which are wholly uncontradicted, what the state of the facts is. First of all, I should say that Mr. Harle, who is the solicitor instituting this suit, was for many years the solicitor of another company connected, as I consider, with this; that he has had a quarrel with that other company, that he is exceedingly angry with two gentlemen, one of whose name is Dodds and the other Atkinson, both of whom are defendants to this suit, that the quarrel has an existence of no less than five years, and that it culminated in the month of January last. On the 20th of January, it seems that a conclusion was arrived at that Mr. Harle was no longer to be the solicitor of that other society. On the 20th of January last, this plaintiff Robson had no interest in this society whatever. Five days afterwards he is made to purchase; and I can have no hesitation in coming to the conclusion that the purchase was made with Mr. Harle's money, because, five days afterwards, this man Robson, who is the husband of the woman who is the landress of Mr. Harle's office, is made to purchase and acquire an interest in this society, which involved the payment of 2*l.* 0*s.* 3*d.*, which 2*l.* 0*s.* 3*d.* is the whole interest that this plaintiff has in this suit, and that by virtue of a purchase made five days after Mr. Harle's quarrel had come to a final culmination. It is sworn, and I am satisfied as clearly as I can be satisfied of anything, that this is the suit of Mr. Harle."

Upon this state of things the Vice-Chancellor remarked: "It is a serious and important question; this practice of importing the names of other persons into litigation whose names can be used with impunity—because if the bill is dismissed they cannot pay a penny—is one of the most dangerous things, and affects the interests of society." And, taking this view, in which every one must agree, the Vice-Chancellor asked the plaintiff's counsel whether Mr. Harle would give security for costs in the event of the failure of the suit. To this, of course, the reply was, "Certainly not;" and, with equal promptitude and spirit, the Vice-Chancellor rejoined, "Then you may rest assured, Mr. Glasse, that if I can stop such a suit as this, stopped it shall be." Mr. Glasse, however, insisted that it could not be done, citing the decision of Lord Cairns in Seaton v. Grant, to the effect that the only way of getting rid of a suit is by plea, demurrer, or answer; but the Vice-Chancellor, notwithstanding, carried out his determination, and allowed the motion to take the bill off the file, "being of opinion," he said, "that the plaintiff is a mere puppet in the hands of Mr. Harle, that this is to all intents and purposes Mr. Harle's suit, not instituted for a bona fide purpose, and that he is not entitled to represent the shareholders in this company, but that it is filed for the purpose of working out the personal feelings which Mr. Harle has. In my opinion, this is a suit which the records of this court ought not to be encumbered with." And, in addition, he gave the defendants their costs, but as they could not be given as against Mr. Harle, of course this amounted to nothing.

This case, introducing certainly a new phase into proceedings by or on behalf of paupers, will be carried to the Court of Appeal, which, constituted as it is at present, will probably not have the courage to uphold the Vice-Chancellor. Looking at it, however, as it now stands, and having regard to other cases which we have in our mind, we think it highly desirable that some new law, or some new rules of practice, should be brought into operation; in the first place, to give a pauper his full costs who sues on a good cause of action; and to check proceedings by paupers at the outset, when it appears that the proceedings are not bona fide for their own interest or founded upon insufficient grounds. Until this is done injustice will be suffered on all hands.

THE LIMITS OF PRIVILEGE.

It is with considerable satisfaction that we find cases arising so conspicuously illustrating the justness of our views recently expressed in an article entitled "Privileged Communications and Express Malice." We there contended for a proposition which, as the law now stands, is untenable, namely, that no privilege should be extended to defamatory matter unless the defendant can show that he took every possible means to ascertain that what he said or wrote was true, on the ground that his failure to take this precaution shows culpable negligence.

A case to which we shall first allude is reported from the Exchequer Chamber (Parkes v. Prescott and others, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 537). There a venire de novo was ordered by a majority of the Judges, on the ground that Martin, B., was wrong in directing a verdict for the defendants on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence of publication. The slanders were in their inception privileged as being uttered at a meeting of the board of guardians. They would have been considered privileged, although reporters were present whose ordinary duty it is to publish in the public newspapers a report of the proceedings of such a body; had the newspapers published the slander without direct authority, the printers, and not the slanderers, would have been liable. But, luckily for the plaintiff, the guardians forgot discretion, and wildly expressed a hope that publicity would be given to the matter. The defendant Ellis said that he hoped the local press would take notice of "this very scandalous case," and requested the chairman to give an outline of it. The question of privilege, however, did not in this case directly arise. The point was simply whether there was evidence of publication—is a request to publish a publication which will fix liability upon the person making the request? In the last edition of Starkie it is laid down that "if a man request another generally to write a libel, he must be answerable for any libel written in pursuance of his request; he contributes to the misdemeanor, and is therefore responsible as a principal. A man who employs another generally to write a libel must take his chance of what appears, though something may be added which he did not state. Having directed a libel to be published of a particular person, on a particular subject, and afterwards approved of what is published, he cannot afterwards defend himself on the ground that something has been added which he did not authorise or communicate." Reg. v. Cooper, 8 Q. B. 533, is cited to support these principles, and Mr. Justice Byles, with reference to that case, said that it did not resemble the one before the court, as in the latter there was no evidence of approbation; but Mr. Giffard replied that this being so was of no moment, as approbation does not mean approval of the form, but of the matter of the libel. The Court did not, in the argument, go quite with him on this point, thinking that some identification of the libel is necessary. In the judgment of the majority, delivered by Mr. Justice Smith, there are expressions which make it appear that some approbation in the nature of an identification of the libel is necessary. For, contrary to the law, as laid down in the above quotation from Starkie, the learned judge said, "I think the words must be of such a kind, and used in such a manner, as to satisfy the jury that they amounted to, and were in fact, a request to publish. If the words do amount to such a request, and the publication be made in pursuance of it by the persons to whom it was addressed, then it seems to me the person making such request would be responsible for the libellous matter so published. Whether the libellous matter published is in pursuance of, and in accordance with, the request, or a departure from it, and so unauthorised, would be a circumstance to be considered on the circumstances of the particular case."

Those who care to investigate the important matters discussed in the above case may easily do so by reference to the full report furnished by our reporter; but it is not further applicable to our present purpose, and we shall proceed to notice the case occurring this week in the Court of Queen's Bench, involving the question whether a superior officer in the army may make a maliciously false report of another officer with impunity except as regards the action of a military tribunal. Judgment has been reserved, and doubtless we shall soon have a lucid exposition of the law from that greatest living authority the Lord Chief Justice. In the meantime it is interesting to see to what lengths the claim of privilege might be carried.

According to an almost verbatim report which appears in the Times, Lord Paulet wrote to the Commander-in-Chief a letter in which he spoke of Colonel Dawkins—"that an officer who has shown such a want of judgment, tact, and temper, is not fit to be entrusted with the responsibility and charge of a command."

The defendant pleaded in justification that he, as Major-General of the brigade, was the superior military officer of the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff was under his command, and that it was his duty as such to send to the Adjutant-General letters from time to time sent to him as such superior officer in relation to the military conduct, duties, and qualifications by the officers under his command, and to make thereupon reports on the subject of such letters, and concerning the officers under his command, and of their conduct, qualifications, competence, and fitness for their duties as such officers; and that he as such superior officer had received from the plaintiff certain letters in relation to the military duties of the plaintiff, and orders received by him from the defendant, and which the plaintiff requested might be forwarded by the defendant as such superior officer; and thereupon the defendant in his said capacity, and in the ordinary course of his military duty as such superior officer, and because it became and was necessary and incumbent upon him by his duty to Her Majesty as such superior military officer so to do, and as an act of military duty, and not otherwise, or for any other reason, forwarded the letter, and for the information of the Commander-in-Chief, when so doing, made certain reports in writing in relation to the said letter of the plaintiff, and as to the plaintiff's conduct in the field and his unfitness for command, such occasion being the proper occasion, according to the discipline and regulations in force in the army, for the defendant to make such reports. To this the plaintiff replied that the words complained of were written of actual malice on the part of the defendant, and without any reasonable or probable cause, and not bonâ fide or in the discharge of his duty. To this the defendant demurred on the ground that no action was maintainable against the defendant in respect of words written and published under such circumstances, even though they were written maliciously and without probable cause.

Here the very point was raised which we have previously discussed. Was the defendant liable for not taking the pains to ascertain that what he wrote was true? The Lord Chief Justice says, "It may be that a man has acted from erroneous notions or information, and yet in the course of duty." This illustrates strongly our argument in favour of making a person who is discharging a duty exercise diligence in ascertaining the truth of what he says or writes in the course of that duty. Why should the mere exercise of a duty exempt a man from using ordinary care? If the principle on this point hitherto existing is not modified persons in authority will be practically free from legal responsibility in matters of defamation. We look to Lord Chief Justice for this modification, and await his judgment with the greatest interest.

CREDITORS' REMEDIES UNDER TRUST-DEEDS.

A QUESTION has been discussed by the Lords Justices, which Lord Justice Selwyn properly describes as one of very general importance, namely, whether when a debtor has made an affidavit that the requisite majority of his creditors have assented to a deed of composition, and it afterwards appears that that statement is untrue, a dissentient creditor is entitled to go to the Court of Bankruptcy under sect. 198 of the Bankruptcy Act 1861, for leave to issue execution against the debtor, notwithstanding the execution of the deed. And a further question was, what is such delay as will preclude the creditor from resorting to this remedy?

These points were raised and discussed in Ex parte Osenton, Re Prior, at p. 506 of our current volume of reports. The first was decided by the Lords Justices without the expression of a doubt. The statement that the requisite majority of creditors had assented was a misrepresentation; the registration of the deed had therefore been obtained by misrepresentation, and consequently leave to issue execution would be given if the creditor had not in some way debarred himself of his remedy.

It will be well to notice the facts of this case, and then to compare them with those of the other cases, so that we may extract some general rule for future guidance.

This deed was registered on the 3rd Aug. 1868, and the certificate of registration was dated in the 4th Aug. On the 3rd Aug. 1868 notice was given to Osenton's attorneys of the execution of the deed; but on the same day they signed judgment, and issued a writ of fi. fa. against Prior's goods, under which the sheriff's officer took possession the same day. On the 4th Aug. Prior's attorney gave notice to the sheriff of the deed of the 1st Aug., and that under it one Johnson claimed the goods which had been seized. The sheriff took out an interpleader summons, and Mr. Justice Blackburn ordered an interpleader issue to be tried. This was tried on the 3rd Nov. 1868, when a verdict was found for Johnson, leave being reserved to Osenton to move for a new trial. A rule for a new trial was afterwards obtained, and was argued before the Court of Exchequer in banco on the 23rd Jan. 1869, when the court discharged the rule, on the ground that though the deed might be bad under the Bankruptcy Act 1861, it was still good as a deed at law to pass the property in the goods to Johnson: (19 L. T. Rep. N.S. 793.) The second composition of 2s. in the pound was tendered to Osenton on the 27th Oct. 1868, but he refused to receive it. After the decision of the Court of Exchequer Osenton applied ex parte to the Court of Bankruptcy for leave to summon Prior for examination. This application was supported by an affidavit, which stated that the object of the examination was to obtain evidence to show that the second deed was invalid. An order was made accordingly that Prior should attend and be examined, the order referring to the affidavit supporting the application. This order was made on the 11th Feb. 1869, but it was not served on Prior until the 22nd Feb. Prior attended, and was examined on the 25th Feb. and the 9th March, and the result of this examination was to show that the deed of the 1st Aug. 1868 was insufficiently assented to. On the 6th April Osenton gave notice of an application to the Court of Bankruptcy for leave to issue execution against Prior; and on the 22nd April this application was refused, with costs, by Mr. Commissioner Bacon, on the ground of the applicant's delay in making it. Osenton then appealed.

As pointed out by Lord Justice Selwyn, the only unexplained delay in the proceedings of the debtor as disputing the validity of the deed was the period between the 11th and 22nd Feb.

Now in Ex parte Banfield, 14 L. T. Rep. N. S. 289, no application was made to the Court of Bankruptcy until eleven months after the deed was registered, and Lord Cranworth said, "It would be very wrong at this period of time to give a creditor an opportunity of setting up his legal rights." In Ex parte Savin, 15 L. T. Rep. N. S. 150, on the 16th March the deed was registered, and not until the 31st May did non-assenting creditors give notice of motion before the Bankruptcy Court to cancel the registration. Lord Justice Knight Bruce, referring to the nature of the case, said, "The time allowed to elapse before bringing the objection before his Honour was, I think, of great materiality. The time, I think, was ten weeks, or about that time. During that period, in an estate of this description"—the debtor was a railway contractor, and at the time of the execution of the deed engaged in railway works of the greatest magnitude in England and Wales—"much that was very material may have happened, and in all probability, or certainly did happen, and I apprehend that those who intended to avail themselves of the invalidity or possible invalidity of the registration, were bound to bring the objection forward much sooner than they did." Lord Justice Turner said that delay in making the application is not so important if notice be given of the intention so to do. "In a transaction of this description," are his words, "with concerns of the enormous magnitude of those which are involved in this deed, I think it is not going too far to say that it was the duty of this applicant either to go to the Court of Bankruptcy at once to make the application which he ultimately made on the 31st May, or, at all events, to have given notice of what his intention was."

Ex parte Davis and Denton, L. Rep. 2 Ch. App. 363, is not exactly in point, inasmuch as there the application was by a creditors' assignee for an order to annul an adjudication in bankruptcy made on the bankrupt's petition. It is therefore only necessary to say with regard to it, that in respect of despatch the same rule applies as to trust deeds. "Such an application," said Lord Cairns, "ought to be made speedily, especially when made by the creditors' assignee, both because he is aiming at overthrowing the bankruptcy under which he was appointed to his office, and because he has better means than anyone else of obtaining information."

In the case of Re Sullivan, in which the instrument to be impeached was a composition-deed (15 L. T. Rep. N. S. 434) the application was made by a creditor to the Court of Bankruptcy to impeach the validity of the deed, eighteen months after its execution. The court refused the application on the ground that during that period the position of all parties had been altered. "If," said Sir G. Turner, "the application had been made earlier and had succeeded, the other creditors might have sued the debtor and possibly have recovered their debts immediately on the deed being set aside. In consequence of the application not having been made, the result would be that these creditors will now be in the position in which they cannot successfully sue the debtor at all. Again, the debtor has been allowed to go on in the world as a person free from these debts and obligations. He may have contracted fresh debts on the faith of this very deed to persons who may have trusted him upon the footing that he was clear of his antecedent liabilities."

The plain principle deducible from all the cases is this: Notice of a creditor's intention to dispute the validity of a deed should be given as speedily as possible after its execution by the debtor; and notice should be followed by action consistent and persistent with a view to upset the deed. If no notice be given, and the creditors lie by even for a few weeks, they may lose their remedies, and the heavier the nature of the debtor's estate the more culpable will any delay be considered.

PROFESSIONAL INCOMES.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Standard has given some remarkable specimens of the incomes enjoyed by some of the professional and commercial men in America. The information is obtained from an unexceptionable source—the income tax returns—which are not there, as here, kept profoundly secret, but are published by the Government, partly to satisfy public curiosity, and partly to prevent the fraud which secrecy undoubtedly encourages in the levying of this tax in England. It is said that not a few persons in the United States make exaggerated returns, some from motives of vanity, others with a deep design thereby to obtain credit and to facilitate fraud; but there is, at least, this advantage, that the revenue profits largely by the plan, and that it is not unacceptable to the public generally is manifested by the continuance of it.

Comparing these figures with all that is known of English incomes, they fill the mind with wonder. Trades that here scarcely provide a decent maintenance for the most industrious, there produce from 5000*l.* to 20,000*l.* per annum. Editors are in receipt of incomes greater than our Lord Chancellor; a popular preacher clears 5000*l.* a year, and lawyers are equally thriving. What is the cause of this? Is it due to greater profits or to the larger amount of business? Our newspapers have hazarded all kinds of opinions upon this problem, but none has solved it satisfactorily. It cannot be the consequence of a larger scale of business, for the commerce of America does not equal ours; it must therefore be the result of larger profits on each transaction. If it be asked why profits should be greater in America, the answer is obvious—there is very much less of competition. Here, in a small, and therefore crowded territory with limited resources, and an unlimited population, there is a constant struggle for life, and success is rarely to be obtained without trampling down or thrusting out some rival. Competition, which has been the idol of political economists, may thus conduce to national wealth, but at the cost of individual happiness. Competition is the cause of the anxiety that attends all business here, and chains the toiler to the oar, with the knowledge that, if he does not strain himself to the utmost and labour without pause, he will be swamped by those who are pressing him behind, and with whom as with himself it is a race for life. This competition it is that has reduced prices to the scantiest margin of profit, and left to toiling Englishmen incomes which look ridiculously small compared with those returned by their fellow labourers in America.

With this fact before them, would it not be as well for our statesmen and legislators to pause and reflect if it may not, after all, be a mistake so to stimulate competition, and whether the happiness of the community might not be promoted by directing both law and opinion to the promotion of more profit and less business.

MANUAL OF LEADING CASES IN COMMON LAW.

By A. K. ROLLIT, LL.D., B.A.

No. VII. ARMORY v. DELAMIRIE.

Tried Hilary Term, 8 Geo. 1, in Middlesex, before Pratt, C. J. [Reported 1 Strange, 504.]

Principles Illustrated.

Bare possession is a sufficient title to a legal remedy against a mere wrong-doer.

A master is liable for the torts of his servant which are not wilful, and committed in the ordinary course of the master's business. The maxim is Respondet superior: (4 Just. 114.)

Omnia presuntur contra spoliatores—Every presumption is made against a wrongdoer.

OUTLINE OF THE CASE.

This was an action of trover to recover the value of a jewel found by the plaintiff, a chimney sweeper's boy, who took it to the shop of the defendant, a jeweller, to know what it was. An apprentice of the defendant, to whom he handed it, removed the stones under the pretence of weighing them, and told his master that the value was three half-pence, which the master offered the boy, who refused to take it and demanded the jewel, upon which the apprentice returned the socket without the stones.

It was resolved:

I. That the finder of a jewel, though he does not by such finding acquire an absolute property or ownership, yet has such a property as will enable him to keep it against all but the rightful owner, and consequently may maintain trover.

II. That the action will lie against the master, who gives a credit to his apprentice, and is answerable for his neglect.

III. As to the value of the jewel, several of the trade were examined to prove what a jewel of the finest water that would fit the socket would be worth; and the Chief Justice directed the jury that, unless the defendant did produce the jewel and show it not to be of the finest water, they should presume the strongest against him, and make the value of the best jewel the measure of the damages, which they accordingly did.

The action of trover lies for the wrongful conversion of personal chattels; and in order to support the action, the plaintiff must prove that he has the property in the chattel, and also the right to the immediate possession of it. In the leading case of Armory v. Delamirie, it was held that the finder of a chattel had such a special property—i.e., a property subject to the claims of others, as distinguished from an absolute or exclusive property—as would enable him to maintain the action for its conversion by a mere wrong-doer, and this decision is based upon the very earliest principles of jurisprudence, both natural law and all systems having concurred in recognising title by occupation, in the absence of any stronger claim—Quod nullius est id ratione naturali occupanti conceditur: (D. 41. 1, 8; I. 2, 1, 12; 2 Bla. Com. p. 9; 1, p. 295.) The title of the finder of chattels—with some few exceptions, such as treasure trove—is unimpeachable against all except the true owner; for otherwise property so acquired must have led to infinite disputes and continual strife, to avoid which the strength of possession has been in such cases allowed to prevail, in accordance with the maxim, Qui prior est tempore, potior est jure—He has the better title who is first in point of time. It is, therefore, a principle of law that bare possession gives a right to a legal remedy against a mere wrongdoer; and the rule of evidence prescribed in the Digest (C. 4, 19, 2) has been adopted in our law—Non possessori incumbit necessitas probandi possessiones ad se pertinere.

This principle has been continually re-affirmed and applied. For instance, in Bridges v. Hawkesworth, 21 L. J. 75, Q. B., the plaintiff found on the floor of the defendant's shop a parcel of bank notes, which he showed to the shopman, and requested the defendant to keep for the owner, without, however, intending to abandon his own title. The defendant advertised the notes, and after the lapse of three years, no owner having appeared, the plaintiff demanded them, and offered to repay the expense of the advertisements, and to indemnify the defendant against any future claim in respect of the notes. The defendant refused to deliver the notes, and it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover them or the value.

So where property left in a railway carriage by a traveller was found by a passenger, it was held that, subject to the right of the owner, the finder was entitled in preference to the company.

Oughton v. Seppings, 1 B. & A. 241; Burton v. Hughes, 2 Bing. 173; White and another v. Mullett, 6 Ex.; and Jeffries v. Great Western Railway Company, 25 L. J. 107, Q. B., are additional authorities illustrative of the principle that mere possession is sufficient to support trover against a wrongdoer or stranger.

Upon the same principle rests the rule in ejectment that the plaintiff must recover by the strength of his own title, not by the weakness of that of his adversary. "He that hath possession of lands, though it be by disseisin, hath a right against all men, but against him that hath right" (Doct. & Stud. 9), for without a better title, Melior est conditio possidentis.

The second principle illustrated in the leading case is a deduction from the general rule that the principal, in this case the master, is liable for the acts or negligence of his agent, in this case the servant, done within the scope of and in the ordinary course of his employment. This liability is based upon the consideration that the master has the selection of his servant, and the opportunity of judging of his skill and care, and also the power of removing him, and must therefore incur the responsibility of his acts or defaults in that capacity. The rule itself is too familiar to need illustration.

The last position of the leading case is based upon the general rule of evidence, that every presumption shall be made against a wrongdoer. If a man withhold evidence which is in his power the logical no less than the legal inference is that he does so for the purpose of avoiding its adverse effect. Illustrations of the application of this principle are furnished by the leading case, in which the defendant might have enabled the real value of the jewel, which—according to the general rule, would have been the measure of damages in trover for its conversion—to be fixed; by the case of Crisp v. Anderson, 1 Stark, N. P. C. 35, in which it was presumed against the withholder of an agreement, to whom notice to produce had been given, that it was properly stamped. So, if a vendor refuses to give any evidence of the value of the goods sold, they are presumed to be of the lowest usual selling price of articles of that description; and the reverse presumption arises if it be shown that the vendee has suppressed the means of learning the truth: (Clunnes v. Pezzey, 1 Camp. 8; Lawson v. Sweeney, 8 Jur. 964, Ex.)

And upon the same principle the law requires from litigants the production of the best evidence in their possession or power, a rule founded on the presumption that in withholding it the party doing so is actuated by a desire to conceal the truth.

THE LIABILITY OF INSURERS FOR LOSS BY JETTISON.

WE subjoin an exhaustive case on the subject of jettison, with an opinion of counsel thereon, well deserving attention.

The case has been prepared in the form of notes of opinion on the whole questions at issue, by one who is thoroughly conversant with them, and supplies information which is absolutely necessary to enable any lawyer to form a correct judgment in a matter so complex and technical in its nature.

CASE.

1. It is submitted that the case of Dickinson v. Jardine (L. Rep. 3 C. P. 639) proceeds from a mistake as to the nature of the American decisions cited in Phillips on Insurance, sect. 1348, and is opposed to the correct principles of general average maintained by Roccus, Pothier, Emerigon, Boulay Paty, Molloy, Beawes, Magens, Millar, Wekett, Park, Marshall, Abbot, Benecke, Phillips, Stevens, Arnould, and Parsons, as well as to the practice of England, Continental Europe, and the United States.

2. It was contended by counsel that the jettison of goods causes a total loss of them by perils of the sea from the moment of jettison, and that a writ may be at once issued for the recovery of the loss, for the insured value of the goods jettisoned (L. Rep. 3 C. P. 640).

But the jettison is done at sea or in the course of the voyage. It is most probably not known what quantity of goods or whose goods have been thrown overboard until after the ship arrives with the rest of the cargo at her port of destination.

3. The Judges say that the jettisoned goods are totally lost by perils of the sea. On the contrary, Emerigon observes that "in law they are still considered to be on board," that "the effects jettisoned are presumed to be still existing in the vessel. Hence they are subjected to contribution and to the payment of freight. For the same reason they are valued at the place of discharge." "The rule is that the master shall be paid freight on the goods jettisoned under charge for contribution." And "the effects jettisoned being subject to contribution, it is just that they should be valued in the same manner as the goods saved." (Meredith's Emerigon 504; see also judgment of M. Smith, J., in Fletcher v. Alexander, C. P. 27th and 30th April 1868, 2 Mar. Law Cases 73; L. Rep. 3 C. P. 337.)

4. Where the jettisoned goods are recovered before the general average is paid, they belong to the proprietor of them (Arnould, 2nd edit. 890, 939; Phillips's, Stevens, and Benecke, 103; Translation of Pothier, at Boston, U. S. p. 77), and the whole property contributes towards the expense of recovering them, and towards making good any sea damage which they may have received by having been thrown overboard. The underwriters on the jettisoned goods also contribute their proportion of the sea damage to them, whether the policy is warranted free from particular average or not. The damage caused by jettison is not particular average, although it arises from sea water. Farther, if the goods have arrived at a gaining market, the damage to those which were jettisoned, if of a perishable nature, like sugar, may cause a partial loss of profit to the proprietor of them, which ought to be made good to him.

5. Thus the proprietor of the jettisoned goods is placed on the same footing as if they had arrived sound; and as he is entitled to claim them for his own benefit when there is a profit on the market price, he should suffer when there is a loss on the market. It is enough that he receives an indemnity. The underwriters have nothing to do with the rise or fall of the market prices.

If there is a profit uninsured, the assured receives the profits and contributes upon it, and the underwriters contribute upon the amount for which they have received a premium, and which is the measure of the benefit derived by them. If the value at the port of destination is less than the insured value, the claim against the underwriters and all the other contributors is proportionally less; but the assured is not thereby prejudiced, for, as already noticed, he is placed on the same footing as if the goods had arrived. The actual loss of the goods at the market price is the limit of the claim, and the underwriters are liable for their proportion.

6. The amount to be recovered for jettisoned goods is properly their net market value on arrival of the rest of the cargo at the port of destination. So long as there is a profit on the market price to accrue to the benefit of the merchant the above is the course which he would desire to have followed, instead of his seeking to recover from his own underwriters a smaller amount as the insured value of the goods jettisoned.

7. The cost of replacing the jettisoned goods, as pointed out by Benecke, Stevens, and Phillips, and confirmed by the recent case of Fletcher v. Alexander, 2 Mar. Law Cases. 73; L. Rep. 3 C. P. 337, is the true measure of indemnity, wherever the general average be adjusted.

The principle enunciated by Emerigon, as to jettisoned goods being in law considered to be still on board, establishes the equitable right of replacing them, if possible, when the ship puts back to her loading port. And Magens in his Essay on Insurance, vol. 1, p. 249, says that, "when regard is had to equity, the most intricate points are easily decided."

If gold coin be shipped in London by a vessel bound for New York, and insured at a value higher than it bears in London, and if a jettison of the gold takes place under prudent circumstances (as improbable case, but resorted to for the sake of illustration), is there a total loss of the jettisoned gold on the policy of insurance recoverable for the advantage of the assured, if the value in New York is expected to fall? Is it not enough, as common sense and justice dictate, to replace it with the same quantity and quality of gold coin? There never was a doubt on the question until these recent attempts to involve the underwriters in the fall of market prices were set on foot.

8. The judgment in Dickinson v. Jardine gives the assured the privilege of avoiding loss of market price on goods thrown overboard for the general safety of ship, freight, and cargo. That is the only object of contention, and the result of the suit is most inequitable in giving to the assured the choice of recovering the insured value when it exceeds the arrived value, or reversing it and other circumstances for his own gain.

9. When a total or partial loss of goods happens inevitably by perils of the sea, there is no choice given either to the underwriters or the assured. The insured value, or the first cost, fixes the amount of claim on the policy, according as it is valued or an open one, whether there would have been a profit on the market price or not. As where, after jettison of goods, the ship with the rest of her cargo arrives at the port of destination, the owners and insurers of ship, freight, and cargo ought to have no choice. The proprietor of the goods thrown overboard for the general safe should be indemnified for the full amount which he might have realised for them in the market, neither less nor more, recovering from his underwriters according to the amount insured.

10. The sole point at issue on the present occasion in England is, whether the merchant shall be entitled to recover the profit on jettisoned goods in general average when the rest of the cargo arrives at a gaining market, and the arrived value is more than the insured value; and to avoid loss of market on the jettisoned goods by claiming their insured value from the underwriters when it exceeds the market value, instead of recovering indemnity in general average.

11. Where the goods were in a damaged state before being jettisoned, the cost of replacing them in their deteriorated condition is the amount to be made good in a general average. This old-established rule of practice, as already observed, is acknowledged to be correct by Bovill, C. J., in Fletcher v. Alexander, C. P. April 27 and 30, 1868; 3 Mar. Law Cas. 72; L. Rep. 3 C. P. 383. If, then, the jettisoned goods were insured free from particular average, on what grounds of equity could the underwriters be made liable for their insured value?

In a note upon the case of Maggrath v. Church, an American writer speaks of the warranty in the memorandum as exempting the underwriters from every partial loss which is not a general average. In that case it was damage to corn, the total contribution to which was allowed to be recovered as general average by direct claim on the policy, although partial loss or particular average was not recoverable, the ship not having been stranded. But it was the contributory or market value, not the insured value, that was held to be so recoverable direct from the insurers.

In the American case of Lapsley v. The United States Insurance Company, 4 Binn. 502, the Judge observed: "Why do the plaintiffs pertinaciously insist on resorting to the insurers? If indemnification for their loss is the object, what is the difference whether they receive it from the insurers or other persons? I can find no satisfactory answer to this question but by supposing that had indemnification will not satisfy the plaintiffs. Their object must be to gain by abandoning to the insurers and thus producing a constructive total loss, whereby the insurers will be involved in the state of the market at New York." And he most justly refused to assist them in this attempt, and sent them to recover from the contributors to the general average first.

12. In the body of an ordinary policy of marine insurance the risks or perils undertaken are, among other things, declared to be of the "seas," that is inevitable loss by sea peril of part or the whole of the subject insured; of "pirates," that is inevitable loss by forcible robbery on the high seas of the whole or part of the property insured; of "jettisons," or general average losses, that is liability for a share of any loss arising to the property insured, or to any other property embarked in the adventure, by a voluntary destruction of it for the safety of all; and of "captures," or inevitable losses caused by a hostile seizure of property insured.

And it is declared that in case of loss or misfortune the assured may sue, labour, and travel about the defence, safeguard, and recovery of the subject insured, or any part thereof, to the expense of which the underwriters shall contribute their proportion according to the amount insured.

Under this last mentioned "suing and labouring clause," and the term "jettisons," the risk of all claims of general average of every kind is thus assumed by the policy.

Then follows a memorandum, which stipulates that partial losses or particular average shall not be recovered in whole or in part under certain conditions, but that general average claims shall be subject to no such exceptions.

Miller in his Elements of the Law of Insurance (p. 333), says that a general average loss or expense is "incurred for the advantage of the whole concern, and consequently of the underwriters themselves, and is in a very different situation from other partial losses. It would be absurd that the underwriters should stipulate to be free from an expense incurred for their advantage, and it might be dangerous by inducing the assured to avoid such expense, and allow the loss to become total. In the Mediterranean, accordingly, where general clauses 'free of average' are very common without any exception, these clauses are construed not to extend to the case of jettison." By the memorandum in the English policies such clauses are expressly declared not to extend to general average, whether arising from jettison or otherwise.

According to Arnould on Marine Insurance (2nd ed. pp. 868, 869), the underwriter's liability for salvage and general average depends, not on his having engaged to indemnify against these by express words, but on their being made, by the law of the land, or by the general law maritime, a direct and immediate consequence of perils against which he does insure.

But, on the contrary, by the cases of The Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company v. Saunders, 1 Mar. Law Cases, 213; and Kidston v. Empire Marine Insurance Company, L. Rep. 1 C. P. 563; L. Rep. 2 C. P. 361, 365, 368, it is clearly shown and established in law, that salvage, general average expenses, and particular charges, are recoverable under the "suing and labouring clause" in the policy above referred to. And general average losses appear to be recoverable under the term "jettisons."

13. Where the profit on goods is not insured, the policy of insurance on the goods covers not only the risks of total or partial loss of their first cost happening inevitably by perils of the sea, but also the risk of the proportion attaching to their first cost of the loss of cost, uninsured profits, and freight on any portion of these very goods arising from jettison, and also the like proportion of the cost of replacing the jettison of ship's materials, whereby the underwriters on the goods avoid a total loss.

14. In Parsons on Insurance, it is said "The valuation in the policy has no effect upon the adjustment of general average, in other words, losses under open and valued policies are adjusted alike so far as relates to general average, not only as regards the original parties, but as between them and any of their insurers." (Clarke v. United Fire and Marine Insurance Company, 7 Mass. 365.) The valuation in the policy is not the proper amount recoverable. It is only the limit of the insurer's liability.

15. The judges of the Court of Common Pleas say that the merchant has no lien for his goods when jettisoned. But if the ship arrives at a French or German port as her destination, there is an undoubted lien; and the question put by counsel in one of the American cases, may be asked: "Shall the merchant seek recovery from his underwriters for the total general average loss, when his agent holds a pledge or remedy in his own hands?"

Pothier says, as already quoted above, that "One of the obligations contracted by the master, as between him and the freighters, is to have them indemnified by contribution, in case of jettison, and from this obligation is derived the action ex locato, which the owners of goods jettisoned may bring against him, that he may give them an indemnity, by calling on the owners of the goods saved to contribute. And the master may require them to make this contribution by the action ex conducto, which arises from the obligation to contribute, which they have contracted." This results from the Digest. l. 2, ad leg. Rhod.: (Translation of Pothier on Maritime Contracts, by Caleb Cushing, Boston, U. S., 1821, p. 72.)

On a careful consideration of Hallett v. Bousfield, 18 Ves. Rep. 187 (a case in which the Vice-Chancellor said he found it necessary to give judgment before having had an opportunity to consider the question sufficiently), and the Merchant Shipping Amendment Act (if general average is therein referred to), with all the authorities in regard to lien for general average, it seems as if a similar course might be followed in this country to prevent fraud or injustice being perpetrated.

If the shipowner were bankrupt, and his assignees sold the ship, they derive the benefit of the sale by means of the loss of the jettisoned goods, and the underwriters on the ship, if insured, will pay their proportion of the loss by jettison, which has averted the total loss of the ship. Would the bankrupt's assignee be permitted idly to hold back the policies on the ship, and to repudiate all claim for jettison?

By sects. 732 and 733 of the German Mercantile Law it is expressly provided that security shall be given to the parties interested in the cargo for the amounts due from the ship before the ship can be allowed to leave the port where the general average is adjusted; and the master is not allowed to deliver goods from which an average contribution may be due until the amount of such contribution be paid, or security given for it, in default of "which, in addition to the liability of the goods," he becomes personally liable for the amount. If he acted by orders of the owners who were personally acquainted with the facts, his liability is shifted to them. On arrival at a French or German port, where such remedies are provided by law, would our judges, therefore, have grounds to pronounce such a decision as that in Dickinson v. Jardine in respect of the absence of any lien?

16. The opposite view of the question is sufficiently discussed in the report of the case under consideration, and in the following extract from the arguments of counsel for the plaintiff in the American case of Maggrath v. Church (1 Caines Rep. 207): "It is said we have no right to look in the first instance to the insurer; we must take from the captain and others, and then apply to our underwriters for the balance. Is it not, however, a loss from perils of the sea, from a general average arising out of those perils? And will the court turn us round from the words of our policy to the captain because it is said he has a lien on what was to pay us, and, being our agent, ought to have thus applied it? Can he justify holding the ship till the owner of the goods ejected be paid? If he has not this power over the vessel, neither can he detain the cargo. Suppose my goods thrown overboard, the owner of the vessel a bankrupt, the captain does not perform his duty, and she sold by his assignees on arrival; can the underwriters say you must look to the owners, the casus federis has not taken place? All that can be done is to substitute the underwriter in our place, and he will have a right to use our names in the prosecution. We contend that, on the settled rule of law in cases of general average, we are entitled to resort to our policy, and leave the assurer to reimburse himself from the others."

The following are submitted as the logical principles on which it seems the question at issue ought to be determined:—

17. The risk of "jettisons" mentioned in policies of insurance on ship, freight, or cargo, seems to imply general average losses such as those arising from throwing overboard cargo or ships' materials for the general safety. The risk specified is not "jettison," but in the plural number, "jettisons."

18. Where the profit on goods is not insured, the policy of insurance on the goods covers not only the risk of total or partial loss of their first cost happening inevitably by perils of the sea, but also the risk of the proportion attaching to their first cost of the loss of cost, uninsured profits, and freight on any portion of these very goods arising from jettison, and also the like proportion of the cost of replacing the jettison of ships' materials, whereby the underwriters on the goods avoid a total loss. In short, a policy of insurance on goods covers, not only total or partial loss, but also general average loss.

The assured is liable to contribute in respect of the profit towards the loss of the first cost of the jettisoned goods, and the underwriters are liable to contribute in respect of the first cost towards the loss of the profit.

19. The captain is the agent of all concerned in making the jettison, and ought likewise to act as the agent or "attorney" of all concerned in ascertaining what goods have been thrown overboard, and in making suitable arrangements for the recovery of their net market value and freight from those liable to contribution: (Meredith's Emerigon, 504; 2 Phillips, 333, 2nd edit.)

"As the common law looks upon the goods or cargo as a pledge or pawn for the freight, so the marine law looks upon them likewise as a security for answering any average contribution, and the master ought not to deliver them till the contribution is settled, they being tacitly obliged for the one as well as for the other." (1 Beawes, 244.)

20. Although Pothier on one occasion says that in France the assured may resort to his underwriters in the first place, leaving them to recover contribution, it seems to be quite evident, from what he elsewhere writes in regard to the value to be made good for cargo jettisoned, that he does not mean that the assured may recover the insured value of the goods from his underwriters when that would give him more than an indemnity. Accordingly, Emerigon (Meredith's Translation, p. 508), observes that in the case of jettison and of contribution it is customary to shape the adjustment of average with regard to the insurers upon the same principles that obtain in the case of shippers generally; the goods thrown overboard as well as those saved are valued according to the price current at the place of discharge.

But Boulay Paty on Emerigon, edit. 1827, vol. 2, p. 6, expressly states that in France "the underwriters never contribute directly to general average losses, they are only bound to reimburse the assured their proportionate or rateable amount of his contribution." And Emerigon himself (Meredith's Translation, p. 509) says that where part of the goods insured are jettisoned, the merchant must necessarily wait until the average is adjusted before he can oblige the insurers to pay their contingent, and he is to claim their value (that is the market value on arrival) from those persons whose goods have been saved, with a reserved right to demand of his insurers the contingent of real and actual loss remaining to his own lot. The owners of the goods saved are subsequently entitled to claim from their own insurers, and by the rule of proportion the sum contributed by them on account of the jettison.

Although Mr. Justice Story in the United States, also on one occasion expressed a leaning of opinion in favour of direct claim against insurers, while refusing to give such a benefit to the assured in the case before him, yet Chancellor Kent (on whose judgment in Maggrath v. Church, Mr. Justice Story founded this inclination of opinion) says in his Commentaries, 11th edit., vol. 3, sect. 244, "In Strong v. The New York Firemen Insurance Company, 11 John. 323, it was declared to be the duty of the master in cases proper for a general average to cause an adjustment to be made on his arrival at the port of destination, and that he had a lien upon the cargo to enforce the contribution." This was shown to be the maritime law of Europe. Again Phillips expresses an unqualified opinion, 2 Phill. 2nd edit. 128, 333, referring to 1 Magens, p. 76, s. 63, that in case of the master's neglecting to procure contribution, the underwriters would not be liable at all; and Parsons, in his Treatise on Marine Insurance, says the same concerning any neglect of the assured, and informs us that the assured usually collects his contributory claim first if he can. In one of the cases cited by Parsons as being in favour of the right to claim the entire loss by jettison direct from the insurers, viz., Faulkner v. Augusta Insurance Company, Mac Mullin Rep. 188, it was held that underwriters on goods are liable for the entire loss by sale of the goods taken to pay for salvage services rendered to the rest of the cargo: a judgment contrary to English law, seeing that the loss by sale constitutes merely a forced loan of the goods for which those on whose account the money was paid for assistance rendered are liable as a debt to the proprietor of the goods sold. Two out of five judges dissented, not on this ground, but for reasons which appear to be conclusive against, or at least strongly opposed to, loss by jettison being recovered wholly from the insurers when neglected to be recovered in general average.

21. When a ship arrives with her cargo at a port in this country, after making a jettison, and there is reason to consider an average agreement not a sufficient security, an estimate of the general average claim is obtained from an adjuster, and the goods are not delivered until a deposit is obtained from each consignee for his estimated proportion. In Liverpool this is commonly done in all cases of heavy general average, and sometimes in London as an ordinary occurrence. It is also a common practice for English merchants both here and abroad to deduct the value of jettisoned goods in the settlement of freight, and this is often expressly stipulated in charter parties.

22. Wesket on Insurance (page 141), says that in every case where a man gives away his goods for behoof of a plurality connected by a common interest, it is evident that his equitable claim for a recompense cannot exceed the loss he has sustained.

23. The great mistake in Dickinson v. Jardine is in holding that the insured value of the jettisoned goods ought to be recovered.

24. General average has no reference to policies of insurance effected by the shipowner, charterer, or merchants.

25. Benecke observes (Phillips's Stevens and Benecke, p. 228), that in case of arrival at a losing market, the proprietor has no cause to complain if, in consequence of the fall in the market price, he receives less than the first cost of the goods, for with the money received he may purchase goods of the same kind, and so place himself in the same situation in which he would have been had his goods not been jettisoned: (See Phillips's Stevens and Benecke, 229, 230; Stevens, 61.)

26. If a ton of coals, forming part of the cargo, or an anchor belonging to the ship, be jettisoned, it is the cost of replacing the ton of coals or the anchor, not its insured value under any contract with underwriters, that forms the subject of general average.

When the ship puts back to her loading port after such jettison, and the cargo is discharged and the average then and there adjusted, the merchant receives an indemnity for the jettison of his coals, and the shipowner for the jettison of his anchor, by receiving the cost of replacing them, and having liberty, at the general expense of all concerned, to put another ton of coals and another anchor on board.

If all the coals belonging to the merchant were jettisoned, the same principle seems to be justly applicable.

The ship then proceeds with an entire cargo, and on arrival at the port of destination, the full freight will be earned, and the profit, if any, will be realised.

If the freight was paid in advance at the loading port, and the coals insured and valued at a sum including cost, freight, and expected profit, the insurer could not equitably be made liable in such a case for a total loss of the insured value of the coals on the ship's return to her loading port, when the coals jettisoned are replaced, and the ship afterwards arrives in safety with the rest of her cargo in sound condition at the port of destination.

When the ship arrives at her port of destination after a jettison which has taken place near it, the cost of replacing the anchor and the coals may be considerably more than at the loading port, but that cost, and not the insured value, is the amount to be contributed for in general average.

27. In Powell v. Gudgeon, 5 Maule & Sel. 436, Campbell, afterwards C. J., said in argument, "As to jettison, it has never been considered as rendering the insurer liable for the value" (he speaks of the market value or cost of replacing, not the insured value) "of the goods thrown overboard, but only for general average. Of this opinion is Roccus in his Treatise de Assecurationibus, n. 62 (Park on Insurance, 7th edit. 212), and his opinion is agreeable to the laws of all the trading powers on the Continent as well as to those of England, and yet it is observable that jettison is one of the perils named in the policy."

28. If, because of the policy of insurance specifying the risk of jettisons, and on the authority of the dictum of Pothier in his Treatise on Insurance, cited by the court in Dickinson v. Jardine, it were held to be the law of England that the assured on an open policy on goods might claim from his underwriters first, the entire market value of the jettisoned goods to the extent of the sum insured, leaving the underwriters to recover a proportion of that sum from the other contributors, and to bear their due proportion of the uninsured profit, where there is any, on the goods jettisoned; or if it were held that he might recover from his underwriters in like manner the market value of these goods, to the extent of the amount insured, which failed to be recovered in general average through the neglect of the captain or other agent of the assured, or through the insolvency of any of the contributors; the rule, though unsatisfactory and objectionable in its operation, and in some respects contrary to the maritime law of Europe, and the decisions in the United States, would justly limit the claim of the assured to an indemnity for his actual loss. Again, if the master of the ship recovers in general average the market value or cost of replacing jettisoned goods, and baratterously makes away with the amount received by him, the insurers of the goods might be fairly held liable for the loss of that amount to the extent of, or in proportion to, the sum insured.

But when the market value of the jettisoned goods is allowed to be recovered in general average from the contributors, or the insured value from the underwriters, at the option of the assured, according as it may be for his interest to recover it in one way or the other, the rule laid down appears to be contrary to every sound principle of law and equity.

The opinion of counsel is requested upon the liability of underwriters for loss of jettisoned goods with reference to the case of Dickinson v. Jardine.

OPINION.

Without venturing upon the bold statement that the decision of the Common Pleas laid before me is unsound, I am of opinion that it was arrived at upon an inaccurate knowledge of the American cases, that it is largely at variance with the doctrines laid down by the civilians, and with the laws and practice of the European countries and the United States, and, therefore, that upon the argument of a similar point in another court it would carry little weight as a precedent.

The principle which it establishes is that loss by jettison is a total loss, in respect of which the insured value is recoverable from the underwriters in the first instance.

Chief Justice Bovill delivered judgment to this effect, and he primarily based that judgment upon a passage in Phillips on Insurance (5th edit., vol. 2, s. 1348). That passage is really taken from Magrath v. Church, 1 Caines, 196, and if read correctly goes no further than that case justified. The passage runs, "It is not a condition that the assured on goods must first claim contribution of the other parties before he can demand indemnity from his underwriters," and the case shows that the indemnity which is here meant is indemnity for contribution only, and not for the insured value where it exceeds the contribution. Mr. Justice Kent, in giving judgment, held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover only the totality of the contribution due to him for the loss of the corn, namely, 909.61dols., whereas the jury upon the assumption that there was a total loss had assessed the damages at 1231.54dols.

In Dickinson v. Jardine, the judges unanimously held that where goods are jettisoned, they are totally lost, and Mr. Watkin Williams's only reported argument against this view was, that the loss was not total because a right to contribution remained. Thus neither the court nor counsel noticed the ancient principle that goods jettisoned are, in contemplation of law, still on board, and that, if recovered, they belong to the original owner. These principles were recognised by this same court, in Fletcher v. Alexander, L. Rep. 3 C. P. 375; for Mr. Justice M. Smith, in his judgment (at p. 383), quotes Arnould with approval to the effect that "The property sacrificed for the general benefit is regarded as though it had never been lost, but actually was a portion of the whole mass of property on which the contribution is assessed at the time the adjustment is made." This is a principle founded on the civil law, which says, that goods thrown overboard remain the property of the owner, and do not become the property of anyone finding them, because they cannot be considered as abandoned: (Dig. lib. 14, tit. 2, s. 8.) To the same effect is Emerigon (vol. 1, c. 12, s. 40.) And Javolenus regards goods jettisoned as only temporarily sent out of the ship: (Dig. l. 21, s. 2, de acq. poss.) And it must be recognised as a reasonable principle, because if the goods are replaced, and in substance and quality the cargo is such as the ship sailed with, it is really immaterial, for all practical purposes, whether the goods are the identical goods which were shipped or not. This appears to me to be supported by the analogous case of cargo sold to pay for the repair of the ship, and in Powell v. Gudgeon, 5 M. & S. 436, Mr. Justice Abbot doubted whether goods so sold could be regarded as lost to the owner. Holding, however, that there is a total loss, the Court of Common Pleas say, that directly the goods are jettisoned, the right accrues against the underwriters. But it is a bare abstract right, not enforceable until the happening of that which may never happen. If the ship and cargo be lost after the goods have been thrown overboard for the general safety, the claim in respect of the jettison disappears, the loss of the jettisoned goods is then recoverable as a part of the total loss of the cargo, and no right of claim for jettison, therefore, actually exists until the safe arrival of the property liable to contribute.

Mr. Justice Willes, in his judgment, says that the underwriters must pay the amount claimed in the first instance, and will then be entitled to use the name of the assured to recover contribution. This is subrogation which takes place at the time of payment of the loss. The subrogation gives the underwriter a right to sue for the actual value of the goods at the port of adjustment, if not in excess of the amount insured, and consequently he cannot be called upon to pay more than the actual value to the assured. This principle is recognised by Baron Parke, in a case mentioned by Mr. Justice Willes, (The Quebec Fire Insurance Company v. St. Louis, 7 Moo. P. C. C. 316), who there interprets Pothier as laying it down, "that in the case of a general average the assured, after having indemnified the assured against the losses sustained for the common benefit ought to be subrogated to the rights of the assured to the contribution which in such case must be made." And Baron Parke, dealing as he was with fire insurance, remarked that the authorities are so consistent with justice and founded on so equitable a principle that he had no difficulty in adopting them. Upon the same point Serjt. Wilde argued, in another case cited by Mr. Justice Willes (Yates v. Whyte, 4 Bing. N. C. 272), "If the plaintiff recovered against the defendants, he would hold the sum recovered as trustee for the underwriters, since all he can claim against them is indemnity for actual loss."

But this assumes the soundness of the view taken by Mr. Justice Willes as to the direct and primary liability of the underwriters, against which there is a strong array of authority. Boulay Paty, at p. 6, vol. 2, says, that assurers never contribute directly to general average; that they are only held liable to reimburse the assured his contribution. So Roccus (cited in 1 Park on Insurance, 212), says, that if the assured recovers the price of the thing jettisoned, he cannot go against the assurers. And Park observes: "The opinion of this learned civilian is agreeable to the laws of all the trading powers of the Continent of Europe as well as of England." So also the German law bases the underwriter's liability upon the adjustment of the average, and clearly, therefore, postpones his liability until the contributors have had the opportunity of making contribution. In my opinion, in cases of general average, the amount insured which is made the basis of the direct liability of the underwriter is merely a limitation of liability similar to a penalty in a bond (Stansforth v. Lyall, Bing. 169), and the measure of damages is the cost of replacing the goods at the port of adjustment: (Fletcher v. Alexander, L. Rep. 3 C. P. 387.)

Further the court would appear not to have been aware of the absurdities resulting from their judgment, of which I here notice two only.

1. That an underwriter may be called upon to pay for goods jettisoned, although at the time they were thrown overboard they were damaged within the meaning of the memorandum of warranty by which as to certain kinds of goods the underwriter is exempted from particular average. A policy insuring against jettisons can only be considered a promise (Foster v. Thackeray, 1 T. R. 57, Lord Mansfield) to indemnify against actual loss, to prevent loss to the owner by the happening of the peril named by reinstating the cargo and presenting the adventure in its entirety at the port of destination. And in this view of course the underwriter could be held bound only to reinstate the cargo as it existed immediately before the jettison. If, as in Tudor v. Macomber, 14 Pick. 34, the cargo is greatly damaged before it is thrown overboard, and if such damage were within the memorandum of warranty free from particular average, the underwriter, according to Dickinson v. Jardine, must still pay the sound value represented by the amount insured. Or in other words, on a policy warranted free from particular average he must pay for particular average, simply because he has insured against the jettison which subsequently happens. This is directly against the ruling of Chief Justice Bovill in Fletcher v. Alexander, p. 383. Speaking of goods jettisoned, he says, "It may be that if they had not been thrown overboard, they would not in all probability have arrived at their destination in a sound or saleable state. In the latter case, what would be the loss of the person whose goods were thrown overboard? Clearly not the value of the goods in a sound state." This applies more strongly where it is not a question of probable damage, but where the damage was accomplished before the jettison. As between the owner and the contributors, the damage would be taken into consideration and deducted from the loss, as stated by Mr. Justice M. Smith, in Fletcher v. Alexander, p. 387, and it is difficult to see why the underwriters should be deprived of a like equity. This applies in another way. Suppose the damage arose from causes against which the policy affords no protection, and to goods which would not be injured by being thrown into the sea. Upon payment of the claim the underwriter is entitled to salvage, and he would justly and reasonably expect to recover the goods damaged in no other way than by the action of the sea water, when the policy takes the risk of sea damage, yet by previous deterioration with which he had nothing to do the salvage might be extremely small. He would naturally say, "I did not insure damaged goods;" and he might fairly remonstrate against being asked to pay the insured value of sound goods for the jettisoned damaged goods.

2. A second absurdity is that where goods are jettisoned half a mile from the loading port, and the ship returns to that port, and they could be replaced for much less than the insured value, yet Dickinson v. Jardine says that the underwriter shall pay the total loss of the insured value, which may perhaps include freight advanced and merged in the value of the goods and profits to be earned by shipping other goods in lieu of them.

I concur that the logical principles set out in the latter part of the case laid before me are those which should guide and govern the decision of the court; and I am of opinion that the weight of authority in support of those principles is amply sufficient to induce a court of appeal not only to decide that the underwriter cannot be held liable for the insured value of jettisoned goods when that value exceeds the actual loss sustained, but to review favourably for the underwriter the question whether there is any direct and primary liability on his part for the total amount of the contribution towards the market value of jettisoned goods at the port of destination when it does not exceed the amount covered by the policy.

SAYINGS AND DOINGS OF THE COURTS.

[CONTRIBUTED BY THE REPORTERS OF THE SEVERAL COURTS.]

ROLLS COURT.

The past week has produced the following cases worthy of notice:

Smith v. Weguelin was a suit instituted by a Mr. Smith on behalf of himself and all other holders of bonds of the Peruvian Loan of 1862 against Messrs. Thomson, Bonar, and Co., the Republic of Peru, and a Peruvian company, called in the pleadings the Consignment Company. The bill prayed that all guano imported into Great Britain, &c., or thereafter to come into the power of Thomson, Bonar, and Co., as the agents of the Consignment Company, might be applied under the direction of the court, in accordance with the terms of the hypothecation thereof for the Peruvian Loan of 1862, and that the defendants might be restrained from applying the net proceeds of such guano otherwise than in the purchase of bonds at the market price. The loan of 1862, amounting to five and a half millions, was raised in London upon a special hypothecation of the net proceeds of all the guano that should be shipped to the United Kingdom and Belgium during the continuance of the loan, and 8l. per cent. on the sum borrowed was to be applied annually towards the extinction of the debt. This was to be effected by purchase at the market price, if below par, and by public drawings, if above par. It was alleged that on several occasions the Peruvian Government, instead of expending the money in the purchase of bonds in the open market, had cancelled at 83½ a number of bonds which they had received in exchange for bonds of the loan of 1865, the price of some of which was 83½, the quoted prices then ranging from 64 to 73½. The plaintiff contended that this proceeding injured him and the other bondholders of 1862, first, because the price of redemption being higher than the market price, fewer bonds were redeemed than ought to have been redeemed; and, secondly, because the bondholders were thus deprived of the benefit of the rise in the market price which would have taken place if the Peruvian Government had purchased bonds in the open market. The Republic of Peru did not appear. The case was argued very fully last term, and was now in the paper for judgment. His Lordship said that the contract which governed the question was clearly and unmistakably a foreign contract. It was in his opinion a complete misapprehension to suppose that, because a foreign Government negotiates a loan in a foreign country, it thereby introduces into that transaction all the peculiarities of the law belonging to that country in which the negotiation was made. The place where the loan was negotiated did not in the least degree affect the question of law. But assume that it were otherwise, how could the court interfere? If it did attempt to interfere, it would fall into this dilemma: either it would simply make itself ridiculous in attempting what was impossible, or, if it could assume that the foreign Government was answerable and bound to pay, and then found property belonging to the foreign Government in this country, it might alter the relations between the two countries, and enable a bondholder, by the aid of the Court of Chancery, practically to declare war against a foreign country; for it was clear that if the Court of Chancery could seize all the guano belonging to the foreign Government, it might as well seize Peruvian vessels under the article which declares that all the other property and sources of revenue of the Republic should be applicable to payment of the loan. His Lordship was also of opinion that the plaintiff's case failed according to English law, inasmuch as none of the articles under which the loan was contracted gave the bondholders a right to regulate the management of the loan or the guano contract, and that it was not in their power under that contract to restrain the action of the Peruvian Government with relation to the price at which the bonds were taken. Even assuming that the court had jurisdiction, his Lordship was of opinion that on the merits the Peruvian Government were perfectly justified in doing what they had done. The terms of the contract entitled the Peruvian Government to buy where they pleased, and in any manner they thought fit; and provided that the proper number of original bonds were extinguished, it was wholly immaterial to the bondholders whether this was accomplished by payment of money or by the substitution of other bonds. In all respects he thought the plaintiff was wrong, and his bill must be dismissed with costs.

Re The Commercial Banking Corporation of India and the East, Wilson's case, was an adjourned summons. Certain shares in the company were in Sept. 1865 transferred to a Mr. Wilson, who was then in India. At the date of the transfer Wilson was under the age of twenty-one, having been born on the 27th Jan. 1846, and consequently not having attained his majority till the 27th Jan. 1867. On the 28th May 1866 an order was made for the compulsory winding-up of the company. In the following July the usual notice was given to Wilson of the appointment to settle the list of contributories, and he took out the present summons in April last, to have his name removed from the list of contributories, on the ground that he was an infant at the date of the transfer; in support of his application Lumsden's case, 19 L. T. Rep. N. S. 437; L. Rep. 4 Ch. App. 31, was relied upon. It appeared that in Aug. 1867 a summons, returnable in November following, was taken out for a call, and with respect to this call an appearance was entered for Wilson, in his Lordship's Chambers, by Messrs. Tucker and Few, who appeared at the same time for a large number of shareholders. It was contended on behalf of the official liquidator that by thus entering an appearance in the character of a shareholder, and not with a view to repudiate his liability, Wilson had acquiesced in the transfer after he had attained his majority, and that his name ought, therefore, to remain on the list of contributories. His Lordship said that Wilson's appearance in chambers by his solicitors was not a complete act of acquiescence. The same solicitors appeared for a large number of shareholders at the same time, and probably they were not aware of the fact that Wilson was an infant at the date of the transfer. His name must be removed from the list of contributories.

In Re The Constantinople and Alexandria Hotels Company (Limited), Finucane's case, was also an adjourned summons. Finucane applied in 1863 for fifty shares in the above company. The shares were allotted to him and registered in his name. He now sought to have his name removed from the list of contributories, on which he had been placed, the company having been ordered to be wound-up. He made the present application on the ground that he had received no notice that the shares had been allotted to him. The official liquidator proved that the letter of allotment, addressed to 117, Aldersgate-street, where Finucane carried on the business of a tobacconist, had been posted, and it was contended that such proof was, by the 63rd section of the Companies' Act 1862, proof of service. Finucane deposed that he had not received the letter of allotment, and explained its non-delivery by the circumstance that there are two houses in Aldersgate-street numbered 117, six or seven doors apart, one of which is the office of the City Press, where the letter might have been left. His Lordship said that he must hold that Finucane received no notice of the allotment of shares to him, and that his name must, therefore, be removed from the list of contributories.

Re The Commercial Banking Corporation of India and the East was a petition for the sanction of the court to a compromise between the creditors and contributories of the above company, such compromise having been recently approved of by meetings held with his Lordship's approval. The principal terms of the compromise were that all questions raised by the committee of contributories should be abandoned on payment to the committee of 10,000l., out of funds unconnected with the assets of the corporation; that all pending applications to the court, and the suit instituted by the Commercial Bank of India, as well as all proceedings under the winding-up of that bank, should be stayed, and no further proceedings be taken, except such as might be necessary for the collection and distribution of the assets; and that the creditors should accept 17s. in the pound, to be paid within one month after the compromise was approved by the court. The great majority, both of creditors and contributories, approved of the compromise. A Mr. Gavine, a creditor for 3600l., opposed the petition in person. His Lordship said that when this matter first came before him in chambers he was amazed at the enormous amount of litigation to which it was likely to give rise. He had done everything in his power to assist the parties in arriving at a compromise, and was pleased to find that such a large majority had assented to it. Of 1100 creditors, there were only eight who dissented, and of 332 contributories only one dissented. He was sure that under the compromise the creditors would get the dividend within a reasonable time instead of waiting for a lifetime, and probably not being paid in full after all. There had been suggested some doubts as to the jurisdiction of the court to sanction such a compromise. He should consider the point, and not dispose of the case till the following morning. On the following morning his Lordship said that he was of opinion that he had power to sanction the compromise. The point had recently been decided by the Privy Council, in Re The Financial Association, on an appeal from the High Court of Judicature at Bombay. The 159th and 160th sections of the Companies Act 1862, under which he was asked to sanction this compromise, were substantially the same as the 174th section of the Indian Companies Act 1866, under which the Privy Council decided the question.

Pouton v. Hawkins was an administration suit which now came on for further consideration. The testator by his will gave certain leaseholds to certain persons for life, and then to Sarah Pouton, and after her decease to the heirs of her body. On behalf of the five children of Sarah Pouton (who had died) it was contended that this was not an absolute gift of the leaseholds to Sarah Pouton, but that it came within the decision of Wood, V.C. in Re Jeaffreson's Trusts, L. Rep. 2 Eq. 276, where the testator gave the residue of his estate, consisting wholly of personalty, to trustees upon trust for a Mrs. Looby for life, and after her decease upon trust for the benefit of the heirs of her body in such proportions as she might appoint, and it was held that the objects of the power were such of the statutory next of kin of Mrs. Looby as were descended from her. In the present case there were no words expressly giving Sarah Pouton a life estate, and his Lordship was disinclined to follow Re Jeaffreson's Trusts unless the words in the will were precisely similar; but as Sarah Pouton's husband was dead, he would make a declaration that the five children were entitled to the leaseholds in equal shares, and it would not be necessary to decide whether Sarah Pouton took a life estate, or an absolute interest in the property.

Jelley v. Taylor was a suit instituted by one of the children of a testator against the execution of the will for the administration of the estate, and also praying that the defendants might be compelled to pay the difference between what the plaintiff considered the actual value of certain leasehold houses, which one of the executors had purchased, and the price which he had paid for the same. The testator, by his will, bequeathed thirteen leasehold houses, at Woolwich, to his executors (his son-in-law, Taylor, and his son Fred. Jelley) upon trust to sell and to divide the proceeds equally among his seven children, one of whom, the plaintiff, was to have only a life interest in his share. The testator had expressed a wish that the houses should not be sold to strangers, but should be divided among his children. The family agreed to carry out the testator's wish, and Taylor, as husband of one of the daughters, took ten of the houses, at a price fixed by the other executor, with the assistance of a person who had taken out a valuer's licence for the management of his own property, but who was not a professional valuer. The plaintiff then got a regular valuer to value these houses, who considered them worth 306l. more than the price paid by Taylor. The plaintiff accordingly filed the present bill. Before the answer was put in, Taylor offered the plaintiff 100l. in satisfaction of his claim, but the offer was refused. His Lordship said that the plaintiff's complaint was not that Taylor, being a trustee, had sold to himself, but that the price given by him was less than the actual value of the houses. A suit to set aside the sale was the usual proceeding under such circumstances, but he had never met with a suit like the present, asking the court to go into the question of the value of the property at the time when it was sold, and to decree payment of the difference between the price paid and the actual value. The question was especially difficult at a place like Woolwich, where property was fluctuating in value. The amount at stake in the present case was very trifling, viz., a life interest in 45*l*. Taylor had made a fair offer to the plaintiff, and he had refused to accept it. The bill must be dismissed in so far as it related to the sale, with costs up to the hearing. He would make the usual administration decree if the plaintiff thought it worth while to take it, but the costs would be specially reserved.

In Re The Swansea Zinc Company, a petition was presented for the voluntary winding-up of the company under the supervision of the court. It was stated by Mr. Higgins, who appeared in support of the petition, that a provisional liquidator had already been appointed in chambers. The petition was opposed by certain creditors who asked for the usual compulsory order; they stated that it was intended still to carry on the business of the company, and objected to that course. His Lordship said that he was not in favour of the business of companies being carried on under the supervision of the court. He strongly disapproved of the appointment in chambers of a provisional liquidator, and never allowed his chief clerk to do so. There must be the usual compulsory order.

V. C. MALINS' COURT.

Several cases have occurred since the last notice which specially deserve to be mentioned. The first was Inglis v. Cave, in which the subject-matter of the suit, although only 16*l*. 11*s*., involved a question arising under the rules of the Guardian Provident Benefit Building Society. It appeared that George Inglis, the plaintiff's father, an hydraulic engineer, purchased of the secretary of the society a right of advance to two shares, one of the objects of the society being to advance money on mortgage. He then transferred his right in the shares to his daughter (the plaintiff), and she applied to borrow 250*l*., her father having granted her an underlease in certain houses, which lease was to form the security. The society gave three months' notice that the money was ready, but by reason of some dissatisfaction on their part as to the security, the mortgage was not completed for some time. Meanwhile under the rules the plaintiff had commenced repaying the advance, and the 16*l*. 11*s*. in question had been paid by weekly payments of 12*s*. per week, the rate of repayment being fixed at 10*l*. per cent. annum. The question then arose when the repayment properly commenced, the society contending that it commenced immediately, the plaintiff only from the date of the security. Ultimately an action of ejectment was brought, and the bill filed to restrain it. The Vice-Chancellor considered that both parties were wrong in beginning and continuing the litigation, although the plaintiff was right in her contention, and dismissed the bill without costs.

The next case was Hill v. Royds, which involved a most important question as to the practice of bankers. The facts were very simple: Messrs. Kershaw and Sons, wool dealers, at Rochdale, employed Royds and Co. as their bankers at Rochdale, and for many years had been in the habit of accepting bills, and at the same time depositing sufficient to meet them with an advice note; but the practice of the bankers had been, whether they were in funds on Messrs. Kershaw's account or not, to direct their London agents, Messrs. Jones Lloyd, and Co. (now represented by the London and Westminster Bank), to honour the bills, which had always been done. In 1867 they accepted a bill for 738*l*. drawn by the plaintiffs, Messrs. Hill and Warren, who carried on the same business, and that would fall due on the 8th August. On the 7th Mr. Kershaw, being dangerously ill, sent Mr. Crossley, his manager, to Manchester, to collect money, and he, having got some 600*l*., applied to the plaintiffs for the balance to save the bill from being dishonoured, and paid in the 600*l*., and 150*l*. advanced by the plaintiffs, in all 7*l*. more than sufficient. At that time Mr. Kershaw's account was 5000*l*. overdrawn, and the bankers having received the 750*l*. with the usual advice note, and saying nothing at the time, determined not to place it to meet the bill, but against the 5000*l*., and Kershaw having died next morning, and the plaintiffs having had to pay the bill which was dishonoured, filed this bill seeking to make the defendants trustees of the 738*l*. for the plaintiffs. The Vice-Chancellor said that his opinion was wholly with the plaintiffs on the merits, but the technical question was too strong; that there was no privity, no contract between the plaintiffs and the bankers, neither the acceptor nor his representatives being parties to the suit, and the bill must be dismissed.

A case immediately followed of Lewis v. Matthews, raising the short question whether an executor to whom a legacy was left "for his trouble in the execution of the trusts," was entitled to it, being abroad and having done nothing but execute a power of attorney, upon which circumstances rendered it necessary to act, so far as proving went. He then died, and his representative claimed the legacy, which was 210*l*., on the ground that the execution of the power was a sufficient act to constitute a person an executor so as to entitle him to anything which he could take as such. On the other hand the party to whom the power was sent, and who had meantime taken out letters of administration, rendering the power so far unnecessary, insisted that probate was necessary, as the gift was virtute officii, to which it was answered that many acts might be done before probate, in which view the Vice-Chancellor concurred, and observed, moreover, that the plaintiff himself and the residuary legatees, by treating the plaintiff as representative under the power, had concluded themselves from objecting that the other executor did not take the legacy. Ordinarily speaking, no doubt probate was essential to constitute a person executor, but as many acts might be done before probate, there was altogether sufficient to entitle the executor to the legacy.

The next case was Shuter v. Hill, in which a question of domicile arose. A young lady had married a Frenchman, and they had been separated according to French law; the effect of which was, according to the opinion of an avoué, that she was thereby rendered capable of acquiring a fresh domicile, having, of course, been a domiciled Frenchwoman by her marriage. She then for four years travelled in different countries of Europe with her mother, returned to this country and resided with her mother for eight years until her death, and never having had a home of her own, the question was whether her domicile of origin (which was English) revived. The Vice-Chancellor held that it did.

A case of Robson v. Dodds then came on before the court, involving a most important question of practice, namely, whether the court would at once, without plea, answer, or demurrer being put in take a bill off the file upon proof of its not being in fact the bill of the plaintiff. The facts upon which the motion was founded were that the suit being one of two, raising the question whether a benefit building society, at Newcastle-on-Tyne, had power to borrow money. Certain editorial comments appeared in a local paper, which were made the subject of a motion to commit for contempt of court, which was noticed in our last impression, and the order to commit was made. On notice of motion being given, notice of the present motion was also given. The comments in question related to William Lockey Harle, who had been solicitor to another society of a similar kind, but had ceased to be so in January, in consequence, as it was stated by the Vice-Chancellor in his judgment, of a quarrel. A few days after such discharge of Mr. Harle, the plaintiff, who was husband to the laundress who cleaned Mr. Harle's offices, and was a journeyman joiner, purchased two shares in the society, the subject of the suit, for 2*l*. 0*s*. 3*d*., and filed the bill in April following. It was in evidence that Harle had openly spoken of his antagonism to the first defendant and another, and told the secretary that he might tell the directors. Upon this, it was argued that the suit was not bona fide, was the suit of Harle, as was almost avowed, and the plaintiff was unable to pay costs, and was evidently under some indemnity. On the other hand, it was insisted by the plaintiff that poverty or motives could not be gone into, if there was no evidence of indemnity, which there was not, however small the plaintiff's interest, and in Seaton v. Grant this court had refused such a motion on that very ground, Lord Cairns enumerating four grounds. The Vice-Chancellor was satisfied, however, that this was the suit of Harle, instituted from motives of vengeance, and that there was enough to draw the inference that the plaintiff was a mere puppet, tool, and cat paw, not bona fide suing for his own benefit, but indemnified by Harle, and acceded to the motion with costs, expressing a conviction that if the real facts in Forest v. The Manchester and Sheffield Railway Company had been presented to Lord Westbury, and such a motion as this made, his Lordship would have taken the bill off the file.

Another case almost as important occupied the court more than one day, on the question whether an annuity given by will to a person for life who predeceased the tenant for life, and which was to cease in case of bankruptcy or alienation, which did not happen, was a vested or contingent interest. This was Power v. Hayne, and the case chiefly observed upon, as being almost in pari materia, was Day v. Day, where Vice-Chancellor Kindersley had decided that it was vested. After elaborate arguments, the Vice-Chancellor acknowledging that Day v. Day was precisely in point, and expressing the greatest respect for the learned judge who decided it, refused to follow it, and held the annuity contingent, and that, on the terms of the will, it sunk into the residue. In the case before the court the words were "for his support," and there were other expressions which the Vice-Chancellor considered showed a clear intention of personal enjoyment.

Another part heard case then concluded, which was of great public interest, namely, the matter of the Cork and Youghal Railway Company, on a claim by the old firm of Overend, Gurney, and Co., and the Hamburg Bank, as holders of bonds to a very large amount issued by the company to Mr. David Leopold Lewis, deceased, who had been a director and a shareholder, and when the company had expended the whole of its capital, and entirely exhausted its borrowing powers, had advanced the money represented by the bonds, which money had been applied to pay contractor, landowners, the company's officers, for rolling-stock, interest, &c. This crisis occurring when the railway was unfinished, a meeting was held of which notice was given as special, and to consider matters of finance, and a resolution passed under which the bonds were issued, which were negotiated and got into the hands of the present claimants. The cases mainly relied upon in support of the claim were: The German Mining Company, and Troop's and Hoare's cases, and against it, Chambers v. The Manchester and Milford, &c., Railway Company. The case was elaborately argued, and the Vice-Chancellor referred in detail to the authorities, and was of opinion that the claims must be allowed. This company was wound up by a special Act of Parliament, which recited that it might be unable to pay its debts, and gave a power, under which it has been sold, and the purchase-money was in court; and the 12th section declared that it should be subject to all the rights, equities, claims, and demands of creditors, bondholders, &c., and be applied accordingly. The Vice-Chancellor was of opinion that after the meeting and resolution, of which the shareholders were quite aware, it was impossible for them, after standing by and having the benefit of the money being actually expended, enabling the sale of the railway, to turn round and claim possession of the proceeds against the creditor. It was decided at law, it was true, that there was no remedy, but there was in equity.

The last case which may be mentioned was Leung v. Reed, which came on upon demurrer to a bill raising the important question whether a benefit building society, having by its 18th rule an unlimited power to borrow money, and having under that rule borrowed upwards of 66,000*l*., that rule was legal. The plaintiff had, in January last, purchased one share, the society having been formed in 1851. It was urged in support of the demurrer that the statutes gave power to such societies to make what rules they pleased, and the certificate of Mr. Tidd Pratt was conclusive. This was denied, and cases were cited to show that it was only conclusive as to matters within the barrister's jurisdiction. The Vice-Chancellor was of opinion that it could not be said that such an unlimited power was legal, and that no relief could be given on the bill, and therefore the demurrer must be overruled, but the costs reserved until the hearing.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

In the case of Taylor v. The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, which was tried before the Lord Chief Justice, at the sittings after last Easter Term, the plaintiff, Major Taylor, of the Madras army, recovered a verdict of 3750*l*. against the defendants, as compensation for an accident sustained by him whilst on board one of their vessels named the Pera. It appeared that Major Taylor being about to return to India by the steam packet in question, went on board at Southampton the day before the day of sailing to inspect his cabin; and on inquiry for it, and being directed to it, he went along the saloon, and fell down the bullion hatch, which was open in the floor, and sustained severe injury. The defence was that the plaintiff contributed to the accident by his own negligence, and there was conflicting evidence upon this point, and the jury, after long deliberation, returned a verdict for the plaintiff as above. Upon a motion for a rule nisi for a new trial, upon the ground that the verdict was against the weight of evidence, the court refused to grant it, upon the ground that the case having been properly left to the jury, and the facts being peculiarly for their consideration, the verdict was not open to be fairly questioned.

In the case of Reg. v. the Overseers of Alrescomb Devon, an application was made for a rule for mandamus commanding the overseers to give notice of a vestry meeting to make out a list of persons qualified to serve as constables of the parish. By the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 109, s. 2, justice are, within the first seven days of February, to issue a precept to the overseers of each parish within the division, requiring them to make out and return before the 24th March a list in writing of a competent number of men within the respective parishes qualified and liable to serve as constables, and by the 3rd section the overseers of every parish, upon receipt of such precept, are to summon a meeting of the inhabitants in vestry, to be held within fourteen days of the receipt of such precept, and the vestry at such meeting are to make out a list in writing of such number as shall be named in the precept of men residing within their parish who shall be qualified and liable to serve as constables, with the christian name and surname &c., of each. It appeared that the justices of the Honiton division in which the above parish is situate having in due course issued their precept, the overseers and inhabitants declined to make any nomination upon the ground, that as the constabulary of the county is now amply provided for by the County Police Acts it was unnecessary to appoint parish constables. It was now contended that this was an erroneous view, for that the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 109 is still in force, and that the present case comes within the decision in Reg. v. The Inhabitants of North Brierly, 27 L. J. 275, M. C. The court being of this opinion granted a rule nisi.

In Reg. v. Valentine an attempt was made to remove into this court a small case of assault which has been sent by a metropolitan police magistrate to the Central Criminal Court for trial. It appeared that the defendant, who is a French gentleman who has resided for many years in this country, was acquainted with the prosecutor, M. Cassell, and that many years ago, when both were in France, a cause of quarrel had arisen between them. A short time since the defendant having met the prosecutor at Woolwich, he assaulted him by striking him twice. For this he was summoned before the police magistrate; when there the defendant admitted having struck the complainant, not for the purpose of doing him any bodily harm, but to obtain from him that satisfaction which, under similar circumstances, no French gentleman would decline to give; he at the same time expressed his regret that by such conduct he had offended against the English law. The magistrate thought proper to send the case for trial at the Central Criminal Court. A motion was now made on behalf of the defendant for a rule for a certiorari to remove the indictment when found into this court, upon the ground that under the peculiar circumstances of the case it would be desirable that it should be tried by a special jury, and to avoid the indignity of a trial at the Central Criminal Court, the case being one which the magistrate might very well have dealt with in some summary manner. The Lord Chief Justice, however, thought that no ground had been established for granting the rule, for that it was evident the only reason for the defendant's desiring the removal of the indictment was his dislike to submitting to the indignity of being tried at the Central Criminal Court, to recognise which as a reason would be to make a distinction between the cases of gentlemen and poor men.

The case of Reg. v. Burrows was another of those frequently recurring cases in which justices have been required to stay further inquiry where the defendant has bona fide set up a claim of right. It appeared that Mr. Burrows had taken a cottage on the borders of the lake of Ulswater for the purpose of fishing, that the occupier of the cottage had for a long series of years exercised the right of fishing in the lake which was navigable. When before the justices, upon an information for unlawfully angling, he set up a right to fish both as one of the public and as having a private right. But upon being asked in which right he claimed, he replied as one of the public. The justices convicted him, and upon the case coming before the Queen's Bench upon a motion to quash the conviction, it was contended that the justices were right in convicting, for though the claim of right was bona fide made, yet as it was a right of the public to fish, not in a tidal river, but in a private water, it was one which could not be supported in law. The court, however, were of opinion that it was not for the justices to decide so important a question, and so deprive the defendant of his power to take the opinion of the Superior Courts upon it, they therefore made the rule absolute to quash the conviction.

In Bull v. O'Sullivan, a verdict had been recovered against the defendant on a cheque which was given the day before it bore date. It was objected at the trial that being a post-dated cheque it was in effect a bill of exchange, and as it did not bear a stamp of the amount which a bill of exchange for the sum in question would require, it was inadmissible in evidence; and leave to move the court on this point to enter a nonsuit was reserved to the defendant. Mr. Benjamin, on the 27th of last month, moved in pursuance of the leave reserved, and obtained a rule nisi.

In Donaldson v. Pell, which came before the court on the same day, Mr. Murphy obtained a rule nisi calling on the defendant to show cause why he should not pay to the executors of Donaldson the amount ordered to be paid to him on an award by the defendant. The peculiarity of the case consisted in this: that before the award was made to pay to Donaldson the sum in question, Donaldson died, but the executors could not prove that the defendant knew the fact of his death. A strange difficulty thus arose, for the death of either party usually operates as a revocation of a submission to arbitration, and the matter has to begin all over again. The court said they saw considerable difficulties in the way of the present application, but granted the rule nisi.

Hathway v. Griffiths was an appeal (by way of rule for a new trial) from a decision of the County Court judge of Bristol, and raised the question whether the property in certain bills of exchange indorsed to and deposited with a bank by one of its customers on the agreement that he should draw against them, passed to the bank, and on its bankruptcy to its assignees; or whether the property in the bills remained in the customer. The County Court judge held that the property in the bills passed to the bank. Mr. Pinder argued in support of the judgment appealed against; Mr. Gilmore Evans contra. The court (consisting of Lord Chief Justice Cockburn and Justices Mellor, Lush, and Hayes) discharged the rule for a new trial, and held that the property in the bills did pass to the bank, on the ground that the customer paid in the bills to the bank not merely on the expectation that the banker would honour his cheques to the amount of the bills, but on the express agreement that the banker would give him credit to that amount; and there was evidence adduced before the County Court judge that the parties had treated the bills as if the property in them had passed to the bank.

Bradshaw v. James, a special case, which came on for argument on the 28th May, raised an important question as to what amounts to an election on the part of a bankrupt's assignees to continue the tenancy of a farm held by him up to the time of his bankruptcy. The bankrupt held two farms, one from the 29th Sept.; the other from the 29th March. He was adjudicated a bankrupt on the 13th July 1866, and the defendant were appointed creditors' assignees, and took possession of the two farms in the middle of the quarter, between June and Sept. 1866. By the Bankruptcy Act 1849, sect. 145, in the event of the bankruptcy of any person entitled to any lease, or agreement for a lease, his assignees may elect to accept or to decline the same, and the lessor is empowered to oblige them to exercise this option, if they do not do so when required; if they accept the lease or agreement, the bankrupt is discharged from all future liability in respect of the rent and covenants. By the 31st section of the Act of 1861 the assignees are empowered to keep possession of the premises up to some quarter or half yearly day, on which rent is made payable by the lease or agreement, such day not being more than six months from the adjudication of bankruptcy, and upon such day to decline such lease or agreement. The assignees in the present case intended to give up the farms to the landlord, and expressed their willingness to do so, but some disputes arose between them as to arrears of rent and the right to certain growing crops. The assignees would not agree to certain demands made by the landlord, and would not allow him, or any one on his behalf, to come upon the premises to cultivate the farms, and did not abandon possession to him till March 1867. In consequence of this the present action was brought against them for dilapidations as well as arrears of rent. Mr. Edlin, for the landlord, argued that the conduct of the assignees in keeping the landlord out of possession, and preventing the cultivation of the farms, must be taken to amount to an election on their part to continue the tenancy of the bankrupt. Mr. Lopes, for the assignees, contended that having regard to the original offer to give up the farms, and the disputes which subsequently arose and led to the delay in giving up possession, the assignees could not be said to have, by their acts, "unequivocally" elected to take the farms, and, therefore, that they were not liable in the action. The court (consisting of Chief Justice Cockburn, and Justices Blackburn, Mellor, and Lush) held that the assignees must, under the circumstances, and especially on account of their conduct in preventing the landlord coming in and cultivating the land, be held to have elected to continue the tenancy of the bankrupt, and, therefore, that they were liable both for the rent and for the dilapidations.

In Birch v. The Vestry of Marylebone, which was argued on the same day, the vestry of Marylebone had given the plaintiff notice to treat for the purchase of her house, but afterwards refused to issue their warrant for the purpose of having its value assessed in the manner provided by statute. The plaintiff brought this action against them, and claimed a peremptory mandamus to compel them to issue the warrant. The defendants demurred to the declaration, and also pleaded that the plaintiff had not, within twenty days from the giving of the notice to treat, nor within a reasonable time from that date, given particulars of her estate and interest. The plaintiff demurred to the plea, and both demurrers were argued together, Mr. J. Horne Payne arguing on behalf of the plaintiff, Mr. Keane, Q. C., on behalf of the defendants. By the 57 Geo. 3, c. xxix., s. 82, it is provided that if any body or bodies politic, corporate, or collegiate, or any other person or persons seised or possessed of, or interested in, any house, &c., within the metropolis, shall refuse to treat or agree, or shall not agree, &c., with the commissioners or trustees, or other persons having the control of the pavements of any streets or public places in any parochial or other district within the jurisdiction of this Act, &c., then and in every such case it shall be lawful for the said commissioners or trustees, or other persons as aforesaid, "and they are hereby required" to issue a warrant or warrants, precept or precepts, directed to the sheriff or sheriffs, or bailiff, or other proper officer of the city, borough, or county wherein the premises shall respectively lie or be, who is to impanel a jury to assess the value of the house or land intended to be taken. The powers given to the commissioners or trustees mentioned in this Act are by a subsequent Act transferred to the vestries. In support of the demurrer to the declaration it was argued that the declaration should have averred (1) that the plaintiff's house or a part of it had been adjudged by the vestry "to project into, obstruct, or prevent them from altering, turning, widening, extending, lengthening, continuing, or opening" the streets within the parochial district; and (2) "that the possession, occupation, and purchase of such house" was "necessary for that purpose," as sect. 80 of 57 Geo. 3, c. xxix., provided only that in such a case it should be lawful for the commissioners or trustees (now the vestry) to take the house or land of any person; and it was contended that if the vestry, having given notice to treat for the purchase of any house, afterwards found out that it was unnecessary to take it for the purpose originally intended they should not be held bound by the notice to treat which they had given. The court were of opinion that it was sufficient for the plaintiff to allege in the declaration that she had received from the vestry a notice to treat, a fact which presupposes the existence of such a state of things as justified the vestry in giving it, and that they were consequently bound by their notice. The court, however, guarded itself from being understood to lay it down that if the notice to treat for the purchase of a particular house or piece of land had been given under a completely mistaken view as to its necessity, the vestry could not set up that as a defence by way of plea. As to the other ground of defence, viz., that the plaintiff had not given particulars of her estate or interest, the court was already of opinion that the statute imposed no duty on her to give such particulars, and consequently that the plea was bad.

In Dawkins v. Lord Frederick Paulet, which came before the court on Tuesday last, a very important question relating to privileged communications was presented for decision. It was a demurrer to the replication to the defendant's plea. The action was for an alleged libel on the plaintiff, contained in a letter to the Commander-in-Chief of the army, written by the defendant, who is a Major-General of the brigade in which the plaintiff was colonel of one of the regiments. The letter spoke of the plaintiff's having surreptitiously assumed command, after having been suspended from it, and also of his having shown such a want of judgment, tact, and temper as unfitted him to be intrusted with the responsibility and charge of a command. The defendant pleaded in substance, that it was his duty, as the superior officer of the plaintiff, to forward letters sent to him relating to the military conduct, duties, and qualifications of the officers under his command, and to make reports on the subjects of such letters; that he received from the plaintiff a letter of this kind, which, in performance of his duty, he forwarded, and, in so doing, made certain reports in writing in relation to the said letter, and as to the plaintiff's conduct in the field, and his unfitness for command, such occasion being the proper occasion, according to the discipline and regulations in force in the army, for the defendant to make such reports. The plaintiff replied to this plea that the words complained of were written maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause, and not bona fide or in the discharge of his duty. To this replication the defendant demurred. The Attorney-General (with whom were the Solicitor-General, Mr. Dowdeswell, Q. C., and Mr. Archibald) argued in support of the demurrer, and contended that such a report as was made by the defendant with respect to the plaintiff was, even though malicious, a privileged communication, and therefore that an action could not be maintained in respect of it; that the principle of law which exempted judges and counsel, as well as jurors and witnesses, applied to such a case as that of the defendant; that the plaintiff had a remedy provided by the articles of war; that it was necessary on grounds of public policy that such actions should not be allowed; and many cases were cited in support of the argument. Mr. S. Hill, Q. C. (with him Mr. Holl), on behalf of the plaintiff, contended that where a report, such as that made by the defendant, is made maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause, as on the argument of the demurrer, this must be taken to have been, the plaintiff should not be deprived of the remedy open to all other persons injured in the civil courts of the kingdom; that the articles of war provided no sufficient remedy for the injury done to the plaintiff's character; and that none of the reported cases have gone the length of exempting from liability for such a malicious libel as the defendant must be taken to have written. The court during the argument expressed a strong opinion against the action lying, but reserved their judgment on the very important question argued.

Portilla v. Carr, argued on the same day, was an action against the Chief Justice of Sierra Leone for an alleged illegal condemnation of a Spanish vessel on the ground of her being engaged in the slave trade. The main ground on which it was attempted to show that the condemnation was illegal, was that the adjudication had not been made within the time specified by the treaty made between England and Spain in 1836. By one of the clauses of that treaty it is provided, "that the final sentence shall not in any case be delayed beyond the period of two months, whether on account of the absence of witnesses or for any other cause except upon the application of any of the parties interested, but in that case, upon such party giving satisfactory security that they will take upon themselves the expense and risk of the delay, the courts may, at their discretion, grant an additional delay not exceeding four months." In this case, the vessel having been taken into the port of Sierra Leone, an application was made to the court, which sat to adjudicate upon it, for leave to file further affidavits, which was granted; whereupon the plaintiff, the owner of the vessel, asked for additional time for the same purpose, which was also granted. The time which the court thus allowed the plaintiff, and of which he availed himself, went a day or two beyond the two months prescribed by the treaty, and the question was whether, under these circumstances, the adjudication of the vessel to be a slaver and her condemnation were not illegal. Mr. Macnamara argued on behalf of the plaintiff. The Attorney-General, with Mr. Archibald, appeared for the defendant. The court, without calling on the counsel for the defendant, were of opinion that the plaintiff having been himself the cause of the delay which occurred, he could not now be heard to complain of it, and that this action against the defendant must therefore fail.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

In this court on Tuesday, the 25th May, the arguments in the very important fishery case of The Mayor and Corporation and Citizens of Carlisle v. Graham and others were resumed. It was an action of trespass by the corporation against the defendants for breaking and entering the several fishery of the plaintiffs in the river Eden, a tidal river, in which the water of the sea flowed and reflowed, and which was therefore an arm of the sea, and in which the plaintiffs claimed an immemorial prescriptive right of exclusive fishery. The defendants by their pleas set up a right as lessees of Lord Lonsdale, in whom, and not in the plaintiffs, they alleged the right of fishing in the water in question. At the trial, before Mr. Justice Lush and a special jury, at Carlisle Spring Assizes in 1868, a verdict was entered for the defendants, and leave was reserved to the plaintiffs to move to set it aside and enter it for the plaintiffs for 40s. damage, and a rule to that effect was obtained in Easter Term 1868, accordingly, by Mr. Temple, Q.C., on the part of the plaintiffs. The facts were extremely complicated, and the documentary evidence on which the whole case rested, and which went back to so remote a period as the fifth year of Henry III., was most voluminous. It appeared that in that year there existed a several fishery in the river Eden, which was then vested in the Crown, who leased it at that period to the corporation of Carlisle. In the twentieth year of King Edward I. a quo warranto was issued, which resulted in a decision that the fishery was in the Crown; and in the ninth year of King Edward II. a re-grant of the fishery was made to the corporation, which grant was confirmed by Edward III., and was again confirmed in the first year of Edward IV., as a reward to the citizens of Carlisle for their courage and loyalty at the siege of the town by Prince Henry. By that grant a "frith net" fishery was granted to them, which was afterwards enjoyed by them under the more modern title of a "freeboat" fishery. From 1597 to 1651 the plaintiffs enjoyed this fishery. In 1692 a lease was granted by the corporation to the King's Fishery or King Garth Fishery to a lessee whom the defendants now represented in title, under Lord Lonsdale, and at the same time also, there was a lease by them of their "freeboat" fishery, thus showing that the corporation were, at that period, the owners of the several fisheries. By gradual alterations of nature, or, as was alleged on the part of the defendants, by the acts and proceedings of the corporation themselves, the course of the river was changed from its previous and original course; and about 1690 it flowed partly down a goit and partly in its old course, thus flowing in two courses. The King Garth Fishery thus became more difficult to fish, in consequence of the diversion of the water from it. Disputes then arose in consequence of the alteration of the course of the stream, between the corporation and Lord Lowther, the lord of the manor of the barony of Brough, the latter objecting to the corporation landing fish and nets upon his land belonging to the barony, but ultimately an arrangement was come to between them, and the corporation obtained leave from his Lordship to erect a weir across the goit, which would drive the fish up the stream; and in 1693 a deed was executed by which, in consideration of a payment of 5l. per annum by the corporation to Lord Lowther and his successors for ever, the former were to have the privilege of setting up nets and landing fish on any part of Lord Lowther's lands in the barony of Brough, the better, as the plaintiffs alleged, to enable the corporation to fish the "King Garth" fishery—their right to the "freeboat" fishery not being for a moment then questioned. In 1723 the plaintiffs took leases from Lord Lonsdale of all his fisheries by name in the Eden, which fisheries did not include the "King Garth" or "freeboat" fisheries; and from 1727 to 1744 the corporation subleased these fisheries and also their "King Garth" and "freeboat" fisheries. In 1800 disputes arose as to the plaintiffs' rights of fishing, and a bill in Chancery was filed to quiet them in their possession of their fisheries of the "King Garth," "freeboat," and the "Goate," but no answer was put in to the bill. In 1763 the corporation were leasing their own fisheries, and also those rented of Lord Lonsdale. In 1805 the troubles of the corporation began, and a Chancery suit was instituted, which eventually resulted in the present action at common law, in which the right of the plaintiffs to the several fisheries, of which the defendants are in possession, is denied. The ground of the plaintiff's rule was, that on the documents and the evidence, the plaintiffs were entitled to the verdict. The main and important question was, whether or not, when a river, in which a person had a right of several fishery, changed its course, by the gradual operation of nature, and flowed through different lands and other manors from those it originally flowed through, the right of fishery followed the altered and substituted course of the river, into and through such new lands and manors. A second question was whether there had been a prescriptive title gained by user of the fishery; and, thirdly, whether trespass or ejectment was the proper form of action. Mr. Manisty, Q.C., Mr. Jones, Q.C., and Mr. R. G. Williams, for the defendant, resumed and concluded their arguments in showing cause against the above rule, contending, 1st. That in the case of a private individual grant by the owner of a right of fishing in a river flowing through manor A., cannot give a right of fishing in the same river in manor B., and so the right, by the change of the river, was lost; 2nd. That if the plaintiffs ever had the right they claim, they had forfeited it by non-user for more than sixty years, there being overwhelming evidence of abandonment on their part; and, 3rd. That as the defendants were in possession, ejectment would have been the proper form of action, or, if trespass were the proper form, yet, taking the fishery to be a corporeal hereditament, the plaintiffs were barred by the 3 & 4 Will 4, c. 37, not having brought their action within twenty years from 1805. Mr. Mellish, Q.C., and Mr. Kemplay, for the plaintiffs, supported their rule, and, as to the last mentioned point, said that the Duke of Somerset v. Frogwell, in Barn. & Cress., was a direct decision. First, that such a right was an incorporeal hereditament, and secondly, though it was a legal anomaly, that trespass would lie, though ejectment would not. They urged that the change of the course of the river did not destroy the right of fishery in it; and that if it did, the public would lose their right of fishing in a navigable river altogether. Such a right followed the water wherever it went, and not the soil. An immense number of authorities, ancient and modern, were cited on both sides; and, at the rising of the court, the further hearing of the case was adjourned to the next day, at the conclusion of which the Lord Chief Baron announced that the question was one of the greatest importance, and therefore that the court would take time to consider their judgment.

On Friday, the 28th May, the Court of Exchequer was occupied with the discussion of a point which, in slightly various forms, has frequently been the subject of argument before the courts. The case in which it arose was that of Holt v. The North Eastern Railway Company, and the question was under what circumstances and to what persons the owner of premises is responsible for injuries arising from the defective repair and insecure state of his premises. The facts of the present case were as follows:—It appeared that the plaintiff had ordered some coals to be sent to him to a station on the defendant's railway. The usual practice at that station was to unload coals arriving there by tipping the contents of the waggons through open spaces between the rails, called cells, into the carts of the consignees, which stood in the roadway beneath the siding to which the waggons came for the purpose. It appeared that there being only the station-master and one porter at the station, the habitual practice had been for the consignees or their servants to assist in "tipping" the coals: for this purpose they had to go upon a flagway running alongside the siding. On the occasion in question the plaintiff having heard that his waggon load of coals had arrived, went to the station and saw the station-master, who told him that all the cells being at present occupied, he must wait for his coals till some lime had been removed. The plaintiff being urgently in want of some coal for his thrashing machine, said he should go and take a portion of the coals from the waggons. The station-master neither gave him permission to go nor prohibited him from going. The plaintiff went upon the flagway and climbed up on the waggon and took out a portion of the coal. In getting down he stepped on the flagway, and one of the flags being in an insecure condition, gave way, and plaintiff was precipitated into the cell and sustained the injury for which he now sought to recover. It was contended for the plaintiff that being on the defendant's premises on business, and it being the general practice for consignees of coal to go on the flagway to assist in unloading, there was a duty imposed on the defendants to keep it in a reasonably secure state. It was contended, on the other hand, for the defendants, that the plaintiff was not on the premises in the performance of any contract between him and defendants, inasmuch as the defendants were not bound to deliver except in the usual way, but went there only for his own private purposes and convenience. The obligation of the defendants must be limited at the utmost to persons going upon the premises to unload the coals according to the usual practice of "tipping." The court were of opinion that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Baron Bramwell expressed some doubt whether the persons going on the premises to assist in unloading coals were more than mere licensees, but on the whole he thought that the effect of the continued acquiescence of the defendants in a practice which was for their own benefit as well as that of the consignees of the coal, was to operate as an invitation to such persons to come on the premises. That being so, he thought that such invitation could not be construed as confined to the practice of "tipping," merely because that was the mode of unloading that was usually most convenient, the mode which the plaintiff adopted imposing no greater responsibility on the company. Baron Cleasby appeared to be of opinion that the plaintiff could not be a mere volunteer or licensee, inasmuch as he was on the company's premises in the way of business. The plaintiff was therefore held entitled to recover.

In the case of Freeman v. The North-Eastern Railway Company, the question was raised whether various articles of female wearing apparel, either made of or containing any admixture of silk which formed part of a passenger's luggage, were within the Carriers Act. The plaintiff's counsel argued that the Act was intended to apply only to silks as articles of merchandise; but the court held that the case was concluded by authority, and gave judgment for the defendants.

On Monday, the 31st, a case of some importance was argued, arising out of the recent strike by the cab proprietors against the privileged cabs. The name of the case was Case v. Storey, and the question was on a case stated by a metropolitan magistrate. The appellant was a cab proprietor, and a member of the cab strike committee. He had gone to the Great Northern Station, and hailed the cab of which respondent was driver. The respondent refused to take him. The Hackney Carriage Acts compel a cabman standing or plying for hire in a public street or place, to take any person demanding his services. The magistrate dismissed the summons, being of opinion that the station, being the private property of the railway company, the Hackney Cab Acts did not apply. The court now confirmed that decision. Chief Baron Kelly said that, in his opinion, the standing or plying for hire, to be within the Acts, must be where any one of the public could hire the cab. In this case, the railway station, being private, only passengers had any business on the company's premises, and, therefore, the cabman was not liable to be hired by any one of the public, and the Act did not apply. The railway station was not a place within the meaning of the Act. Baron Bramwell expressed a similar opinion. He said that it had been argued by the appellant's counsel that if the magistrate were right, the public were at the cabman's mercy, because the statutory rate of charges, by similar reasoning, did not apply to cabs at railway stations. The learned judge very much doubted that proposition. It may be that you could not compel a cabman at a railway station to take you; but if he once consented, and was hired, the statutory rate of charges would apply. The decision of the magistrates was therefore affirmed.

In the case of Goldwin v. Stone, a point of some interest and importance arose with reference to the position of the sheriff when process has been issued upon a judgment, and the judgment debtor having executed a deed, produces the certificate of registration for his protection. It will be remembered that in the earlier cases it was held that the only deed of which the certificate of registration afforded any protection to the debtor or excuse for non-execution of the process to the sheriff was a deed valid within the 192nd section of the Bankruptcy Act 1861. It has been since decided that whether the deed be valid or not in certain cases, the sheriff must be protected, inasmuch as he cannot know of the circumstances upon which its validity or invalidity depends, as for instance, whether a sufficient majority of creditors have assented or not. And it would be a monstrous hardship and injustice that where he could not be acquainted with the fact that the deed was invalid he should be bound to act at his peril in electing to execute or not to execute the process. A class of cases has, however, arisen in which this doctrine has been held not to apply, namely, those cases in which it has been alleged that the sheriff had notice of circumstances which rendered the certificate of registration no protection, as for instance where the liability arose subsequently to the date of the deed, and the sheriff had notice of the date of its accrual. In the present case the action was against the sheriff for not arresting a judgment-creditor upon a capias ad satisfaciendum. The plea relied upon the certificate of the registration of a bankruptcy deed as a justification to the sheriff for not arresting. The replication alleged that the deed in question contained a release, and was therefore pleadable in bar to the original action in which the judgment was obtained, and had not been so pleaded, and that the sheriff had notice of this. In order to appreciate the gist of the replication, it is necessary to advert to the decisions which have taken place with respect to the effect of not pleading a deed which is in its nature pleadable. For some time there was considerable diversity of opinion, especially in the Court of Exchequer on this subject, some of the judges holding that if the defendant failed to plead the deed he was estopped from setting it up later, and therefore could not obtain his release from custody under the 198th section. Others, of whom the Chief Baron was one, thought the language of the 198th section was positive, and could not be qualified in any such manner as suggested. This point must now be considered settled in accordance with the first-mentioned opinion, and the only question was how this affected the sheriff. It was suggested that he could not be affected by anything in the nature of an estoppel by the laches of the debtor, and under the circumstances was not bound to arrest. The court were, however, of opinion that it being now settled that the deed if pleadable must be pleaded and could not be taken advantage of at a later stage, they were bound by the cases which decide that when the sheriff has notice of the circumstances which render the deed no protection he cannot excuse himself for non-execution of process. Chief Baron Kelly said that, notwithstanding the cases by which he felt bound, if he had to decide this unfettered by authority he should still be disposed to hold that the replication was bad. It seemed to him altogether unreasonable that the sheriff who had no knowledge of the contents of the deed, and no immediate means of obtaining knowledge, should be bound to act upon the process, merely because it was alleged to him by an interested party that the deed was of such a character as not to afford protection to the debtor under the Act. This was really making him act at his peril, taking the chance whether the fact alleged turned out true or not. This the learned Chief Baron thought was a position in which no public officer ought to be placed. The proper remedy for the judgment creditors was to apply to the Court of Bankruptcy for leave to issue execution.

BREAKFAST—EPPS'S COCOA—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Epps attained by his homoeopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by the Trade only in 4lb. 1lb., and 1lb. tin-lined packets, labelled "JAMES EPPS and Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London."

ELECTION LAW.

THE TAXATION OF COSTS.

The Court of Common Pleas in Ireland have been called upon in two cases to decide whether or not they have jurisdiction to review the master's taxation of costs. The decision is that they have. Monahan, C. J., said: "We entertain no doubt that, according to the true construction of the Act of Parliament, we have ample jurisdiction to review the taxation of the master, he being the officer of the court, and we having under the Act the same jurisdiction and authorities with reference to an election petition and the proceedings thereon, as if the same were an ordinary cause within our jurisdiction. We have no doubt that if the master has, in the taxation of the costs, violated any principle, or gone wrong in something not mere matter of detail, we have authority to set it right."

A second point decided was that in accordance with sect. 41 of 31 & 32 Vict., c. 125 the costs should be taxed as costs between attorney and client in the High Court of Chancery, which was held to mean the Court of Chancery in Ireland, if the matter pertained to that country. This latter view hardly finds favour with our Irish contemporary who covets for Irish attorneys the schedule of the English court.

A further matter discussed by the Court of Common Pleas was what is conveyed in the order of costs made by the Judge who tries the petition? This being a matter which may soon come before our own court, we will here give the remarks of the Chief Justice. He says:—"With respect to the three motions of which the master has given the costs to the petitioner in the Drogheda case, the first was the motion by the petitioner to change the venue—that motion was refused, and the respondents asked for the costs of opposing the motion. We refused to give them, and all the members of the court have a perfect recollection of what our intention was at the time; but, irrespective of that, we think that the proper tribunal to determine as to those costs was the court before whom the motion was made, and not the rota Judge, and that, we not having thought proper to give those costs to the petitioner, he is not entitled to them as part of the general costs in the cause. With respect to the motion for leave to exhibit interrogatories, we think also that the master should not have taxed those costs without having an order of the court before him, giving those costs. We think that the order of the rota judge, who tried the petition, gave the costs of the petition, and of the trial thereof, and proceedings consequent thereon, &c., but did not include the costs of interlocutory motions such as these. The same rule applies to the motion for particulars. These three items must, therefore, be struck out, and the residue of the bill retaxed on the principle we have mentioned; and the master must satisfy himself as to such other questions as may arise in the progress of the taxation, as to what should be charged for attendances, fees to counsel, and other details. What he should allow is, what would be allowed in the Court of Chancery here, when one party is ordered to pay the other party's costs, as between solicitor and client."

THE PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ACT 1868.

The following is the true Scale of Costs allowed under the Act:—

RESPONDENT'S COSTS UNDER THE ELECTION PETITIONS ACT 1868 (31 & 32 VICT. C. 125); PETITION ABANDONED AFTER SECURITY LODGED, BUT BEFORE NOTICE OF TRIAL.

Michaelmas Vacation 1868.

	£	s.	d.
Dec.—Instructions to oppose petition	1	1	0
Drawing authority to act as agent for respondent, and copy	0	0	0
Attending respondent for his signature there-to	0	6	8
Attendance filing same	0	3	4
Paid	0	2	0
Retainer to Mr. H., Q.C.	2	4	6
Attending him	0	6	8
Perusing petition	1	1	0
Attending to search for and perusing recognizances when I found they had been acknowledged before a justice of the peace, instead of a master or judge, and paid search	0	7	2
16th.—Summons to show cause why the recognizance should not be declared insufficient, copy and service	0	5	0
Drawing notice of objection to recognizance	0	6	8
Fee to counsel to settle	1	3	6
Attending him	0	6	8
Fair copy notice, as settled	0	2	0

	£	s.	d.
Attendance serving same	0	3	4
Copy, for the master	0	2	0
Notice of attending summons by counsel	0	4	0
Instructions to counsel to attend in support of summons	0	6	8
Fee to him	2	4	6
Attending him	0	6	8
17th.—Attending summons: order made, and the petitioners also ordered to pay 1000l. into Bank of England	0	13	4
Paid fee for counsel	0	5	0
Paid for order	0	2	0
Copy and service	0	5	0
Close copy	0	1	0
19th.—Attendance at the Common Pleas Office to ascertain if any agent had been nominated on behalf of the petitioners pursuant to the statute, and paid	0	7	2
30th.—Summons for particulars of alleged bribery, &c., copy and service	0	5	0
31st.—Attending summons: order made	0	13	4
Paid	0	5	0
Copy and service	0	5	0
Close copy	0	2	0
Term fee	1	6	0

Hilary Term, 1869.

Having telegram from agent that petitioners had served summons to amend petition by striking out all allegations against the mayor, and that he proposed to object to alteration, on the ground that the statute contained no power, and requested me to forward instructions by telegram, preparing telegram to him in reply, and attending to transmit	0	6	8
Paid	0	2	0
Jan. 15th.—Attending petitioners' summons for leave to strike out certain parts of the petition; order made	0	13	4
Preparing telegram, and attendance instructing same to be forwarded to Shrewsbury	0	3	4
Paid	0	1	6
16th.—Close copy order to amend	0	2	0
Attending petitioners' agent on his amending petition	0	6	8
Close copy petition as amended	0	3	4
24th.—Close copy notice of petitioners' intention to withdraw	0	4	0
26th.—Attending Mr. C., petitioners' solicitor, pointing out that notice was informal	0	6	8
March 6th.—Attending petitioners' summons for liberty to withdraw petition, same adjourned	0	6	8
8th.—Attending adjourned summons before judge, when appointment made for hearing same on 22nd instant	0	6	8
Attending Mr. F. (the respondent) in long conference, and ultimately taking instructions for affidavit	0	6	8
Drawing same, and copy	0	6	8
Attending Mr. F. to be sworn	0	6	8
Paid oath	0	1	0
Copy for other side	0	2	0
Perusing affidavits filed on behalf of petitioners, and attending respondent conferring thereon	0	6	8
Drawing affidavit of Mr. C., respondent's election agent, of no collusion, and copy	0	6	8
Attending to be sworn	0	6	8
Paid Commissioner	0	1	6
Copy for petitioners	0	2	0
Paid filing affidavit	0	2	0
22nd.—Attending adjourned summons, when order made	0	13	4
Close copy order	0	2	0

Easter Term, 1869.

Drawing bills of costs and copy, and copy for petitioners' agents	2	0	0
Attending for appointment to tax	0	3	4
Copy and service	0	5	0
Attending taxing	1	1	0
Paid	1	0	0
Letters &c.	1	1	0
Term fee	1	6	8

RESPONDENT'S COSTS OF THE TRIAL OF AN ELECTION PETITION UNDER 31 & 32 VICT. C. 125, FOR ALLEGED BRIBERY, TREATING, AND UNDUE INFLUENCE.

1869.

April 2nd.—Attending Mr. N. (the sitting member) taking instructions to defend	2	2	0
Perusing petition and attending Mr. N. to the Rule Office on his giving notice of agent to defend	0	6	8
Drawing and copy notice	0	5	0
Paid stamp	0	2	0
Instructions for summons for particulars of persons bribed and treated, and places and times of treating, and list of persons unduly influenced	0	6	8
Drawing same	0	5	0
Paid stamp	0	2	0
Copy and service	0	4	6
Attending same; order made	0	13	4
Paid for same	0	5	0
Copy and service	0	4	6
Copy, and writing to the country therewith	0	2	6
Paid messenger	0	1	0
5th.—Attendance at Crown Office searching for date of receipt of return, found it was 20th November	0	6	8
Paid search	0	1	0
8th.—Attending to retain Mr. P., Q.C.	0	6	8
Paid retainer	1	3	6
Attending to retain Mr. H.	0	6	8
Paid retainer	1	3	6
Perusing list of persons alleged to have been bribed (28 folios)	0	13	4
The like of persons alleged to have been treated	0	13	4
The like of places and times of treating	0	6	8
The like of persons alleged to have been unduly influenced	0	6	8

Apr 10th.—Journey to H., attending persons alleged to have been bribed and treated; 25 witnesses examined ...	5 5 0
Paid railway fare and cab-hire, and expenses ...	1 14 6
12th.—Instructions for brief ...	10 10 0
Drawing same, 25 brief sheets ...	8 6 8
Two fair copies for counsel ...	8 6 8
Attending Mr. P., Q. C., with brief ...	2 2 0
Paid fee to him and clerk ...	110 0 0
Attending Mr. H. with brief ...	2 2 0
Paid fee to him and clerk ...	55 0 0
13th.—Journey to H., attending court, case for petitioner opened by Mr. G. ...	5 5 0
14th.—The like attendance ...	5 5 0
Attending Mr. P., Q. C., with refresher ...	0 13 4
Paid same ...	27 10 0
Attending Mr. H. with refresher ...	0 13 4
Paid same ...	16 10 0
15th.—Attending Mr. P., appointing consultation ...	0 6 8
Paid him ...	2 9 6
Attending Mr. H. for like purpose ...	0 6 8
Paid him ...	1 3 6
Attending consultation ...	0 13 4
Fair copy list of committee for counsel (10 folios) ...	0 3 4
Attending court; petitioners' case concluded, and Mr. B.'s (the other sitting member) defence begun ...	5 5 0
Attending Mr. P., Q. C., with refresher ...	0 13 4
Paid same ...	27 10 0
Attending Mr. H. with refresher ...	0 13 4
Paid same ...	16 10 0
16th.—Attending Mr. P. to appoint consultation ...	0 6 8
Paid his fee ...	2 9 6
Attending Mr. H. ...	0 6 8
Paid fee ...	1 3 6
Attending consultation ...	0 13 4
Attending court; defence of Mr. B. and Mr. N. concluded ...	5 5 0
Attending Mr. P. with refresher ...	0 13 4
Paid same ...	27 10 0
Attending Mr. H. with refresher ...	0 13 4
Paid same ...	16 10 0
Attending court, both members seated, and petitioners to pay costs ...	5 5 0
Attending Mr. P. with refresher ...	0 13 4
Paid same ...	27 10 0
Attending Mr. H. with refresher ...	0 13 4
Paid same ...	16 10 0
Paid railway and cab fares and expenses ...	6 7 8
19th.—Writing to Mr. J. B. for account of expenses incurred by him at H. ...	0 3 6
20th.—Answering his letter thereon ...	0 3 6
21st.—Writing to Mr. B. as to his expenses ...	0 3 6
Writing to Mr. B. acknowledging receipt ...	0 3 6
Paid for room, B. W. ...	3 3 0
Paid for attendance, A. T. ...	1 5 6
The like, G. S. ...	0 12 6
The like, G. S. ...	0 12 6
Drawing bill of costs and copy (15 folios) ...	0 15 0
Copy for taxation ...	0 5 0
Attendance for appointment to tax ...	0 6 8
Copy and service ...	0 3 4
Drawing and ingrossing affidavit of increase (4 folios) ...	0 5 8
Paid for oath and filing ...	0 3 0
Attending to tax ...	2 2 0
Paid stamps ...	0 7 6
Copy and service of allocatur ...	0 6 8
Term fee, letters, &c. ...	1 6 8

COSTS OF THE RETURNING OFFICER.

Michaelmas Term 1868.

Dec. 12th.—Attending the mayor of the borough of S, on his informing me he had received official instructions from the Master of the Court of Common Pleas under the Parliamentary Elections Act to give public notice of the petition which had now been filed against the return of J. F., Esq., as member to serve in Parliament for the said borough, and also complaining of the conduct of the mayor as returning officer, conferring at very great length, and taking instructions to act on his behalf ...	1 1 0
Drawing notice of petition (fol. 6), and copy for printer ...	0 8 0
Attending the mayor on his signing same ...	0 6 8
Attending printer, instructing him to print same ...	0 6 8
Collating proof and attending printer therewith, instructing him to print fifty posting bills ...	0 6 8
Paid printer ...	0 13 0
Attending bill-poster, instructing him to post and distribute bills through the borough ...	0 6 8
Paid him ...	0 3 6
Attending the mayor on his bringing me notice he had received from the master as to giving public notice of the agents empowered to act on behalf of the respondent, and conferring and taking his instructions thereon ...	0 6 8
Drawing notice ...	0 5 0
Four copies for printer ...	0 6 0
Attending printer, instructing him to print same ...	0 6 8
Collating proof, and afterwards attending printer, instructing him to print twenty-five posting bills ...	0 6 8
Paid printer ...	0 6 0
Attending bill-poster, instructing him to post and distribute bills through the borough ...	0 6 8
Paid him ...	0 2 6
Dec. 17th.—Attending the mayor and returning officer this day in long conference as to the allegations against him and his deputies contained in the petition, and taking instructions to fully investigate the facts, and see his deputies and ascertain from them whether there was any truth in the statement of the petitioners that they had refused to record votes for Mr. C., the unsuccessful candidate at the elec. ...	1 1 0
Term fee ...	1 6 8

Hilary Term 1869.

Jan. 15th.—Attending petitioners' summons for leave to strike out certain parts of the petition; order made ...	0 13 4
Close copy order ...	0 2 0
Attending the mayor, conferring thereon, and taking instructions to give public notice thereof ...	0 6 8
Drawing notice accordingly ...	0 5 0
Four fair copies ...	0 8 0
Attending bill-poster, instructing him to post same on the Town Hall ...	0 6 8
Paid him ...	0 2 6
Attending the mayor on his bringing me notice that he received from the master to the effect that petitioners intended to withdraw same, and taking instructions to give public notice of same ...	0 6 8
Drawing notice accordingly ...	0 5 0
Four fair copies for printer and newspapers ...	0 8 0
Attending the printer, instructing him to print same ...	0 6 8
Collating proof and afterwards attending printer, instructing him to print fifty posting bills ...	0 6 8
Paid printer ...	0 9 6
Attending bill-poster, instructing him to post and distribute bills through the borough ...	0 6 8
Paid him ...	0 3 6
March 6th.—Attending summons for liberty to withdraw petition; same adjourned ...	0 6 8
8th.—Attending adjourned summons before judge, when appointment made for hearing same on the 22nd instant ...	0 6 8
22nd.—Attending adjourned summons, when order made ...	0 13 4
Term fee ...	1 6 8

Easter Term, 1869.

Drawing bill of costs and copy, and copy for petitioners' agent ...	1 4 0
Attendance for appointment to tax ...	0 3 4
Copy and service ...	0 5 0
Attended taxing ...	1 1 0
Paid ...	0 12 0

THE petition against the return of Lord Hyde for Brecon is appointed to be tried before Mr. Justice Willes on the 17th inst.

NORWICH ELECTION PETITION.—A memorial was sent to Mr. Baron Martin, showing that the trial of the Norwich Election petition was held "out of the city of Norwich, to wit, in the county of Norfolk, in the Shire-hall there." The memorialists submit that the trial was illegal, and pray Baron Martin so to report to the Speaker of the House of Commons, or to obtain the opinion of the full court as to the legality of the trial. To this memorial Baron Martin has returned the annexed reply, addressed to Mr. Collins of Norwich: "Mayo, Londonderry, May 23. Dear Sir,—Your letter of the 20th inst. with the memorial enclosed was forwarded to me here. The matter of trying the Norwich petition at the Shire-hall was well considered, and was perfectly legal both in substance and form. I cannot, therefore, comply with the prayer of the petition. I propose to be in London on Tuesday next.—Yours very truly, SAMUEL MARTIN."

LEGISLATION AND JURISPRUDENCE.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THE BRENTFORD MAGISTRATES' SENTENCE ON CHILDREN.

MR. BOWRING asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how far there was any truth in the statement contained in the daily papers to the effect that two infants, aged respectively five and six years, had been convicted and sentenced by the Brentford magistrates to a fine of 2s. each, or in default to seven days' imprisonment, for breaking down and stealing three small pieces of fencing at Twickenham.—MR. BRUCE said he believed the statement contained in the question of his hon. friend was quite accurate. He had received an official communication on the subject, from which it appeared that portions of a paling had been pulled down, and the police having been set to watch, these children were seen taking away part of the paling. The magistrates had no doubt whatever the children were sent there by their parents, and the fines were inflicted in the presence of the parents, without the slightest intention on the part of the magistrates to send the children to prison.

LEGAL STATISTICS.

MR. NEWDEGATE moved for a return of the number of the actions, bills, plaints, or informations commenced, prosecuted, or filed in the name of Her Majesty's Attorney-General or Solicitor-General in England and Wales, or Her Majesty's Advocate in Scotland, under the provisions of the Acts 39 Geo. 3, c. 79; 57 Geo. 3, c. 19; and 9 & 10 Vict. c. 33, since the passing of the last-mentioned Act, giving the character or a short description of each such bill, plaint, or information. The motion was agreed to.

ELECTION COMMISSIONERS (EXPENSES) BILL.

On the order of the day for going into committee on this Bill, MR. STAVELEY HILL recognised the necessity of providing some new machinery for recovering the expenses of the election commissioners from the county or the borough under the Act of last year. But he thought that the plan now proposed was in some respects open to objection. It was hard that a rate should be levied upon a division of a county not affected by a commission. Under the clause relating to boroughs, the expenses of a commission for Bewdley would fall upon the whole parish of Kidderminster, four-fifths of which was an independent borough. In such a case it would seem proper that the expenses should be charged upon the Consolidated Fund; but, at all events, the innocent parishes ought to escape.—MR. SCLATER-BOTH thought a whole county ought not to pay for a commission affecting only one division.—MR. AYTON said it was no use discussing the Act of last session, and the other points raised were matters to be discussed in committee. All he had undertaken to do by the Bill was to supplement the Act of last session by making the arrangements necessary to give effect to it.—MR. SCLATER-BOTH said the Bill had only been delivered during the recess, and read a second time that morning at one o'clock. He therefore moved that the chairman do report progress.—MR. AYTON did not offer any opposition to the motion, and progress was accordingly reported, and the House resumed.

COUNTY CORONERS BILL.

This Bill passed through committee pro forma.

EVIDENCE AMENDMENT BILL.

This Bill was read a third time.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY STATUTES.

On the motion of Mr. HARDY, leave was given to bring in a Bill to remove doubts as to the validity of certain statutes passed by the Convocation of the University of Oxford.

COMPANIES CLAUSES ACT (1863) AMENDMENT BILL.

On the motion of Mr. GOLDNEY, leave was given to bring in a Bill to amend the Companies Clauses Act (1863).

COUNTY FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS.

MR. READ asked the Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department upon what calculation he founded the statement he made on introducing his Bill on County Financial Arrangements, that under the proposed Bill the number of representative ratepayers in quarter sessions would be only "one to five" of the county magistrates.—MR. KNATCHBULL-HUGHESSEN said that on the 2nd March he moved for a return of the number of parishes in each Poor Law Union in England and Wales. Applying the schedule of the Bill to that return, he was enabled to state with tolerable accuracy the number of elective members which would be sent to the financial board in each county. He had next ascertained from the clerks of the peace of each county the number of magistrates on the roll. The result appeared to be that there would be one elected member to every five magistrates on the roll; but he had not meant to convey to the House that such would be the proportion actually on the board. If, for instance, there were 250 magistrates on the roll, it would not at all follow that anything like that number would attend at the sessions.

COSTS OF PROSECUTIONS.

MR. W. HUNT asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether it would not be desirable to put an end to the system of examining the items of the costs of prosecutions in indiotable cases by Imperial officers previous to payment by the Treasury, and to substitute a payment to the local treasurers in respect of such costs of a commutation sum for each indiotable offence, either on a general average, or an average of classes of offences, on the same principle that has been adopted in the case of prosecutions under the Criminal Justice Act and Juvenile Offenders Act.—THE CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said he had referred that subject to the examiners of criminal accounts, and he was sorry to have to state that, on the best consideration he could give to it, he did not think he could comply with the suggestion of the right hon. gentleman. The right hon. gentleman thought they might take either a general average in those cases, or an average founded on particular classes of crimes. But as regarded the adoption of a general average, it so happened that the several committees differed not only in the amount of crime committed, but in the quality and atrocity of the crimes. For instance, in Essex the prosecutions cost on an average 8l. each; in Berkshire they cost 9l.; in Cheshire they cost 14l.; and in Lancashire they cost 23l. each. It would be impossible to make up a satisfactory average out of these figures, because no compensation could be given for the larger outlay in Lancashire as compared with Cheshire or Berkshire. Then, again, if an attempt were made to adopt an average based upon particular crimes, it would be found that those crimes differed materially in their accompanying circumstances, and that while one was of a perfectly simple character, another involved a variety of more or less conflicting considerations, and could only be proved or disproved by a mass of circumstantial evidence. The expense of examining those accounts was 3500*l.* a year, and the work was, he believed, very satisfactorily performed. He should certainly be glad to save the country that outlay, but he did not see his way to the attainment of that object.

COUNTY COURTS BILL.

The order for second reading was discharged, and the Bill was withdrawn. The House adjourned at one o'clock.

ESTATE AND INVESTMENT JOURNAL.

STOCK AND SHARE MARKETS.

The Stock and Share Markets have been rather depressed, and prices have exhibited a further reaction. A slight improvement however took place on Wednesday, on a rumour of the intention of the Bank directors to reduce the rate of discount.

The following are the fluctuations of the week:

ENGLISH FUNDS.	Fri.	Sat.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thur.
Bank of England Stock	246	244	244	...
3 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. Red. Ann. ...	92	...	92 $\frac{1}{2}$	92 $\frac{1}{2}$	92 $\frac{1}{2}$	92 $\frac{1}{2}$
3 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. Cons. Ann. ...	93 $\frac{1}{2}$	93 $\frac{1}{2}$	93 $\frac{1}{2}$	94 $\frac{1}{2}$	92 $\frac{1}{2}$	92 $\frac{1}{2}$
New 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. Ann.
Do. do. Jan. 1894.
New 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. Ann.	92 $\frac{1}{2}$	92 $\frac{1}{2}$	92 $\frac{1}{2}$	92 $\frac{1}{2}$	92 $\frac{1}{2}$
5 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. Annuities
5 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cents. $\frac{1}{2}$ Jan. 1873
Ann. 30 years exp.
April 5, 1885
Do. exp. Jan. 5, 1880
Do. exp. July 1880	114 $\frac{1}{2}$
Rail Sea Tele. Ann. 1908
Consols. for Acc. ...	93 $\frac{1}{2}$	93 $\frac{1}{2}$	93 $\frac{1}{2}$	92 $\frac{1}{2}$	92 $\frac{1}{2}$	92 $\frac{1}{2}$
India 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. for Acc.
Do. 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cents. July 1880	115 $\frac{1}{2}$...	114 $\frac{1}{2}$	115	111 $\frac{1}{2}$	112 $\frac{1}{2}$
India Stock, July 1880
India Stock, 1874	212 $\frac{1}{2}$	212
India 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent.
India 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cents. 1888 ...	100 $\frac{1}{2}$...	100 $\frac{1}{2}$	100 $\frac{1}{2}$	100 $\frac{1}{2}$	101
India 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. 1870
India Bonds (1000 l.)
Do. (under 1000 l.)	10 s. c
Ex. Bills, 1000 l. ...	a	a	b
Do. 500 l. ...	a	a	b	b
Do. 100 l. and 200 l.
3 $\frac{1}{2}$ c. ...	a	a	...	b	b	...

a Par. b $\frac{1}{2}$ and 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. 5*s.* dis. d Ex. div. e $\frac{1}{2}$ and 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.; March 2*s.* dis.; June 2*s.* dis.

PUBLIC COMPANIES.

RAILWAY COMPANY.

South-Eastern of Portugal (Limited).—Creditors must forward claims to Mr. John Ball, the official liquidator, by the 15th July, the 23rd July being appointed for their adjudication.

BANKS.

Anglo-Austrian.—A call of 2*l.* 10*s.* per share, or 25 florins, has been made payable on the 1st July next.

Bank of British North America.—A dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, and a bonus of 1 per cent.

English of Rio de Janeiro.—A dividend of 8*s.* per share, making 8 per cent. for the year.

London and Bombay Bank.—A call of 2*l.* per share is payable by the contributories on the 1st July.

London Chartered of Australia.—Dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum.

FINANCE, CREDIT, AND DISCOUNT COMPANIES.
London and Australian Agency.—A Dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum.

New Consolidated Discount (Limited).—A special meeting was held on Monday, when it was resolved to wind-up voluntarily, with the view of the assets and liabilities being taken over by the chairman, Mr. T. S. Richardson, who proposed to carry on the business as a private firm. The amount paid on each share is 4*l.*, which is to be returned to the proprietors as follows:—1*l.* upon signing the deed of assignment, and 1*l.* every two months afterwards, the whole being paid within six months.

ASSURANCE COMPANIES.

General Life and Fire.—The usual 6 per cent. dividend, free of income tax, declared.

Queen.—A dividend of 7 per cent. was declared, leaving a balance of 3133*l.*

MISCELLANEOUS COMPANIES.

Imperial Continental Gas.—A dividend of 3*l.* 10*s.* per share for the half-year declared.

Poole and Cherbourg Steam Packet (Limited).—Creditors are required to send the particulars of their claims to Mr. G. A. Cape, of the Old Jewry, the official liquidator, by the 5th of June, the 21st of that month having been appointed by the Master of the Rolls for adjudicating upon them.

REPORTS OF SALES.

[Note.—The reports of the Estate Exchange are officially supplied in the following lists. Auctioneers whose names are registered there will oblige by reports of their own sales.]

Monday, May 31.

By Mr. WHITTINGHAM, at the Mart.

Freehold building land, situate at Dulwich, Surrey, in 36 lots; lots 1 to 43 comprised in previous sales; lots 452 to 454 sold for 60*l.* each; lots 468 to 472 sold for 55*l.* each. Freehold cottage and garden, situate at Tooting, Surrey—sold for 110*l.* Freehold cottage and garden, situate at Tooting, Surrey—sold for 110*l.*

Tuesday, June 1.

By Messrs. FAREBROTHER, CLARK and Co., at the Mart.

The magnificent freehold domain of Ertou, with the lordship or manor, situate in the parish of Lyth, in the North Riding of Yorkshire, and comprising numerous farms, with farm buildings, and 600*ac.* or 2*sq.* of arable meadow, and woodland, and plantations, small holdings, nearly the whole of the villages of Ertou and Ertou Bridge, several inns and public houses, water corn mill, and stone quarries, also the south moor, extending over 5515*ac.* 2*p.* 3*p.* making the total quantity of the estate 12,480*ac.* 2*p.* 3*p.*—sold 55,100*l.*

By Mr. P. D. TUCKETT.

Freehold business premises, No. 53, Strand, annual value 220*l.*—sold for 5000*l.* Freehold residence, with stabling, and grounds containing about 2*ac.* 3*p.*—sold for 1000*l.*

By Mr. FRED. A. MULLETT.

Leasehold town residence, No. 5, Norfolk-crescent, Hyde-park, and stabling in the rear, annual value 260*l.*, term 95 $\frac{1}{2}$ years from 1840 at 6*l.* per annum—sold for 3000*l.*

Wednesday, June 2.

By Messrs. NORTON, TRIST, WATNEY, and Co., at the Mart.

Freehold and copyhold pleasure farm, situate at High Beech, Essex, comprising a residence known as Mame-goods, with stabling, pleasure grounds, farm cottage, buildings, and 17*ac.* 1*p.* of land—sold for 1700*l.* Copyhold cottage, with stabling and meadow, containing 3*ac.* 31*p.*, situate as above—sold for 270*l.* Freehold cottage and orchard, containing 0*ac.* 1*p.* 0*p.*, situate as above—sold for 200*l.* Copyhold 3*ac.* 1*p.* 2*p.* of arable land—sold for 2300*l.* Two full assignments in Epping Forest, extending over 5*ac.* 2*p.* 34*p.*—sold for 75*l.* Leasehold two houses and shops, Nos. 159 and 160, Oxford-street, producing 650*l.* per annum, term 36 years unexpired, at 230*l.* per annum—sold for 5000*l.* Leasehold house and premises, No. 1, Ryder-street, Duke-street, St. James's, let at 160*l.* per annum, term 27 years unexpired, at 60*l.* per annum—sold for 1000*l.*

By Messrs. GADSDEN, ELLIS, and SCORER.

Leasehold, two residences, known as Eagle Cottages, Bow-road, annual value 55*l.* and 45*l.* each, term 73 years from 1827, at 17*l.* 10*s.* per annum—sold for 600*l.* Copyhold 3*ac.* 1*p.* 2*p.* of arable land, 148, Whitechapel, let on lease at 70*l.* per annum—sold for 1100*l.*

By Messrs. CHINNOCK, GALSORTHY, and CHINNOCK.

Freehold, four houses and shops, Nos. 35 to 38, Cheyne-walk, Chelsea, and two plots of building land in the rear—sold for 7300*l.*

By Messrs. EDWIN FOX and BOUSFIELD.

Freehold premises, Nos. 44 and 45, Fenchurch-street, occupying an area of 3140*ft.*, let on lease at 600*l.* per annum—sold for 19,000*l.* Freehold plot of ground, situate at Chase-side, Enfield—sold for 650*l.* Leasehold residence, No. 9, Darlington-terrace, Paddington, let at 45*l.* per annum, term 99 years from 1859, at 27*l.* per annum—sold for 300*l.* Leasehold residence, No. 13, Darlington-terrace, let at 44*l.* per annum, term and ground-rent similar to above—sold for 350*l.* Freehold residence, known as Montpelier Villa, 14, Finchley-road, let at 90*l.* per annum—sold for 1300*l.* Leasehold house and shop, No. 16, Great James-street, Lisson-grove, let at 42*l.* per annum, term 22 $\frac{1}{2}$ years unexpired, at 6*l.* per annum—sold for 200*l.*

Tuesday, June 1.

By F. INMAN SHARP, at Garraway's.

Part of the permanent line or way of the Crystal Palace and South London Junction Railway Company for sale, pursuant to an order of the Court of Chancery, at the suit of Charles Stevens; the principal interest, and costs due by defendants were paid in full. Leasehold ground-rents of 37*l.* 6*s.*, Wilmer-gardens, with rack-rent of 400*l.* a year—sold for 200*l.* Lease, 12, Orchard-street, Portman-square; term 50 years; ground-rent 20*l.*—bought in at 1850*l.* Lease, Black Craig Consolidated Mines—sold by private contract. Leasehold premises, 102, Keeton's-road, Bermondsey—bought in at 500*l.* Numbers 41, 43, 45, and 47, Church-street, and 9, Lombard-street—bought in at 550*l.* Numbers 8, 9, and 10, Union-road, South Hackney—bought in at 200*l.* each. In Chancery.—Valuable building land, Wimbledon, in quarter-acre plots: Lot 1 sold for 135*l.*; lot 2 sold for 125*l.*; lot 3 sold for 125*l.*; lot 4 sold for 185*l.*; lot 5 sold for 300*l.*; lot 6, half an acre, sold for 500*l.*

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

EQUITABLE PLEADINGS.—Declaration on bills of exchange drawn upon and accepted by H., and indorsed to plaintiffs by defendant for the purpose of defendant's becoming surety as such indorser for the payment of the bills by the acceptor; and on a guaranty under seal whereby the defendant made himself liable for the acceptances of H. to the said bills. Plea on equitable grounds, as to part of the amount claimed, that before the making of the bills there was an agreement between plaintiffs and H. for the sale and purchase of an estate, subject to a condition for reference to arbitration in case of dispute as to any matter connected with the sale; that a dispute arose, and, on a reference, the award was that plaintiffs should pay to H. a certain sum; that the bills sued on were made by plaintiffs, and accepted by H., for and on account of the purchase-money of the estate, and for no other consideration, and that H. claimed to set-off the sum awarded against an equal part of the purchase-money. On demurrer, held, that the plea constituted a good equitable defence, so far as the sum to which it applied. For, on the state of the pleadings, it must be taken that, at the time of the award, the sum secured by the bills was all that remained due of the purchase-money; and this being so, the defendant might in equity, without bringing H. before the court, claim the benefit of the amount of compensation awarded, as a deduction from that sum. The rule that pleadings are to be taken most strongly against the party pleading is subject, both at law and in equity, to an exception as to the pleading of matters that are peculiarly within the knowledge of the opposite party. An equitable plea will only be valid where, on the averments it contains, coupled with those in the declaration, a court of equity would, on the application of the defendant against the plaintiff, without bringing other parties before the court, grant an injunction to restrain the plaintiff from suing out execution upon a judgment for the matter to which the plea applied: (Murphy v. Glass, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 461. Priv. Co.)

INVESTMENTS BY SOLICITOR TRUSTEE.—A solicitor trustees who sells out parts of the testator's estate and invests them upon mortgages of building properties and otherwise, in respect of which investments he was employed as solicitor by the mortgagors also, and made profits, will not be held liable to account for these profits to his cestui que trust, when he has made his charges against, and derived his profits from, the mortgagors, and not against or from the trust estate. And when some of such investments were upon securities not authorised by the will, the plaintiff could only have the remedies usually afforded by the practice of the court in cases of breach of trust: (Whitney v. Smith, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 468. LL. J.)

COSTS—TAXATION—THREE COUNSEL.—The counsel who had drawn the pleadings in a suit having been called within the bar before the hearing of the cause, a brief was given to him as well as to the leading counsel previously retained, and to a new junior. Held, that the costs of employing the three counsel ought, under the circumstances, to be allowed: (Horsley v. Cox, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 473. M. R.)

SUPPLEMENTAL BILL—AMENDMENT OF SUPPLEMENTAL BILL—COMMON ORDER TO AMEND—DISMISSAL OF ORIGINAL BILL—LANDS CLAUSES ACT, s. 92.—A bill filed to restrain the defendants from taking possession of a piece of land for the purpose of constructing their railway without also taking the whole of the land in question and the plaintiff's house, was dismissed at the hearing; but before the cause had come on, the plaintiff had filed a supplemental bill, alleging that the magistrate who appointed the "practical surveyor" was a shareholder in the company, and was therefore disqualified from acting. The supplemental bill was not brought to a hearing with the original bill, and the plaintiff afterwards obtained the common order to amend his supplemental bill. Upon motion by the defendants that the amended bill might be taken off the file for irregularity, or that the amendments might be struck out, on the ground that they had the effect of making the amended bill an original bill, motion refused, with costs: (Steele v. The Midland Railway Company, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 475. V. C. M.)

PLEADING—RIGHTS INCIDENTAL TO THE POWER OF SOVEREIGNTY.—A Government which de facto succeeds to any other Government, whether by revolution or restoration, conquest or reconquest, succeeds to all the public property of the displaced power, and it would have the right to call to account any fiscal or other agent who had been the agent of such displaced Government. But in a suit by a foreign Government in this court against such an agent for an account, it must be alleged and proved that such Government has an equity, and not simply a legal right to the moneys or goods, which such agent is alleged to have had come to his hands in his character of agent for such displaced Government. The bill in a suit which did not establish such an equity dismissed with costs: (United States v. McRae, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 476. V. C. J.)

PRIVILEGED DOCUMENTS—ARCHITECT AND SOLICITOR.—Letters passing between an architect and the solicitor to one of the parties to a suit with regard to building premises, the subject of the suits, are not privileged: (Page v. Ward, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 518. V.C.M.)

DEED OF SEPARATION—POST-NUPTIAL SETTLEMENT.—A deed of separation is a post-nuptial settlement within the meaning of the 5th section of the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 61, and the court will deal with it as such: (Worsley v. Worsley, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 546. Div. & Mat.)

PROFESSIONAL TOUTING.

We have had forwarded to us some papers issued by a Mr. Cowl, of Great Yarmouth, which require no comment. By the Law List we find him described as a notary, conveyancer, and a commissioner to administer oaths in Admiralty. The following is his printed circular:

Dear Sir,—As the winter season is approaching, I beg to offer my best thanks to those friends who have kindly favoured me with business during the past year, and to assure them that all future commands respecting salvage, collision or other maritime cases, shall receive my prompt and best attention. I am prepared to proceed to any part of the kingdom, and also abroad where the interests of my clients call for it, and a telegram or letter, requesting my services at any of the outposts or elsewhere, will receive my personal and immediate attention.

Should you have occasion to communicate with me on a Saturday, please do so by telegraph, as a letter might not be delivered until the following Monday, and delay arise. Hoping for a continuance of your favours, I remain, dear sir, yours faithfully. HENRY COWL.

Notary Public and Admiralty Commissioner.

And the following letter will show how business is sought for by those who have no idea of what a profession means:

31, Hall Plain, Great Yarmouth, 31st May, 1869.

Sir,—Perceiving by to-day's paper that your ketch the Acorn has been run into and sunk off Lewes Buoy, by the ss. South of Ireland, I shall be most happy to conduct your case to obtain compensation against the owners of the steamer for your loss.

I have had an experience for upwards of thirty years in collision, salvage, and other nautical matters, and devote nearly the whole of my time to such cases. I have clients as far south as Fowey and Cornwall, and as far north as Hartlepool, and at nearly all the intermediate outposts. I enclose my card and circulars, and, awaiting your early reply, I remain, sir, yours obediently, HENRY COWL.

P.S.—The other day I succeeded in the Admiralty Court against the owners of a steamer for the total loss of a brigantine and cargo off Aldbro.

HEIRS-AT-LAW AND NEXT OF KIN.

ELWELL (Mary), Woodcote-place, Epsom, Surrey, late of Aberdeen. Heir-at-law to come in by Nov. 1. Nov. 15; V.C.J.

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY.

LAST DAY OF PROOF.

BOWDEN (William), Ardwick, Manchester. June 25; J. Cooper, solicitor, Manchester. July 6; V.C.M., at twelve.
BRET (Agnes), Brighton. July 1; Upperton, Upperton, and Co., solicitors, Brighton. July 14; V.C.J., at 11.45.
DACKOMBE (Aquila), 9A, Sun-street, East-street, Waltham. June 25; Loxley and Morley, solicitors, 50, Cheapside. July 2; M. R., at eleven.
LAMBERT (George), Stratford, Surrey. July 13; H. T. Day, solicitor, Godalming. July 27; V.C.S., at twelve.
LOAHING (John), Ilminster, Somerset. June 30; Dommatt and Canning, solicitors, Chard. July 14; V.C.M., at twelve.
PARKER (George), High-street, Weymouth. June 29; Combe and Wainwright, solicitors, 9, Staple-inn. July 12; V.C.J., at twelve.
PERRY (George A.), 6 and 7, Aldermanbury. June 30; W. H. Duignan, 15, Bedford-row, solicitor. July 14; V.C.S., at twelve.
BRID (Elizabeth J.), 21, York-terrace, Regent's-park. June 25; B. Pennington, solicitor, 6, New-square, Lincoln's-inn. July 5; V.C.J., at twelve.
RICKWOOD (Thomas P.), Freeman's, Southampton. June 24; Messrs. Palmer, Eland, and Co., solicitors, 4, Traillgar-square. July 7; V.C.M., at twelve.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. c. 35.

Last day of Claims, and to whom Particulars are to sent.

ATLING (James), Cocking, Sussex. July 1; Edwin Alberty, solicitor, Midhurst, Sussex.
BASSETT (John F.), Tehidy Park, Redruth, Cornwall. July 1; Domville, Lawrence, and Co., solicitors, 6, New-square, Lincoln's-inn.
BRACH (John), Blackford, Tamworth, Warwick. July 31; T. Simcox, solicitor, 20, Waterloo-street, Birmingham.
BLAIR (Col. Wm. H. S.), Penninghame, Wigton, North Britain. July 15; Few and Co., solicitors, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden.
BRANDRETH (Emma J.), Houghton-hall, Houghton Regis, Bedford. June 30; Kinsey and Ade, solicitors, 9, Bloomsbury-place, London.
CHERWYDD (Sir Geo.), Grendon Hall, Atherstone, Warwick. July 15; Freere, Cholmley, and Co., solicitors, 28, Lincoln's-inn-fields, W.C.
CHILD (Samuel P.), Wood Hall, Shenley, Hertford. July 1; R. J. Child, 11, Old Jewry-chambers, E.C.
CLAY (Sir Wm.), Bart., 35, Cadogan-place, Chelsea, and of Twickenham. June 30; Hargrove, Fowler, and Co., solicitors, 3, Victoria-street, W.C.
COLLYER (George C.), Stamford-hill, Stoke Newington. July 1; J. T. Blackmore, solicitor, 31, Old-street-road.
EVANS (Francis), Wilson-street, Bristol. July 31; Mr. J. Morgan, 17, Commercial-street, Newport, Monmouth.
GELL (Francis H.), Lewes, Sussex. Aug. 1; Gell and Woolley, solicitors, Lewes, Sussex.
GOODE (Very Rev. Wm., D.D.), late Dean of Ripon, York. July 10; Hick and Jones, solicitors, Leeds.
GOVER (Wm.), Havering House, Dartmouth Point, Blackheath. July 24; H. Gover, solicitor, 40, King William-street, E.C.
GRANT (John), 34, Essex-street, Strand. Sept. 1; E. J. Jennings, solicitor, 1, Mitre-court-buildings, E.C.
GREENLAND (Wm.), Newport, Monmouth. July 31; J. D. Pain, solicitor, Newport, Monmouthshire.
HANDS (David), 4, Court, Brewer-street, Aston, Birmingham. July 24; E. F. Mason, solicitor, 86, New-street; Birmingham.
HEADFORD (Thos.), Ham, Clifton-on-Teme, Worcester. June 30; W. P. Hughes, solicitor, Pierpoint-street, Worcester.

HIGHAM (Emma), Bloomfield-terrace, Paddington. July 1; Jones and Staring, solicitors, 11, Gray's-inn-square.
HILL (Samuel), Birch Tree, Fugglestone, Leicester. July 31; Smith and Mannatt, solicitors, Abbey-de-la-Zouch.
MANN (James H.), 3, Albert-terrace, Regent's-park. Aug. 20; Hoare and Co., solicitors, 22, Great James-street, Bedford-row.
MARTIN (Wm.), 43, Odessa-road, Forest-gate, West Ham, Essex. June 30; Tacker, New, and Co., solicitors, 4, King-street, Cheapside.
MATTHEW (John E.), Sussex-square, Hyde-park. July 31; Baker, Forder, and Co., solicitors, 52, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.
MATTHEWS (Mr. James), 3, Royal-crescent, Notting-hill. Aug. 1; Burgoyne, Milnes, and Co., solicitors, 160, Oxford-street, W.
MCDONALL (Walter L.), St. Mildred's-court, Poultry. June 30; R. H. Nottelshup, solicitor, 37, John-street, Bedford-row.
MCDONNELL (John), Bristol. July 24; King and Plummer, solicitors, 5, Mitre-court-chambers, Temple, E.C.
MOORE (Edward H.), 4, Alexander-road, Gipsy-hill, Norwood, Surrey. Aug. 31; Messrs. Freshfields, solicitors, 5, Bank-buildings, London.
MUDD (George F.), 15, St. Margaret's-green, Ipswich. June 24; A. Long, solicitor, Christchurch-street, St. Margaret, Ipswich.
NORMAN (Ephraim), High-street, Worcester. Aug. 26; Piddock and Sons, solicitors, Worcester.
PAULIN (James), Crouchers, Aldborough Hatch, near Ilford, Essex. Kynaston and Gasquet, solicitors, 1, King's-arm-yard, Moorgate-street, E.C.
PHELPS (Charles), Briscoe, and of Patchway, Gloucester. Aug. 2; King and Plummer, solicitors, 5, Exchange-buildings, Bristol.
PRESTON (Miss Sarah), Bexley, Kent. July 1; C. R. Gibson, solicitor, Dartford, Kent.
RIDDLE (Peter), Tweedmouth, Berwick-on-Tweed. July 1; S. Sanderson, solicitor, Berwick-on-Tweed.
ROBINSON (Thomas), Accrington. Aug. 28; E. T. Whitaker, solicitor, Duchy of Lancaster Office, London.
RUSSELL (Right Hon. Francis J.), Boyne-hill Villa, Maidenhead. Aug. 31; Fladgate, Clarke, and Co., 40, Craven-street, Strand.
SIMMONS (John), 256, Recent-street. July 24; Gray and Berry, solicitors, 228, Edware-road, W.
SPRUELS (James), Mitcham, Surrey. Aug. 1; G. H. Hogan, solicitor, Park-street, Croydon.
TOMLINSON (Jno.), Fountain Head Tavern, Thornton Heath, Surrey. July 1; G. T. Powell, solicitor, 33, King-street, Cheapside.
TOMLINSON (William B.), Upper George-street, Bryanston-square. Aug. 1; W. W. Comins, solicitor, 34, Great Portland-street.
WHEATON (Horatio John), Liverpool. June 30; Frodham, Taylor, and Co., solicitors, 11, Harrington-street, Liverpool.
WHEATON (Hy. E.), Herne-park, Kent. Aug. 10; Burgoyne, Milnes, and Co., solicitors, 160, Oxford-street.
WOODROW (James), Damerham South, Wilts. July 31; Davy and Dyer, solicitors, New Fordingbridge.
WOODS (Kitty), Relex, Kent. July 1; C. R. Gibson, solicitor, Dartford, Kent.

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDENDS IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

[Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each, in three months, unless other claimants sooner appear.]

LEEMING (Thos. H.), Manchester. Dividend on 1500. 6s. 6d. Reduced Three per Cent. Claimant Christian Leeming.
MEARS (J. M. E.), Dolls, near Llandudno, spinster. Dividend on 100. 10s. 10d. Reduced Three per Cent. Annuitant. Claimant, said J. M. E. Mears.

A deputation from the Incorporated Law Society, accompanied by Sir Roundell Palmer, M.P., and several other members of the House of Commons, and consisting of Mr. Bolton, Mr. Edward Lawrence, and others, have had an interview with the Chancellor of the Exchequer in Downing-street, to urge the superiority of the Carey-street over the Embankment site for the new Courts of Justice, and the smaller cost of their erection on the former site.

LEGAL FAILURE IN BIRMINGHAM.—Mr. William Edwards-Wood, solicitor, of Birmingham, who made himself conspicuous in the proceedings which followed upon the Abergele accident last year, and who was stated to have been injured in a subsequent collision upon the Holyhead line, has filed a petition in the bankruptcy court. The liabilities are stated to amount to between 3000l. and 4000l.—Birmingham Post.

THE BENCH AND THE BAR.

The inspection of the Inns of Court Rifles will take place on the 19th inst.

A coloured police magistrate has been appointed in Washington, and several coloured clerks have been appointed in the Post Office department. A coloured lawyer, Mr. James H. Piles, has been admitted to practise in the United States courts in New Orleans. He was admitted to practise at the bar of the state of Ohio some time ago.

THE PATENT LAWS.—Though the patent laws are not good for the public at large, there are persons for whom they are very good indeed. The official estimate is that in the current year fees amounting to more than 12,000l. will be paid to the English Attorney-General and Solicitor-General for examining and passing patents, and more than 1000 guineas to their clerks. If it would be improper to say that patentees provide law officers for the Crown, it may at least be remarked that patentees pay a very large sum in fees to those functionaries: 3450l. will also be payable to the Scottish and Irish law officers and their clerks, as compensation for their not being now allowed a share of the spoil. The salaries of the clerks in the Patent-office and payments to gentlemen who abridge specifications of patents at 7s. each will absorb 16,000l. in the year, and 19,000l. will be devoted to printing and drawings to explain patents.

DEATH OF MR. COMMISSIONER PERRY.—We have to announce the death of this gentleman, which occurred on Saturday evening at his residence in New Brighton. Mr. Perry was in his sixty-ninth year, and has sat as commissioner of the Liverpool Court of Bankruptcy for the last twenty-five years. He was formerly a Fellow of Jesus College, Cambridge, and afterwards, for many years, principal secretary to Lord Chancellor Lyndhurst, by whom he was appointed a Commissioner in Bankruptcy. Few men have discharged the unpleasant duties of that office with greater impartiality, and none with a more conscientious desire to do justice, than the late lamented commissioner. If not a profound, he was an astute lawyer, and his decisions were seldom reversed on appeal. The vacant office, which is in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, will not, it is expected, in the present unsettled state of the law, be filled, but a provisional appointment made till the fate of the Bankruptcy Bill now before Parliament is known. Mr. Perry's ailment was asthma, from which he had been confined to his house for several months past. It is somewhat remarkable that the period for which the Lord Chancellor had appointed Mr. Theodore Thring to act as deputy of the late commissioner expired on the very day of Mr. Perry's death.—Liverpool Albion.

The judges in the Court of Queen's Bench have had under consideration the matter of the petition of right of Arthur Burke, master of the Court of Queen's Bench in Ireland. The suppliant was appointed prothonotary of the court so far back as the year 1830, at a salary of 1500l. a year Irish currency, or 1384l. English currency. In the year 1844 an Act was passed which abolished the office of prothonotary in each of the Superior Courts of common law, and substituted masters in lieu of them, with salaries of 1000l. a year each. Special provision, however, was made in the Act entitling Mr. Burke to be paid during his life a sum of 384l., in addition to his salary as master. Many years later the suppliant's salary as master was augmented to 1200l. a year by order of the Treasury, in consideration of his renouncing certain fees. Shortly afterwards, the mastership of the Court of Exchequer becoming vacant, it was resolved that the appointment should not be filled up, and that the duties should be performed by the masters of the other two courts. An Act of Parliament was passed giving effect to this arrangement, and entitling the existing masters to have their salaries raised to 1400l. a year in case their existing salaries from pay and emoluments did not reach that amount. The question to be determined was whether the sum of 384l. awarded as compensation to Mr. Burke on the abolition of the office of prothonotary was to be taken into account in assessing the amount of salary payable to him as master. Their Lordships were unanimously of opinion that it was not, and that he was entitled to be paid 1400l. a year, plus the 384l. received by him under the Act of 1844.

MAGISTRATE AND PARISH LAWYER.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION—VOTING PAPERS.—By the Municipal Act, s. 32, the voting papers are to contain the Christian names and surnames of the persons voted for, and sect. 142 enacts that no misnomer in a voting paper shall hinder the full operation of the Act. Voting papers filled up with the initials only of candidates' Christian names were held to be sufficient as being only a misnomer: (Reg. v. Plenty, 20 L. Rep. N.S. 521. Q.B.)

CRIMINAL LAW—FALSE PRETENCES.—B. lent money to the prisoner at interest on security of a bill of sale on furniture, a promissory note of prisoner and another person, and a declaration made by the prisoner that the furniture was not encumbered. The declaration was untrue at the time it was given to B., the prisoner having a few hours before given a bill of sale of the furniture to another person, but not to the full value. This was held to be a sufficient false pretence: (Reg. v. Meakin, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 544. Cr. Cas. R.)

NORFOLK COUNTY JUSTICES—CROMER.

Monday, May 31.

Game—Prevention of Poaching Act—Evidence—25 & 26 Vict. c. 114, s. 2.

The defendant, being suspected of having a quantity of pheasants' and partridges' eggs (that had been previously marked and then put back into the nests), was stopped with a cart on the highway about five o'clock in the morning. In anseen to the policeman he stated he had not any game in his cart, but upon searching, the policeman found in one basket eleven pheasants' eggs and fifty-nine partridge eggs, and in another basket a live pheasant. The defendant stated that he had received them of a man named Moy, but did not say his Christian name or where he lived.

Held, that being in possession of eggs that were identified as having been unlawfully taken by some one, was evidence that the defendant had been on land for the purpose of unlawfully taking game, or that he had been accessory thereto within the meaning of the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 114, s. 2.

Samuel Field, of Gresham, Norfolk, dealer, was charged, on the information of Philip Palmer, a constable, with having, on the 15th May, been suspected of coming from land; and upon his cart being searched, eleven pheasants' eggs and fifty-nine partridges' eggs, and a live pheasant, were found in his possession.

Linay (of Norwich) appeared for the defendant. The constable stated that in consequence of information he stopped the defendant in his cart about five o'clock in the morning, and asked if he had any game, and the defendant replied in the negative, but on searching the cart the game mentioned in the information was found; and the defendant then said it belonged to a man named Moy.

In cross-examination.—Did not know who the defendant meant by Moy. Made no inquiry to find such a person.

Another police constable corroborated the material part of the evidence.

A keeper and an underkeeper were called, who identified several of the eggs as taken from nests on their master's land, as they were marked with certain figures, and placed back in the nests in consequence of the great loss they had recently discovered.

Linay contended there was no evidence that the defendant had unlawfully been on land in search of game, or had unlawfully taken the game; and that if even he knew what the baskets contained, they being eggs, he might not be aware of the interpretation clause of the Act making eggs game; and that he having given the name of a person of whom he received the eggs, he had shifted the onus of proof on to the policeman to find out if his statement was true or not; and as the policeman had not thought proper to inquire it was to be assumed that the defendant's statement was true. He submitted it was necessary that there should be some legal evidence on both points; i.e., that defendant had been trespassing on some land in pursuit of game, and also that he had unlawfully taken game there, and quoted Fuller v. Newland, 27 J. P. 406; and the mere fact of telling lies, and then being found in possession of game, even if he had given a false account about the same, was not sufficient per se to support conviction, and cited Shuttleworth v. Grange, 31 J. P. 290. The bench were of opinion that, looking at all the circumstances, there was sufficient evidence upon which they might convict the defendant.

Fined 11s. 6d. and costs, amounting in all to 21s.

HABITUAL CRIMINALS' BILL.

The following reasons for amending this Bill have been published by the Recorder of Birmingham:—

This Bill, which was introduced in the House of Lords by the Lord Privy Seal, contains two clauses, the effect of which I am inclined to think must have been overlooked, as I find that but little discussion took place upon them.

In calling attention to these clauses, I wish to state that I have no desire to make objections to the general scope of the Bill, but only to the two sections above referred to.

First then, as to sect. 10, which proposes to enact that any person who shall be convicted of any felony or of certain misdemeanors, and shall have been before such conviction twice convicted of any such offence within the five years last past, shall be sentenced to penal servitude for not less than seven years. The meaning of this section is that courts of quarter sessions, where minor offences are principally tried, should be compelled to pass a sentence of seven years penal servitude, where any person has been twice before convicted, irrespective of the nature of the crime of which the offender might then be convicted, or of the crimes of which he had been before convicted, or the punishment that he had undergone. The word felony has so large and so artificial a signification in the English code of laws, that it comprises nearly every crime from killing a person without express malice down to the taking an apple which had fallen from a tree; but it does not include offences by agents, bankers, or factors, who embezzle their client's money or make away with goods entrusted to their care, nor by trustees who fraudulently dispose of trust funds, nor by directors who publish false accounts, or make false accounts, or make false returns, or destroy the company's books of accounts, vide 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 75, et sub. In many of the large towns and notably in Birmingham it has been the practice after a person has been twice convicted for some petty act of thieving under the provisions of the Juvenile Offenders' Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 82), or when required under the provisions of the Criminal Justice Act (18 & 19 Vict. c. 126), to send such person for trial at the quarter sessions whenever the offence then charged against him is larceny, and I find that during the year 1868 there were not less than sixty-one persons tried at the quarter sessions in Birmingham who had been so previously convicted.

The number of persons tried at Birmingham sessions in 1868 was 334, of whom thirty-six were sentenced to penal servitude, or nearly one in nine, whilst in England generally, according to the latest return (Judicial Statistics, 1868) the number of persons tried was 18,971, of whom 1840 were sentenced to penal servitude, or rather less than one in ten, and it must be recollected that in the returns for England all the Assize case are included, for which it may be presumed heavier sentences must have been passed. Had the Habitual Criminals' Bill been law in 1868 sixty-one persons must have been sentenced to penal servitude for at least seven years from Birmingham borough alone, and probably not less than 3570 from the whole of England.

Without setting out the offences charged against all the persons tried at Birmingham, who were not sentenced to penal servitude, I will give a few instances to show how very trivial were the offences thus charged, and how insignificant were the felonies for which the persons charged had been previously convicted.

1st. J. Preston, convicted before justices of having stolen, in 1867, four packs of cards, and sentenced to seven days' imprisonment. Convicted again in 1867, for stealing butter, and sentenced to two months' imprisonment. Tried at quarter sessions, July 1868 for stealing one pair of boots.

2nd. J. Dolman, convicted before justices of stealing, in 1865, two fish, and sentenced to twenty-one days' imprisonment; and, in 1867, of stealing a barrel, sentenced to three months' imprisonment; tried at the same quarter sessions for stealing one crate.

3rd. W. Clark, convicted before justices of stealing in 1867, 8lb. of ham, and sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment; and, in 1868, of stealing one duck, sentenced to three months' imprisonment; tried at the same sessions for stealing six fowls.

4th. T. Bolton, convicted before justices of stealing, in 1867, 8lb. of grease, and sentenced to one month's imprisonment; and, in 1868, of stealing one pigeon and one duck, sentenced to three months' imprisonment; tried at quarter sessions, in October, for stealing eight rabbits.

5th. W. Wallace, convicted before justices of stealing, in 1866, 5lb. of beef, and sentenced to twenty-one days' imprisonment and a whipping; and, in 1868, of stealing 1lb. of tobacco, sentenced to one month's imprisonment; tried at quarter sessions, Jan. 1869, for stealing six slices of fried fish.

Can it be doubted that if a sentence of penal servitude for seven years had been passed in each of the above cases, it would have been felt by all in court that the punishment was altogether disproportionate to the offences charged?

But, to come to another aspect of the case, and to consider whether the fixing of a minimum rate of punishment is desirable, let me examine what has been the effect of previous enactments of like description. By the statute 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29 (Peel's Act), larceny of certain animals was punished with death; by statute 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 62, the punishment was transportation for life; by statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 44, imprisonment was added to a sentence of transportation, and by 7 Will. 4 and 1 Vict. c. 90, the punishment was reduced to transportation for not more than fifteen years, or less than seven years, or imprisonment not exceeding three years. I am informed that this last Act was passed because it was found that convictions could not be obtained, the punishment being considered too severe.

Again, by statute 27 & 28 Vict. c. 47, 1864, it was enacted that no person who had been previously convicted should be sentenced to penal servitude for less than seven years, but the court had still the option of passing a sentence of imprisonment. The effect of this statute was instantaneous, the sentences of penal servitude steadily diminishing, whilst those of imprisonment increased, as the following table will show:—

	No. of Persons convicted.	Sentences of penal servitude.	Sentences of imprisonment of one year and upwards.
1863	15,729	3071	1180
1864	14,736	2445	1208
1865	14,740	2081	1589
1866	14,250	2016	1312
1867	14,207	1846	1379

I quite admit that "habitual criminals" should be kept from pursuing their avocations, and that, without incarceration for a long period, there is scarcely any hope of removing them, when released from prison, from the company of their former associates; but I at the same time assert that for young criminals, and it is on these that this Bill will particularly press, penal servitude for seven years, which may be passed either at Portland, Gibraltar, or elsewhere, will not have so salutary and deterrent an effect as incarceration in a well appointed gaol; and I think that when juries find out that the effect of a verdict of guilty will be to send a youth, who has before committed two trivial offences, to penal servitude for seven years, they will, as in the case of sheepstealers, hesitate to convict. I am sure also that it will not tend to keep up the respect in which the law is held, if, when passing sentence, a judge feels himself compelled to say that he passes such sentence with regret, but that the Legislature has fettered his discretion.

For the foregoing reasons I suggest that if it be decided to adopt the principle of a minimum rate of punishment in these cases, the propriety of which seems very doubtful, the previous convictions shall be confined to those obtained before a court of record, such as the assizes or quarter sessions.

I now come to part 5, sect. 15, by which it is proposed to enact that previous convictions need not be charged in the indictment, and that a conviction may be proved without the production of any formal certificate. At present the practice is regulated by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 90, s. 116, and the jury is to find the fact of a person having been previously convicted after he has returned a verdict of guilty of the charge then under trial; but as the proposed section now stands, it will not be submitted to the jury at all. As soon as the jury has delivered its verdict of guilty on the indictment, it has discharged its duty, and no question can then be submitted to it, and the following may be taken to be a true picture of what will occur:—A prisoner will be found guilty of a felony, and the judge may require time to consider what sentence should be passed, and the prisoner will be removed to be brought up on some future day; just as the judge is about to pass sentence, some person may get up and tender himself as a witness to prove that the prisoner has been previously convicted; the judge cannot, I presume, refuse to hear him, the jury who tried the cause is no longer in court, what then is to be done? Must the judge hear and decide the question of fact? And has the court power to administer the ordinary oaths? And has the prisoner the right to cross-examine the witness, or to produce witnesses in contradiction? If so, is a fresh jury to be empanelled, or what is the course to be? That this is no fanciful sketch, anybody conversant with criminal courts will admit. But, supposing these difficulties to be surmounted, how is the fact to be recorded? The record, which will be made up by the clerk of assize, or of the peace, will only contain the verdict of the jury, and if the judge or presiding magistrate does not pass a sentence of penal servitude for seven years, will it be error on the record, and how will such error be proved before a court of appeal? I imagine that this section was introduced to overrule the decision of the Court of Criminal Appeal in the case of Reg. v. Sommers, L. Rep. 1 Cr. Cas. Res. 182, by which it was decided that unless a previous conviction was charged in the indictment, a judge was not bound to take cognisance of it, but I submit that the present section is highly defective, and that it would be preferable to enact if an alteration of the practice be required that at any time before sentence be passed a count charging the previous conviction might be added to the indictment, and that the prisoner should have reasonable notice of such intended addition.

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

WILL—GIFT TO NEXT OF KIN AT A STATED TIME.—W. gave all his property to trustees upon trust for his three grandchildren who should survive their father, and in case only one should so survive, the whole to that one; but if two should die before their father, and the property should exceed 10,000*l.*, the excess should be in trust for the person or persons, exclusive of such third grandchild, as would, under the Statute of Distributions, upon the death of the survivor of the two grandchildren, dying, be entitled to his personal estate, in case he himself had at such time died intestate. Two grandchildren died before resting; E., the third, lived to attain a vested interest, and the estate exceded in value 10,000L. When the second grandchild died, E. was the testator's sole next of kin: Held, that nephews who, but for the existence of E., would have been the testator's next of kin, were entitled to the excess, excluding E., and that there was no intestacy. An administration suit by such nephew was therefore held maintainable: (White v. Springett, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 502. L. J.J.)

BUILDING SOCIETY—MORTGAGE—POWER OF SALE—DISCOUNT ON FUTURE ADVANCES.—A member of a benefit-building society obtained an advance on his shares on executing a mortgage in the form prescribed by the rules, by which he covenanted to repay the advances, with interest, by monthly subscriptions, calculated to extend over a certain number of months. The mortgage contained a power of sale in the event of the subscriptions falling into arrear for three months, and the purchase-money was to be applied in satisfaction of all moneys then due or thereafter to become due from the mortgagor in respect of subscriptions, fines, insurance, or otherwise, under the mortgage deed, and the surplus to be paid to the mortgagor. The mortgagor paid a few of the subscriptions, and then fell into arrear, and the mortgaged premises were sold by the directors: Held (reversing the decision of Giffard v. C.), that the mortgagor was not entitled to any rebate in respect of the instalments which had not accrued due at the time of the sale, although the rules prescribed that such an allowance should be made in case of a mortgagor redeeming his mortgage before the expiration of the full period of payment. In such a case there is no difference between a permanent society and one intended to be wound-up after a definite period: (Matterson v. Elderfield, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 503. L. C.)

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

SALE OF SHARES—STOCK EXCHANGE—BROKER—ULTIMATE PURCHASER—FORM OF TRANSFER.—The plaintiffs, as brokers for the defendant, on the 2nd Oct. sold to a jobber 100 shares in the General Credit Company for 5l. a share, K. giving the name of S. as the ultimate purchaser, in whose name the usual transfer was made out. In that transfer the consideration-money stated was the sum paid by S., being an increase of some 18l. or 19l. on the sum for which the defendant had sold to K. This transfer was then, on the same day, executed by the defendant, and 495l. being his full purchase-money, less 5l. the plaintiffs' commission of 1l. per cent. was paid to him by the plaintiffs. Upon the executed transfer being sent to K. for delivery to S., K. discovered errors in the spelling of the names in the body of the document, for instance, the defendant's name was spelt "Eatan" instead of "Eatton," and the purchaser's name was spelt "Solomons" instead of "Salomons." K. thereupon corrected those errors, and at the same time filled in the date, which was in blank when executed by the defendant, by writing in "8th Sept." Upon the transfer being then sent back to the defendant for him to "initial" such corrections, he declined to do so, or to return the transfer, until the plaintiffs should pay him the difference between the price at which they sold the shares for him, and that at which they were bought by S. By reason of such refusal and the detention of the transfer, K. was compelled to buy in against the plaintiffs, and the latter thereupon brought an action against the defendant to recover the money paid by him to K. in consequence. At the trial the defendant objected that he was not bound to re-execute the transfer, because he was thereby required to admit the receipt of a larger sum than he had actually received, and, secondly, that the transfer was invalid by reason of the alterations in the names and date made by K. subsequently to its execution by the defendant, and that it was the plaintiffs' duty to tender a good deed to the defendant stating the price actually paid to the defendant, and the increased price paid by the ultimate purchaser. A verdict was found for the plaintiffs and it was held, by the Court of Exchequer (Kelly, C. B., and Channell, Pigott, and Cleasby, BB.) discharging a rule to enter the verdict for the defendant, that the plaintiffs' action for money was maintainable. Upon the execution of the transfer by the defendant on the 2nd Oct., and the payment to him of his agreed purchase-money, the transaction was complete, and he had no longer any right to the transfer, and was not entitled to retain it on its being sent back to him to be initialled, nor to claim payment of the difference between the purchase money received by him, and that which was paid by S. to K. Quare, whether, if the objections which were taken at the trial and by the rule, had been made by the defendant at the time when the transfer was sent back to him they might not have prevailed. But the court held that the questions therein involved did not arise in the present case: (Mewburn v. Eaton, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 449. Ex.)

PRIVATE BILL—LOCUS STANDI.—The lessee of a manor holding neighbouring lands has a locus standi against the bill of a corporation for water-works, on the ground that they would diminish his supplies of water and so injure his interest in the property: (Bradford Water Bill, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 459. Ct. of Referees.)

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.

ANSWERS TO THE FINAL EXAMINATION QUESTIONS.

EASTER TERM 1869.—SECOND DAY.

Continued from page 85.

VI. BANKRUPTCY AND PRACTICE OF THE COURTS.

56. Object of laws.—The principle and object of the bankrupt laws are, as regards creditors, to protect them by compelling the insolvent trader to divide his property rateably amongst them, and as regards the trader, to enable an unfortunate person to relieve himself of his debts and liabilities, and allow him to use his future exertions for his own benefit: (See Smith's Merc. Law, 543, 544, 5th edit.)

57. Creditor holding security.—This question, as referring to the former, is very unintelligible. If the petitioning creditor holds a security, the amount of his security must be deducted: (Will. P. P. 132, 5th edit.)

58. Creditor holding security.—Where the security hold is upon the estate of a third person the principle that all creditors shall participate in the bankrupt's estate equally, and that no creditor can be permitted to retain any portion of that estate, and at the same time prove in competition with other creditors, does not apply. He may therefore prove for the full amount of his debt, and yet retain his security, provided he does not receive more than twenty shillings in the pound. (Doria & Mac, 864.)

59. See preceding answer.

60. Joint security.—The holder must elect against which estate he will prove: (Will. P. P. 137, 5th edit.)

61. Surety.—He should pay the debt and then prove: (Will. P. P. 137, 5th edit.)

62. Distress.—He can only distress for one year's arrears, but he may prove for the rest up to day of application: (Will. P. P. 138, 5th edit.)

63. Reputed ownership.—The 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, enacts that if any bankrupt at the time of his bankruptcy, shall by the assent and permission of the true owner thereof have in his possession, order, or disposition any goods or chattels whereof he was reputed owner, or whereof he had taken upon him the sale, alteration, or disposition as owner, the court has power to order the same to be sold and disposed of for the benefit of the creditors under the bankruptcy. But it is provided that this section is not to affect in any way the provisions in an Act intitled "An Act for the registering of British vessels," or any of the Acts therein mentioned: (See sect. 125.)

64. Agent—Bills.—It seems that the property in the bills is not altered, but remains in the party making the remittance: (See fully Doria & Mac, 565.)

65. Proof for money lent.—The ordinary form runs for money lent and advanced by this deponent to the said J. C., at his request, on the day of 186 .

66. Discovery of property.—For this purpose the bankrupt and his wife may be examined by the court: (See the mode set out, Act 1849, ss. 117, 118; Doria Bank, 366.)

67. Order of discharge.—It discharges the bankrupt from all claims and demands proveable under the bankruptcy, and if the bankrupt be arrested he may plead that the cause of action accrued before the bankruptcy, and give the Act of 1861 and special matter in evidence: (Sect. 161; Doria & Mac, Bank. 734.)

68. Leaseholds.—The 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 145, enacts that if the assignee of a bankrupt entitled to any lease or agreement for a lease elect to take such lease or agreement for a lease, as the case may be, the bankrupt is not liable to pay any rent accruing after the filing of the petition, or to be sued in respect of any subsequent non-observance or nonperformance of the conditions, covenants, or agreements in any such lease, or agreement for a lease, if within fourteen days after he has notice that the assignee has declined, he delivers up such lease or agreement to the person then entitled to the rent. The court has the power, on the application of the landlord, to compel the assignee to elect: (See Wise's B. L. 159, 2nd edit.)

69. After-acquired property.—Strictly speaking, only from the time of the order of discharge, unless the order provides to the contrary: (See further Doria & Mac, 543, et. seq.)

70. Suspending proceedings.—By the Act of 1861 the majority in value of the creditors present at any meeting may resolve that no further proceedings shall be taken in the bankruptcy, and the meeting is to be adjourned for fourteen days, and notice given to all the creditors by the assignee. If at the adjourned meeting three-fourths in value of the creditors present so resolve, then the proceedings in bankruptcy are to be suspended, and the estate administered as such majority directs: (Act of 1861, sect. 110.) At the first or other meeting of creditors, called for the purpose by ten days' notice in the Gazette, three-fourths in number and value of the creditors present or represented may resolve that the estate be wound up under a deed of arrangement, &c. The registrar reports this to the court within four days, and the court may make orders as to the management of the estate, and annul the bankruptcy, &c.: (Act of 1861, sects. 185, 187.)

VII. CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEEDINGS BEFORE MAGISTRATES.

71. Murder.—Murder is thus defined by Sir Edward Coke: "When a person of sound memory and discretion unlawfully killeth any reasonable creature in being and under the King's peace with malice aforesought, either express or implied: (Steph. Com. vol. 4.)

72. Age of discretion.—Under seven years an infant is doli incapax. Above seven and under fourteen he is so primâ facie only: (See Steph. Com., vol. 4.)

73. Larceny.—The wrongful taking and carrying away of personal chattels, with a felonious intent to convert them to his own use: (See further Steph. Com., vol. 4.)

74. Coroner.—He is a judicial officer, and his duty consists principally in holding an inquisition as to cause of death when any person is slain or dies suddenly, or in prison. His office is also ministerial, acting for the sheriff when he is interested in the suit, or of kindred to either plaintiff or defendant. He is chosen by the freeholders of the county, and formerly held the office for life, but is now, by virtue of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 116, subject to removal for inability or misbehaviour: (See Steph. Com., vols. 2 & 4.)

75. Coroner.—The inquisition must be held super visum corporis. The coroner issues his precept to the constables or peace officers of the parish where the body is, requiring them to summon a jury. After a view, the witnesses are examined, and the jury, under the direction of the coroner, return a verdict which must be signed by the jury and also by the coroner: (Ibid.)

76. Justice of peace.—The power and duty of a justice of the peace depends on his commission, and on several statutes which have created objects of his jurisdiction. His commission first empowers him singly to conserve the peace, and thereby gives him all the power of the ancient conservators at common law in suppressing riots and affrays, in taking sureties for the peace, and in apprehending and committing felons and other inferior criminals. It also empowers any two or more to hear and determine all felonies and other offences, which is the ground of their criminal jurisdiction at quarter sessions: (Steph. Com., vol. 2.)

77. County constabulary.—The course is for the justices in quarter sessions to communicate with the Secretary of State, and with his sanction to appoint a chief constable. The chief constable then appoints local and petty constables.

78. Person intrusted with money.—It is a misdemeanor if with intent to defraud he converts it to his own use. The punishment must not exceed seven years' penal servitude, or less than five; or imprisonment for less than two years, with or without hard labour, or solitary confinement: (4 Steph. Com. 222, 6th edit.)

79. Accessories.—Whosoever shall counsel, procure, or command any other person to commit any felony, whether the same be a felony at common law, or by virtue of any Act passed, or to be passed, shall be guilty of felony, and may be indicted and convicted either as an accessory before the fact to the principal felony, together with the principal felon, or after the conviction of the principal felon, or may be indicted or convicted of a substantive felony, whether the principal felon shall or shall not have been previously convicted, or shall or shall not be amenable to justice; and may thereupon be punished in the same manner as any accessory before the fact to the same felony if convicted as an accessory may be punished: (24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 2.)

80. Robbery.—It is felony.

81. Receiving—Indictment.—This is permitted by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 92, which see.

82. Receiver—Venue.—In the county where he received such property, or had it in his possession: (Ib. s. 96.)

83. Conspiracy to murder.—It is a misdemeanor, punishable by imprisonment for two years, with or without hard labour, or penal servitude for ten years or not less than five: (4 Steph. Com. 326, 6th edit.)

84. Capital punishment.—It is to be within the walls of the prison in presence of sheriff, gaoler, chaplain, surgeon, and such other prison officials as the sheriff requires, and of such magistrates and relatives of prisoner as the sheriff or visiting justices permit: (4 Steph. Com. 166, 6th edit.)

85. Crossed cheque.—Persons obliterating the crossing with intent to defraud, are guilty of felony.

EXAMINATIONS AT THE INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY.

Easter Term 1869.

FINAL EXAMINATION.

At the examination of candidates for admission on the roll of attorneys and solicitors of the Superior Courts, the examiners recommended the following gentlemen, under the age of 26, as being entitled to honorary distinction:—

1. Charles James Garbutt, who served his clerkship to Mr. John Alderton Bush, of Newcastle-upon-Tyne; and Mr. John Scott, of 60, King William-street, London.

2. Henry Tebbis, who served his clerkship to Whyley and Piper, of Bedford; and Messrs. Anderson and Stanford, of London.

3. Arthur Williams, who served his clerkship to Mr. William Hunt, of Nottingham.

The Council of the Incorporated Law Society have accordingly awarded the following prizes of books:—

To Mr. Garbutt, the prize of the Honourable Society of Clifford's-inn.

To Mr. Tebbis, the prize of the Honourable Society of New-inn.

To Mr. Williams, a prize of the Incorporated Law Society.

The Examiners also certified that the following candidates, under the age of 26, whose names are placed in alphabetical order, passed examinations which entitle them to commendation:

Walter Scott Blake, who served his clerkship to Mr. Frederick Blake, of Newport, Isle of Wight; and Messrs. Cunliffe and Beaumont, of London.

Henry Wright Bosworth, who served his clerkship to Mr. William John Woolley, of Loughborough; and Messrs. Williamson, Hill, and Co., of London.

Herbert John Griffin, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Whitcombe and Son, of Gloucester; and Messrs. Meredith, Meredith, and Roberts, of London.

Morris Paterson Jones, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Jones and Paterson, of Liverpool; and Mr. Worthington Evans, of London.

Frederick Fitz Payne, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Clarke and Payne, of Tiverton.

The Council have accordingly awarded them certificates of merit.

The number of candidates examined in this term was 81; of these 64 passed, and 17 were postponed.

By order of the Council,

E. W. WILLIAMSON, Secretary.

Law Society's Hall, Chancery-lane, London.

GENERAL EXAMINATION.

TRINITY TERM 1869.

General examination of students of the Inns of Court, held at Lincoln's-inn-hall, on the 19th, 20th, and 21st May 1869.

The Council of Legal Education have awarded to Richard Halliday, Esq., student of the Middle Temple, a studentship of fifty guineas per annum, to continue for a period of three years.

John Henderson, Esq., student of Lincoln's-inn, an exhibition of twenty-five guineas per annum, to continue for a period of three years.

George Lewis, Esq., student of the Middle Temple, certificate of honour of the first class.

Arnold De Beer Baruchson, Esq., student of the Middle Temple, Lucius O'Brien Blake, Esq., student of the Middle Temple, Albert Sidney Chevasse, Esq., student of Lincoln's-inn, William Coward, Esq., student of the Inner Temple, Maxwell Cormac Cullinan, Esq., student of Lincoln's-inn, George Francis Travers Drapes, Esq., student of the Middle Temple, Frederick John Fergusson, Esq., student of the Middle Temple, Charles Dickinson, Field, Esq., student of the Inner Temple, William Garvie, Esq., student of Lincoln's-inn, Lewis Edmund Glyn, Esq., student of the Middle Temple, Gualter Craddock Griffith, Esq., student of the Inner Temple, James Hamilton, Esq., student of Lincoln's-inn, Edward Lee Cateret Price Hardy, Esq., student of Lincoln's-inn, Alfred Harmsworth, Esq., student of the Middle Temple, Alfred Harrison, student of the Inner Temple, George Nicholas Marcy, Esq., student of Lincoln's-inn, John Edward Arthur Murray Scott, Esq., student of Lincoln's-inn, and Edward Thelwall, Esq., student of the Middle Temple—certificates that they have satisfactorily passed a general examination.

(Signed) By order of the Council,

EDWARD RYAN, Secretary, pro tem.

Council Chamber, Lincoln's-inn, 28th May, 1869.

EXAMINATION FOR HONOURS.

CAMBRIDGE, May 24.

The viva voce examination for candidates for honours in law will be held on Tuesday, the 26th Oct., and the following days, at 10 a.m., in the Law Schools. Each candidate will have to prepare a short written explanation in English of the particular maxim or principle he may select for a viva voce discussion. For those discussions candidates are recommended to select each his subject from the following maxims and principles:—

I. Equity.—1. Equity follows the law. 2. Where there is equal equity the law must prevail. 3. Equity looks upon that as done which ought to be done: (See Story's Equity Jurisprudence, ss. 56–64.)

II. Conflict of Laws.—1. The law of a place where a contract is made ought to prevail. 2. Foreign laws must be proved as facts to the court. 3. Crimes are local, and by common law exclusively punishable where committed: (See Story's Conflict of Laws, 2nd edit. sects. 241, and 620–638.)

III. General principles.—1. In jure non remota, sed proxima causa spectatur. 2. Actus non facit reum nisi mens sit rea. 3. Volenti non fit injuria: (See Broom's Legal Maxims.)

IV. Contracts.—1. Ex nudo pacto non oritur actio. 2. Ex dolo malo non oritur actio. 3. Caveat emptor. 4. Respondeat superior: (See Broom's Legal Maxims.)

V. Evidence.—1. Derivative or second-hand proofs are not receivable as evidence. 2. The opinions of witnesses are not receivable as evidence. 3. Res inter alios acta alteri nocere non debet: (See Best on Evidence; and Broom's Legal Maxims.)

In addition to viva voce discussion of one of the selected maxims or principles, each candidate will be examined viva voce in a common special subject, which on the present occasion will be Savigny on Possession, translated by Sir Erskine Perry, Books I. IV., and V.

N.B. It is requested that notice be given by candidates to the Regius Professor of Laws, at 34, Sidney-street, of their intention to appear at the examination, and of the question for discussion selected by each of them on or before Friday, the 15th Oct. The order in which they will be examined will be published on the door of the Law Schools a few days before the examination.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

(NOTE.—This department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editor is not responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it.)

INFANT HEIRS OF INTESTATE MORTGAGEES AND TRUSTEES OF FREEHOLDS.—Cases have occurred in my practice, where the legal estate in a mortgaged property has devolved upon a minor, and an application to the Court of Chancery for an order to convey a vesting order has become necessary. Is it not desirable to avoid this expense? Another inconvenient case is this; the heir at law of a deceased mortgagee or trustee who dies intestate is a married woman, and when she conveys the legal estate, an Act of Parliament compels the commissioners to inquire of her (and to depose upon oath) whether she intends to give up her interest in the property without having "a provision made for her in lieu of, or in return for, or in consequence of, her so giving up her interest," the fact being that she has no interest at all, or at least no beneficial interest to give up. Is it not surprising that this provision (which must be obeyed to the very letter) should not have been repealed or modified long before this? I venture to suggest a remedy, in the shape of a short Act of Parliament, for the inconvenience first, and for correcting the gross absurdity secondly referred to, and the draft of such an Act I submit at foot for the consideration of your professional readers.

"Whereas" experience has shown that where mortgagees or trustees have died intestate, seized of freehold or copyhold lands or hereditaments, leaving an infant heir-at-law, or with respect to copyholds, an infant customary heir or heirs, inconvenience has arisen and considerable expense has been incurred, in obtaining orders from the Court of Chancery to vest the legal estate in the mortgaged or trust premises in the mortgagor, assignee, new trustee, or otherwise, and in those cases where such heir-at-law has been a feme covert of full age, it has been necessary to make the transfer or conveyance by her of the mortgaged or trust estates, legal and effectual, that she should acknowledge the deed according to the provisions of the Act of Parliament for abolishing fines and recoveries, although the examination by the two commissioners of such feme covert required by the statute, is not strictly applicable to cases where the party has no beneficial interest in the premises:

"And whereas it is expedient to amend the law in these respects:

"Be it therefore enacted, &c., as follows:

"1. In all cases where a mortgagee or trustee shall after the passing of this Act die intestate, as to freehold lands or hereditaments in England or Wales, leaving an infant or feme covert his heir-at-law, the legal estate in such freehold lands and hereditaments shall immediately upon the death of such mortgagee or trustee, devolve upon and vest in his executor or executors who shall be competent, and is and are hereby authorised and empowered to transfer and convey or otherwise deal with the legal estate of, and in such freehold lands and hereditaments as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes, as if the same had been expressly devised to him or them by the will or codicil of the mortgagee or trustee aforesaid.

"2. Where such mortgagee or trustee shall, after the passing of this Act as aforesaid, die intestate as to copyhold lands or hereditaments in England or Wales, leaving an infant or infants or feme covert or femes coverts, his customary heir or heirs, such lands and hereditaments shall, immediately upon the death of such mortgagee or trustee, devolve upon and vest in his executor or executors, who shall be competent and is and are hereby authorised to surrender or otherwise deal with such copyhold lands and hereditaments as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if the same had been expressly devised to him, her, or them, in or by the will or codicil of the mortgagee or trustee aforesaid.

"3. Where such executor shall, at the time of such vesting as aforesaid, be or afterwards become a feme covert, such executor is hereby authorised and empowered to transfer and convey or otherwise deal with the legal estate of and in any freehold lands and hereditaments which shall devolve upon her under or by virtue of the provisions in this Act contained as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if she were a feme sole, and without making the acknowledgment required by the statute to be made by married women to render a conveyance by them effectual."

A. WADDINGTON.

Usk, 24th May, 1869.

[P.S. When I addressed the above letter to you I was not aware of the Bill brought in for the protection of the rights of married women, of which you gave an abstract in the LAW TIMES of last Saturday. It appears to effect one of my objects, namely, the enabling a married woman to convey as if she were a feme sole, and is, so far, very important.—May 31.]

SOLICITOR MAGISTRATES.—I have received an extract from the LAW TIMES of May 22, signed W. M., which requires a reply. With reference to the names mentioned in the extract, I find my own name as a magistrate for Hereford. I have been twice elected mayor of the city, and as such held the office of magistrate for the year of office and one year following, and I also hold the commission of the peace, and have done so for many years. In the extract I see the name of James Bedford, for Leominster. I happen to know Mr. Bedford, but he was not a solicitor—the solicitor at Leominster is John, not James. It is very usual to elect solicitors as mayors of boroughs.

JAMES JAY.

A CORRECTION.—In the letter of "W. M.," in the LAW TIMES, my name appears as a magistrate at Wakefield. This is an error. I am not, nor ever was, a magistrate. Perhaps the Directory, from which "W. M." states he has selected my name, may have fallen into an error from finding my name amongst the aldermen of the borough.

27th May 1869.

JOS. WAINWRIGHT.

NEW LAW COURTS.—Apropos of your article on this subject in your last number, I send you a copy of a plan prepared by the Incorporated Law Society, of which other copies may no doubt be readily obtained from the secretary. If any class of practitioners may be assumed to be good judges in the matter of practical convenience of site, it will be the London agents. I know of one firm which, having to look for fresh premises, decided to submit to a much higher rent in preference to placing either Holborn or the Strand between their offices and the law courts. Great stress has been laid on facility of access for "the public." One would suppose the question was of the Zoological Gardens instead of the law courts. The only "public" whose convenience has to be consulted are the suitors, witnesses, and jurors. The mere sightseers are a nuisance, as everyone, whose fate compels him to attend Nisi Prius sittings too well knows.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.—May I ask if you or any of your correspondents can kindly inform me whether in the Civil Service there are any minor legal officials (e.g., as assistants to the solicitors to the Treasury or the Customs), in whom professional knowledge is required. And, if so, what may be their salaries and prospects of promotion; and what examination or limit of age is appointed? An answer to the above queries would greatly oblige.

OXONIAN.

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.

Queries.

26. MORTGAGEES IN POSSESSION.—Are mortgagees in possession justified in selling the mortgaged property under a power of sale, without fixing any reserved price? Would they be in any way liable to the mortgagor or his representatives for inadequacy of price; and if they were not in possession would it make any difference? I should be glad of any authorities.

B. D.

27. LIABILITY OF ESTATE FOR DEBTS.—A.B. has vested in her, in fee, certain freehold property. She dies, leaving her eldest son (C.D.) heir (E.F.) her surviving. C.D. having died during his mother's (A.B.) life, much involved, and the estate (in the absence of a will) going to the grandson (E.F.) seven years after his father's (C.D.) death, is the said estate liable to C.D.'s debts.

A SUBSCRIBER'S CLERK.

28. VERBAL AGREEMENT—MARRIAGE—SETTLEMENT.—A verbally agrees with B. that if B. will marry A., the latter will settle 500*l.* a year on B. They marry, and no settlement has been made. Can B. enforce the agreement?

W.

Answers.

(Q. 3.) EQUITY OF REDEMPTION—MORTGAGE.—If M. E. S. can, without much trouble, refer me to a case, in support of his reply to this query (which appeared in the LAW TIMES of the 15th May last, and which appears to me to be correct), he would oblige, as I have a similar case before me now.

A. L.

(Q. 30.) COUNTY COURTS ACT 1867, s. 2.—If A. can make the necessary affidavit on which to ground the issue of a summons, under sect. 2 of the County Courts Act 1867, viz., that D. is indebted to him for goods sold and delivered to D. and his partners, B. and C., and that such goods were sold and delivered to the said D., B. and C., to be dealt with in the way of their trade, he can issue a summons under that section. If a summons is wrongfully issued under the above section, the defendant cannot treat it as a nullity; neither can he object to the jurisdiction of the court, on the ground that the summons was wrongfully issued. But he can appear in court on the return day of the summons and defend the action without giving the six days' notice of intention to defend required by the section.

H. M.

(Q. 21.) STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—By 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3, all actions of debt on simple contract are limited to six years after the cause of action accrued; the cause of action in this case did not accrue until the delivery of the goods, therefore the value of the goods supplied within six years before the action is brought is recoverable.

B. D.

(Q. 25.) ARTICLED CLERK.—Yes. The section referred to allows assignment of articles of clerkship for one year only to the London agent of the attorney to whom the articulated clerk is bound.

B. D.

LAW SOCIETIES.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

At the meeting of this society, held on Tuesday evening in last week, at the Law Institution, Chancery-lane, Mr. Widdows in the chair, the question for discussion was, "Does the present Government deserve the confidence of the country?" which was opened by Mr. Turner. The society, after a three hours' meeting, decided the question in the negative, by a small majority.

SOLICITORS' BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION.

At the usual monthly meeting of the board, held on Wednesday last, the 2nd inst., at the Law Institution, Chancery-lane, London, the following directors were present:—Mr. Thomas Harrison in the chair, Messrs. J. Clayton (Newcastle-upon-Tyne), E. Hedger, J. Kendall, Park Nelson, P. Rickman, Sidney Smith, J. T. Torr, and H. T. Young, Mr. Eiffe, secretary. Five new members were elected, and a sum of 15*l.* granted in relief.

PROMOTIONS & APPOINTMENTS

F. Bailey, Esq., of the Western Circuit, barrister-at-law, has been appointed by the Attorney-General Counsel to the Mint, at the Bristol sessions.

LAW LIBRARY.

A Manual of the Law relating to the office of Trustee, with an Appendix of Statutes, Forms, &c. By R. DENNY URLIN, Barrister-at-Law. Third edition. London: Sweet.

The very useful treatise, of which this is the third edition, made its first appearance in the columns of the LAW TIMES, where it was so much approved that the Profession requested its reproduction in the more accessible form of a book. With successive editions it has grown in bulk, as the law relating to trustees has been improved by successive reformers, and decisions have defined the duties and liabilities of an office which even thus improved still continues to be one of great peril, of vast responsibility, and of most thankless labour. In the discharge of it a better guide could not be found than this little volume by Mr. Umlin, which is written not for lawyers only, but in language that trustees may understand, and if his instructions be carefully observed the dangers that beset them will be largely diminished. We hope that a further and greater reform in the law of trusts and trustees will soon be made to require from Mr. Umlin yet another edition.

Doctors' Commons, its Courts and Registries, with a Treatise on Probate Court Business. By G. J. FOSTER, of the Courts of Probate and Divorce. London: Reeves and Co.

A THOROUGHLY practical book on the business of the Probate Court, by an officer who is thoroughly acquainted with it, and who has access to a multitude of useful precedents, which are collected, conveniently arranged, and occupy more than half of the volume. It is a concise statement of every step to be taken by the practitioner, from the will being brought to him to be proved, or instructions given for administration, to the final completion of the work, whether litigated or not, and the form to be used accompanies the instructions what to do, and how to do it.

THE GAZETTES.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, May 14.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

RUSSELL, JOHN, of no business, Fl-running-st, Kingland-rd. Pet. May 11. Reg. Rooba. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Harrison, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 2.

Gazette, May 25.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.

BARTON, THOMAS ARTHUR, baker, Reading. Pet. May 25. Reg. Rooba. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Wilkinson and Howlett, Bedford-st, Covent-gdn. Sur. June 9.
BARWICK, WILLIAM HENRY, tailor, Adam-st east, Manchester. Pet. May 21. Reg. Rooba. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Hutchinson, Vauxhall-bridge-rd, Lambeth. Sur. June 9.
BLACKLEY, JAMES, retail clothier, Uxbridge. Pet. May 20. Reg. Brumham. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Barton and Drew, Fore-st. Sur. June 7.
CAMPELL, CHARLES BOWERBANK, late officer in the 3rd West Indian Regiment, Gosport. Pet. May 20. Reg. Rooba. O. A. Parkyn. Sur. June 16.
CLAYTON, RICHARD, carrier, Lower Thames-st. Pet. May 21. O. A. Stansfeld. Sur. June 16.
COLLIER, CHARLES, commission agent, St. Alban's. Pet. May 21. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Cooke, Graham-bldgs, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 9.
DEANE, GEORGE, greengrocer, Alma-rd. Blue Anchor-rd, Bermondsey. Pet. May 21. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sol. Barton and Drew, Fore-st. Sur. June 10.
DOVER, HENRY JOHN, late builder, Upper Norwood. Pet. May 19. Reg. Rooba. O. A. Parkyn. Sur. June 16.
EDWARDS, WILLIAM RICHARD, registrar of births, Trinity-sq, Newington. Pet. May 21. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Gessauet, New Broad-st. Sur. June 7.
FIDGE, JAMES YEMAN, pork butcher, Croydon. Pet. May 21. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Jenkins, Tavistock-st, Covent-gdn. Sur. June 9.
FLORY, EDWARD THOMAS, bookseller, Gillingham. Pet. May 19. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sur. June 11.
FORD, CHARLES JOSEPH, plumber, Wellington-st, and Clarence-pl, Deptford. Pet. May 21. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Barton and Drew, Fore-st. Sur. June 7.
GAIL, JOHN TEMPLETON, merchant, Ravensden-st, Queen's-row, Kennington. Pet. May 24. Reg. Brumham. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Harrison, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 16.
GILL, WILLIAM, shoemaker, Princess-rd, Notting-hill. Pet. May 20. O. A. Stansfeld. Sur. June 9.
GRANT, JAMES, formerly livery stable keeper, Drummond-st, Euston-sq. Pet. May 20. O. A. Stansfeld. Sur. June 9.
HATCHER, GEORGE, dealer in hay, Faversham. Pet. May 19. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sur. June 11.
HAYNE, WILLIAM, shoemaker, Deptford. Pet. May 19. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sur. June 11.
HOLDS, WILLIAM JOHN, grocer, Gillingham. Pet. May 19. O. A. Stansfeld. Sur. June 9.
HUBBARD, JAMES WALLIS, journeyman pianoforte maker, Patricio-sq, Cambridge-hill. Pet. May 24. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sol. Kimberley, Scott's-yd, Bush-l. Sur. June 11.
HURST, CHARLES, builder, Gloucester-rd, Seven Sisters-rd. Pet. May 25. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sol. Gostley, Bow-st, Covent-gdn. Sur. June 11.
JOHNSON, HENRY CHARLES ROSS, barrister-at-law, Paddington, and King's Bench-walk, Temple. Pet. May 25. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Lewis and Lewis, My-pl. Sur. June 16.
JOHNSON, JOHN, builder, Lambourn-rd, Clapham. Pet. May 21. Reg. Rooba. O. A. Parkyn. Sur. June 9.
KEMP, JAMES, victualler, Little Turgate-sq, Commercial-rd east, and brookmaker, High-st, Shadwell. Pet. May 24. Reg. Rooba. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Kitchley, Ironmonger-l. Sur. June 9.
LARK, GEORGE, nurseryman, Hornham. Pet. May 21. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Smith, Paddow, and Co., Broad-st, and Lamb, Brighton. Sur. June 9.
MILLAR, HUGH, engine fitter, Woolwich. Pet. May 24. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Hurry, Basinghall-t. Sur. June 9.
MYERS, LEWIS HENRY, general dealer, Church-l, Whitechapel. Pet. May 21. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Barnett, New Broad-st. Sur. June 16.
PILCH, WILLIAM, victualler, Canterbury. Pet. May 19. O. A. Stansfeld. Sur. June 9.

PIPER, GEORGE THOMAS, stonemason, Upper Montague-st, Tredegar-sq, Bow-rd. Pet. May 14. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sol. Austin, Coleman-st. Sur. June 9.
POOLE, THOMAS SAMUEL, saw millman, Sney-cumsey and Billingsgate-markets. Pet. May 24. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sol. Hicks, Francis-ter. Sur. June 11.
POPHAM, FRANCIS JAMES CHARLES, attorney, Theobald's-st, and 21, Duncannon-st, Sur. June 9.
O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Webster, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 9.
PORTER, JOHN, carver, Lisson-grove, Paddington. Pet. May 21. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sol. Tiley, Finsbury-pavement. Sur. June 11.
PREVOST, ROBERT KRENNER, victualler, High-st, Stepney. Pet. May 24. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sol. Bryant, Winchester-house, Old Broad-st. Sur. June 11.
RAMSEY, HERBERT, journeyman mill carpenter, Northfield. Pet. May 21. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sol. Edwards, Bush-l, Cannon-st. Sur. June 9.
RUMP, WILLIAM ELDON, greengrocer, Woodchester-st, Harrow-rd, Paddington. Pet. May 22. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Fox and Robinson, Graham-house, Old Broad-st. Sur. June 9.
SAVORY, JAMES, coal merchant, Over-st, Union-st, Borough. Pet. May 19. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sur. June 11.
SOUTHEY, ROBERT WILLIAM, lighterman, Green-lane, Stoke Newington. Pet. May 24. Reg. Rooba. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Davis, Rolt's-chamber-l, Chancery-l. Sur. June 9.
STEVENS, JOHN ROBERT, bookbinder, Old Kent-rd. Pet. May 19. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sur. June 11.
TAYLOR, ALFRED CHARLES, commercial traveler, Grange-rd, east, Devon. Pet. May 21. Reg. Rooba. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Morris, Green-rd, hall-ct, Putney. Sur. June 9.
THURMAN, JAMES, waiter, 10, White-church-st, Putney. Pet. May 13. Reg. Peppys. O. A. Graham. Sur. June 11.
TWISS, JOHN, carriage dealer, Abbey-st, Bermondsey. Pet. May 24. Reg. Rooba. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Cooke, Graham-bldgs, Goldsmith-rd, Sur. June 16.
WELLS, HENRIETTA DAVIES, timber merchant, Lower-rd, Deptford. Pet. May 21. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Goldring, Lincoln's-inn-flds. Sur. June 16.
WESTGATE, JAMES, and NEWMAN, HENRY, coal merchants, 8, St. John's-lane, May 11. O. A. Stansfeld. Sol. Smith, Paddow, and Co., Broad-st, Lamb, Brighton. Sur. June 16.
WHELAN, HENRY OWEN, agent to a life assurance society, Great Farm wh. Pet. May 19. O. A. Stansfeld. Sur. June 16.
WILSON, ANDREW, formerly a survivor, Chapel-rd, Berley-bath. Pet. May 21. Reg. Rooba. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Neal, Finsbury-hall, Old Broad-st. Sur. June 16.

To surrender in the Country.

ALLEY, ALFRED, carpenter, Rochester. Pet. May 19. Reg. O. A. Acworth. Sur. June 11.
BARR, JAMES, tailor, Swansea. Pet. May 4. Reg. O. A. Morris. Sol. Morris, Swansea. Sur. June 9.
BAGNALL, CHARLES, painter, Burton-upon-Trent. Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Hubbersty. Sol. Farke, Burton-upon-Trent. Sur. June 9.
BALSHAW, PARS, smallware dealer, Manchester. Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Hogg, Manchester. Sur. June 9.
BELL, JOHN, watchmaker, Richmond. Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Tople, Leyburn. Sur. June 11.
BELL, RICHARD, saddler, Whitehaven. Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Ware. Sol. Webster, Whitehaven. Sur. June 9.
BRAMWORTH, WILLIAM, ropemaker, Doncaster. Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Shirley. Sol. Woodhead, Doncaster. Sur. June 9.
BUCKNOLL, SAMUEL SMITH, tailor, Brulon. Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Westler. Sol. Balch, Bruton. Sur. June 13.
BURNLEY, ISAAC, out of business, Sunderland. Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Laidman. Sol. Bonfield, Newcastle. Sur. June 11.
BURTON, EDWARD GOODER, butcher, Healey, near Sheffield. Pet. May 15. Reg. O. A. Waks and Rodgers. Sol. Mann. Binsy, Sheffield. Sur. June 9.
CARTER, WILLIAM JOHN, painter, Southampton. Pet. May 15. Reg. O. A. Thorndyke. Sol. Mackay, Southampton. Sur. June 9.
COATES, HENRY, commission agent, Manchester. Pet. May 14. Reg. Parfoll. O. A. McNeill. Sur. June 8.
COLLIER, JOHN, farmer, Lower Stoke, Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Acworth. Sol. Hayward, Rochester. Sur. June 11.
COFF, WILLIAM, builder, Pitton. Pet. May 25. Sol. Benckert, Barnstable. Sur. June 13.
COUSINS, FREDERICK GILBERT, farmer, West Marham. Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Newton. Sol. Besenby, East Bedford. Sur. June 9.
COX, WILLIAM JOHN, hop merchant, Swansea. Pet. May 12. Reg. O. A. Morris. Sol. Clifton, Swansea. Sur. June 9.
DALY, JOHN, provision merchant, Manchester. Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Kay. Sol. Richardson, Manchester. Sur. June 9.
DAVIES, EDWARD, beer-seller, Oswestry. Pet. May 8. Reg. O. A. Croxon. Sol. Bull, Oswestry. Sur. June 13.
DAVIS, JOHN, victualler, Bristol. Pet. May 17. Reg. Wilde. Sol. A. A. Benson, 2, St. James's-st, London. Sur. June 7.
EDGAR, JOHN, draper, Merthyr Tydfil. Pet. May 24. Reg. Wilde. O. A. A. A. Benson. Sol. Benson and Elkett, Bristol. Sur. June 7.
EDWARDS, ALBERT, tint grinder, Stoke-upon-Trent. Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Keary. Sol. Ward, Longton. Sur. June 13.
FEARNSIDE, ALFRED, cabinet maker, Norwich. Pet. May 17. Reg. O. A. Palmer. Sol. Stanley, Norwich. Sur. June 9.
FITZALL, GEORGE, cow-keeper, Napechetter. Pet. May 25. Reg. O. A. Minter. Sol. Richards, Napechetter. Sur. June 9.
FRANKS, JOHN, butcher, Norwich. Pet. May 17. Reg. O. A. Palmer. Sur. June 9.
FURBER, JOHN, bootmaker, Stricklandgate. Pet. May 21. Reg. O. A. Wilson. Sol. Thompson, Kendal. Sur. June 7.
GILL, GEORGE, cabinet maker, Brixton. Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Walker. Sol. Stokes, Dudley. Sur. June 9.
GILLIBRAND, THOMAS, out of business, Bolton. Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Holden. Sol. Hall and Batten, Bolton. Sur. June 9.
GLENDHILL, SAMUEL, time-keeper, Idle, near Leeds. Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Robinson. Sol. Nettleton, Wakefield. Sur. June 11.
GRIVENOR, WILLIAM, gardener, Great Crosby, near Liverpool. Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Hine. Sol. Ritz, Liverpool. Sur. June 9.
GRIGG, JOHN, millwright, Manor-ber. Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Lanning. Sol. Bulm, Farnborough. Sur. June 11.
HACK, J. W. N. jun., saddler, High Wycombe. Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Parkyn. Sol. Clarke, High Wycombe. Sur. June 9.
HALL, HUGH, wine merchant, Watnitch. Pet. May 17. O. A. Turner. Sur. June 10.
HARRIS, JOHN, cordwainer, Woburn. Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Brown. Sol. Simcoe, Woburn. Sur. June 14.
HARRISON, MILES, mason, Highgate, Kendal. Pet. May 25. Reg. O. A. Wilson. Sol. Thompson, Kendal. Sur. June 9.
HIGGS, JAMES, dairyman, Brighton. Pet. Mar. 24. Reg. O. A. Everard. Sol. Lamb, Brighton. Sur. June 13.
HILL, GEORGE, cabinet maker, Halifax. Pet. May 27. O. A. Young. Sol. Storey, Halifax, and Simpson, Leeds. Sur. June 14.
HORNBY, HENRY, whitesmith, Louth. Pet. May 22. Reg. O. A. Walte. Sol. Hyde, jun., Louth. Sur. June 8.
HUTCHINGS, LIDBAY, grocer, Liverpool. Pet. May 13. O. A. Turner. Sur. June 10.
INGHAM, GEORGE, shuttle maker, Burnley. Pet. May 20. Reg. O. A. Hartley. Sol. Backhouse and Whittam, Burnley. Sur. June 7.
INVER, WILLIAM, manufacturer, Belthorn, and Great Harwood. Pet. May 24. Reg. Macrae. O. A. McNeill. Sol. Grundy and Coulson, Manchester. Sur. June 10.
JACOBS, SUSAN, jun., spinster, milliner, Plymouth. Pet. May 25. Reg. O. A. Pearce. Sol. Messrs. Edmonds, Plymouth. Sur. June 9.
JACKSON, WILLIAM, corn factor, Leeds. Pet. May 25. O. A. Young. Sol. Tempest, Leeds. Sur. June 14.
JOHNSON, PETER, mariner, Swansea. Pet. May 24. Reg. Wilde. O. A. A. A. Benson. Sol. Simons and Morris, Swansea, and Becking-hur. Sur. June 10.
JONES, LEWIS PHILLIP, manager, Tynan, Northyr. Pet. May 24. Reg. Wilde. O. A. A. A. Benson. Sol. Beckingham, Bristol. Sur. June 10.
KEMP, J. H. N., saddler, Newington, near Sittingbourne. Pet. May 24. Reg. O. A. Hills. Sol. Barton, Fore-st, London. Sur. June 9.
KNAPP, WILLIAM, grocer, Swindon. Pet. May 11. Reg. Wilde. O. A. A. A. Benson. Sol. Henderson and Salmon, Bristol. Sur. June 9.
LEWIS, DICKINSON, innkeeper, Winterton. Pet. May 24. O. A. Young. Sol. Summers, Hull. Sur. June 9.
MARKS, JAMES, innkeeper, Exeter. Pet. May 24. O. A. Carrick. Sol. Rogers and Rogers, Exeter. Sur. June 7.

STOTT, JAMES TAYLOR, furniture broker, Rochdale. Pet. May 28.
REG. & O. A. Jackson. Sol. Harris, Rochdale. Pet. June 18
TASKER, WILLIAM, dealer in furniture, Leeds. Pet. May 26.
REG. & O. A. Marshall. Sol. Harlo, Leeds. Pet. June 14
WADKINS, ROBERT, Northwich. Pet. May 17. REG. & O. A.
Turner. Sol. June 14
WALKER, ISAAC, business, Bradford. Pet. May 27. O. A.
Turner. Sol. Stone and Bartley, Liverpool. Sol. June 11
WARBURTON, ROBERT, out of business, Newcastle-upon-Tyne
Pet. May 26. REG. & O. A. Clayton. Sol. Hoyle, Shipley, and Hoyle, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Sol. June 15
WARD, JOHN, coal merchant, Walsol. Pet. May 29. Reg. Fardell.
O. A. McNeill. Sol. Hall and Rutter, Bolton. Sol. June 15
WARNER, JOHN, coal merchant, Winslow. Pet. May 23. REG.
& O. A. Hearn. Sol. Clark, Aylesbury. Sol. June 14
WILLIAMS, DAVID, and WILLIAMS, ALFRED, soda water manufacturers, Aberystwyth. Pet. May 23. REG. & O. A. Morgan. Sol.
Thomas, Neath. Sol. June 14
WILLIAMS, WILLIAM, currier, Camborne. Pet. May 23. REG.
& O. A. Peter. Sol. Holloway, Redruth. Sol. June 15
WILLIAMS, HENRY, mining engineer, Swans-a. Pet. May 13
REG. & O. A. Ryan. Sol. B. L. Jones, B. L. Jones, Sol. June 11
WRIGHT, MARTHA, shopkeeper, East Retford. Pet. May 26.
REG. & O. A. Newton. Sol. Exam, East Retford. Sol. June 15

Robinson, provision merchant, Gateshead; and J. Brough, miller
Sunderland.

BALDWIN, ALEXANDER IRON, esq., Sandringham-gardens, Ealing.
April 29. 5s., 2s., 6d. In 12 mos. and 2s. 6d. in 18 mos

BALL, WILLIAM HENRY BOLTON, clerk to an insurance company,
Stepney-green, Stepney. April 16. 10s. 11d., by instalments, 25 and 25 shillings each yearly instalment, and remainder
Trust. T. Lloyd, painter, Three King-st, Lombard-st.

BLAIRIES, WILLIAM, worsted spinner, Bradford. April 7. Trusts. J.
Milner, J. Berwick, and J. Hall, woollstaplers, all of Bradford

BROOKS, WILLIAM, gentleman, Cookham, and Maidenhead. May 11. By instalment, £100, and 10s. 6d. secured, and remainder
6 mos after the death of his wife. Trusts. T. Brooks, Esq., East Moulsey; H. P. Burrows, brewer, S. Plumbe, doctor of medicine, and G. Bennett, linen draper, all of Maidenhead

BROWN, WILLIAM, ironmonger, Walsall. March 21. Trusts. J.
R. Wilkinson, Esq., Sunderland

CARTER, ALFRED, carver, Westgate. April 23. 3s. 6d. by two instalments of 2s. 6d. and 1s. at 3 and 6 mos, and 1s. 6d. at 6 mos

CLERC, LEON CHARLES FRANCOIS, distiller of oils, Commercial-st, London. April 23. 10s. 6d. by three equal instalments, and remainder at four equal instalments, on Sept. 1, and Jan. 1.

CORDEROY, JOHN, EASTLY, JOHN, and CORDEROY, JOHN KITTE, merchants, Tooley-st, Southwark. May 25. Inspectors—W.
Hardner, provision broker, and H. Honey, accountant, both of London.

DAWNER, WILLIAM, and MONGER, CHARLES, grocers, Brighton.
April 27. Trusts. J. Dummett, wholesale tea dealer, Eastcheap, and M. Willis, wholesale grocer, Brighton

DYSON, SAMUEL WILLIAMS, tea dealer, Liverpool. April 30. 6d.
in 1 mo

FRASER, JAMES, grocer, Heywood. May 13. 5s. 6d. by two instalments of 3s. and 2s. 6d. in 14 days and 3 mos.—secured

GREAT, FRANK, ESQ., and GREAT, CHARLES, jun., tailors, Great Portland-st, and Nelson. May 25. 6s. by three equal instalments in 14 days, on July 31, and Sept. 30

GODDEN, JOHN, ironmonger, South Norwood. May 1. 5s. by three instalments of 1s., 2s., and 2s. in 14 days and 3 and 6 mos

HARRISON, JOHN, and GOSBOLD, THOMAS TAPLIN, clothier, perfunctor, Newgate-st. May 13. 2s. in 7 days

HAWLEY, JOHN JAMES, rope manufacturer, Walsall. May 4. 10s.
by three instalments of 5s., 2s. 6d., and 2s. 6d., at 3, 6, and 12 mos, —secured. Trusts. H. Winstanley, hemp dealer, Mark-la, and S.
M. Winstanley, maker, Ware, Hertfordshire

HEMMENT, LAYTON JOHN, tailor, Crooked-l, King William-st,
May 21. In full in 6 mos

HILL, JOHN BINSINGTON, and HILL, WILLIAM, stuff manufacturers, Lyceum, Birmingham. April 29. Trusts. D. Sowden, machine maker, and A. Aspin, woollstapler, both Bradford

HORTON, HENRY, grocer, Croydon. May 14. 5s. by three equal instalments, in 2, 4, and 6 mos,—secured

HUNTER, SAMUEL, late draper, Ashford. April 23. 11s.—5s. on 10 days, and 6s. and 8 mos from April 8,—secured. Trusts.
A. Going, widow, Dover

HUNTLEY, JOHN JOLLEY, watchmaker, Barnsley. April 30. 6s.
by four equal instalments, in 3, 6, 9, and 12 mos,—secured

JAMAN, DANIEL, dalmayman, John-st, Pembroke-dock. May 19.
In full in 6 mos

JOHN, THOMAS, shipwright, Cross-pk, South Norwood. May 20.
2s. 6d. on July 20. Trust. R. H. Mathias, Queen-st-east, Pem-brock-dock

KING, GEORGE, dealer in fancy goods, Aylesbury-st, Clerkenwell.
May 20. 4s. by two equal instalments, in 10 days and 3 mos,— secured

LINCOLN, ROBERT, provision dealer, Newcastle. May 23. 4s. by three equal instalments, in 3, 6, and 9 mos,—secured. Trust. T.
Kirk, ironmonger, Newcastle

MURCH, WILLIAM, veterinary surgeon, Mableton-pl, Burtonrescend. May 24. In full by three equal instalments, in 2, 8, and 14 mos

NORTH, EDWARD, builder, Croydon. May 6. 10s. in 2 weeks

Trusts. H. Hammond and C. Parrott, ironmongers, Croydon

ORTON, ROBERT, painter, Portsmouth. May 24. 5s. in 14 days and 2 mos,—secured. Trust. F. H. Nance, accountant, Portsea-

PARKER, WILLIAM BROWN, oilman, Queen's-rd, Notting-hill.

PERKIN, JOHN ANILEY, and PERKIN, CHARLES ALFRED, engineers, Phoenix-works, Stepney. April 21. 2s. by four equal instalments, in 4, 8, 12, and 16 mos

PHILIPPS, GEORGE, farmer, and researcher, in Colchester. April 23.
Trust. G. Phillips, farmer, Lexden, in Colchester

PRITCHARD, JOHN, farmer, Goring. April 17. 9s. by three equal instalments, on June 1, Oct. 1, Dec. 1. Trust. T. Pritchard, farmer, Woodhill-park, Wootton Bassett

REDFERN, THOMAS, brewer, and REDFERN, and TWINC, JOHN, brewers, Windsor. April 23. Trusts. T. Wheeler, brewer, High Wycombe, and H. P. Dowson, maltster, Reading

ROBERTS, PETER, builder, Northampton. May 5. Trusts. W.
Hamber merchant, Northampton, and T. J. Atkins, farmer,
Buttock, South

RUSSELL, CHRISTOPHER, grocer, Liverpool. May 20. 2s. 6d. by two equal instalments, at 1 and 2 mcs

SHAW, ALBERT, shoemaker, Halifax. April 29. Trusts. T. D.
Wilson, linen draper, and R. W. Parkin, ironmonger, both Halifax

SMITH, GEORGE HENRY, grocer, Birmingham. May 5. Trust. W.
Bate, wine merchant, Birmingham

SOUTH, JAMES, pianoforte-maker, Bryan-st, Caledonian-rd. May 19. 10s. by three equal instalments, on Oct. 19, 1893; 2s. on Feb. 19, and 10d. on May 19, 1870

STRANGE, FREDERICK, manager to a public company, York-rd, Regent's-pk. April 3. Trust. R. E. Tyler, architect, Little Queen

TEBBETT, WILLIAM, plumber, Church Gresley. April 28. 5s. in 24 days.
WALLERS, THOMAS LEDWARD, draper, Burslem. April 30. Trusts. A. Collinson, and F. Taylor, merchants, Manchester.
WATKINSON, JOHN, perambulator maker, Hull. April 30. 5s. by four instalments of 2s., 2s., 1s., and 1s., in 1, 3, 5, and 14 mos.—secured.
WESTON, JOHN HENRY, chandeller, manufacturer, Kennington-rd Lambeth. May 2. In full on May 25, 1871.
WHITAKER, JOHN SPIRIT, staff dealer, Halifax. April 24. 10s. by three equal instalments on June 24, Sept. 24, Dec. 24.—secured.
WHITWORTH, GEORGE WILLIAM, and GRAHAM, THOMAS, hop merchants, High st, Southwark. April 9. 5s. 6d. in 1 mo. Assigns. C. O. Noakes, hop factor, and J. Green, hop factor, both Southwark-st, Southwark.
WOOD, DAVID, grocer, Walsall. April 27. Trust. T. Caloe, miller, Walsall.
WOOLACOTT, FREDERICK CHAFFELL, printer, Stanton-tar, King's-cross. April 8. In full.

Gazette, June 1.

BATES, ROBERT, builder, South Shields. April 28. Trusts. J. L. Hall, J. A. Somerset, W. Wylie, W. Anderson, and J. Bruce, all of South Shields.
BATTY, KILNER, yarn spinner, Dalton. May 3. Trusts. W. Lawton, bank manager; W. H. Dyson, cotton waste dealer; and J. Sutcliffe, woollen waste dealer, all Huddersfield.
BEAUMONT, SAMUEL, manufacturer, Holthead, near Slathwaite. May 2. Trusts. J. Marsden, master manufacturer, Marsden, and E. North, wool dealer, Dewsbury.
BURBURY, JOSEPH, butcher, Birmingham. May 21. 5s. by two equal instalments, in 31 days and 12 mos from registration.—last secured.
BURKE, EDWARD, dealer in china, Upper-st, Islington. April 30. In full, by sixteen monthly instalments of 1s. 3d., first on June 1.
BUSWELL, ROBERT, seed merchant, Fowkes-bldg, Great Tower-st. May 6. Trusts. Buswell, widow, Duffield; E. Barton, Fowkes-bldg, Great Tower-st; F. Pary, merchant, Mack-la; and E. Waterhouse, accountant, Gresham-st.
CHAMBERS, ROBERT, grocer, Oswaldtwistle. May 5. Trust. P. Turner, accountant, Blackburn. Bradford. April 27. 12s. by three equal instalments, in 4, 8, and 18 mos from April 19.—last guaranteed. Trusts. T. Barber, gentleman, Bradford; T. Crabtree, wool buyer, Ilkley; J. Craven, manufacturer, Keighley; and H. Pawson, cashier, Bradford.
CUTLER, MARK, ironing agent, Clydesdale-villa, Clapton. May 27. 1s. on May 25, 1870.
DICKINSON, JOHN, grocer, Blackburn. May 4. 2s. on June 1. Trust. J. Arkwright, accountant, Blackburn.
DUNFORD, GEORGE, bootmaker, Upavon. May 6. Trust. S. Reynolds, carrier, Derisley.
FORGE, JOHN, druggist, Great Driffield. May 4. Trust. T. G. Marshall, bank agent, Great Driffield.
FRENCH, HENRY THEOPHILUS, and METCALFE, FRANK, ROBERT, warehousemen, Salmonia. April 27. Trusts. A. Murry, Cannon-st, and J. Udall, Bulst, both warehousemen.
GOODMAN, WILLIAM, and GOODMAN, JOHN SYLVESTER, builders, Newport. May 10. 5s.—2s. on June 8, and 2s. on Aug. 8.—secured. Trusts. C. Protheroe, carpenter, and E. Graham, assayer, both Newport.
GREGORY, WILLIAM, machinist, Manchester. April 19. Trust. J. Barton, accountant, Manchester.
HAMER, JOHN, manufacturer, Manchester. May 14. 12s. 4d. by four equal instalments, in 4, 8, 12, and 18 mos.—last secured. Trusts. C. P. Weber, merchant, and J. Knowles, wholesale grocer, both of Manchester.
HAMILTON, CHARLES GEORGE ARCHAIDAL, cornet in Her Majesty's Army, Cox's Hotel, Jermyn-st. April 30. Trust. G. Bubb, librarian, New Bond-st.
HARRISON, JOSEPH, watchmaker, Salford. May 3. 2s. 6d. on Aug. 1.
HITCHON, JOSEPH, cotton waste spinner, Ramebottom. May 18. 2s. by two equal instalments, in 2 and 4 mos.—secured.
HOLT, SAMUEL, schoolmaster, Newton Heath. May 19. 2s. in 14 days.
HOLT, THOMAS, and HOLT, CHARLES, cotton spinners, Summer-sest. May 4. Trusts. T. Isherwood, waste dealer, Heywood; H. Horne, waste dealer, Ramsbottom, and G. Pilkington, cotton spinner, Crawshaw Booth.
HORSCHROFT, HENRY, grocer, Brighton. May 10. Trusts. J. Lynn, provision merchant, Brighton, and H. Moore, provision merchant, Lewes.
HUGHES, RICHARD JAMES, tutor, Newark-upon-Trent. April 17. 3d. in every five years. Trusts. J. H. Standen, tailor, and J. H. Turner, accountant, both Oxford.
HURFORD, JAMES, carpenter, Weston-super-Mare. May 18. Trust. T. J. Matthias, ironmonger, Weston-super-Mare.
JONES, JAMES, tailor, Treowry. May 14. 5s. by three equal instalments, in 3, 6, and 12 mos from registration.—secured. Trusts. E. Rees, grocer, Treowry, and G. C. Sutton, accountant, Pontypridd.
JONES, ELIZABETH, widow, innkeeper, Flint. May 21. 5s. by two equal instalments on Aug. 21, and Nov. 21.—secured. Trusts. J. Selme, brewer, Wrexham, and E. Jones, farmer, Carrogty.
LEVER, GEORGE, watch manufacturer, Dalton-le-Weald. May 24. Trusts. G. W. Pickering, gold chain maker, Perceval-st, Clerkenwell, and J. Saunders, watch manufacturer, Southampton-row, Holborn.
LITTLE, RICHARD, watch manufacturer, Low Moor. May 5. Trusts. W. Wilson, spinner, Low Moor; J. Stott, cotton spinner, Brighouse, and J. Myers, cotton warp agent, Low Moor.
LLOYD, THOMAS, grocer, Tonfale. April 28. Trusts. D. Lougher, jun., miller, and J. Evans, provision merchant, both Pontypridd.
MOTT, WILLIAM HOWARD, builder, Upper Norwood. May 14. Trusts. T. Sheath, timber merchant, Wenlock-rd, and C. Pawley, builder, Sydenham.
MUSKER, JAMES, licensed victualler, Everton, Liverpool. May 27. 5s. in 21 days.
NICKOLL, JOHN JAMES, solicitor, Lower Thames-st. May 20. 5s. by two equal instalments, 2s. 6d. on Dec. 1, and 2s. 6d. on June 1.
PASCHEN, FREDERICK WILLIAM, Manchester; DITTMER, ADALBERT, Mexico; PASCHEN, CONRAD GUSTAV, Schwerin, all merchants. May 17. 2s. 6d. in 14 days, making 7s. Trusts. F. Spencer, and E. Dehus, merchants, Manchester; W. B. Prols-war, manufacturer, Sale, in Switland; F. Diergardt, manufacturer, Viernot; F. H. H. Wessmann, merchant, J. H. Martens, gentleman, both Hamburg; and S. Schumann, commission agent, Glasgow.
PICARD, JOSEPH, merchant, Falcon-st, and Church-rd, Islington. May 28. 2s. 6d. in 6 mos.
RAY, R. CLEMENT WILLIAM ALOYSIUS, accountant, Basinghall-st, and South Norwood. May 24. 1s. in 3 mos.
ROBERTSON, MALCOLM, clothier, Bristol. May 4. Trust. R. J. Crook, linen merchant, and J. W. Langdon, woollen merchant, both of Bristol.
SARGANT, ISABELLA, baker, Manchester. May 24. 4s. by two equal instalments, first in cash, and second in 7 days from registration.
SOMERS, WALTER, from master, Halesowen. May 6. 7s. 6d. on 4 mos from May 20. Trust. S. Dickinson, mineral broker, Wolverhampton.
SWAIN, GEORGE, and HEILBORN, FRANK, jewellers, Birmingham. May 5. 10s. by instalments of 5s., 2s. 6d., and 2s. 6d., in 6, 12, and 18 mos from registration.—secured. Trusts. W. J. Cooper, stone dealer, and M. Lewenstein, jeweller, both Birmingham.
SYKES, SIMON PETER, ship chandler, North Shields. April 28. Trust. J. Berkley, baker, North Shields.
TALBOT, JOHN FLETCHER, butcher, Warwick. May 1. Trusts. A. E. Wenham, accountant, Birmingham, and G. Bullivant, farmer, Wotton.
TRUNDLE, FREDERICK FISHER, corn merchant, Preston. May 28. 5s. on June 1. Trust. T. W. Read, public accountant, Liverpool.
WATSON, THOMAS, draper, Allenheda. May 2. Trusts. G. Manley, corn merchant, Bishop Auckland, and C. Cain, draper, Darlington.
YOUNG, JOHN, joiner, Huddersfield. April 27. Trusts. T. Helm, timber merchant, and G. S. Schofield, whitesmith, both Huddersfield.

MARAVILLA COCOA FOR BREAKFAST—The cocoa (or cacao) of Maravilla is the true Theobroma of Linnaeus.—The Globe says: "Taylor Brothers' Maravilla Cocoa has achieved a thorough success, and supercedes every other cocoa in the market. For homeopaths and invalids we could not recommend a more agreeable or valuable beverage." Sold, in packets only, by all grocers.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

BIRTHS.

ALDERMAN.—On the 29th ult., at Lincoln Villa, Western-road, Ealing, the wife of Thomas H. Alderton, solicitor, 97, Edgware-road, of a son.
DRAKE.—On the 9th ult., at Port Antonio, Jamaica, the wife of Henry Drake, Esq., District Judge, of a daughter.
DUCKWORTH.—On the 30th ult., at 35, Brynston-square, the wife of Herbert Duckworth, Esq., barrister-at-law, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

EVANS-PATE.—On the 24th ult., at St. Mary's, Ely, by the Rev. S. Smith, vicar, William Johnson Evans, of Ely, solicitor, son of Hurth Robert Evans, Esq., to Ellen Maria, only daughter of William Pate, Esq. of the same place.

GLASCOCK.—On the 1st inst., at St. Martin's Church, Stamford, by the Rev. E. D. C. Wynn, B.A., assisted by the Rev. C. J. Dyer, M.A., Charles Henry Glascock, Esq., solicitor, 1, St. John's-street, Bedford-row, London, to Elizabeth Helen, only daughter of W. Higgs, Esq., of the Nuns, Stamford.

HURTON-HICK.—On the 1st inst., at St. Martin's Church, York-shire, by the Rev. J. W. Hick, rector of Byers-Green, assisted by the Rev. J. Brookbank, vicar of the parish, Charles Hurton, Esq., of Richmond, Yorkshire, to Eleanor Jane, elder daughter of the late Henry Hick, Esq., of Stokesley, Yorkshire. At the same time and place—

PARKER-HICK.—Francis Parker, Esq., Acorn Bank, Westmorland, to Mary Elliott, younger daughter of the late Henry Hick, Esq., of Stokesley, Yorkshire.

PARTRIDGE AND COOPER
WHOLESALE & RETAIL STATIONERS,

92, FLEET-STREET, AND 1 & 2, CHANCERY-LANE, LONDON, E.C.
Carriage paid to the Country on Orders exceeding 50s.

DRAFT PAPER, 4s. 6d., 6s., 7s., 7s. 6d., and 9s. per ream.

BRIEF PAPER, 17s. 6d., and 23s. 6d. per ream.

FOOLSCAP PAPER, 10s. 6d., 13s. 6d., and 18s. 6d. per ream.

CREAM LAID NOTE, 3s., 4s., and 5s. per ream.

LARGE CREAM LAID NOTE, 4s., 6s., and 7s. per ream.

LARGE BLUE NOTE, 3s., 4s., and 6s. per ream.

ENVELOPES, CREAM OR BLUE, 4s. 6d., and 6s. 6d. per 1000.

THE "TEMPLE" ENVELOPES, extra secure, 9s. 6d. per 1000.

FOOLSCAP OFFICIAL ENVELOPES, 1s. 6d. per 100.

THE NEW "VELLUM WOVE CLUB-HOUSE" NOTE, 9s. 6d. per ream.

"We would direct particular attention to their New Club-house Paper: in our opinion it is the very best paper we ever wrote upon."—London Mirror.

INDENTURE SKINS, Printed and Machine-ruled to hold twenty or thirty folios, 1s. 9d. each, 20s. per dozen.

SECONDS OR FOLLOWERS, Ruled 1s. 6d. each, 17s. per dozen.

RECORDS OR MEMORIALS, 6d. each, 5s. 6d. per dozen.

LEDGERS, DAY-BOOKS, CASH-BOOKS, LETTER OR MINUTE-BOOKS

An immense stock in various bindings.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE-LIST of Inkstands, Postage Seals, Copying Presses, Writing Cases, Despatch Boxes, Oak and Walnut Stationery Cabinets, and other useful articles adapted to Library or Office, post free.

Established 1841.

WANTED, TO RENT OR PURCHASE,

PREMISES suitable for manufacturing purposes, or which may be converted into such, in the immediate neighbourhood of Cannon-street West, E.C., and affording an area on the floor of about 4000 square feet superficial in all.—Apply, by letter, to SKILBECK and GRIFFITH, 34, Bedford-row, Holborn.

LINCOLN'S-INN CHAMBERS, No. 40,

Chancery-lane. Suites of large, light, and convenient OFFICES TO LET, in this new fire-proof building, at rents from 40l. to 100l. per annum.—Apply to the porter, on the premises, or to Mr. F. CHIFFERLAIN, Law Stationer, 35, Curator-street, Chancery-lane.

CHAMBERS to LET opposite Lincoln's-inn

Gateway (Chancery-lane).—A Barrister is desirous of LETTING one large ROOM (with use of Clerk's room), furnished or unfurnished. The chambers are quite new and lighted with gas. Rent to a desirable tenant would be very moderate.—Apply to H. W. C. REYNELL, Esq., 44, Chancery-lane, W.C.

THE MESMERIC INFIRMARY,

36, Weymouth-street, Portland-place. Established in 1849, for the treatment of Epilepsy, Deafness, Rheumatism, and other diseases, in which the ordinary means have failed; supported entirely by voluntary contributions. This Institution is now under the immediate superintendence of THOMAS CHANDLER, Esq., M.R.C.S., &c., who has been an active member of the council from its first establishment by Dr. ELLIOTSON and others twenty years ago, and who now gives advice gratis at 36, Weymouth-street, every morning (except Sundays), from nine till ten, and remains for consultation till half-past twelve. Numerous cases which were considered incurable have been successfully treated at this useful, though little known, Institution, for which funds are much required.

SUBSCRIPTIONS AND DONATIONS may be sent to the treasurer, at the Institution; or to the Union Bank, Argyle-place.

N.B.—Patients are now meemered only from ten till half-past twelve, during which hours friends are invited to attend.

LONDON GAZETTE (published by authority) and LONDON AND COUNTRY ADVERTISEMENT OFFICE
 No. 117, CHANCERY-LANE, FLEET-STREET.

HENRY GREEN (many years with the late

George Reynell) Advertisement Agent, begs to direct the attention of the Legal Profession to the advantages of his long experience of upwards of twenty-five years, in the special insertion of all per form notices, &c., and hereby solicits their continued support.—N.B. One copy of advertisement only required, and the strictest care and promptitude assured. File of London Gazette kept.

TO SOLICITORS, &c., requiring DEED

BOXES, will find the best made article lower than any other how.—List of Prices and sizes may be had gratis, or sent post free.—RICHARD and JOHN SLACK, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset-house. Established 50 years. Orders above 2l. sent carriage free.

PICTURES, CHROMOLITHOGRAPHS,

after the best Masters, at reduced Prices.

PICTURES, PROOF ENGRAVINGS, at less than half the usual prices.

PICTURE FRAMES for CHROMOLITHOGRAPHS and ENGRAVINGS, from the newest Designs, at the very lowest prices.

PICTURE FRAMES RE-GILT EQUAL to NEW, LOOKING GLASSES, and CORNICES.

GEORGE REES, 45, Russell-street, Covent Garden, opposite Drury Lane Theatre. Established 1860.

KINAHAN'S LL. WHISKY.—Dublin

Exhibition, 1863. This celebrated Old Irish Whisky gained the Dublin Prize Medal. It is pure, mild, mellow, delicious, and very wholesome. Sold in bottles, 3s. 6d. each, at the retail houses in London; by the agents in the principal towns in England; or wholesale, at 4, Great Windmill-street, London, W.—Observe the red seal, pink label, and cork branded "Kinahan's LL. Whisky."

FIRE-RESISTING SAFES.

HOBBS, HAET and CO., 76, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON, E.C.

SAFES.—Adapted for Lawyers, &c., only requiring official protection from Fire 4l. 15s. to 2l.

SAFES.—Adapted for general business purposes 10l. to 100l.

SAFES.—Adapted for Merchants. Recommended as combining great security against violence and fire, 17l. to 100l.

SAFES.—Adapted for Jewels and Bullion. Recommended for the protection of property of the greatest value, known to be kept constantly in possession.

Illustrated list of safes and looks adapted for the cottage, mansion, and the bank, free on application.

HOBBS, HAET, and CO., 76, Cheapside, London, E.C.

CHEVALIER BOWNESS and SON,

FISHING-TACKLE MAKERS.

12, BELL-YARD, TEMPLE-BAR.

Be respectfully to intimate that the site of the New Law Courts has not interfered with their old-established place of business, and that they have not, nor ever had, connection with any other House.

CATALOGUES GRATIS.

ALBION SNELL'S 25s. OFFICE WATCH.

Equal in appearance, accuracy, and durability to any watch at five times the cost. A written guarantee and twelve months trial allowed.

ALBION SNELL, Watchmaker and Jeweller, 114, High Holborn, W.C. Established 1848. Free and safe by post l. extra, registered.

BREECH LOADERS, WHISTLER'S,

11, STRAND.

BREECH LOADERS, Central Fire and Pin

upwards.

BREECH LOADERS, from 10l. 10s., and upwards.

BREECH LOADERS, new and second hand.

BREECH LOADERS, by all the best London makers.

BREECH LOADERS taken in exchange and purchased.

The largest stock of Guns, Rifles, and Revolvers in London.

11, Strand, and Craven-street.

FILMER'S CONVERTIBLE OTTOMANS

FOR CENTRE OF ROOMS.

To form two Settees and two Easy Chairs, a great improvement on the ordinary Ottoman. Only of

FILMER & SON,

UPHOLSTERERS,

31 and 32, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W.; Factory, 34 and 35, Charles-street.

An Illustrated Catalogue post-free.

SLACK'S NICKEL ELECTRO-PLATE

Is a coating of Pure Silver over Nickel.—Manufactured solely by R. and J. Slack. It has stood twenty years' test and still retains its superiority over all others for durability and silver like appearance. Gilt Frames, from 1s.; Corner Dishes, 4s.; set forming eight dishes; Tea and Coffee Set 8s.; and every article as in silver.

Per Dozen. Fiddle Pattern.

Table Forks 1 10 0 to 1 15 0

Dessert ditto 1 0 0 to 1 10 0

Table Spoons 1 10 0 to 1 15 0

Dessert ditto 1 0 0 to 1 10 0

Tea Spoons 0 12 0 to 0 15 0

Ivory Table Knives, full sized, Balance Handles.

Per Dozen. S. d. S. d.

Table Knives 1 2 0

Dessert Knives 0 15 6

Carvers (per pair) 0 6 0

Kitchen Knives and Forks 0 8 6

Catalogues gratis or post free. Orders carriage free per rail.

RICHARD and JOHN SLACK, 338, Strand, London.

Established 1818.

SLACK'S PRIZE KITCHEN RANGE

Combines hot plate, roasting or baking oven, good boiler, saves fuel, a certain cure for smoky chimneys, and is the lowest in price, to be seen in operation at RICHARD and JOHN SLACK'S, 338, Strand.

BRONZE SCROLL FENDERS, 10s.

each.

Black Fenders, 3s. 6d. to 6s.

Bronzed Fenders, 10s. to 30s.

Bright Steel and Ornament, 6s.

Bedroom Fire-iron, 3s. to 5s. 6d.

Drawing-room ditto, 10s. 6d. to 30s.

As the limits of an advertisement will not allow a detailed list, purchasers are requested to send for their Catalogue with 350 Drawings, and prices of every requisite in Electro-Plate, Table Cutlery, Furnishing Ironmongery, &c. May be had gratis, or free by post. Orders above 2l. sent carriage free.

RICHARD and JOHN SLACK, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset-house.

CONTENTS—REPORTS.

COURT OF APPEAL IN CHANCERY.
THE ESTATES INVESTMENT COMPANY (LIMITED); PAWLEY'S CASE.	589
Company—Fraudulent misrepresentations—Allottees.
THE MERCANTILE TRADING COMPANY (LIMITED); EX PARTE THE OFFICIAL LIQUIDATOR; STRINGER'S CASE.	591
Winding-up—Dividends—Unauthorised payment of.
V.C. STUART'S COURT.
THE LONDON, CHATHAM, & A D DIVER RAILWAY ARRANGEMENT ACT 1857; EX PARTE HARTRIDGE AND OTHERS.	597
Jurisdiction—Private Act restrained—Company.
TAYLOR v. WEMYSS.	599
Plea—Outlawry—Form of plea.
V.C. MALINS' COURT.
APPLETON v. ROWLEY.
Will—Construction—Gift to A., his "heirs or representatives"—Lapse.	600
V.C. JAMES'S COURT.
DICK v. THE CITY OF LONDON BREWERY COMPANY (LIMITED) AND OTHERS.
Mortgage and mortgage—Brewer's mortgage—Distiller's second mortgage.	601
COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.
REID v. THE MAYOR OF LONDON.
Writ of restitution—Larceny—Jurisdiction of Court of Queen's Bench.	604
MOORE v. ROSE.
Galer—Discharge of prisoner in custody for contempt of Court of Chancery—Neglect to discharge.	606
THE GUARDIAN, &c., OF THE HENDON UNION (APPS.) v. WILLIAM BOWLES (RESP.).
Nuisances removal—Nuisance upon premises from the escape of parties at a distance.	609
BOOK (APP.) v. DAWSON (RESP.).
Master and servant—Apprenticeship to two partners.	611
HUSEY v. THE METROPOLITAN RAILWAY COMPANY.
Costs—Practice—Motion for a new trial.	612
EX CHEQUEUR.
Criminal information—Second application—Practice of the court.	612
COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.
WOLLEY v. THE NORTH LONDON RAILWAY COMPANY.
Discovery—Reports of servants or agents—Privileged communications.	613
COURT OF EXCHEQUER.
HOLMES v. THE NORTH-EASTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.
Negligence—Railway company—Injury to person using company's premises.	616
CASE v. STOREY.
Hackney carriage—1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 35—Refusal to take fare.	618
ADMIRALTY COURT.
THE WOBURN ARREY.
Collision in the Mersey—Compulsory pilot "functus officio."	621
COURT OF ARCHES.
RIPPS AND ANOTHER v. BASTIN.
Letters of request must be moved by counsel—Practice—Church-rite.	622
SHEPPARD v. BENNETT.
Letters of request—Discretion of Dean of Arches to accept or refuse—Refusal to accept.	623
EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.
RENEAD v. THE MIDLAND RAILWAY COMPANY.
Railway company—Liability as carriers of passengers—Badworthiness of carriages.	628
LEADING ARTICLES, SUMMARIES, CORRESPONDENCE, &c.
TO CORRESPONDENTS.	121
LEADING ARTICLES.—
Tales of the Week.	121
Highways.	121
The Bankruptcy Bill.	121
The Abolition of Vacations.	121
Women Suffrage.	122
The Knowledge of Underwriters.	122
Letters of Request.	122
Sewer's Wages.	123
Compensation and Injunction—Ancient Lights.	123
SATINGS AND DOINGS OF THE COURTS.	124
LEGISLATION AND JURISPRUDENCE.—
House of Commons.	128
The Compound Householder.	129
ESTATE AND INVESTMENT JOURNAL.—
Stock and Share Markets.	129
Public Companies.	129
Reports of Sales.	130
SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.—
Notes of New Decisions.	130
Court of Queen's Bench.	130
Court of Common Pleas.	130
New Law Courts and Offices.	130
List of Gentlemen applying to be Admitted as Attorneys.	131
Creditors under Estates in Chancery.	131
Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35.	131
Vindictive Stock and Dividends in the Bank of England.	131
THE BENCH AND THE BAR.—
Call to the Bar.	132
Court of Common Council.	132
MAGISTRATE AND PARISH LAWYER.—
Notes of New Decisions.	132
REAL PROPERTY LAWYER.—
Notes of New Decisions.	132
JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.—
Notes of New Decisions.	133
MERCANTILE LAW.—
Notes of New Decisions.	133
ECCLIASTICAL LAW.—
The Irish Church Abolition Bill.	133
Notes of New Decisions.	133
LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.—
Preliminary Examinations.	134
Questions for the Intermediate Examination.	134
Questions for the Final Examination.	134
Gentlemen who Passed the Final Examination.	134
COURT COURTS.—
Notes of New Decisions.	135
Sunderland County Court.	135
BANKRUPTCY LAW.—
Notes of New Decisions.	135
CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.	135
NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.	136
LAW SOCIETIES.—
Solicitors' Benevolent Association.	136
Law Property and Life Assurance Society.	138
Gloucestershire Law Society.	138
LEGAL OBITUARY.—
Rev. Edwin Smith, Esq.	138
THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS.—
Circuits of the Judges.	138
THE GAZETTES.	139
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.	140
SUBSCRIPTION TO THE LAW TIMES.
Paid in advance.—
One year.	£ 2 13 0
Half-a-year.	1 7 6
On credit or for separate numbers.—
Single numbers (stamped).	0 1 1
" (unstamped).	0 1 0
Double numbers (stamped).	0 1 7½
" (unstamped).	0 1 6

To Readers and Correspondents.

All anonymous communications are invariably rejected. Advertisements must reach the office not later than five o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

NOTICE.

The Nineteenth Volume of the LAW TIMES REPORTS is now complete, and may be uniformly and strongly bound at the LAW TIMES Office, price 4s. 6d.

NEW LAW REPORTS.

MAGISTRATES', MUNICIPAL and PARISH LAW CASES and APPEALS decided in all the Courts. Edited by EDWARD W. COX, Sergeant-at-Law, Recorder of Portsmouth, Editor of "Cox's Criminal Law Cases," Vols. I., II., III., and IV., in half-calf, 25s. each. Part VI. Vol. V. just published. Price 5s. 6d.

Published quarterly before each Quarter Sessions.

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' CASES, decided by all the Courts, with NOTES, &c. Published Quarterly. Price 5s. 6d. Parts I. to XXII. are issued. Or Vol. I. may now be had, which contains all the Cases decided from the 1st Jan. 1864 to the end of 1866. Price 2s. 2s. in half-calf.

HORACE COX, 10, Wellington-street, Strand.

THE Law and the Lawyers.

It is understood that the Government intend to introduce a Bill to disfranchise the freemen of Dublin. The writ will, in the mean time, be suspended.

MR. RAIKES will on the 29th inst. call attention to the present state of the law affecting agents guilty of corrupt practices at Parliamentary elections; and move a resolution on the subject.

THE attempt to establish a Legal Co-operative Supply Association has proved a failure. The company which recently embraced the clerical and medical professions will, we understand, be shortly wound-up.

THE "fancy bread" question has been decided. A loaf is not exempt from obligation of weight by reason only of its being baked separately, and not in batches.

A DEPUTATION of Judges of County Courts, consisting of Mr. Sergeant WHEELER, Mr. FURNER, Mr. DASENT, Mr. WHIGHAM, Mr. ELLIS, Mr. TAGGART, Mr. HENRY J. STONOR, and Mr. WELFORD, had an interview with the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, in Downing-street, on Thursday last week, on the subject of the Bankruptcy Bill. The deputation was introduced by Mr. HIBBERT, M.P. for Oldham, and was accompanied by Mr. GEORGE DIXON, M.P. for Birmingham; Lord BARRINGTON, M.P. for Eye; Mr. PLATT, M.P. for Oldham; Mr. GRAVES, M.P. for Liverpool; Mr. J. HINDEPALMER, M.P. for Lincoln; Mr. LANCASTER, M.P. for Wigan; Mr. RATHBONE, M.P. for Liverpool; Mr. R. ASHETON-CROSS, M.P. for Lancashire; Mr. SHAW, M.P. for Burnley; Mr. J. M. HENNIKER-MAJOR, M.P. for East Suffolk; Mr. NORWOOD, M.P. for Hull; Mr. CRAFTURD, M.P. for Ayr; the Right Hon. T. HEADLAM, M.P. for Newcastle-on-Tyne; Mr. DODDS, M.P. for Stockton-on-Tees. The principal object of the deputation was to obtain an increase of the salaries now paid to the Judges, an object which we have already advocated in these columns. There were other matters mentioned which we shall notice next week.

THE Government has, we believe, determined that for the future the Statutes shall be printed in the form of a small folio, and in no other shape. The size and shape thus adopted will give to them a respectable aspect in the library, and will be pleasant enough for reading or reference upon the desk; but it will be very inconvenient for the bag and for carrying upon the circuits, where the greatest quantity of information is required to be packed in the smallest possible space. May not the question be raised whether, according to the recent decision, folio volumes of the Statutes are properly passengers' "luggage?" Might they not come within the cited definition of luggage as "something of more weight than value?"

A SHORT debate in the House of Commons last week, caused by a motion of Mr. HADFIELD, condemnatory of the Commission for the Revision of the Statute Law, because it has cost so much and done so little, elicited from the Government the fact that considerable progress has been made in the work of preparing a new and corrected edition of the Statutes, omitting all that has been repealed. The first volume of this useful work is already in the press, and will be issued in a few weeks, and the rest will follow in rapid succession. A general index to all the statute law now in force is also completed, and will be published forthwith. These are pleasant assurances that the 80,000*l.* stated to have been already expended by the Commission has not been altogether wasted. It has produced some fruit, though we must confess it to be somewhat costly.

MR. LOWE has addressed a letter to the newspapers to explain how it is that he proposes to call upon the taxpayers for five quarters in one year, and yet that they will pay no more in the whole than otherwise they would have paid. We confess ourselves quite unable to understand his argument. He says, in effect, "You will pay no more, you will only anticipate a payment." But the test is this: Next year we shall pay five quarters; but every subsequent year we shall pay four quarters, and in no future year will there be but three quarters to pay. A youth just come of age, and being a taxpayer now for the first time, will pay five quarters in 1870, and if he should live fifty years thereafter, he will have paid fifty years and five quarters. It is, in fact, an additional tax for one year to the amount of one-fourth of our present tax, and so we shall all find when we come to pay it.

HIGHWAYS.

Two decisions have removed some lingering doubts as to the right of neighbouring owners to pasture cattle on the sides of a highway.

Where such a right of pasturage exists, the owner may feed them there, but he must keep them strictly to their place. If they are suffered to be upon the highway itself, the owner is liable to the penalty imposed by the Highways Act.

In a later case, the lord of the manor, having a right of pasturage on the greensward by the side of a highway, suffered his cattle to go upon the metalled road. He was held to have been rightly convicted, although they were under the care of a boy who was instructed to keep them from the road, but was unable to do so. Inability to prevent a breach of the law was no excuse. If the owner cannot keep his cattle from straying on the highway, he should not feed them on the sides of it.

THE BANKRUPTCY BILL.

THIS Bill is making rapid progress through committee, receiving from both sides of the House that judicious support which employs itself in suggesting and debating amendments, and dealing with them on their own merits, with entire absence of party feeling. By this concurrence of good offices the ATTORNEY-GENERAL will be enabled to boast the authorship of a measure which so many of his predecessors have attempted, but failed to carry. In principle the scheme is so novel, at least in England, that it is impossible to anticipate what will be its practical working. All that can be said of it, that it is based upon experience of the success of a very similar law in Scotland, where bankruptcy is treated simply as a machinery for the winding-up of an insolvent's estate, and does not concern itself about his personal conduct, all such questions being remitted to the criminal courts. The bankrupt is not to be discharged from his debts unless he pays 10s. in the pound; a provision which, we trust, will have the designed effect of inducing a resort to bankruptcy by insolvents before their estates are so far wasted as to be worthless to the creditors. The Bill is subjected to so many changes from day to day, that it is impossible to describe them without great risk of misleading the reader, and, therefore, we do not attempt, at this stage of the measure, to state what are the various amendments made. When completed, it must be described as a whole.

THE ABOLITION OF VACATIONS.

THE Profession is indebted to Mr. ANSTAY for a suggestion that the courts should not be closed at all during the Long Vacation, and he is reported to have made this suggestion in the interest not only of the suitors, but of the junior attorneys and the juniors of the Bar. This proposition is rather a startling one, for, if carried to its legitimate conclusion, it will simply result in lawyers being deprived of their great annual holiday.

When, however, we begin to examine closely the claims of the legal profession to a holiday at the expense of suitors the foundation upon which those claims rest will appear to be very unsubstantial. In what respect does the legal profession differ from the clerical and the medical professions? Yet clergymen and doctors are at work pretty well all the year round, and if they choose to take a holiday they must make some arrangement with brother professionals to do their work. This is so because churches cannot be closed, and people cannot be compelled to have their diseases during all the year except the Midsummer months. It is difficult to see why the public should be denied for four months out of the year their legal remedies for wrongs any more than they should be denied spiritual consolation or medical attendance.

There is in our opinion a very strong argument in favour of the large abridgment of this long holiday. In the first place, so far as the country attorneys and the Junior Bar are concerned—we refer, of course, to the working members of the Junior Bar—their work in the local tribunals continues throughout the year, and there is consequently for them very little time for a holiday, those local tribunals making no exception in favour of the summer months. Furthermore, as a matter of expediency in a pecuniary point of view, most of the members of the Junior Bar not in the possession of independent means stay at home two, at least, out of the four months over which the Long Vacation extends.

But the real consideration should, of course, be for the suitors. The limited time allowed to the sittings of the several courts work in many cases the most positive injustice. Take the case of the Court of Queen's Bench. That is a very popular court, and it is almost impossible, in the short space given up to the trial of special jury cases to ensure even moderate attention being given to the claims of suitors. This would be far otherwise if the court were open during the Long Vacation. We think, however, that there is a via media in this as in most other matters. Let the summer months be regarded as the period for taking holiday, but let the courts remain open until all arrears of more than a single term's standing have been wiped from the cause list. Instead of one vacation Judge let there be three or four. This would, as Mr. ANSTY remarks, give junior attorneys and the Junior Bar a chance against the big firms and leaders, which they have not got now. The change must come when the County Courts are brought to be courts of first instance, and it would be a useful reform could it be at once carried into effect.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

A GREAT triumph achieved in the House of Commons by the advocates for extending the suffrage to women who have no "lords and masters" to vote for them, has been passed without comment by the newspapers, and, therefore, probably unnoticed by the public. A clause has been introduced into the Municipal Bill, giving to women the same right of voting at municipal elections as is possessed by men; that is to say, that every woman duly qualified as an independent householder, and who would have been a voter by the present law, but for her sex, is to become a voter under the new law, her sex notwithstanding.

Woman being legally qualified to vote in vestries and at municipal elections in the choice of a town councillor and an overseer, upon what pretence can she be precluded from the right of voting for a member of Parliament. This irrational barrier of prejudice must soon be broken down, and it will be impossible to reject a demand which has not only common sense and justice on its side, but that which weighs still more with the average Englishman—precedent. But it must be distinctly understood that our advocacy is strictly limited to the enfranchisement of single women who are householders. Wives and daughters domiciled with their parents, having none of the liabilities of citizens and being in a position of dependence, have no just claim to the electoral privileges of citizens.

The admission of women to the Parliamentary franchise is now only a question of time.

THE KNOWLEDGE OF UNDERWRITERS.

WHAT are underwriters supposed to know, and what therefore amounts to concealment, are important questions in connection with policies of marine insurance. Lord Mansfield lays down some general rules on the subject in his judgment in the great case of Carter v. Boehm, 3 Burr 1910. He there says: "The insured need not mention what the underwriter ought to know; what he takes upon himself the knowledge of, or what he waives being informed of. The underwriter need not be told what lessens the risk agreed and understood to be run by the express terms of the policy. He needs not be told general topics of speculation; as, for instance, the underwriter is bound to know every cause which may occasion natural perils; as, the difficulty of the voyage, the kind of seasons, the probability of lightning, hurricanes, earthquakes, &c. He is bound to know every cause which may occasion political perils; from the ruptures of States; from war, and the various operations of it. He is bound to know the probability of safety, from the continuance or return of peace; from the imbecility of the enemy, through the weakness of their counsels, or their want of strength," &c.

In a case which we reported last week, Harmoner v. Hutchison, at p. 562, the question was raised whether an underwriter is to be assumed to know the geography of the country for which the ship insured is destined, and whether the use of the expression "port or ports" in a particular province was sufficient to include all ports in that province, although they were not all known to the underwriter. These questions were shortly answered by Mr. Justice Lush, who said, in delivering judgment, "I take it that what the underwriter is bound to know is the nature of the voyage, the geographical character of the places to which the ship is to go, and all perils arising from natural causes which pertain to navigation at those particular places. I do not think the underwriter can excuse himself by not knowing either the places to be visited or the nature of the perils to be met with." "If in such a case" (as that before the court) was the judgment of Mr. Justice Hannen, "he (i. e., the underwriter) wishes to limit his liability, he should make some inquiry. A person contracting with him has a right to presume that he knows the character of the coast and the possibility of there being some ports on it of which he has no special knowledge." Mr. Justice Hayes was at first inclined to differ from the rest of the court, but ultimately came to the conclusion that it would be very dangerous to speculate on the knowledge of underwriters. "One underwriter may know," he said "what another may not; and when we indulge in considerations as to what underwriters say is known to them, and what is not, we get into a very wide region indeed."

Whilst upon this subject we may notice another case of concealment reported at p. 580, (Nicholson v. Power). There an incidental question was whether the plaintiff ought to have communicated to the underwriter the fact that his was the only ship loading with copper ore at a certain port. At the time the insurance was effected a notice appeared in Lloyd's list to the effect that a British barque, with copper ore had been seen ashore about where the ship insured would have been at the date mentioned. The Court said that the knowledge that the ship insured was the only ship loading with copper ore would have enabled the underwriter to draw an inference from the notice in the list, which he would not or might not have drawn otherwise. The underwriter having signed a slip merely, a policy was subsequently tendered to his agent, who signed it under protest. The Court held the underwriter's intention to be not to place himself in a worse position than if the policy had originally been executed when the slip was signed, and therefore there being a concealment of a material fact the policy was vitiated and the action not maintainable.

The doctrine of concealment is an important one and every case is of value which illustrates it.

LETTERS OF REQUEST.

In the case of Sheppard v. Bennett, which we this week report, the Dean of Arches declined to accept the letters of request.

The letters of request, it will be remembered, charge heresy against the respondent; set out the passages from writings of his on which the charge rests, recite the report of the commission of inquiry, authorised by the Bishop of London, to the effect that there was sufficient prima facie ground for instituting further proceedings, and then go on, "And whereas, we, acting under the provisions of the said Act of Parliament (the Church Discipline Act) have thought fit to send the case by letters of request to the Court of Appeal of the province, therefore we, &c., Lord Bishop of Bath and Wells, do request you, the Right Hon. Sir Robert Joseph Phillimore, &c., to issue a citation or decree, &c."

The reasons for which the Dean of Arches has refused acceptance of the letters of request are—First, that the court has a discretion to accept or refuse. Secondly, that at least some grounds should be stated in the letters of request, showing that it would be for the interests of justice that the Court of Arches should accept them. Thirdly, that the charge being one of heresy, is peculiarly fit for the cognizance and decision of the Bishop.

We propose to consider these reasons seriatim.

That the court has a discretion to accept or refuse would seem to follow from a consideration of the name, form, and nature of letters of request.

Oughton (Ordo Judiciorum) calls them "littere requisitoriales," and the stat. 23 Hen. 8, c. 9, hereafter referred to, speaks of the bishop or any inferior judge making "request or instance (i. e. solicitation) to the archbishop, &c. to take the matter before him." In form, letters of request are, or were according to the forms in use before the Church Discipline Act, a recital of the cause of suit, and the advantages to the parties from commencing the suit in the Court of Arches, with a prayer to that court to issue a citation, and to hear and determine the cause: (see Oughton, vol. 2, tit. cccclxvii; 2 Chit. Gen. Pr. 497, note; 3 Burn's Eccl. Law, by Phillimore, p. 224.) And in nature letters of request are a waiver of jurisdiction on the part of the inferior court, and an authority to the plaintiff to institute proceedings in the Superior Court, which could otherwise only act as a court of appeal. They are a concession, and not a mandate, by the inferior to the Superior Court. It is on the principle that the letters of request act to waive an inferior, and not to compel a superior, jurisdiction that it is decided (see, however, contra, 2 Chit. Gen. Pr. 497, citing Burgoyne v. Free, 2 Add. 405-14), that "if a suit be before an archdeacon the ordinary may licence the suit to a higher court, and the archdeacon cannot in such case baulk his ordinary and send the case immediately into the Arches; for he hath no power to give a court, but to remit his own court, and to leave it to the next; for since his power was derived from the bishop to whom it is subordinate, he must yield it to him of whom he received it." (Hutton's case, Hob. 16; 2 Gils. Cod. 1048, note.)

Of course there has been no doubt that the power of the Arches Court to accept was limited in certain cases, e.g., where the court sending the letters had no jurisdiction, or was not entitled to set the Arches Court in motion, where the offence charged or the offender was insufficiently described, or where the letters were improperly executed, &c. In such cases the court not only could, but was bound to refuse the letters of request. But any authority prior to the stat. 23 Hen. 8, for the proposition that the Arches Court is bound to accept letters of request where coming in proper form and from a proper court, seems wanting. This might have been expected, for, as Sir Robert Phillimore pertinently remarks, "the law has indeed been careful to protect the bishop from any undue assumption of jurisdiction by the archbishop over him, but has not thought it necessary to protect the archbishop from the usurpation of the suffragan." And indeed it appears that the Arches Court in early times, so far from making any difficulty in the way of refusing to accept letters of request when offered, was in the habit of usurping and ousting the jurisdiction of inferior courts without any such authority from them. It was to remedy this evil that the stat. 23 Hen. 8, c. 9 (the Bill of Citations) was passed, and as it is under this statute that all the cases (hereafter cited), which tell against the discretion, were decided, it will be well here to explain its provisions and scope. The title of the Act is, "An Act that no Person shall be cited out of the Diocese where he or she dwelleth except in certain Cases," and the preamble runs (according to the wording of the Record Commission Edition of the Statutes as follows:—"Where great number of the king's subjects, as well men, wives, servants, as other the king's subjects dwelling in divers dioceses of this realm . . . heretofore have been at many times called by citation, and other processes compulsory to appear in the arches, audience, and other high courts of the archbishops of this realm, far from and out of the diocese where such men, wives, servants, and other the king's subjects be inhabitant dwelling; and many times to answer to surmised and feigned causes and suits of defamation, withholding of tithes and such other like causes and matters which have been sued more for malice and for vexation than for any just cause of suit . . . to the great charge and impoverishment of the king's subjects, and to the great occasion of misbehaviour and misliving of wives, women, and servants, and to the great impairment and diminution of their good names and honesties. Be it therefore enacted . . . that no manner of person shall be from henceforth cited or summoned, or otherwise called to appear by himself, or by any procurator before any ordinary, official, or any other judge spiritual out of the diocese, or peculiar jurisdiction where the person that shall be cited, or shall be inhabiting or dwelling at the time of awarding or going forth of the same citation or summons, except that it shall be for, in, or upon any of the cases or causes hereafter written."

Then follow various excepted cases, and among them this:—"In case that the bishop or any inferior Judge, having under him jurisdiction in his own right and title, or by commission make request or instance to the archbishop, bishop, or other superior ordinary or Judge, to take, treat, examine, or determine the matter before him or his substitute, and that to be done in cases only where the law, civil or canon, doth affirm execution of such request, or instance of jurisdiction to be lawful or tolerable." Penalties are fixed for offenders, and then follows this proviso (sect. 4):—"Provided always that it shall be lawful to every archbishop of this realm to call, cite and summon any person or persons inhabiting or dwelling in any bishop's diocese within his province for causes of heresy, if the bishop or other ordinary immediate hereunto consent, or if the same bishop, &c., do not his duty in punishment of the same." So that this Act, so far as the above provisions extend, was intended to prevent the citation of persons out of their dioceses by the Arches Court, except, (1st), after letters of request, when the "law, civil or canon, doth affirm execution of such request or instance of jurisdiction to be lawful or tolerable," thus restraining the Court of Arches from assuming jurisdiction in trifling or vexatious cases, such as those mentioned in the preamble; and (2) without letters of request, on mere consent or default of duty in the bishop in causes of heresy. And certainly there is nothing on the face of the Act that can be construed as intending that a jurisdiction, which before was optional, should henceforward be imperative on the Court of Arches. The design was to limit, not to extend its jurisdiction, and to diminish the transmission of causes, unless on good grounds from the inferior courts.

(To be continued.)

SEAMEN'S WAGES.

As elementary doctrine relating to a seaman's right to recover his wages is laid down in the leading case of Cutter v. Powell, in Smith's collection of Leading Cases at Common Law. All decisions upon this subject, therefore, where the facts are similar, must either follow that case or give internal evidence of some distinguishing element. A case of this nature was reported by us last week, namely, Button v. Thompson, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 568 C. P. There the court were divided, and it will repay us if we look with some attention at the articles entered into, and the judgments of the learned Judges.

The contract between the parties was, that the plaintiff should serve the defendant, and that the defendant should retain the plaintiff in his service on board a certain ship during a voyage from Shields to Alexandria, and if required to any port or ports in the Mediterranean, Black Sea, Danube, Sea of Azof, France, Spain, Portugal, South or Central America, West Indies, United States, British North America, or Baltic, and home to her final port of discharge in the United Kingdom or continent of Europe; and that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff the sum of 5*l.* 10*s.* per calendar month during the said service, and so on proportionately for any period during which the said voyage should continue, greater or less than one calendar month, and supply the plaintiff with provisions for, and during the said voyage according to a fixed scale.

The plaintiff was left behind at a port short of the ship's destination on account of his drunkenness and general misconduct. It was also averred in the pleadings that he deserted the ship. This, however, was negatived by the jury on the trial, but they found that the plaintiff was guilty of drunkenness and abusive language, subversive of discipline, and that he was left behind through his own negligence. By the direction of the presiding judge (Mr. Justice Hannen), a verdict was entered for the plaintiff for the amount of his wages up to the time when he was left behind, leave being reserved to the defendant to enter the verdict for him upon the grounds, (1.) that upon the evidence, and the finding of the jury, he was entitled to the verdict; and (2.) that the plaintiff could not recover, the contract not having been performed owing to his misconduct.

We will here draw the distinction between this case and Cutter v. Powell. Here the plaintiff engaged to serve on a certain voyage, and the defendant promised to pay him 5*l.* 10*s.* per month during the service. In Cutter v. Powell the defendant engaged to give his second mate, who died intestate in the course of the voyage, thirty guineas, provided he "proceeded, continued, and did his duty," in his capacity as mate in the ship from Jamaica to Liverpool. In the present case there is no express condition that the plaintiff should proceed the whole voyage so as to form a condition precedent to his right to recover any part; but there was in Cutter v. Powell. There the contract was entire; it was not attempted to obtain a proportionate part of the thirty guineas, but a quantum meruit for the labour done.

An argument was raised against the plaintiff upon the terms of the Merchant Shipping Act 1854, which, by the 185th section, provides that a seaman shall be entitled to wages where the service terminates before the period contemplated in the agreement by reason of the wreck or loss of the ship, or is terminated by the seaman being left on shore at any place abroad under a certificate of his unfitness or inability to proceed on the voyage. There being this enactment providing for these contingencies, it was contended that it was intended to exclude such a contingency as was disclosed in the case. The majority of the court, however, came to a very different conclusion as to the intention of the Legislature. They point out that there is nothing in the Act which prevents contracts being entered into, making the wages due monthly or at other fixed times during the voyage, but, on the contrary, that many of the provisions appear to be founded on the assumption that contracts may be and are so made. For example: sect. 94 and following sections, which provide what shall be done in the case of seamen dying during a voyage, assume that wages may be due before a voyage is complete. So also the 207th and following clauses, which make provisions for the case of seamen being left behind on the voyage, and especially clause 209, are founded on this assumption. Mr. Justice Brett, indeed, took a much more comprehensive view of the Act than did the majority of the court from whom he differed, and agreed with the defendant's construction as to the 185th section. This brings us to the judgments, which may be usefully compared.

These judgments, we may remark, were considered judgments, and, having perused them carefully, we do not think that much weight need be attached to that of the dissentient Judge. One very strong argument for deciding in favour of the plaintiff, is put in the judgment of Justices Byles and Smith. "If the defendants' construction were to prevail," it is remarked, "the plaintiff, notwithstanding he had faithfully served in the ship during the intermediate voyage mentioned in the articles, yet, if being ashore at the last port at which the ship touched, he was unable to rejoin her from some negligence, however slight, or even from accident or mistake, would be unable to recover any part of his wages." Such a construction would be harsh to say the least of it. Of course, as the court observed, contracts may be so made, "but they require plain words to show that such a bargain was really intended." Refusing to construe a contract which did not contain these plain words as if it did contain them, the opinion of the majority of the court was, that the monthly wages became vested, and a debt at the end of each month of service, liable to forfeiture under the circumstances provided by the Merchant Shipping Act 1854.

On the other hand Mr. Justice Brett, whilst noticing that in so many of the cases "express stipulations" as to wages existed, concluded that the plaintiff could not recover any part of his wages without performing the whole service. He relied mainly on the 187th and 190th sections of the Act of 1854, which, he held, should be read as if inserted in the articles. The former of these sections says the master or owner shall pay to every seaman in the case of all ships other than home-trade ships his wages within three days after the cargo has been delivered, or within five days after the seaman's discharge, whichever first happens. And by sect. 190, no seaman who is engaged for a voyage or engagement which is to terminate in the United Kingdom, shall be entitled to sue in any court abroad. Concerning the former section, it occurs to us to remark that it could never have been intended to take away all right from seamen, by negligence or accident prevented from being at home to receive payment. And sect. 190, as remarked in the judgment of the other Judges, simply makes provision to prevent shipowners from being harassed by suits brought in foreign ports.

We will conclude by noticing the modes in which a claim for wages may be forfeited.

There are, of course, the modes of forfeiture provided by statute. But in addition, proof of the mariner's misconduct, to the satisfaction of the court, may furnish a defence to an action brought by him for his wages against the master or owner. Desertion works a forfeiture. The principal point to be considered is, what is misconduct on the part of the mariner justifying non-payment of his wages by the master. Considerable light is thrown upon this by the case to which we have been referring. The jury negatived desertion by the plaintiff, but found that he was left behind by his own negligence. "It is consistent with this finding," the court said, "that the plaintiff remained behind without any disobedience of orders and even without knowing that the ship was going to sail, and we think this finding is not sufficient to establish a defence, if the view we have taken of the contract is correct." The jury further found that the plaintiff was guilty of drunkenness and of abusive language, subversive of discipline, but they did not find to what extent and degree this misconduct prevailed, nor whether it was habitual, or such as to endanger the safety or discipline of the ship, and the court, comparing these vague findings with the averments in the pleas, thought that they were insufficient to support either of the pleas. They did not amount to a sufficient justification for discharging the plaintiff from the service. This ruling is in accordance with the decisions which lay it down that misconduct to cause a forfeiture of wages according to the maritime law must be of a continuous or very gross character.

COMPENSATION AND INJUNCTION—ANCIENT LIGHTS.

It has hitherto been an axiom that equity follows the law, and the fashion has always been to regard equity as supplementing the action of the common law by doing that which the peculiar machinery of the latter cannot do. But the Master of the Rolls has now recognised it as quite a new point "whether a court of equity will follow implicitly a court of law and grant an injunction in every case in which a judgment might be obtained at law." (Heath v. Bucknell, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 549.)

The importance of this point has reference entirely to the description of remedy which is to be applied to a grievance, and the consideration which has to be worked out is whether a man who is entitled to bring his action for damages should not also be entitled ex debito justitiæ to his injunction. This problem shows more than any other of which we have any knowledge the value of equitable powers as compared with common law procedure; and we must thoroughly agree with the Master of the Rolls when he expresses the opinion that a plain right to a judgment at law for damages is not equivalent to a right to an injunction in all cases. But to take the case which his Lordship was considering—an obstruction of an easement growing out of an ancient right. The line in this case is so finely drawn that it is very difficult to appreciate the reasoning of Lord Romilly. "It may, no doubt," he says, "be laid down to be true as a general axiom, that where a man possesses a right to light and air over the property of a neighbour, the obstruction of which would be punishable at law in the shape of damages, a court of equity will, by injunction, prevent that obstruction; but where the owner of the ancient light so deals with it as to essentially alter its character and to convert it into a totally different easement over his neighbour's land, and one which prevents him from enjoying his property as he might have done at any time before the ancient lights were so altered and converted, then I am of opinion that the owner of the servient tenement is not debarred from the enjoyment of his land as theretofore, but that if in effecting it and in obtaining such enjoyment he unavoidably interferes with the ancient light of the owner of the dominant tenement, then the only compensation that the owner of the dominant tenement can obtain is in the shape of damages, and he is not entitled by the insidious use of his own property to deprive his neighbour of a portion of his property."

We do not know whether it is our want of discernment, but we must regard this distinction as most subtle. An obstruction of an ancient light quod ancient light entitles to an injunction; but an obstruction of an ancient light which is made the basis of a modern encroachment entitles to an action for damages. Now, in each case the ancient light is obstructed, but Lord Romilly says that because the owner of the dominant tenement has enlarged his ancient light, which enlargement according to Tophin v. Jones does not affect the original right, and thus imposed upon the servient tenement a servitude to which it ought not to be subject, the owner of the ancient light shall not be entitled to an injunction to restrain the obstruction of the ancient light, but only an action for damages. "He is still," says the Master of the Rolls, "entitled to compensation for the obstruction of that which he formerly enjoyed, but by his own act," i.e., enlarging the windows, "he has deprived himself of the right to call for the aid of a court of equity to assist him."

Here we conceive we get out of the class of cases in which we agreed with Lord Romilly that although there may be a good right at law there is no claim for an injunction. Had Lord Romilly rested his decision declining to grant an injunction on the ground that the damage resulting from the obstruction of the ancient windows was nominal merely, we should have recognised it as reasonable on the de minimis principle. But he does not do so. He refused the injunction solely upon the ground, to use his own words, that a person cannot use his own property in such a manner as to acquire a new and distinct right over a neighbour's property which he had not before. In other words this decision is, that because a man does that which he ought not to do he shall not be protected in the enjoyment of that to which he is indisputably entitled. There certainly is a difficulty about ancient lights. If they are enlarged it is difficult to block up the enlargement without also obstructing the ancient light. Therefore, Lord Romilly doubtless reasoned, the remedy is an action for damages, and not an application to a court of equity for an injunction.

As we have remarked, the point is new and the distinction subtle. There are those who will agree in the conclusion come to by the Master of the Rolls; there are others who will think, that a right having once accrued, so as to entitle the owner to an injunction to restrain its obstruction, the remedy should continue to attach to the right, so long as it was not destroyed. Lord Romilly says that the right to call for a particular remedy may be destroyed, whilst the subject-matter upon which the wrong is inflicted remains with all its legal attributes intact.

We shall here leave this part of the subject, and turn with some curiosity to a ruling of Vice-Chancellor Kindersley, which was cited by Lord Romilly with strong approval. It occurs in 2 Dr. & Sm. 369, the case being that of The Carriers' Company v. Corbett. The Vice-Chancellor there said: "Where a house, having ancient lights, is burned or pulled down and rebuilt, and the question arises whether the character of ancient lights, which belonged to the windows of the old house, attaches to those of the new house, it appears to me that the principle to be applied to the solution of the question is, to inquire whether the new windows would impose on the servient tenement either an additional servitude to that to which it was subjected when the old house existed, or a different servitude from that which previously existed; and it appears to me that it is not every trivial or immaterial change which would prevent the new windows from possessing the character of ancient lights possessed by the old windows. To deprive them of that character the change must be material either in the nature or in the quantum of the servitude imposed."

This is a difficult doctrine to apply, and is different from that which has for some time been considered law. In Chandler v. Thompson, 2 Campb. 80, it is laid down that enlarging a window does not destroy the right to enjoy the original space of access of light, though there can be no claim made to any easement outside of such space; and that the owner of the adjacent estate may obstruct all except the original extent of the aperture. And in Thomas v. Thomas, 2 Cr. M. & R. 34, 40, it is said: "It has been held that where a party enlarges an ancient window, the owner of the adjoining land cannot obstruct any part of the light which ought to pass through the space occupied by an ancient window," which indeed is merely a recognition by Alderson, B. of the doctrine established by the case of Chandler v. Thompson. But in quoting this the learned Baron prefaced it by a remark which embodies the view we incidentally expressed in the commencement of this article. "How does the plaintiff," he said, "by claiming more than he lawfully may, destroy his title to that which he lawfully may claim?" And how, it may be added, having reference to the decision of Lord Romilly, does a plaintiff, by claiming more than he lawfully may, destroy his remedy for an injury to that which he lawfully may claim?

The case where buildings are pulled down and rebuilt presents, perhaps, the greatest difficulty. Such was the case before the Master of the Rolls. The plaintiff, about five years ago, pulled down his premises and erected new buildings on the site, such new buildings being raised to the height of 75ft. above the pavement, instead of 35ft. which was the height of the original buildings. There were several ancient windows in the old buildings. The windows in the new buildings were increased in number and size, and the report tells us that they coincided to a very small extent with the ancient windows in the old buildings. Of course if the new windows did not fill the same space as the old, they did not coincide with them. It appeared, however, that there were several windows in the old buildings. Then the defendant raises his premises from 35ft. to 70ft., and had not the plaintiff's windows been increased in number and size, there would have been a serious obstruction to the light and air by the raising of the defendant's building. It was contended for the defendant that although this would have been so the obstruction was really immaterial by reason of the increase of light derived from the extension of window space. These we admit might be reasons admissible and weighty in an action at law, but do not touch the question of the right to an injunction against obstructing an old light, because the alterations are not regarded as being so material as to extinguish the old right. And here we come upon the subtleties of Lord Romilly's decision, and we find ourselves fixed to the problem whether an injunction ought not to be the right of any person whose ancient light is obstructed, until he extinguishes his right to the light, or whether, in other words, a party can by his own act extinguish his right to a remedy so long as he does nothing to extinguish the subject-matter in respect of which he claims.

BREAKFAST—EPPE'S COCOA—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The Civil Service Gazette remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Eppe attained by his homoeopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoas, Mr. Eppe has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by the Trade only in 1lb. 4lb., and 1lb. tin-lined packets, labelled "JAMES EPPE and Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London."

SAYINGS AND DOINGS OF THE COURTS.

[CONTRIBUTED BY THE REPORTERS OF THE SEVERAL COURTS.]

HOUSE OF LORDS.

The sittings of the House of Lords were resumed after Whitsuntide on Monday, May 31st. The time of the House, with the exception of an hour on Thursday morning, when the judgments of their Lordships in the case of Udny v. Allatt were delivered, was occupied during the week with Miss Shedden's story of her wrongs. The monotony of the theme was slightly varied on Monday (the ninth day of the case) by Miss Shedden's making an application to the House to allow counsel to argue the points of law for her. Lord Chelmsford reminded her that it was at her own request that she was allowed to conduct her case in person, and the Lord Chancellor said that the whole thing had been extremely irregular, but the House were most desirous that Miss Shedden should not think she was labouring under any special grievance, and if she would first finish her narrative of facts, the House would then decide whether she should be heard by counsel. The Solicitor-General asked whether their Lordships would at once decide whether counsel for Miss Shedden were to be heard or not, but the Lord Chancellor said they could not decide until the statement of facts was concluded. He then asked whether, in the event of counsel being required to argue, a day's notice could be given them, but this request also the Lord Chancellor said he was unable to grant.

The case of Udny v. Allatt and another, in which judgments were delivered on the 3rd June, is important as an exposition of the principles of the law of domicile. This was an appeal from the decision of the second division of the Court of Session in Scotland, and was argued in this House in the middle of April, by the appellant in person and by Sir R. Palmer, Mr. P. Fraser (of the Scotch Bar), and Mr. Fox Bristowe for the respondent. The Lord Chancellor, in delivering judgment, began by stating the facts of the case. The action was one of declarator of bastardy, brought by George Udny, a substitute heir of entail to the estates of Udny, in Aberdeenshire, to have it declared that the defender, John Henry Udny, was illegitimate, and therefore not entitled to succeed to the said estates. It was said that he was illegitimate because his parents were not married at the date of his birth; but then it was contended on the defender's part, that there was a marriage between his parents subsequent to his birth, and that therefore he was legitimated by that marriage, his father being a domiciled Scotchman. Issue was joined upon the question of the father's domicile at the time of the defender's birth. Now Col. Udny, the defender's father, was born at Leghorn, and was the son of the British consul there, who was a Scotchman by birth. The first question in dispute, then was, what was the domicile of the consul at the time of the birth of the defendant's father? Upon this point the House was satisfied that the consul had not lost his Scotch domicile of origin; and that being so, the domicile of origin of the defendant's father, Col. Udny, was also Scotch. The second point was, had Col. Udny ever lost his domicile of origin? He lived with his mother in London till 1794, when he went to Edinburgh University for three years. In 1797 he entered the army, in which he remained till 1812, when he married a Miss Fitzhugh, having succeeded in 1802 to the estates of Udny, in Scotland. From 1812 to 1844 he lived in London in a house in Grosvenor-street. There was no house at Udny, but he visited the estate annually, talked of rebuilding the old castle, became a justice of the peace, and a deputy lieutenant of Aberdeenshire, and interested himself in the affairs of the county. In 1845 he became involved in pecuniary difficulties, and went to Boulogne. He gave up his house in Grosvenor-street, sold his furniture and discharged all his servants. His wife having died in 1846, he cohabited at Boulogne with Ann Allatt, the defender's mother, and the defender was born in 1853. Some few months after the birth he and Mrs. Allatt went to Scotland with the avowed intention of legitimating the defender by contracting a marriage in that country. This marriage took place in Jan. 1854. Col. Udny died in 1860. It was a difficult question to decide whether, according to the Scotch law, a bastard whose putative father at the time of the birth had an English domicile would be legitimated by his father's acquiring a Scotch domicile and contracting a subsequent Scotch marriage: (Rose v. Rose, 5 Bl. N. R. 468.) The English court would not recognise such a legitimation. But the question did not arise here, for even if Col. Udny had lost his Scotch domicile of origin by his long residence in London, and had acquired an English domicile, yet it was clear that he had afterwards abandoned that English domicile by leaving London in 1844. That was an abandonment animo et facto, and as no new domicile was acquired, the domicile of origin reverted at the moment of abandonment. As domicile could be acquired animo, by intention, so it could be abandoned animo, and the domicile of origin was that to which the person returned while deliberating on the choice of a new home: (Monro v. Monro, 7 Cl. & Fin. 871; Indian Chief, 3 Rob.) "The character that is gained by residence ceases with residence if a man quits sine animo revertendi." The domicile of Col. Udny being Scotch at the time of the birth of the defender and of his subsequent marriage, the marriage legitimated the defendant, and his Lordship moved the House to affirm the judgment of the Court of Session, and dismiss the appeal with costs. Lord Chelmsford said it was necessary to ascertain the nature of domicile of origin. The term "reacquired" in Story's Conflict of Laws, s. 48, was inaccurate. Story meant that by the abandonment of a subsequently acquired domicile, the domicile of origin was restored. In the case of Munroe v. Douglas, 5 Madd. 405, Sir John Leech was reported to have said, "a domicile cannot be lost by mere abandonment, unless the party die in itinere towards an intended domicile." It was not necessary to be in itinere towards an intended domicile in order to restore the domicile of origin. It was impossible for a man to be without a domicile. As to whether Col. Udny ever acquired an English domicile, his residence in England from 1812 to 1844 was strong evidence, but the question was whether there was an intention to acquire a new domicile. If they looked at Col. Udny's acts and declarations with reference to his Scotch estates, it appeared that he always hoped to re-assume his position in Scotland. As a question of fact, his Lordship thought there was always absent the intention to make England his permanent home. But whether he gained an English domicile or not, it was quite clear that he lost it by his nine years' residence in Boulogne. The case of Rose v. Rose did not apply. His Lordship agreed that the appeal should be dismissed. Lord Westbury said that the law of England ascribed to each individual two separate and distinct conditions. The first was his political status; the second, his character of citizen of a particular country, or civil status. The political status might depend on different laws in different countries, but the civil status depended on the law of the domicile only. Every man had ascribed to him by law a domicile: this was his domicile of origin. Other domiciles were domiciles of choice, which he could elect as soon as he became sui juris. It would, therefore, be inconsistent to suppose that the domicile of origin could be obliterated by act of the party. It might be extinguished by act of law, but it could not be destroyed by act of the party. The doctrine that the first domicile remained till another was acquired was true of the domicile of origin, but not of an acquired domicile. Was it to be supposed that if an Englishman went over to Holland, and acquired there a Dutch domicile, and afterwards quitted his house in Holland, sold his goods, discharged his servants, and left the country with no intention of ever returning, that he carried his Dutch domicile about with him on his back until he acquired a new home? His Lordship did not agree with the words attributed to a noble lord in the report of the case of Moorhouse v. Low (Story's Conflict of Laws, last edit.), "that to change the domicile there must be a change of nationality." He apprehended that doctrine was erroneous, and would lead to a confusion between patria and domicilium. He thought that when Col. Udny settled in life, took his lease in Grosvenor-street, became subject to municipal duties, and remained there thirty-two years, he acquired an English domicile. But by selling his lease, discharging his servants, &c., he abandoned it, and his domicile of origin then reverted. Therefore, his marriage, and the consequences of it, must be determined by the law of his domicile of origin. His Lordship agreed that the appeal should be dismissed, with costs. Lord Colonsay simply concurred.

ROLLS COURT.

As the cause list in this court is very short, the Master of the Rolls is now devoting the greater part of his time to summonses adjourned from chambers, company cases, as usual, largely predominating.

Re South of France Wine-Growing Districts Company, Bell's Case, was a summons taken out by the liquidator that Mr. Benjamin Bell might be added on the list of contributories to the above company on the following grounds. Bell was in September, 1866, invited by M. Martin, the promoter of the company, to become a director, which he consented to do on condition that Martin would provide him with the necessary qualification—namely, ten shares. In December following Bell was accordingly elected a director, and continued to act as such till the company was ordered to be wound-up. The ten shares were registered in his name, but he deposed that this was done without his knowledge. On behalf of the liquidator it was argued that Bell, having agreed to become a director with the knowledge that the holding of ten shares was a necessary qualification, must be held to have agreed to accept the shares. His Lordship said that Bell's name must be fixed on the list of contributories. Though he had not formally agreed to accept the shares, yet he had acquiesced in Martin's providing him with the shares, and had thus rendered himself liable. He must also pay the costs of the present application.

Re the China Steamship Company, Dawe's Case, was a representative suit, upon the result of which a considerable sum of money depended, though the amount immediately in dispute was only 40l. Mr. Dawe was the holder of certain shares in the company, on which a call, amounting to 40l., was made on the 27th Nov., 1866, payable on or before the 17th Dec. Mr. Dawe's shares were forfeited on the 14th Dec. 1866, and the question to be decided in this case was whether the company could enforce against Dawe the call which was made before his shares were forfeited. The 34th clause of the articles of association of the company provided that any member whose shares should be forfeited should, nevertheless, be liable to pay all sums owing from him at the time of the forfeiture. On behalf of the liquidator it was argued that the call was owing from the time when it was made, so that it was due at the time of the forfeiture, and Dawe was liable to pay it under the 34th clause of the articles of association. On behalf of Dawe it was contended that the call being expressed to be payable on or before the 17th Dec., could not be said to be owing before that day, and that, therefore, he should not be held liable to pay the amount under the 34th clause of the articles. His Lordship was clearly of opinion that Mr. Dawe must pay the call. It was made on the 27th Nov., and was owing from that day forward, though not recoverable at law till after the 17th December. The meaning of the words, "payable on or before the 17th Dec.," was merely that payment could not be enforced before that day. He must hold that the call was due at the time of the forfeiture, and that Mr. Dawe must pay it.

Re The Constantinople and Alexandria Hotels Company (Limited), Simonides' case, was an application by Mr. Simonides to have his name removed from the list of contributories to the above company in respect of certain shares, on the ground that four days before the shares were allotted to him, he had written to Risk Allah Bey, at whose instance he alleged that he had applied for the shares, stating that he had heard bad news of the company, and therefore wished his application withdrawn. The company was registered in Sept. 1863, and in the following month Simonides applied in the usual form for 200 shares. Only 100 were allotted to him on the 21st Dec., and were registered in his name. There was payable on allotment 1l. per share, which he did not pay, and he had constantly refused to pay, though several applications had been made to him, and he had been threatened with legal proceedings for the recovery of the amount. Risk Allah Bey, to whom he had written on the 17th Dec., with the view of having his application for shares withdrawn, was at no time, it was stated, a director of the company, although his name appeared as such in the prospectus of the company. It appeared that Risk Allah Bey had not communicated Simonides' letter to the directors. His Lordship held that the name of Simonides must remain on the list of contributories.

Re East London Bank (Limited and Reduced) was a petition, under the Companies Act 1867, for the confirmation of a special resolution passed by the bank on the 14th Jan. last, for the reduction of the capital of this bank from 2,000,000l. to 1,000,000l. His Lordship confirmed the resolution. He said that it was not necessary that any provision should be made for the sums due to creditors who had received notice of the resolution and had not objected, as their consent would be assumed; but 183l. 3s. 4d. should be set apart to meet the claims of creditors to that amount, the notices to whom had been returned through the dead letter office. As to the 10th section of the Companies Act 1867, which requires a company, after the date of the passing of any special resolution for reducing its capital, to add the words "and reduced" to its name until such date as the court may fix, his Lordship was of opinion that these words should be retained till the 14th July, when they would have been advertised for six months; but on being informed by counsel that the books of the bank would be balanced on the 30th June, and that its name would then, with the sanction of the Board of Trade, be changed to the "Central Bank of London," his Lordship ordered the additional words to be retained till the 1st July only.

Re Blakely Ordnance Company, ex parte The Metropolitan and Provincial Bank, was an application by the bank for liberty to prove under the winding-up of the above company, upon thirty-two debentures of 250l. each, issued to them by the manager of the company, as well as upon acceptances of the company for 4000l., so that they should not in the whole receive more than 4000l., the amount owing to them from the company. The debentures, which had been given to the bank as a collateral security for the debt, were part of a number given on the formation of the company to Capt. Blakely, in part payment of the goodwill, &c., of his business, and they were made payable to one Challis, or bearer. Two questions arose on the claim of the bank, namely, first, whether the bank were entitled to prove on the debentures, unless in Challis's name, and subject to the equities which might exist between him and the company; and, secondly, whether the claim was to be confined to the proof on the acceptances, which had been allowed, or extended to the debentures, provided that the bank should not receive more than 20s. in the pound on both proofs. His Lordship said that, if the debentures had been issued to Challis, and had been assigned by him to the bank, the bank clearly could only have taken them subject to the equities between Challis and the company. But there was clear evidence that the debentures had never been issued to Challis, but had been in the first instance issued to the bank, so that the bank were not assignees, but holders of the debentures, and the question as to the equities between Challis and the company did not arise. Kellock's case, 18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 671; L. Rep. 3 Ch. App. 769, had been cited as an authority for the second proposition, viz., that the bank were entitled to prove both upon the acceptances and the debentures. It was decided in that case that the creditor of a company in liquidation is entitled to prove against the estate for the full amount of his debt, and not merely the balance which might be due to him after giving credit for the value of his securities. His Lordship was of opinion that the present case was not governed by Kellock's case, as there was here no specific charge on a distinct property. Where a company gave their promissory note, or accepted a bill, and also gave a lien on another property—e.g., a cargo of cotton, the creditor might, according to Kellock's case, prove on the note or the bill, and afterwards realise what he could by the sale of the cotton, provided that he should in no case receive more than the amount due to him; but where the debt was merely secured, as in the present case, by the company's covenant contained in the debentures, and also by their acceptances, there could be no proof for more than the amount actually due. The proof must, therefore, be restricted to the acceptances for 4000l., and the summons must be dismissed with costs.

Re The Blakely Ordnance Company; Ware's case, was an application by the liquidator of the company to have removed from the list of contributories the name of Ware in respect of certain shares, and to have the name of the person who transferred the shares to Ware substituted instead, on the ground that at the time of the transfer Ware was an infant. Ware attained his majority two months ago, and had taken no steps to repudiate his liability in respect of the shares, and it was contended on behalf of the transferor that the court had no jurisdiction, now that he had attained his majority, to remove his name without any application on his part. But on proof that the late infant was incapable of making any payments in respect of the shares, his Lordship held that his name must be removed, and that of the transferor substituted in its stead.

Peters v. Bacon was a summons in this suit that certain leaseholds which had been ordered to be sold under the decree in the suit, might be sold without serving the decree on certain persons in California, who might have a small interest in the property, or that leave might be given to serve notice by means of advertisements in the Californian newspapers and in the Times. His Lordship said that he could not allow the sale without notice to the persons abroad who were interested in the property, but that he should give leave to serve notice of the decree by means of advertisements in California or elsewhere, and for such number of times as the chief clerk should direct.

V.C. MALINS' COURT.

During the past week there have been but few cases worthy of being noted.

The case of the Teign Valley Railway Company involved the question whether outside creditors who had not appeared upon a scheme, filed and confirmed by the court, were bound by it. The case came on upon application by the late secretary to be allowed, notwithstanding the scheme, to apply to the Court of Exchequer for leave to issue a sci. fa. against certain shareholders still liable to calls. The applicant, under the Companies Clauses Act 1845, had a right to go against the shareholders, but there having been a scheme, the practice of the courts of law was that such right could not be prosecuted without the leave of this court. Execution had been issued against the promoters, and there was a return of nulla bond, and if the leave now asked was not given the result would be that the directors would proceed against the shareholders, and the outside creditors would lose their remedy. Lord Cairns had held that although outside creditors did not appear on a scheme, they were not bound because they did not object; this was in The Bristol and North Somerset Railway Company, L. Rep. 6 Eq. 448. The applicant was opposed by the directors on the ground that the 17th section of the Railway Act 1867, provided that all those who did not attend when a scheme was brought before the court were bound, for it had been held that if a scheme was opposed it could not be confirmed. The Vice-Chancellor decided that the scheme was confirmed on the assumption that it could not bind outside creditors, but those only who had a lien; therefore the application must be granted.

The next case was that of Kemptner's Trust, which raised a question as to the right to the proceeds of certain bills given to one partner of a firm. It appeared that one Kemptner, being a merchant at Japan, and about to come to England, his then share of the partnership assets was about 4000*l.*, for which his partners gave three sets of bills; one set he took with him, went to New York, and they were not forthcoming. He died at New York; and one of the other partners indorsed another set of bills under an arrangement to that effect, and the proceeds had been vested in special trustees, to abide the decision of the question, whether they belonged to Kemptner's representatives, or to the general creditors, inasmuch as the firm failed for 90,000*l.* within a year. It was strongly urged that the accounts showed solvency when the bills were given, the liabilities being only 30,000*l.*, of which a firm of Smith and Co. were liable to half, with assets to the extent of 20,000*l.* The Vice-Chancellor was, however, of opinion that the fact of insolvency within so short a period to so great an amount showed insolvency virtually at the time the bills were given, and that Kemptner must have known it, or if he did not, he ought to have known it. A liability to such a loss must have existed at the time, and that was virtual insolvency, therefore the general creditors were entitled.

The only other case which may be mentioned was Brookman's Trust, turning on the construction of certain marriage articles, in the events which had happened; the point turning on the fact that there being a power to the settlor to make a will, and provide for his daughter and her issue, and he had so provided for her; but his daughter, who was his only child, predeceased him, and, therefore, it was urged that no interest passed to such child's representatives. The Vice-Chancellor was, however, of opinion that the articles must be the instrument to be construed, and not the will: for if that were not so, the whole intention of the parties would be defeated, inasmuch as the will did not speak until the death, at which time there was no child of the daughter living, although she herself survived him. The effect of the old system of sending the case to a court of law, had been productive of the greatest injustice, and Sir James Wigram, in one case (Jones v. How, 7 Hare 267) confirmed a certificate of the Court of Common Pleas, although he at the same time observed that it clearly disappointed the intention of the parties. Under these circumstances, the child took a vested interest, and the fact of its predeceasing the settlor, made no difference, and whoever represented it was now entitled.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

The case of Evans (administrator) v. Bignold, a question of considerable interest to life insurers came under the consideration of the court on Friday, June 4. As far back as the year 1774, the Legislature found it necessary to step in to check the practice which had sprung up of a most pernicious species of gambling, namely, gambling in life policies, and to this end the 14 Geo. 3, c. 48, was passed, which after reciting "that it hath been found by experience that the making insurances on lives or other events wherein the assured shall have no interest hath introduced a mischievous kind of gaming," enacts by sect. 1 "that no insurance shall be made by any person on the life or lives of any person or persons or on any other event or events whatsoever wherein the person or persons for whose use, benefit, or on whose account such policy or policies shall be made shall have no interest, or by gaming or wagering, and that every insurance made contrary to the true intent and meaning hereof shall be null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever." The 2nd section enacts, "That it shall not be lawful to make any policy or policies on the life or lives of any person or persons, or other event or events, without inserting in each policy or policies the person or persons' name or names interested therein, or for whose use, benefit, or on whose account such policy is made or underwritten." The facts of the case were these:—Mr. Evans, the plaintiff, some years since married a young lady who was then a minor, and who would be entitled upon her attaining twenty-one, to a legacy of between 200*l.* and 300*l.* The plaintiff having occasion for the sum of 200*l.*, he applied to his wife's trustees to advance it out of her expectant legacy. This they consented to do if a Mr. Jacobs would consent to be a guarantee for its repayment. To this Mr. Jacobs assented, provided Mr. Evans would effect a policy of insurance upon his wife's life for the amount. Accordingly a policy of insurance was granted by the Norwich Union Life Office, of which the defendant is the secretary, upon the life of Mrs. Evans in her own name, no notice whatever having been taken by the policy that it was effected for the benefit of Mr. Evans. Mrs. Evans having died in childbirth, her husband as her administrator claimed the amount of the policy from the office. Payment, however, was refused, and upon an action being brought they set up a defence under the 2nd section of the above-mentioned Act. The facts having been stated in the form of a special case, the question came on for argument before the court, when with much reluctance they found themselves compelled to hold that under the foregoing section the policy was void, and so they gave judgment for the defendant.

In the matter of Graves and others v. Cordery, Re The West London Philanthropic Burial Society, which came before the court on the 3rd inst., the court discharged a rule which had been granted for a certiorari for the purpose of quashing an order made by Mr. Selfe, the police magistrate, with regard to a disputed matter relating to the above named friendly society. By 21 & 23 Vict. c. 101, s. 3, it is provided, "that where the rules of any society established under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, or any of the Acts thereby repealed, shall direct disputes to be referred to justices, then any justice of the peace acting in the county or borough in which the place of business of such society shall be situated, upon complaint made by any member, his executors, administrators, nominees, or assigns, or by any person claiming under the rules of the society, of any matter in dispute between him or them and the society, to summon the person against whom such complaint is made to appear at a time and place to be named in such summons, and any two justices present at the time and place mentioned in such summons shall proceed to hear and determine the said complaint."

And such justices may make such order thereupon, either for the payment of money or otherwise, together with costs, not exceeding ten shillings, as they shall think fit, &c." This section, it will be seen, authorises the justices (one metropolitan magistrate being enabled by another statute to exercise the same power) to adjudicate upon disputed matters brought before them only in cases where the rules of the society "shall direct disputes to be referred" to them. In the present case the rules of the society did not contain a direction of this kind, but that fact was not brought expressly to the knowledge of the magistrate by either of the parties who came before him. On this ground it was contended by Mr. Macnamara that the court should not, in the exercise of its discretion, grant a certiorari to quash the magistrate's order. Mr. Underdown, on the other side, argued that it was sufficient to bring the materials of knowledge before the magistrate, and that that had been done. The court (consisting of the Lord Chief Justice, and Justices Blackburn, Mellor, and Lush) were of opinion that under the circumstances of the case they should not grant what is discretionary in them to grant, a writ of certiorari to bring up the order to quash it, as it was the applicant's own omission to bring to the magistrate's notice the fact of the society's rules not containing the usual direction to refer disputed matters to justices for adjudication, which induced Mr. Selfe to make the order complained of; if the matter had been brought to his knowledge, so experienced a magistrate as Mr. Selfe would at once have perceived the absence of jurisdiction and have refused to entertain the matter.

The case of Wellfare v. The London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway Company, which came before the court on the same day, involved a curious question as to railway liability. The plaintiff went to the London-bridge railway station for the purpose of going to Croydon. He missed his train, and asked a porter when the next would go; the porter directed him to look at the time table which hung on the wall outside the doorway; he proceeded to the place pointed out; and whilst looking at the time table a plank of wood and a rail of zinc fell upon him; he looked up, and saw a man's legs through a hole in the roof through which the wood and zinc had fallen. There being no further evidence whatever, the question arose, could the railway company be held liable under the circumstances for the injury sustained by the plaintiff. The case was argued at considerable length by Mr. Haddleton, Q.C., and Mr. Lopes on the part of the railway company; and by Mr. Q. Wood on behalf of the plaintiff. For the company it was urged that there was no evidence that the roof was in an insecure state, or that the man whose legs were seen through the hole was a servant of the company, or that if he was he had been guilty of any negligence, it being possible that the wood and zinc fell by a mere accident; it was most probable that the man on the roof was the servant of some contractor who had undertaken to do something to the roof. On behalf of the plaintiff it was contended that he having been invited by the company to go on their premises, it was their duty to keep the portico over the place where the time table was in a safe condition; that the fact of the man being on the roof with wood and zinc, afforded a presumption that the roof was out of repair; that it was also to be presumed that he was a servant of the railway company, a presumption which, if not well founded, the railway company could easily have rebutted by evidence at the trial. The court gave judgment in favour of the railway company, chiefly on the ground that there was no evidence that the man on the roof was one of their servants; the probability being that the railway company, in having repairs done to their premises, acted in the same manner as most other persons in the metropolis, and employed a contractor for the purpose, who sent one of his employees to do the work; besides, even if the man on the roof were a servant of the company, there was no evidence of negligence on his part or on the part of the company, as it was not shown that they knew the roof to be in an insecure state when they allowed the man to go upon it; and the falling of the timber and zinc might have been wholly owing to an accidental slip, and in no degree to negligence.

Eddy v. Stevens, argued on the same day, brought to light an unpleasant, but seemingly necessary, result of the provisions of the 11 Geo. 4, and 1 Will. 4, c. 47, relating to the devise of lands which have been bound by specialty debts. Sect. 2 of that Act makes devisees of such land as against specialty creditors, "fraudulent, and clearly, absolutely, and utterly void, frustrate and of no effect; any pretence, colour, feigned or presumed consideration, or any other matter or thing to the contrary notwithstanding." Sect. 3 enables the creditors to recover upon the specialties in an action of debt or covenant, "against the heir and heirs-at-law of the obligor or obligors, covenantor or covenantors, and such devisee or devisees, or the devisee or devisees of such first-mentioned devisee or devisees jointly." Sect. 4 provides that if there is no heir-at-law against whom jointly with the devisee or devisees, the creditor may proceed, he may bring his action against the devisee or devisees solely. The heir-at-law, then, where such exists, must in all cases be joined as co-defendant with the devisee or devisees, and the creditor has no option in the matter, even though he may know that the heir has got nothing by descent. The heir, however, in such a case is provided for by sect. 7, which enables him to plead to the action "riens per descent" at the time of the original writ brought or bill filed against him. If the heir succeeds in establishing his plea of "riens per descent," he is of course entitled to his costs from the plaintiff, the specialty creditor, who nevertheless is obliged by the statute in all cases to join the heir as co-defendant with the devisee, even though the creditor knows that the heir will plead, and will establish this plea of nothing by descent. In the argument of the case it was contended that the words of the enactment made the fraudulent devise void as against the heir as well as against the creditors, but the court at once pronounced against the contention.

Frestone v. Casswell, which came before the court on the 5th inst., was one of those constantly recurring cases of cattle found straying on the highway. The appellant in the present case had for a very long time exercised the right of depasturing his cattle on strips of greensward on the sides of the road, and thought that on this account he was exempted from the penalty imposed by 27 & 28 Vict. c. 101, s. 25, on the owners of cattle found straying on the highway itself. The court, however, considered that he was clearly liable to the penalty, and Mr. Justice Hayes pointed out that the question had already been decided in the case of Golding v. Stocking, reported in 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 479.

On Monday last Mr. H. James moved on behalf of Sir John Henniker for a rule calling on certain justices of Hampshire to show cause why a mandamus should not issue to compel them to receive certain information and to issue certain summons against two persons for being in pursuit of game, without having a game certificate. The offence complained of had been committed on Sir John Henniker's land on a Sunday, and the magistrates had already granted summonses against the two persons for trespassing on his land; and for trespassing in pursuit of game on a Sunday. The justices seem to have thought these two summonses sufficient, without granting a third in respect of the same offence; but they grounded their refusal to grant the last summons on the fact that the person who applied for it on behalf of Sir John Henniker was a youth of only fourteen years of age. They had, however, granted the other two summonses to the same youth, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 10, provides that "every complaint upon which a justice or justices of the peace is, or are, or shall be authorised by law to make an order, shall be for one matter of complaint only, and not for two or more matters of complaint and every such offence shall be for one offence only, and not for two or more offences; and every such complaint or information may be laid or made by the complainant or informant in person, or by his counsel or attorney, or other person authorised in that behalf." The court refused to grant a mandamus, and were of opinion that the justices had acted rightly in refusing a summons to a boy of fourteen, who could not be made to pay the costs of the other side; and if Sir John Henniker had any objection to appearing before the justices in person, he might be represented by an attorney.

The case of Harris v. Quine raised a most important, and, in one respect, a totally new, question relating to the statutes of limitations of foreign countries and the force to be given to them here. It had already been decided by various cases that statutes of limitation, where they do not expressly avoid contracts not sued upon within the period limited, affect only the remedy upon them, not taking away the cause of action or affecting the merits of the case, but dealing only with the mode of procedure. The peculiarity of the present case consisted in this, that an action, for the same debt as was sued upon in this country, viz., an attorney's bill of costs, had been brought in the Isle of Man, the place where both the parties lived and where the cause of action arose, and the Isle of Man Statute of Limitations being for actions of contract for three years, was pleaded to the action, and judgment thereupon given for the defendant. The present action was then brought in this country, where the period limited by the statute for the recovery of such claims is six years. The main question argued was whether a plea of the Isle of Man Statute of Limitations, and of judgment in favour of the defendant there, was not a bar to the present action. Mr. R. G. Williams argued in support of the plaintiff's claim to recover in this country, notwithstanding the action brought in the Isle of Man and the statute of limitations of that country; and mainly relied on the proposition, in support of which many cases were cited, that statutes of limitation do not take away the cause of action, but only the remedy in the particular country, and that judgment in favour of the defendant on that ground was not a decision on the merits, but merely a formal decision that three years had elapsed since the accruing of the cause of action; and consequently that the Isle of Man judgment in favour of the defendant was not a bar to the action here. Mr. Baylis, for the defendant, contended that an action for the same debt having been brought in the Isle of Man, and the defendant having obtained judgment in his favour, there now existed no cause of action, and that the comity of nations should induce the court to give to the Isle of Man judgment in favour of the defendant the same effect as the court would give to a judgment in favour of the plaintiff. He also argued that the maxim nemo vis viciat debet prolem causâ should induce the court to discourage such actions as the present. The court were of opinion that they were bound by authority to hold that the proceedings in the Isle of Man court did not prevent the plaintiff from proceeding in respect of the same cause of action in this country, where the period allowed by the Statute of Limitations was longer, the judgment of the Isle of Man court in favour of the defendant not being a judgment on the merits, and the local statute of limitations not taking away the cause of action, but only barring the remedy in that island. A further point was also decided in this case, namely, that the prosecution of an appeal from a judgment of the Isle of Man Court was a continuation of the former proceedings which the attorney was employed to conduct, and consequently that the Statute of Limitations did not begin to run against the attorney's claim for his bill of costs until the proceedings on appeal had been brought to a close.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

A question of some interest arose in the case Weller v. Bradshaw, on the 27th ult. It was an action of trespass for an unlawful distress, at the trial of which, before the Lord Chief Baron at Chester, the plaintiff obtained a verdict, and damages were contingently assessed by the jury, a point being reserved by his Lordship whether the plaintiff was entitled to any, and what amount of damages beyond the sum actually paid by him to redeem his goods. A rule nisi was accordingly subsequently obtained on the plaintiff's part to increase the verdict by the sums of 50s. and 99s., or such other sum or sums as the court might direct, pursuant to leave reserved on the ground that the plaintiff was entitled to recover such damages, and that the jury should have been so directed; or to increase the verdict by 32l. 16s. on the ground that the plaintiff was entitled to double value by way of damages. Mr. McIntyre, for the defendant, now showed cause against the rule, and contended that, in trespass for taking goods the measure of the damages is the value of the goods. Here the plaintiff had recovered the 32l. which he had paid to redeem the goods, and which was therefore the value of them, and he was not entitled to anything more. He cited Williams v. Currie, 1 C. B. 841, Harvey v. Pockock, 11 M. & W. 740, Keen v. Priest, 4 H. & N. 236, and Attack v. Bramwell, 7 L. T. Rep. N. S. 740; 32 L. J. 146, Q. B. 3 B.; & S. 340, in support of his argument, and distinguished Thomas v. Harris, 27 L. J. 535, Ex., which was relied on by the plaintiff. Mr. H. Giffard, Q. C., and Mr. Harington, for the plaintiff, supported the rule. Damage was here proved to have occurred to the plaintiff beyond the mere taking of the goods, and compelling him to redeem them; a wrong had been done. It was a trespass, and was not the less so because it was in the form of a distress. Here the defendant chose to take the law into his own hands, and he did so at his own risk. The damage is not confined to the mere value of the goods. The court (Chief Baron Kelly, and Barons Bramwell and Channell) were of opinion that the goods having been unlawfully seized the plaintiff was entitled to recover in trespass damages beyond the sum paid by him to redeem them. Had the defendant discovered his error and withdrawn, yet damages could have been recovered in trespass against him, notwithstanding the restitution of the goods. How then could it be said that where a plaintiff has been compelled to pay money to redeem his goods he is not entitled to maintain an action to recover that money and damages beyond? The plaintiff's rule therefore was made absolute.

A curious question came before the court on the 29th May in Spendlove v. The Midland Railway Company, which was an action to recover damages for personal injuries resulting to a passenger on the defendants' railway, through the alleged negligence of the defendants. The facts were shortly these: The plaintiff was travelling in a train on the defendants' line of railway, when one of the coupling chains snapped asunder, and so the carriage in which the plaintiff was riding was left at a standstill upon the line, and the engine and the rest of the train having gone on and left it behind. It appeared that an express train was due at the spot in question in about, as a matter of fact, ten or fifteen minutes from the time at which the carriage came to a stop, and the plaintiff, feeling alarmed at the fact that an express train was coming on behind, jumped, or descended hastily from the carriage in which he was, and in doing so his foot hitched, or slipped, upon the step of the carriage, and he fell upon the line, or upon a bank at the side of it, and received the injury for which he sought compensation. At the trial before Mr. Justice Hayes, at Leeds, the learned judge was of opinion there was no evidence of negligence to fix the defendants, and directed a verdict for them; and a rule was subsequently obtained by the plaintiff to set that verdict aside, and for a new trial, against which Mr. Overend, Q. C., for the defendants, showed cause, and was stopped by the court, who called on Mr. Field, Q. C. and Mr. Waddy, for the plaintiff, to support their rule, who submitted that the breaking of the coupling iron was admittedly negligence to start with, for which the company were responsible. The real time for the express train's arrival at the spot was not material. The company by their neglect in the matter of the coupling iron had placed the plaintiff in a position of peril, and a state of trepidation, and had no right to expect him to remain passive. Whether or not the plaintiff exercised a wise judgment in jumping out hastily was another matter. The defendants, as the cause of his haste, were liable. The court, however (Chief Baron Kelly, and Barons Channell and Cleasby) were clearly of opinion that the ruling of Mr. Justice Hayes was right, and that there was no need for any such haste or trepidation on the plaintiff's part, as to prevent him from using ordinary care in getting out of the carriage, as it was proved that the express train was not due at the spot for nearly a quarter of an hour. The cause of the accident was the defendant's own carelessness, or panic, for which there was no ground as far as the defendants were concerned, and the rule would therefore be discharged.

On Monday, the 7th June, a case of great importance was decided in the Court of Exchequer with reference to the question to whom penalties and fines imposed by the justices of the borough of Bradford, in the exercise of their summary jurisdiction in respect of offences against the general law of the land, and not under local statutes, were to be paid. It appeared that the Parliamentary Borough of Bradford was in 1847 constituted a municipal borough by royal charter, extending to it the provisions of the Municipal Corporations Act. It has a separate commission of the peace under the 98th sect. of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, which was granted on the 6th July 1848, but no separate court of quarter sessions. It has a borough fund and treasurer, and supports its own police. It maintains the borough court, and pays the salaries of the clerks and officers. The justices of the peace for the West Riding are empowered by statute to exercise jurisdiction in and for the borough as fully as by law they may do in the county, but by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 18, s. 1, every sitting and acting of the borough justices at the court appointed for the purpose, is to be deemed a petty sessions of the peace, and the district for which the same is holden is to be deemed a petty sessional division within the meaning of any Act then or thereafter made. In all summary proceedings before the borough court there is an allegation that the parties live, or that the offence was committed, within the borough, and the hearing always takes place within the petty sessional division, viz., the borough; and whenever the West Riding justices assist in the cases, they are always described as acting in and for the borough. By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 31, regulations are laid down respecting the payment of penalties and other moneys under summary convictions and orders of justices. All moneys received by constables are paid over to the clerk of the division. The statute directs that if there be no direction in the statute imposing the penalty, the clerk shall pay the same to the treasurer of the county, riding, division, liberty, city, borough, or place for which such justice or justices shall have acted. The plaintiff, as treasurer of the West Riding, sued the defendant, as clerk to the justices of the borough of Bradford, for certain penalties imposed by the borough justices under Acts not providing for the application of the penalties. The defendant's contention was that Bradford, possessing a separate commission of the peace, the penalties were not payable to the county treasurer. The court, however, decided that the justices of the borough must be taken to act for the county, and, therefore, the penalties must be paid to the county treasurer; they, therefore, gave judgment for the plaintiff.

In the case of Davies v. Taylor, a point arose which, it is believed, is frequently arising, and always involves great difficulty, there being objections to the result in whichever way it is solved. The question arose on demurrer to a declaration; the declaration alleged that a contract had been entered into between the plaintiffs and a Revd. Mr. Bailey for the repair and alteration of a church; that the repair and alterations were to be done according to the plans prepared by the defendant, who was appointed architect, and that the payment was to be made in certain instalments upon the certificate of the defendant certifying his satisfaction with the work. It further alleged that the defendant had entered upon the office of architect and prepared plans, that a large portion of the work had been well and properly done, and the defendant had been applied to for a certificate; that the defendant had no cause for dissatisfaction, and was not in fact dissatisfied, but nevertheless with intent to injure the plaintiffs he maliciously, unjustly, and fraudulently withheld his certificate. It was argued for the defendant that if the architect in these cases were subject to an action, the whole intention with which these provisions were inserted in building contracts would be frustrated; the object was, that the employer might have the benefit of the unfettered and independent opinion of the architect; he was like an arbitrator, and there was no authority to show that an action could be maintained against an arbitrator, even if it was alleged his conduct was malicious. On the other side it was contended that the defendant having taken upon himself the functions of architect under the contract, was bound to exercise them bona fide; his discretion, it was true, was not to be in any way interfered with or fettered, but he was bound to exercise a bona fide discretion; he could not be allowed through personal malice or spite to refuse to certify. If it were not so, the plaintiffs would be deprived of all remedy, for though if there were collusion, they might possibly be entitled to sue the employer, in a case where there was no collusion, and the refusal proceeded solely from malice on the architect's part, the employer was not responsible, and the only remedy must be against the architect. The court took time to consider its judgment. During the course of the day, Baron Bramwell took occasion to complain of the way in which the points for argument of cases in the special paper were drawn. The learned Baron said that very often the vagueness and baldness of the points amounted to an impertinence. They really gave no information whatever as to what the contentions of the parties were intended to be. They amounted, often, to merely saying, with more or less pretence, that the plaintiff or defendant in the case thought he was right and ought to have judgment, and could be no guide to the court or the opposite party. This is not the first time that the learned judge has adverted to the subject. On a previous occasion, some time ago, he said that the delivery with a demurrer to a plea of a composition-deed, of such a point as that the defendant will contend that the said deed is not a valid deed under the 192nd section of the Bankruptcy Act 1861, is really wholly useless. The Chief Baron said that he fully agreed with the observation of his learned brother, and he hoped that counsel or others preparing points for argument would take care that they really answered the purpose for which they were intended, viz., to give some information to the court as to what the points of law upon which the respective parties based their contentions were.

In the case of Hopkins v. Ware on Tuesday, the 1st inst., the court, Barons Bramwell and Channell, decided that from the 10th May to the 6th June was an unreasonable time to delay presentment of a cheque.

A nice point of practice arose on Tuesday, the 8th, in a case of Re Pook, gentleman, One, &c., Ex parte Burbage. A rule had been obtained by Mr. C. Coleman, on the 25th ult., calling on the said Pook to show cause why he should not forthwith pay to Burbage the sum of 15l. balance (after deducting 6l. 6s. 6d. for his costs) of the sum of 21l. 6s. 6d., received by him from the Sheriff of Kent, under a writ of fi. fa., levied in an action of Burbage v. Brown, and why the said Pook should not also pay the costs of this application. Sir J. B. Karslake, Q. C., and Mr. Pearce, for Mr. Pook, showed cause, on the ground that an action had already been brought by Burbage against Pook on the 13th May, for this very balance, and that Burbage could not have, or at all events could not enforce, a double remedy at the same time. That rule was laid down in a case of Anonymous in the Bail Court by Mr. Justice Coleridge (see 5 Jurist, 578) in a precisely similar case, where his Lordship declined to make a rule absolute for payment of money under an award until the applicant had discontinued an action pending in the same matter. Mr. Garth, Q. C., and Mr. C. Coleman supported their rule, and said that when the rule was moved, the court were informed that there was an action pending, but that if the rule were granted the action would be discontinued. That immediately after obtaining the rule nisi on the 26th May, Mr. Burbage's attorney, on the 28th May, wrote to Mr. Pook as follows:—"Burbage v. Yourself. Sir,—As my client has obtained the rule, with a copy of which you have been served, he intends abandoning this action, and will 'pay the costs of entering an appearance.'" It is contended that the action practically was discontinued, for no court or judge would allow it to go on after that letter. [Chief Baron Kelly thought the rule should not have been made until after the action had been discontinued, or that if granted, it should have been granted only on the express terms of the discontinuance of the action. Baron Bramwell referred to the case of Paull v. Paull, 2 Dowl. P. C., in the K. B. 340, where in a somewhat similar case that court had allowed a rule to be made absolute, upon the plaintiff discontinuing the action and paying the costs.] After some further discussion the court (Chief Baron Kelly, and Barons Bramwell, Channell, and Clesaby), being of opinion that a plaintiff ought not to pursue two remedies at one and the same time, for one and the same demand, gave judgment, discharging the rule without costs, and without prejudice to the plaintiff's right to proceed with the action, Baron Bramwell observing that he could not think any blame attached to the court for granting the rule, which it should be remembered was granted nisi, and subject, of course, to cause being shown against it upon any ground that could be shown to exist.

LEGISLATION AND JURISPRUDENCE.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THE COURTS OF JUSTICE.

Mr. BENTINCK asked the First Commissioner of Works whether the sketch of the new design for the "Courts of Justice Building," now in the Library, and bearing the name of Mr. Street, had been approved by Her Majesty's Government for erection on the Thames Embankment; whether he adhered to his recommendation, made in that House on the 10th May last, that the style of the new building should be the "Gothic employed by the Italians in the early part of the 15th century," and whether he was of opinion that the new design fulfilled that condition; whether the three towers connected with the new design were intended for the preservation of documents, or to serve any useful purpose besides that of ventilation, and what was their probable cost; and whether he would exhibit in the Library the elevation of the "river front" and "park front" of the Westminster Palace, designed by Inigo Jones and engraved in the works of Inigo Jones, published by Lord Burlington and Kent.—Mr. LAYARD said that when his hon. friend asked if he approved of the sketch of the new design referred to for the Courts of Justice building he would say that it was never his fortune to see a more beautiful and artistic piece of work; but he would remind his hon. friend that the elevation was a mere sketch. If the House should approve of the erection of the law courts on the Embankment, he should think it his duty to have a model placed in the Library, or some other part of the House to which members might have access, and so be able to form an opinion. As to the second part of the question, he begged to say that he did not recommend that the style of the new building should be the "Gothic employed by the Italians in the 15th century." What he did say was that he thought Gothic was the most appropriate style for the English Law Courts, but he did not advocate Ecclesiastical Gothic, but said that the Italians had made use of Gothic for a similar purpose in the 15th century, and that such a building might be erected without having recourse to Ecclesiastical Gothic. As regarded the three towers, this was a mere sketch, and therefore he could not answer the question of his hon. friend. With respect to the fourth part of the question, the river front of Inigo Jones had been exhibited for some days in the Library, where it might be seen by his hon. friend.

THE REVISION OF THE STATUTE LAW.

On the motion for going into committee of supply, Mr. HADFIELD called attention to the revision of the statute law (with a view to the preparation of an edition of the statute law comprising only enactments now in force) under the following Acts: 26 & 27 Vict. c. 125 (1863), 30 & 31 Vict. c. 59 (1867), and the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 101 (1861). The hon. gentleman remarked that the Statute Law Commission had been engaged for thirty-six years, at a cost to the country of over 80,000*l.*, without the production of a single enactment. He contrasted this with the great work so rapidly produced in the case of the Code Napoleon, as also in the codification of the statute laws of America. The whole proceedings of this commission were most discreditable, a sham, and a robbery of the taxpayer. We ought to have nothing more to do with this commission, but make a fresh beginning. Of the two gentlemen said to be employed in the revision of the statute law, one, he believed, had been discharged, and it would be interesting to know what the other is doing, if anything, for his 1000*l.* a year, besides a secretary. He concluded by moving the following resolution: "That the Royal Commissions of 1833 and 1845, and the measures for the revision of the statute law having occasioned an expenditure of 80,619*l.* 5*s.* 1*d.*, and the results being unsatisfactory, it is, in the opinion of this House, expedient to discontinue the present course of proceeding, and the expenditure consequent thereon."—Mr. L. KING, in seconding the motion, said that having gone into the question on former occasions, he would content himself by saying that the present state of the law was most disgraceful. The common law was scattered over he knew not how many volumes, and the statute law was scattered over fifty volumes. The Commission of 1833 consisted of men who were anxious to do the work, but it dwindled down to one notorious character—he would not mention his name—and nothing was done. They came out at first with a grand promise that they would give a Code Victoria, but everybody knew that nothing would be done. He had no wish to press the matter upon the Government, who had something to destroy; but he wished them to build something up.—Mr. GLADSTONE said he was afraid he would not be able to answer his hon. friend (Mr. Hadfield) as satisfactorily as might have been the case if he had been fully aware of the gist of his question. Judging from the notice on the paper, he came to the conclusion that nothing was expected except that he should give an account of what was now in course of progress, and that there the matter should drop for the present. But the resolution with which his hon. friend concluded involved the further subject whether they should break in upon what was now in progress, and substitute some new process. He only referred to this by way of apology, as he was not in condition to give a positive assurance that any new method of proceeding would be adopted, inasmuch as the members of the Government had not conferred upon the subject. Without passing censure upon anybody, he could only express his regret that a sum over 80,000*l.* should have been expended, not for the higher process of codifying the law, but for producing a revised edition of the statutes, and that they should not yet be in possession of that edition. With regard to the present position and expenditure, he would give the best explanation in his power, and it would be for his hon. friend to consider whether he should not call for further information in a more strictly official shape; but he hoped the hon. member would not now press for a definitive judgment upon the matter. In July 1868 Lord Cairns, who was then Lord Chancellor, addressed a letter to Sir John Shaw Lefevre, in which he stated that having communicated with the Treasury, he arrived at the conclusion that an edition should be prepared and published containing such Acts as were now in force, and he then proceeded to nominate the committee for making the necessary arrangements. In that letter Lord Cairns associated with Sir J. S. Lefevre, Sir Thomas Erskine May, K.C.B., Mr. Rickards (Mr. Speaker's counsel), Mr. Thring (Parliamentary counsel to the Home Office), and Mr. Reilly, who was engaged in the work of statute law revision. No one of these gentlemen received any remuneration for the labour which they gave in connection with this work. Mr. Arthur John Wood, who was engaged in the work from the beginning, was to be the editor of the work under the committee. His answer to the first question of his hon. friend was, that the revision pursuant to the Act of 1861, embracing the period from the 11 Geo. 3 to the 16 & 17 Vict., was not absolutely completed, because it was found that a further revision should be extended to some classes of useless enactments not comprised in the Act of 1861, but with these exceptions the revision was complete down to 1861. With regard to the second question, whether it was intended to revise and repeal useless enactments down to the present time, his answer was that a Bill was in an advanced state of preparation for the period embraced in the Act of 1861 and down to the present time, but it was not intended to pass it in the present session—(Hear, hear, from Mr. Hadfield—laughter)—because it was not in strict order of proceeding, and because exertions were directed to the earlier period of the statutes before 1861. As to the third question, whether the revised edition will be prepared for public use, and when it will be ready for publication, the matter was under the consideration of the Treasury, and it was contemplated to publish the edition for public use; but as the circulation of copies involved considerable expense and labour, the Treasury had not yet come to an agreement with the committee as to the manner in which this duty should be undertaken. As to whether the work will be purchasable in a complete set of volumes, and purchasable as each volume was completed, his answer was that they could be purchased as they were published; but there were to be two other works, viz., an expurgated chronological table describing the statutes from the earliest time, and showing whether the statute had been repealed; and the other an index of all Acts now in force arranged alphabetically. Both works would be ready for publication before next session, and would be brought down to the present day. That was the present condition of the matter, and he hoped his hon. friend would not ask the House to come to a decisive vote upon it. (Hear, hear.)—Mr. HINDE PALMER thought they should have some positive assurance that a responsible Minister would undertake to see that the work was carried out, for otherwise they might be in the same position thirty years hence. The cause of the delay was owing to the fact that the men appointed to do the work were generally barristers having a large practice, and in attending to the daily business of their profession they neglected the work of revision. There was no security for the prompt execution of the work except by placing it under the supervision of some responsible member of the Government.—Mr. AYTON could assure the hon. member that in approaching the consideration of the subject the Government were fully alive to the views he had expressed to the House. When the proposal was brought to the Treasury the first thing done was to inquire into the prospect of completing the work on which Lord Cairns had directed the committee to embark. The Treasury had determined that the work should not be undertaken until a clear arrangement had been arrived at, to ensure the publication of the expurgated edition of the statutes within some defined period of time and within some defined limit of expense. The subject had since then engaged the attention both of the Treasury and of the committee with the view of arriving at a positive understanding on those subjects. As soon as that understanding was arrived at, and not before, would the work be finally undertaken. He could assure hon. gentlemen who took an interest in the matter, that the Treasury would watch very carefully the proceedings of the committee to see that they adhered to their arrangement. The Treasury had been warned by the experience of all that had occurred before, and by the enormous sums that had been spent and wasted on those attempts, and so far as it was possible they would make a definite contract. When that was done he should be happy, if his hon. friend desired, to lay the papers on the table of the House. If the House wished to have a digested edition of the statutes, that would be more difficult, and would require more time. Some gentlemen even required to have the statutes codified, but that would take years. The best way was to begin with something practicable, and go on improving the state of the statute law, and then codification would be a labour which could be accomplished in a reasonable time.—Mr. DOWNS asked whether there would, at the same time, be a consolidation of the Irish ante-union statutes, and post-union statutes applicable to Ireland alone.—After a few words from Colonel FRENCH, the ATTORNEY-GENERAL said the expurgation of the statutes would refer to all imperial statutes after the union, but not to the Irish statutes before the union. The revision had not been perfectly completed beyond the reign of George III. It had been imperfectly done since; but a Bill was now in preparation to make the revision complete. The House then divided—for Mr. Hadfield's amendment, 64; against it, 217; majority, 153.

MUNICIPAL FRANCHISE BILL.

On the consideration of this Bill as amended, Mr. JACOB BRIGHT moved the insertion of the following clause:—That in this Act, and the said recited Act, wherever words occur which import the masculine gender, the same shall be held to include females for all purposes connected with and having reference to the election of or power to elect representatives of any municipal corporation.—Mr. BRUCE said the clause would get rid of an anomaly in our laws with reference to local self-government, and upon that ground he cordially supported the clause.—Mr. HIBBERT supported the clause.—Agreed to (cheers).—Mr. HIBBERT (in the absence of Lord Frederick Cavendish), moved the insertion of a clause providing that proprietors of shares in companies are not to be deemed contractors, &c., and not to be disqualified from election to municipal offices by reason of such holding.—Agreed to.—Mr. DODD, in the absence of Mr. Stevenson, moved the insertion of the following clause with reference to the qualification of aldermen and councillors, "When any borough consisting of less than four wards shall at any time hereafter be divided into a greater number of wards, the qualification for an alderman or councillor of such borough shall not be increased or altered in consequence of such division, but shall continue the same as if such borough consisted of less than four wards."—Agreed to.—Mr. HIBBERT moved a clause that councillors and aldermen might reside within twenty miles of boroughs instead of seven as now.—Mr. BRUCE suggested fifteen miles instead of twenty. The clause as amended was agreed to. After some other amendments the Bill as amended was agreed to.

THE COMPOUND HOUSEHOLDER.

Mr. GOSCHEN, in moving the second reading of his measure, explained the very important additions to it which he means to introduce in committee. In the first place, he should propose to authorise the revival of the system of compounding, by sanctioning agreements between owners and overseers for the payment of rates in consideration of a definite commission of 25 per cent. The owners of houses under 20l. rating in London, and 10l. in the country (though this limit, he intimated, might be changed in committee), would not only pay the rates, but would be primarily responsible. And to guard against any political disability arising from this change the following precautions would be taken: Owners would be required to give to the overseers a list of the occupiers for whom they compounded, under a penalty of losing their commission; a penalty would be put on the overseers for every name omitted by them from the list; and the occupier, if left out of the list, might go to the revising barrister and claim to be put on the register. In support of these proposals, Mr. GOSCHEN urged that as personal payment of rates had proved impossible, it was useless to insist on it, at the certain expense of much hardship and heartburning to the poorer classes, and argued that the Bill would substitute a system more uniform than compounding.—A long discussion followed on the merits and demerits of the "compounder" the expediency of reviving him, and the intricate details of the rating system generally.—Mr. CORBRANCE defended the practice of compounding, and provoked a general rush out by proposing to read numerous extracts from the evidence given before the select committee on the subject. He moved also that the Bill be read a second time that day six months, but failed to find a seconder.—Mr. HIBBERT, on the other hand, maintained that compounding had been greatly abused, and on the whole approved the mode in which the Government proposed to get out of the difficulty; but Mr. HEADLAM was averse from making another change in a hurry, and suggested that the amendments should be circulated through the country before any action was taken.—Mr. HOLMES, in a maiden speech, expressed his satisfaction with the political settlement of the question, but foresaw that it would not remedy the economical difficulty, for the landlords would take no care to carry it out. He preferred to return to the old system.—Sir M. H. BEACH, to refute the charge that the Conservative party had abolished "compounding," went through the history of Mr. Hodgkinson's amendment, and examined the various plans which had been submitted to last year's committee. All compounding he held to be bad, but the plan proposed by the Government, which, he hinted, had been taken up in deference to the remonstrances of Birmingham and the East-end, was the worst of all. The country in time, he held, would adapt itself to the present system, and what was wanted was not a general Bill, but a special remedy for a special grievance. As the intrinsic details of the Bill could hardly be considered satisfactory by the House, he suggested that it should be referred to a select committee.—Mr. SHERIDAN, Lord HENLEY, Mr. TORRENS, and Mr. LOCKE gave a general approval of the Bill, but doubted as to some of the details.—Mr. GOURLEY and Mr. Serjeant SIMON were for the abolition of the ratepaying clauses of the Reform Act.—Mr. C. S. READ suggested that the Bill should be confined to Parliamentary boroughs, and Mr. BRIGHT went once again through the decies repetita story of the Birmingham compounder's woes, to which, and to all similar cases, the measure would apply an effectual remedy.—The Bill was then read a second time, and Mr. Sheridan's Bill was withdrawn.

THE COMPOUND HOUSEHOLDER.

The Bill to restore the compound householder has been issued as amended in committee. The most important clauses are the 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 12th and 13th, as follows:—

Clause 3. In case the rateable value of any hereditament does not exceed the amount hereinafter specified, and the owner of such hereditament is willing to enter into an agreement in writing with the overseers, to become liable to them for the poor rates assessed in respect of such hereditament for any term not being less than one year from the date of such agreement, and to pay the poor rates whether the hereditament is occupied or not, the overseers may agree with the owner to receive the rates from him, and to allow to him a commission not exceeding 25 per cent. on the amount thereof, subject to the following provisions:

1. That the owner shall deliver to the overseers at the time of entering into such agreement, and from time to time thereafter when required by them in writing, a list containing the names of the actual occupiers of the several hereditaments comprised in such agreement.

2. That if the owner refuses or neglects to deliver such list when so required, he shall not be entitled to deduct or receive the commission agreed to be allowed under this section in respect of any rate then remaining due, but shall be liable to and shall pay such rate in full.

3. That this section shall not extend to any hereditaments the rateable value of which exceeds 20l., if situate in the metropolis, or exceeds 10l. if situate elsewhere.

4. Every payment of a rate by such occupier, notwithstanding the amount thereof, may be deducted from his rent as herein provided, and every payment of a rate by the owner, notwithstanding the allowance of the commission under this Act, shall be deemed a payment of the full rate by the occupier for the purpose of any qualification or franchise which, as regards rating, depends upon the payment of the poor rate.

5. Where the owner has agreed with the overseers to pay the poor rate in conformity with the provisions of this Act, the sums due from him under such agreement, together with the costs and charges of levying and receiving the same, may be levied on the goods of the owner, and be recovered from him in the same way as poor rates may be recovered from the occupier.

6. Notwithstanding any such agreement for payment of the poor rates by the owner, the goods and chattels of the occupier of any hereditament comprised in such agreement shall be liable to be distrained and sold for payment of such rates as may accrue during his occupation of the premises, at any time whilst such rates remain unpaid by the owner.

12. The overseers in making out the poor rate shall, notwithstanding any such agreement as aforesaid, enter in the rate the name of every occupier of any hereditament included in such agreement, and such occupier shall be deemed to be duly rated for any qualification or franchise as aforesaid; and if any overseer wilfully and without reasonable cause omits the name of the occupier of any rateable hereditament from the rate, such overseer shall for every such omission be liable on summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding two pounds: provided, that any occupier whose name has been so omitted shall, notwithstanding such omission and that no claim to be rated has been made by him, be entitled to every qualification and franchise depending upon rating, in the same manner as if his name had not been so omitted.

13. The word "overseer" shall include every authority that makes an assessment for the poor rate, or that collects the same; the word "owner" shall mean any person receiving or claiming the rent of the hereditament for his own use, or receiving the same for the use of any corporation aggregate, or of any landlord or lessee who shall be a minor, a married woman, or insane, or for the use of any person who shall not be usually resident within the parish in which the hereditament shall be situated; the word "parish" shall signify every place for which a separate overseer can be appointed, and the word "metropolis" shall include only the metropolis as defined by the Metropolis Management Act 1855.

The Act is for England and Wales only, and is to be known as "Poor-rate Assessment and Collection Act 1869."

ESTATE AND INVESTMENT JOURNAL.

STOCK AND SHARE MARKETS.

The market for securities has been firm during the week, with a good demand, a sufficiency, but not a surplus, of money, and marked absence of mere speculation.

Thursday.

At their weekly court this morning the Bank directors reduced the minimum rate of discount from $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., to which it was raised on the 6th May, to 4 per cent. This change was generally expected from the fact that the terms of the open market have for the past week or ten days only fractionally exceeded 4 per cent., thus depriving the Bank of its share of what discounting was going on. The joint-stock banks and brokers are arranging for a corresponding reduction in the interest allowed for deposits.

The following are the fluctuations of the week:

ENGLISH FUNDS.	Fri.	Sat.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thur.
Bank of England Stock	244	244	...	243	244	244
3 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. Red. Ann. ...	92	92	92	92	92	92
3 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. Cons. Ann. ...	92	92	92	92	92	92
New 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. Ann.
Do. do. Jan. 1894.	76	76	74
New 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. Ann. ...	92	92	92	92	92	92
5 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. Annuities
5 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cents. $\frac{1}{2}$ Jan. 1873
Ann. 30 years exp.
April 5, 1885
Do. exp. Jan. 5, 1880
Do. exp. July 1880	111	111
Rad Sea Tele. Ann. 1908	20
Consols. for Acc.	92	92	92	92	92	93
India 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. for Acc.
Do. 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. July 1880	...	112	111	111	111	111
India Stock, July 1880
India Stock, 1874	...	213	...	213	213	...
India 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent.
India 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. 1888	100	100	...	100	100	100
India 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ Cent. 1870
India Bonds (1000l.)	h	8s. d
Do. (under 1000l.)	8s. d	...	2s. d	5s. d
Ex. Bills, 1000l.	b	c	f	...	i	g
Do. 500l.	c	...	g	...	k	...
Do. 100l. and 200l.
3 $\frac{1}{2}$ c.	c	...	g	...	k	...

a Ex. div.	f March 23 per cent., 2s. dis.
b March 23 per cent., 8s. premium; June 3 per cent.	June 3 per cent., 4s. dis.
c March 23 per cent., 3s. premium; June 3 per cent.	g June 3 per cent., 3s. dis.
d Premium.	h Par.
e June 3 per cent., 2s. premium.	i March 23 per cent. par.
	June 3 per cent., 2s. dis.
	k March 23 per cent., 1s. premium.

PUBLIC COMPANIES.

RAILWAY COMPANY.

Waterford and Central Ireland.—A preference dividend at the rate of $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. per annum.

BANKS.

Bank of British North America.—A dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, and a bonus of 1 per cent. declared.

Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East.—The scheme for arrangement, by which 17s. in the pound is accepted by the creditors as full payment, has received the sanction of the Master of the Rolls.

ASSURANCE COMPANIES.

Emperor Life and Fire Insurance.—A dividend at the rate of 5 per cent., free of income tax, with a bonus of 1 per cent.

Guardian Fire and Life.—A dividend of 2l. 10s. per share.

FINANCE, CREDIT, AND DISCOUNT COMPANIES.

Credit Foncier and Mobilier of England (Limited).—Creditors' claims must be forwarded to Messrs. Mowatt and J. A. Cape, by the 25th instant, the 5th Jan. being appointed for their adjudication.

Trust and Loan of Upper Canada.—A dividend for the half-year at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum.

MISCELLANEOUS COMPANIES.

Anglo-Mediterranean Telegraph.—An additional dividend of 4s. 6d. per share, free of income tax, making 10 per cent. per annum.

Berlin Waterworks.—The final call of 2l. per share on the new shares is payable on the 30th inst.

Clarence Hotel (Limited).—Creditors must send particulars of claims to Mr. Smart, the official liquidator, by the 29th inst., the 8th July being appointed for adjudicating upon them.

Grand Junction Canal.—A dividend of 2l. 5s. per share was declared.

Malta Mediterranean Gas.—A dividend at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum.

Smith, Knight and Co. (Limited).—A further dividend of 1s. 6d. in the pound, making 6s. 6d. in all, declared.

Waterloo Bridge.—A dividend of 4s. 8d. in the pound.

West London Wharves and Warehouses (Limited).—A second dividend of 5s. in the pound, making 10s. in all, is payable to the creditors on the 2nd proximo.

REPORTS OF SALES.

[NOTE.—The reports of the Estate Exchange are officially supplied in the following list. Auctioneers whose names are registered there will oblige by reports of their own sales.]

Thursday, June 11.

By Mr. GEORGE PRICKETT, at the Mart.
Leasehold, Nos. 21 to 23, Park-street, Camberwell, producing 75l. per annum, term 60 years from 1865, at 9l. per annum—sold for 150l.

Leasehold, three houses, situate at Fortis-green, Muswell-hill, producing 48l. 12s. per annum, term 60 years from 1854, at 24s. 8d. each per annum—sold for 300l.

By Messrs. NORTON, TRIST, WATNEY, and Co.
Freehold and copyhold land, situate at Croydon and Mitcham, Surrey in 8 lots—lot 1 sold for 65l.; lot 4 sold for 175l.; lot 5 sold for 280l.

Friday, June 12.

By Messrs. RUSHWORTH, ARNOTT, and Co., at the Mart.
Leasehold improved grounds of 70l. 12s. per annum for 61 years, secured on Nos. 36 to 40, Starr-street, and 5 to 10, Bouverie-street, Edgware-road—sold for 1250l.

Freehold business premises, No. 49, Great Marlborough-street, let on lease at 220l. per annum—sold for 4400l.
Leasehold residence, No. 25, Southwick-street, Edgware-road, let at 63l. per annum, term 93 years from 1836, at 9l. per annum—sold for 810l.

Saturday, June 13.

By Mr. WHITTINGHAM, at the Mart.
Freehold building land, situate at Wimbledon, Surrey, in 47 lots, lots 1 to 240 comprised previous sales—lot 239 sold for 85l.; lot 255 sold for 36l.; lot 322 sold for 67l.; lot 323 sold for 67l.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

SECURITY FOR COSTS.—A corporation or other similar body, nominally prosecutors, may compel the virtual prosecutors to give security for costs. And the amount of such security is not limited to 200l. But if the security originally ordered be insufficient, the corporation must apply to the court promptly, in order to have the amount increased. They must not wait until the parties have gone on, and the case is ripe for hearing: (Rep. v. Commissioners, &c., for Southampton, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 585. Bail.)

PLEA OF PARTNERSHIP.—AVERMENT IN EXCESS OF PROOF.—In an action on a bill of exchange a plea of partnership between plaintiff and defendant is good if it shows either that the bill in respect of which the action is brought is a partnership asset, or that it was met with moneys which came out of the partnership funds. And if the plea contains both these averments, the defendant is entitled to judgment if he proves one and fails to prove the other: (Weston v. Abrahams, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 586. Bail.)

DIVORCE.—BOTH PARTIES GUILTY OF ADULTERY.—COSTS.—In granting or refusing a divorce where both parties have been found guilty of adultery, the court will not exercise the discretion vested in it by the 30th and 31st sections of the Divorce Act, on the mere loose footing of the petitioner's adultery being, under the whole circumstances of each case, more or less pardonable, but its discretion must be regulated and subordinated to rules. Where the adultery of the petitioner had been committed soon after marriage, ten years before the respondent's adultery, and was unknown to the respondent, and therefore could not be condoned by her, the court declined to exercise the discretion, and refused a decree. The court ordered to be deducted from the wife's costs the expenses incurred in preparing to meet a counter charge of adultery, on which no evidence was called: (Morgan v. Morgan, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 588. D. & M.)

PRACTICE.—PLEA OF COVERTURE.—LEAVE OF COURT.—Where a bill for specific performance had been filed against a married woman, living apart from her husband, but not judicially separated, the court made an order that she might be at liberty to put in a plea of coverture: (Heggate v. Thompson, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 555. V.C.J.)

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

(Before HANNEN, J.)
ROBINSON v. BAYLEY.

This was an important case as regarded persons having money to place out on mortgage.

Huddleston, Q. C., and Beresford were counsel for the plaintiff.

Day for the defendant.

The plaintiff was a pawnbroker, and the defendant a solicitor and coroner, both resident at West Bromwich. The plaintiff had been in the habit of employing the defendant, and in Aug. 1868, having 200l. which he wished to put out on mortgage, he applied to the defendant to find him a security. The defendant said he had a security ready, and that the writings would be ready in a day or two. Plaintiff called two or three times, and the defendant put him off. On leaving the defendant's office on the 24th Aug. the plaintiff met Skidmore, the managing clerk to Bayley, and Skidmore told him the writings would be ready the next morning, and Bayley had left word that he must bring the money the next morning. On the morning of the 24th of August the plaintiff went to Bayley's office. Bayley was out, and Skidmore told him he must leave the money with him, and he should have the writings in a day or two. The plaintiff gave him the money, and had a receipt. The plaintiff called at the office two or three times, but only saw Skidmore, who said he should have the writings in a few days. On the 31st August plaintiff called and saw Bayley, who told him if he would bring the money the deeds would be ready on the 3rd September. The plaintiff told him he had left the money there. Defendant asked him with whom he had left it. Plaintiff said he had given it to Skidmore. Defendant said Skidmore was gone out for a couple of days, but when he returned it would be all right. On the 1st September defendant called on plaintiff, and asked to look at Skidmore's receipt. After looking at that, defendant said he feared Skidmore was a scamp, but he would make it all right, and defendant need not make himself uneasy. He afterwards saw defendant, who said he had been to Liverpool after Skidmore, but could not find him, but he would make it all right with plaintiff. The defendant afterwards made many appointments with plaintiff, but did not keep them. However, on one occasion the defendant said if plaintiff was afraid he would give him a promissory note, but plaintiff said he did not doubt Mr. Bayley's honour. The plaintiff then brought this action for the recovery of the 200l.

For the defendant it was submitted that there was not evidence to justify the jury in giving the plaintiff a verdict. If a master held out his servant as being an agent for him to receive money, then he was responsible for the acts of his servant. But that must be in the ordinary course of business. A shopman was not to receive his master's rent. The limit of liability in the present case had not been reached. The plaintiff felt it was an unusual thing to leave the money without having the deed. Skidmore had no authority to receive this money. The plaintiff was aware of the usual practice of Mr. Bayley's office, because he had had other transactions of a similar kind with Mr. Bayley. Attorneys' clerks were never authorised to receive money to be placed out on mortgage, although they might be allowed to receive small sums for costs. The defendant had always repudiated the idea of responsibility for the fraud of his clerk. The defendant stated that Skidmore was only a writing clerk at 1l. a week. One of his duties was to receive small sums for costs. He had no authority to receive moneys to be placed out on mortgage. He had no authority to receive this money. Never told the plaintiff he would make it all right. Had offered plaintiff to share the loss. Took care not to make himself liable. It was the practice in an attorney's office in such a case to pay the principal, and not the clerk. Two other attorneys stated that it was not the practice for a clerk to receive moneys under such circumstances. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff for 200l.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

Monday, June 7.

Re AN ATTORNEY OF THE COURT.

Garth, Q. C. (with whom was Murray), on behalf of the Incorporated Law Society, applied on affidavits for a rule calling on an attorney of the court to show cause why he should not answer the matters in the affidavits. It appears that for seven years past the "gentleman" in question had been in the habit of answering advertisements for the sale of estates in different parts of England. Having obtained the particulars in answer to his application his course of procedure appeared to have been to make a definite offer by letter on the sum asked. On this being, as it frequently was, accepted, and a contract for the purchase thus entered into with the victim, an abstract of the title was required in the usual course. Upon this abstract he then, if possible (which it generally was), proceeded to make requisitions which it was impossible for the vendor to fulfil without going to great expense, and then, usually after an unsatisfactory correspondence, he would propose to let the vendor be off his contract on payment of 40l. or 50l. In five cases of this kind which had come to the knowledge of the Law Society—two in 1861, two in 1867, and one in 1869—he had thus obtained sums of 10l. from each. In one case, in 1861, a vendor filed a bill in Chancery against him to compel him to complete his purchase, when the "gentleman" wrote back in answer that the vendor had much better drop the proceeding, for if the matter went further, he must take the only course open to him, which, the learned counsel suggested, meant going through the Bankruptcy Court. His letters were dated from "Chester Old-hall, Staffordshire," which had a high sound with it; but, when sought out there, it turned out to be an old farmhouse, in which the "gentleman" occupied one room, and went there occasionally two or three times a year. Another of his addresses was 29, College-street, Brighton, where, on inquiry, it turned out he had a small bedroom at the top of the house.

BYLES, J.—But these were real addresses, however humble.

M. SMITH, J., asked if there was any false pretence.

Garth could not say that there was, beyond this, that it was clear the "gentleman" never intended to purchase. But at any rate, his was a scandalous and shameful course of conduct, which disqualified him from being an officer of that court.

The court granted a rule nisi.

NEW LAW COURTS AND OFFICES.

Mr. Pownall's estimate of the cost of the property required to be purchased for building the New Law Courts on the Thames Embankment (Howard-street site), and of the amount that could be obtained on a re-sale of the Carey-street site.

To the President of the Incorporated Law Society, 5, Westminster Chambers, Victoria-street, Westminster, June 3, 1869.

Sir,—In accordance with your instructions, I have surveyed the property required to be purchased to carry out Mr. Street's design for building the New Law Courts on the Thames Embankment site, as shown by the plan submitted with his report of May last to the First Commissioner of Her Majesty's Works.

I estimate the cost of acquiring all interest in this property, after allowing for the re-sale of some surplus land in Essex-street, at the sum of 812,415l.

This amount is exclusive of the cost of continuing Essex-street to the north of the Strand, as shown on Mr. Street's plan, and it is exclusive also of any sum that the Metropolitan Board of Works might—and I should think would—claim for that portion of the embanked land which is proposed to be taken, even if the board consented, or were compelled by legislative enactment to allow the land to be used for building purposes.

I have also surveyed the land recently purchased by the First Commissioner of Works, known as the Carey-street site, and I am of opinion that the utmost sum that could be obtained for this property, if used for ordinary building purposes—of shops, houses, or offices—is 364,320l.

I have before referred to the projection of the proposed building on the reclaimed land. The scale of the plan is too small to admit of accurate measurement, but the building appears to me to be intended to project before the main building of Somerset House to the extent of at least fifty or sixty feet.

I venture to think that such a projection before one of the finest public buildings we have would be most unsightly and objectionable, whether seen from the east or the west; and it is certainly in direct departure from the arrangement made as to the future building line between the Temple and Somerset House when the Embankment Act (24th & 25th Vict. c. 42) was passed.

I enclose for your consideration a copy of the plan referred to in the 60th clause of that Act, by which no buildings were allowed to be erected south of a curved line between the south-western angle of the Middle Temple Library and the south-eastern angle of Somerset House.

It is quite true that this particular clause was intended specially to protect the interests of the Duke of Norfolk; but it is no less true that the public interests were duly considered in the matter, both in dealing with His Grace and with the benchers of the Temple, who were also prohibited from building on the reclaimed land intended to be added to their garden.

I am unable to offer any opinion as to the comparative cost of the foundations on the two sites. Probably on this subject, as well as on the point of the proposed projection of the new building before Somerset House, it would be well for the council to apply to the superintending architect to the Metropolitan Board.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,
GEO. POWNALL.

LIST OF GENTLEMEN APPLYING TO BE ADMITTED AS ATTORNEYS.

Michaelmas Term 1869.

Asplen, Frank, Hulme, and 103, Gower-street, Mid-dlessex—articled to W. Foyster, Manchester.
Barber, Henry Jocelyn, Brighouse; and 12, Park-street,
Westminster—F. Barber, Brighouse.
Bateson, Andrew Malcolm, Masham, York—J. Fisher, Masham.
Beidoe, William, Aberdare—I. D. Rees, Aberdare.
Bellas, William, 356, Edgware-road; and 6, New Ormond-street—R. Holden, Liverpool.
Boulter, Walter Consett, Kingston-upon-Hull—E. C.
Bell, Kingston-upon-Hull; and J. Leak, Kingston-upon-Hull.
Boulton, Charles, Beverley—T. Shepherd, Beverley.
Boyott, William, Rugeley—J. Gardner and R. Landor, Rugeley.
Brown, Charles Cornish, 34, Bernard-street, Russell-square—S. Brown, Bristol; and T. S. Parnell, Bristol.
Burrill, Charles James, Leyburn, York; and 25, Frederick-street, Gray's-inn-road—H. T. Robinson, Ley-burn.
Butterworth, Charles Henry, 20, North Audley-street, and Clevedon, Somerset—H. Abbot, Bristol.
Carlyon, Alexander Keith, St. Austell; and 49, Lincoln's-inn-fields—E. Carlyon, St. Austell.
Cheeseman, William, Lewes—M. S. Blaker, Lewes.
Clarke, John Thomas, Great Yarmouth; 25, Upper
Barnsbury-street; and 14, Spurstone-road, Hackney.
Henry Palmer, Great Yarmouth.
Cooper, Christopher Bird, 1, Weatherhall-place, Hampstead—T. Cooper, 23, New Ormond-street.
Cooper, George Henry, Pewsey, Wilts; and 27, King
Henry's-road, Hampstead—S. B. Dixon, the Younger, Pewsey; and James H. Street, Raymond-buildings.
Cotinger, Maurice Charles, 22, Essex-street, Strand—
E. L. Hooper, 37, Southampton-buildings; G. A.
James, 24, Essex-street; and R. J. Macarthur, 22,
Essex-street.
Coward, Christopher Lethbridge, Lancaster; and 49,
Lincoln's-inn-fields—J. L. Coward, and E. F. Kemp-son, Lancaster.
Crook, James, Chorley—J. C. Crook, Chorley.
Crowder, William Henry, 16, Cumberland-terrace,
Regent's-park; and 18, Torrington-square—G. A.
Crowder, 55, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
Derry, William Main, Gedney, Lincoln; and East Ret-ford, Notts—G. Marshall, jun., East Retford.
Dunn, Hugh James, Darlington; and 27, Queen's-road,
St. John's-wood—H. Dunn, Darlington.
Edith, Alban Milburn, 84, Ledbury-road; and Bath—
A. H. English, Bath.
Foster, Henry Langstaffe, Newcastle-upon-Tyne—J. L.
Foster, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.
Fox, John Henry, Redenhall with Hasleston; and Worford-road, Islington—W. S. Fox, Redenhall with Hasleston; and G. O. Lyles, Redenhall with Has-leston.
Fowler, John Seymour, Rock-ferry, Liverpool; and 4, Rothwell-street, Regent's-park—A. B. Anderson, Liverpool.
Freeman, Richard John, 34, Bridge-road, West Batten-sea—E. M. Freeman, 4, Great James-street.
Furley, Charles John, Ashford—E. Furley, Ashford.
Gates, Thomas, 10, King Bench-walk—Messrs. Deakin and Dent, Wolverhampton.
Gayford, Edward, Tunbridge Wells; and Brighton—
W. M. Hazard, Haslestone, Norfolk; and T. P. Simpson, Tunbridge Wells.
Greene, William Ashbury, 28, John-street, Bedford-row; and 8, Guilford-place, Middlesex—A. Rawlinson,
8, Guilford-place.
Gerrile, Arthur Edwin, Northampton; and 8, John-street, Bedford-row—J. H. Hearn, Ryde.
Hallowes, William Alexander Tooke, 32, Tavistocksquare—W. Hallowes, 39, Bedford-row.
Henson, Frederick William, Southfield Hessele, York; and Newnham-villa, Clapton—H. Cook, Kingston-upon-Hull; William Watson, Hedon-in-Holderness; and T. Hudson, Kingston-upon-Hull.
Hett, Francis Crowder, 4, Bedford-row—J. Hett, Briggs; and F. M. Russell, Bedford-row.
Hewson, Frederick, Liverpool; and 11, Staple-inn—E.
Bauer, Liverpool.
Holmes, Robert, Selby, York; and 19, Charterhousesquare—C. Hodgson, Selby.
Hunt, Alfred, Chiswick; and Putney—B. Hunt, 6,
Gray's-inn-square.
Hunt, James Allen, Manchester; and 14, Lincoln's-inn-fields—A. Grundy, Manchester; and J. Woodcock, 4, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
Huxley, Frederick, Kingston-upon-Hull; and Lincoln
T. L. Farrer, Manchester.
Hutchinson, James John, 25, Red Lion-square—C. B.
Lester, 15, Bedford-row.
Jones, Thomas Parry, Ruthin; and 16, King-street,
Cheshire—L. Adams, Ruthin.
Kitson, Charles William, Torquay; and 6, Milman-street, Bedford-row—C. Kitson, Torquay; and T.
Hayer, 6, Raymond-buildings.
Kitson, Robert, B. A., 8, St. Petersburg-place, Bayswater; and 12, Lincoln's-inn-fields; J. Kitson, Torquay; and P. T. Woollett, 12, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
Minett, Henry Wallace, Ross; and 11, Torrington-square—H. Minett, Ross.
Mitchell, William George Carter, Bedford; and 61,
Carey-street—T. W. Pearse, Bedford; and W. Ley,
61, Carey-street.
Morris, Thomas Myddleton, 22, Basinghall-street—
A. Carr, 22, Basinghall-street.
Mury, John Frederick, Langport, Somerset; and 6, Royal-place, Greenwich—G. B. Murly, Bristol.
Musgrave, John Raven, Whitehaven; and 1, Bedford-row—J. Musgrave, Whitehaven.
Norton, Edwin, Weston-super-Mare; and 14, Brunswick-square—J. H. Clifton, Bristol; and J. G. Hobbs, Bristol.
Pater, John Thomas, Peterborough; and 14, King-street, Finsbury-square—L. J. Deacon, Peterborough.

Phillips, Charles Edward, Hertford—A. Hawks, Hertford.
Pitt, Richard Joseph Williams, West Bromwich—W.
Rankin, West Bromwich.
Prideaux, Robert Walter, 12, Halsey-street, Chelsea; and Manchester—S. W. Prideaux, Dartmouth; and N. Earle, Manchester.
Ratcliff, Edmund Theodore, Birmingham; and 38,
Bedford-row—W. P. Alcock, Birmingham; and C. F.
Tagart, Bedford-row.
Roberts, Frederick, Stourbridge; and Clent—J. Girdle-stone, 18, New-street, Spring-gardens; and J. Harward, Stourbridge.
Robinson, Henry, Ripon—R. Robinson, Ripon.
Rogers, Thomas Henry Tate, Bristol; and 14, Lincoln's-inn-fields—Fussell and Pritchard, Bristol.
Salmon, William Henry Campbell, Bristol; and 61,
Carey-street—R. Phippen, Bristol.
Sewell, Henry Summers, Newcastle-upon-Tyne—T. T.
Hoyle, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.
Sharpe, William Arthur, 1, Highbury-terrace, Islington —W. Sharpe, 41, Bedford-row.
Shenton, William, Winchester; and 134, Leadenhall-street—A. J. Lee, Winchester.
Shepherd, Algernon Henry, 36, Rochester-road, Kentish-town; and Faversham—J. Stilwell, Dover.
Sheppard, Frederick James, Towcester; and 38, Bedford-row—J. H. Sheppard, Towcester.
Smyth, Benjamin, 10, Albert-square, Clapham-road; and 6, Crown Office-row—S. B. Robertson, 6, Crown Office-row.
Smyth, Richard Phillott, 8, Blenheim-villas, St. John's
Wood—G. J. Robertson, Bath.
Sudlow, John, jun., Manchester; and 32, Norfolk-street, Strand—J. Bury, Manchester; J. Sudlow, Manchester; and N. C. Milne, Temple.
Syms, Frederick Richard, 18, Manor-terrace, Brixton; and 7, Furnival's-inn—J. L. Syms, 7, Furnival's-inn.
Tatham, Richard Turner, 44, Malpas-road, New-cross;
Lancaster; 5, Holford-street, Clerkenwell; and 11,
Great Percy-street—J. Sharp, Lancaster.
Terry, Frederick William Imbert, 22, Torrington-square; and 10, Park-villas West, Regent's-park—W.
Galsworthy, 12, Old Jewry Chambers.
Vaughan, Philip Arthur, 37, Beaumont-square—P.
Vaughan, Aberystwith; and A. C. Spaul, 4, Verulambuildings.
Walker, Walter, Northampton; and 32, Baker-street—
W. Dennis, Northampton.
Ward, John Sandilands, 52, Lincoln's-inn-fields—F.
W. Remnant, 52, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
Waters, Charles William, 19, Calthorpe-street; and 24 and 25, Fenchurch-street—T. Waters, Winchester; and G. Henderson, Fenchurch-street.
Watkins, James Bulekley, Shrewsbury—J. B. Watkins, Shrewsbury.
Watson, James, Heden in Holderness; and 14, Gray's-inn-square—W. Watson, Heden in Holderness.
Watson, William James, Barnard Castle—W. Watson, jun., Barnard Castle.
Whitehead, James Dove, York—F. W. Calvert, York.
Wheeler, Charles Henry, Leicester; and 24, Arundelstreet, Strand—S. F. Stone, Leicester.
Wicks, Henry Philip, Thorpe—J. Brockbank, White-haven.
Wight, Thomas Holyoake, Dudley; and 24, Lincoln's-inn-fields—B. Robinson, Dudley; G. Birch, Lichfield; and B. Robinson, Dudley and London.
Wilson, Richard Arthur, Salisbury—T. Thring, Wilton.
Wright, Warner, Norwich; and 41, Bedford-row—I. B.
Coaks, Norwich; and R. A. Parker, 41, Bedford-row.

Michaelmas Term 1869, pursuant to Judges' Order.

Atkinson, Fenton Granger, Manchester—E. Atkinson, Manchester.
Barlow, Stephen Babington, 16, London-street, Fenchurch-street—J. A. McLeod, 16, London-street.
Brier, John Frederick, Newark-upon-Trent—C. C.
Footitt, Newark-upon-Trent.
Burch, Ralph, 13, Devonshire-terrace, Kensington; and 39, Basinghall-street—A. Burch, Exeter.
Butterworth, Osmond, 142, Albany-street; and Rochdale—C. A. Swinburne, Manchester; and H. W.
Parker, Manchester.
Cockcroft, William, Todmorden; 38, Bedford-row, and 4, Lower Calthorpe-street—A. G. Eastwood, Todmorden; and W. Janeway, 38, Bedford-row.
Cooper, John Edward, Porthill, Wollstanton—W.
Cooper, Tunstall.
Foster, William Joseph, 4, Prospect-place, Peckhamrye; and 19, Doughty-street—H. W. Fisher, 19, Doughty-street.
Hawkin, Frederick Thomas, Sheffield—H. E. Watson,
Sheffield.
Hayden, Frederick William, Skelton; and 72, Churchillroad, Highgate-road—W. H. Cobb, York.
Hill, Pascoe Grenfell, Helston; and 1, Bedford-row—
F. Hill, Helston; and T. Rawle, 1, Bedford-row.
Lumley, Theodore, 22, Conduit-street—R. B. Lumley, 22, Conduit-street.
Oates, Charles Henry, 13, Euston-road; Great Grimsby; and Backhurst-hill, Essex—C. M. B. Veal, Great Grimsby.
Palmer, Charles William, Cambridge—F. Barlow, Cambridge.
Presswell, George, 10, Old Jewry-chambers—J. McDiarm-id, Old Jewry-chambers.
Simpson, Higson, Great Grimsby; and 36, Bedford-row
J. Winttingham, Great Grimsby.
Wason, James, Jun., 20, Bedford-row; and Liverpool—
P. Simpson, Liverpool.
Wheler, Charles Trevor, Bristol—W. C. Crutwell, Frome.
Willmott, Henry George, Bristol—R. Stubbs, Bristol.

Michaelmas Vacation, 1869.

Hall, George Astell, 11, Brownwood-park South, Hornsey—W. Jaques, 8, Ely-place.
Hextall, William Brown (Judge's order), Kettering; and 1, Copthall-court—G. W. Lamb, Kettering; and Ware
& Westall, 1, Copthall-court.
Le Riche, Ebenezer, 7, Gray's-inn-place, and 8, Warwick-court—C. T. Foster, 13, Gray's-inn-square; and E. W. Le Riche, 8, Warwick-court.
Liggins, Henry Joseph, 9, Bedford-row—P. A. Hamrott, 9, Bedford-row.

Palmer, Alexander Douglas Greenlaw, Cheltenham, and 19, Cnenies-street, Bedford-square—W. H. Gwinnett, Cheltenham.

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY. LAST DAY OF PROOF.

BEARD (Henry), Sneinton-street, Nottingham. July 6;
Parsons and Son, solicitors, Nottingham. July 13; V.C.S., at one.
BILLINGS (James), Stone Cott, Norton-in-the Moors, Stafford. July 1; R. Heaton, solicitor, Burslem. July 14;
M. R., at eleven.
BROWNE (Mary A.), 29, Union-square, Spitalfields. July 3;
J. Edell, solicitor, 33, King-street, Cheapside. July 10;
M. R., at eleven.
DAY (Wm. C.), Biford, Warwick. July 10; Messrs. Palmer, Son, and Co., solicitors, Paradise-street, Birmingham.
July 21; V.C.S., at twelve.
DEPLEDGE (Elizabeth), 3, Sussex-place, Loughborough-road,
Brixton. June 26; J. H. Grant, solicitor, 260, Kenningtonroad. July 7; V.C. M., at twelve.
DOVE (Roger), Great Corby, Carlisle. July 1; E. Hough, solicitor, Carlisle. July 10; M. R., at twelve.
GUTHRIE (Thos. W.), Chillingham, Stafford. June 30; R. N.
Heane, solicitor, Newport, Salop. July 7; V.C. J., at twelve.
GRAY (Harriett), Rose Cottage, Bow-road, Bow. July 10;
T. E. Fearnley, solicitor, 105, Broad-street, Ratcliffe. July 28; V.C. S., at twelve.
HARMAN (John), High Wycombe. July 6; A. T. Cox, solicitor, 28, St. Swithin's-lane, City. July 16; V.C. S., at one.
JORDAN (William), Slough, Bucks. July 7; Darwill, Dar-will, and Co., solicitors, Windsor. July 17; M. R. at twelve.
LINDLEY (Robert), 39, Percy-street, Rathbone-place. July 3;
Sandys and Knott, solicitors, 5, Gray's-inn-square. July 17;
M. R., at eleven.
OWEN (H. D.), Prestbury, July 1; Bubb and Sons, solicitors, Cheltenham. July 14; M. R., at eleven.
PARKER (George), High-street, Weymouth. June 29; Combe and Wainwright, solicitors, 9, Staple-inn. July 12; V.C. J., at twelve.
SKOTTS (Thomas), France. July 21; Young and Jackson, solicitors, 12, Essex-street, Strand. July 31; V.C. S., at twelve.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. c. 35.

Last day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.

BRACE (John), Blackford, Tamworth. July 31; Thomas
Simcox, solicitor, 20, Waterloo-street, Birmingham.
CARTER (Thomas), Henley-on-Thames. Aug. 29; Taylor, Hoare, and Co., solicitors, 28, Great James-street, Bedford-row.
CAIRD (Jennet), 49, Berwick-street, Soho, W. July 1; R.
Boulton, solicitor, 11, Berners-street, W.
DASHWOOD (Wm. B.), 69, Green-street, Grosvenor-square.
July 1; F. Schuch, 92, solicitor, 4, Dyer's-buildings, Holborn.
FARRELL (W. K.), Norwich. July 1; I. B. Coaks, solicitor, Bank-plaza, Norwich.
GUEST (Josh.), Wigan. June 12; Leigh and Ellis, solicitors, Wigan, Lancashire.
HARRISON (Elizabeth), Green-road, Southsea. July 1;
Pearce and Marshall, solicitors, 13, Union-street, Portsea.
HAYE (Noel F.), 1, Bath-place, Queen's-road, Peckham. Aug.
2; Books, Kenrick, and Co., solicitors, 16, King street, Cheapside.
HERING (Frederick), 11, Argyll-street, Westminster. July 31; Hollingsworth, Tyerman, and Co., solicitors, 4, East India Avenue, London.
JACQUES (Thos.), 23, High-street, Godalming. July 14; R. E.
Mellersh, solicitor, Godalming, Surrey.
JONES (Elphaz), Hanley, Stafford. July 27; Chas. E. Chalmer, solicitor, Hanley, Staffs.
KAY (Mary Jane), Atherton-Grange, Wimbeldon. Aug. 1;
Bower and Cotton, solicitors, 46, Chancery-lane.
KYNASTON (Ann), Cotton, Wem, Salop. July 1; H. J. Barker, solicitor, Wem.
MOY (Henry), Carbrooke, Norfolk. July 1; Robert Cates, solicitor, Fakenham, Norfolk.
PALMER (Thos.), 92, Homfilditch. July 7; F. Broughton, solicitor, 48, Finsbury-square.
RATUONE (The Rev. Edward J.), Lichfield. July 10; Best and Horton, solicitors, Birmingham.
RICHARDS (Henry), Croydon, Surrey. Aug. 10; Dean and Chubb, solicitors, 11, South-square, W.C.
SEDFORD-FILLIS (Edward S.), Ballard-lodge, Alverstoke,
Southampton. July 15; Hellard and Son, solicitors, 132,
High-street, Portsmouth.
SNOOKE (Mrs. Mary Ann), Purbrook, Southwick, Southampton. July 15; Hellard and Son, solicitors, 132, High-street, Portsmouth.
STALLION (Harriet), 33, Fleet-lane, Farringdon-street.
July 1; N. Bennett, solicitor, 4, Furnival's-inn, E.C.
STRONG (Samuel), Norbiton, Surrey. July 12; Charles J.
Mander, solicitor, 9, New-square, Lincoln's-inn, W.C.
THURMAN (Lady Sarah J.), Holt, Denbigh, and France.
Aug. 1; Bower and Cotton, solicitors, 46, Chancery-lane.
TUGWELL (Mary), 68, London-road, Brighton. July 16;
Upperton, Upperton, and Co., solicitors, Brighton.
WATSON (Elizabeth), High-hill, Saleby, Cumberland. Aug. 2;
H. Dobinson, solicitor, 5, Bank-street, Carlisle.
WATSON (Margaret), High-hill, Saleby, Cumberland. Aug. 2;
H. Dobinson, solicitor, 5, Bank-street, Carlisle.
WAY (Sarah), Rugby, Warwick. June 26; Tucker, New, and Co., solicitors, 4, King-street, Cheapside.
WEBBER (Miss Mary E.), 28, Nottingham-place. July 10;
Farrer, Overy, and Co., solicitors, 66, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
WAIDE (George), Merton-lodge, Cowley-road, Brixton. July 7; W. Gardiner, solicitor, 39, Chancery-lane.
YOUNG (Thos.), Walton-upon-Thames. Sept. 29; Grazebrook, Paine, and Co., solicitors, Chertsey, Surrey.

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDENDS IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

[Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each, in three months, unless other claimants sooner appear.]

BALLINGALL (Dorcas), Hampshire-terrace, Southsea. Dividend on 31/13. 9d. Reduced Three per Cents. Claimant, Lord A. W. Bouverie.
DERING (Rev. Osmond), Edworth Rectory, Bedfordshire.
Dividend on 31/6. 2d. Reduced Three per Cents. Claimant, Rev. Osmond Dering.
PRICE (Elizabeth), Stratton-street, Piccadilly. Dividend on 28/5. Reduced Three per Cents. Claimant, Hon. Robert Price's Charity.
SQUIRE (Francis O.), London-road, Croydon, Surrey. Dividend on 20/515. 5s. 4d. Reduced Three per Cents. Claimant, Frances Octavia Squire.
SULLIVAN (George J.), Wilmington, St. Helen's, Isle of Wight.
Dividend on 20/515. 5s. 4d. Reduced Three per Cents. Claimant,
Robert Sullivan, E. R. Bence, and Rev. J. F.
Sullivan, executors.

On Monday next the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council will commence their sittings. There are forty-six appeals on the list.

Notice has been issued that official liquidators applying for remuneration before the Long

Vacation must make their claims by the 10th of next month.

Mr. J. P. Collins, solicitor, of Crosby Hall Chambers, Bishopsgate-street, has received the thanks of Her Majesty the Queen, for his poem, the May Queen, written in commemoration of Her Majesty's jubilee, which Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to accept.

At the annual meeting of the Gloucestershire Law Society, held at the Severn Bank Hotel, Newnham, on Wednesday week, the long and honourable services of Mr. John Burrup, as honorary secretary for more than half a century, received a just and graceful acknowledgment, in the presentation to him of a substantial testimonial, in the shape of a sum of one hundred pounds.

THE BENCH AND THE BAR.

CALLS TO THE BAR.

MIDDLE TEMPLE, June 7.—The undermentioned gentlemen were this day called to the degree of the Utter Bar by the Hon. Society of the Middle Temple, viz.:—Richard Hallilay, Esq., holder of studentship awarded by the Council of Legal Education, Trinity Term 1869, and of an exhibition in common law on subject of lectures, July 1868; Alfred Douglas Adrian, Esq., B.A., University of London; Edward Thelwall, Esq., M.A., Trinity College, Cambridge; Christopher John Coveny, Esq., of the University of London; William Wilbraham Bleythin Hulton, Esq., B.A., Trinity College, Cambridge; Philip Stern, Esq., of University College, London; Alfred Hams-worth, Esq., Augustin Bernard Kelly, Esq., M.A., Trinity College, Dublin; Thomas Milvain, Esq., LL.B., Trinity Hall, Cambridge; Frederick Mead, Esq., A.K.C.; John Nicholas Harrington, Esq., Basil Lang, Esq., late of Trinity College, Dublin; George Edward Goodyear, Esq., Walter Hector Maskell, Esq.; Richard Myles Brown, Esq., Roger Yelverton Dawson-Yelverton, of Magdalen Hall, Oxford; John William Williamson, Esq., Douglas Alexander Spalding, Esq., Lucius O'Brien Blake, Esq., William Noirmont Conyers D'Arcy, Esq., Fernand Castellan, Esq., Jonas Daniel Vaughan, Esq., F.R.G.S.; Arthur Edwin Sharpley, Esq., and David Buchanan, Esq.

INNER TEMPLE, June 7.—The undermentioned gentlemen were this day called to the Bar by the Hon. Society of the Inner Temple, viz.:—Sampson Copestake, Esq., M.A., Cambridge; William Scott Dowson, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; William Henry Wilson, Esq., B.A., Oxford; Alexander Martin Bunster Bremner, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Alfred Harrison, Esq., Henry Sydney Grazebrook, Esq., William Elias Mozley, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Alfred Erskine Hardy, Esq., B.A., Oxford; Thomas Phillips Price, Esq., M.A., Oxford; Peile Thompson, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Charles Fox Roe, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Philip Lovell Phillips, Esq., Oxford; Robert Taunton Raikes, Esq., M.A., Oxford; Edmund Sutton, Esq., B.A., Oxford; Henry De la Beche Dillwyn, Esq., LL.B., Cambridge; Edmund McKenzie Sneyd Kynnersley, Esq., B.A., Oxford; Frederic Wyatt, Esq., George Arthur Watson, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Willmot Dixon, Esq., LL.B., Cambridge; George Harper, Esq., Cyril Dodd, Esq., B.A., Oxford; Henry Duff Traill, Esq., B.C.L., Oxford; Henry George Tuke, Esq., Thomas Fenwick Fenwick, Esq., M.A., Oxford; William Robert Collyer, Esq., M.A., Cambridge; and John Walter Devereux Deverell, Esq., M.A., Oxford.

LINCOLN'S INN, June 7.—The undermentioned gentlemen were this day called to the degree of Barrister-at-Law by the Hon. Society of Lincoln's Inn, viz.:—John Henderson, Esq., exhibitor, general examination Trinity Term 1869; Richard Crawley, Esq., Oxford, B.A.; Albert Sidney Chavasse, Esq., Oxford, M.A., and B.C.L.; John Monsey Collyer, Esq., Oxford, B.A.; Courtenay Peregrine Ilbert, Esq., Oxford, B.A.; Robert Conway Dobbs, Esq., Cambridge, M.A.; John Emilius Lancelot Shadwell, Esq., Oxford, M.A.; Maxwell Cormac Collinan, Esq., Fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge, B.A.; John Eltham Mylne, Esq., Oxford, B.A.; William Robert Alexander, Esq., Dublin, B.A.; John Croker Barrow, Esq., Oxford, M.A.; Edward Lee Carteret Price Hardy, Esq.; William Henry Fox, Esq., Cambridge, B.A.; John Charles Wood, Esq.; James William Hayes, jun., Esq., Madras University; Clement Arthur Thruston, Esq., Oxford, B.A.; Henry Burton Buckley, Esq., Fellow Christ's College, Cambridge, B.A.; John Edward Arthur Murray Scott, Esq.; William Neish, jun., Esq., Cambridge, B.A.; Frederick James Fegen, Esq., James Hamilton, Esq., Samuel Hill Smith Lofthouse, Esq., Cambridge, LL.B.; George Armit Holmes, Esq., Cambridge, B.A.; Alexander Meyrick Broadley, Esq., Henry Merivale Trollope, Esq., William Garvie, Esq., St. John's College, Halifax, Nova Scotia, B.A.; Thomas Northmore Lawrence, Esq., Oxford, B.A.; John Charles Dundas, Esq., Cambridge, B.A.; and Robert Hannibal Smith, Esq.

GRAY'S INN, June 7.—At a pension holden this day, James Burke, B.A., Trinity College, Dublin, the fourth son of John Joseph Burke, late of Rutland-square, Dublin, Esq., M.D., deceased; Horace Tompson Chitty, of No. 2, Essex-court, Temple, gentleman, the eldest son of Tompson Chitty, late of Essex-court, Temple, Esq., barrister-at-law, deceased; Adam Rivers Steele, of Cricklewood, in the county of Middlesex, Esq., the second son of Thomas James Steele, late of Sawbridgeworth, in the county of Hertford, Esq., deceased; John Edward Dibb of Wakefield, in the West Riding of the county of York, gentleman, the fourth son of Christopher Bolland Dibb, late of Leeds, in the said county of York, acting registrar of deeds for the said West Riding; and William Edward Wynn Williams, of Portmadoc, in the county of Carnarvon, gentleman, the eldest son of David Williams, of Dandrueth Castle, in the county of Merioneth, Esq., were called to the degree of Barrister-at-Law, by the Hon. Society of Gray's Inn.

COURT OF COMMON COUNCIL. THE CORPORATION AND MR. COMMISSIONER KERR.

A special Court of Common Council has been held at Guildhall—the Lord Mayor presiding—for the purpose, chiefly, of taking into consideration a report from the special committee appointed to consider the matters in question between the Corporation and Mr. Commissioner Kerr, the judge of the City of London Court. It may be said that Mr. Kerr has recently applied for a mandamus in the Court of Queen's Bench for the purpose of getting paid to him the fees of the City of London Court, in addition to the salary received by him from the Corporation of 1500*l.* a year. Efforts however, have in the mean time been made with the view of effecting an amicable arrangement, and the committee, after frequent consultations with the judge, have agreed to an arrangement which has received the full assent of Mr. Kerr. The principal points in the arrangement were that Mr. Kerr should sit as a commissioner at the Central Criminal Court on the first Tuesday in each session and at any time when the Recorder or Common Serjeant could not attend; that in consideration of the claims made by the judge being entirely withdrawn he should be paid a salary of 1800*l.* per annum, commencing from the 1st Jan. 1868, as judge of the City of London Court, in addition to the 300*l.* received by him as a commissioner of the Central Criminal Court, and that he be paid the sum of 100 guineas as a settlement of his claims; that with respect to the suit now pending between the judge and the Corporation, counsel be requested to attend the Court of Queen's Bench tomorrow, and state that an amicable arrangement has been agreed to; and that with respect to Admiralty jurisdiction the judge should be placed in the same position by the corporation that other County Court judges might be placed by Parliament. The report was agreed to almost unanimously.

THE BAR OF IRELAND.—A very numerous attended meeting of the members of the Irish Bar was held in the library of the Four Courts on Saturday last. The object was to consider the propriety of seeking an alteration in the constitution of the governing body, and to have the management vested more in the Bar itself than in the judges. Of the benchers twenty-nine hold judicial or official positions, and fifteen are barristers. A committee of eight was appointed to consider the subject and report upon it to an adjourned meeting of the Bar.

The Benchers of the Hon. Society of the Inner Temple have presented their talented and respected organist (Edward J. Hopkins, Esq.) with a cheque for fifty guineas, in recognition of his valuable services during the long period of twenty-six years. We are informed, says the Musical Standard, that this very courteous act was communicated in the most handsome terms.

The twenty-seventh general meeting of the Courts of Justice Commission was held on Friday afternoon last week, at the offices of the Commission, when it was unanimously agreed that a committee should be appointed to examine minutely all the questions of measurement and costs. We are therefore relieved from the apprehension that the Ministerial plan will be hastily forced upon the consideration of Parliament; and have now, for the first time, an assurance that all the facts material to the question will be collected and presented in an authentic form by a public body whose impartiality and authority will not be disputed. The following members were present: Right Hon. Robert Lowe (the Chancellor of the Exchequer), Lord Chief Justice Bovill, Lord Justice Selwyn, the First Commissioner of Works, Vice-Chancellor Stuart, Vice-Chancellor Malins, Mr. Baron Martin, Mr. Justice Montague Smith, the Queen's Advocate, Sir Roundell Palmer, Q. C., M.P., Mr. John Henry Bolton, Mr. Pearce William Rogers, Mr. George Hume, Mr. Charles Manley Smith, Mr. William Morgan Benett, Mr. William Henry Walton, Mr. H. Cadogan Rothery, Mr. Augustus Frederic Bayford, Mr. John Greenwood, Q. C., Sir Alexander Young Spearman, Mr. Henry Arthur Hunt, Mr. R. P. Amphlett, Q. C., Mr. Thomas Southgate, Q. C., Mr. John Young, Mr. William Strickland Cookson; and Mr. Edwin W. Field, honorary secretary, and Mr. G. E. Street, A.R.A., the architect.

MAGISTRATE AND PARISH LAWYER.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

A Corporation or other similar body nominally prosecutors may compel the virtual possessor to give security for costs: (R. v. Commissioners, &c. of Southampton, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 585. Mellor and Hayes, JJ.)

BREAD—SALE OF OTHERWISE THAN BY WEIGHT.—Sect. 4 of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 37, enacts that bakers and sellers of bread, shall sell bread only by weight. Where a person went into a baker's shop and asked for a quart loaf (meaning a quarter loaf) and was served with a loaf of less weight than 4*lb.*, and there was no evidence that the bread had been weighed, it was held to be a selling of the bread otherwise than by weight: (Mitton v. Troke, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 563. Q. B.)

HIGHWAY—ENCROACHMENT—FENCE.—Sect. 51 of the Highway Act enacts that if any person shall encroach by making any hedge or other fence on the side of any carriage way, or within 15*ft.* from the centre thereof, he shall be subject to conviction, &c. B. erected a fence on the site of an open and unenclosed ditch which was his property, but was within 15*ft.* from such centre of the highway. It was held not to be an encroachment within this section: (Field v. Thorne, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 563. Q. B.)

REAL PROPERTY LAWYER AND CONVEYANCER.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

WILL—SPECIFIC DEVISE—APPORTIONMENT.—The owner of the two landed estates, H. and B., subject to a mortgage which operated as a primary charge upon H., and as a further charge upon B., by his will devised B. specifically and H., which was the only other real estate of which he died possessed, passed by a residuary devise: Held, that, a residuary devise of real estate being specific, the two properties must bear the mortgage rateably. (Brounson v. Lawrance, 18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 143; L. Rep. 6 Eq. 1, observed upon. Where the husband of a woman entitled in remainder to real estate was adjudicated a bankrupt prior to his wife's estate falling into possession, his contingent interest as tenant by the curtesy did not pass to his assignees: (Gibbins v. Eyden, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 516. V.C.M.)

WILL—REMOTENESS—PERPETUITIES.—A testatrix gave real and personal estate upon trust, after sale and conversion, for S. for life, with remainder to the eldest son of S. for life (S. being then unmarried), with remainder to E. for life, and after the decease of the survivor of them, upon trust "to pay and transfer the said Government securities unto all and every the children of S., share and share alike, if more than one, and if but one then to such one child, and the child or children of such of the children of S. as shall be then dead, according to the Statute of Distributions; but in case there shall be no child or grandchild of S. then living, then over: Held, that the limitations to the children and grandchildren of S. were void for remoteness, the vesting being postponed until after the expiration of the life of a person unborn at the death of the testatrix. (Avern v. Lloyd, L. Rep. 5 Eq. 383; 18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 282, and Ashley v. Ashley, 6 Sim. 358, observed upon: (Stuart v. Cockerell, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 518. V.C.M.)

WILL—MEANING OF TERM "ISSUE."—A testator gave the residue of his property upon trust in equal shares to his four sisters, married women, during their lives, for their separate uses, and directed that when and so soon as either of them should die without leaving issue, the share or shares of her or them so dying should be divisible among the survivors, and the issue of any who might then be dead, in equal shares, but such issue to take only their respective parent's share therein. And when and so soon as any or either of his said married sisters should die and leave issue, then upon trust to call in the original and accruing share or shares of her or them so dying leaving issue, and pay the same unto such respective issue, if more than one child equally to be divided between them. One of the sisters died, having had two children, one of whom died in her mother's lifetime, leaving children surviving: Held, that the words "leaving issue" must be construed as meaning "having issue," and that the children of the daughter who died in her mother's lifetime were entitled to their mother's share, which vested in her children: (Bryden v. Willett, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 518. V.C. Malins.)

EASEMENT—ANCIENT LIGHTS—NEW BUILDING.—B. had an old house, some of whose windows were ancient lights overlooking the premises of C. On this site he erected an entirely new building with much larger windows, which occupied only to a small extent the same position as the former windows. C. afterwards pulled down his premises and rebuilt them so as to obstruct the access of light and air to B.'s new windows. On a bill by B. to restrain the obstruction, it was held that B., by altering the character of his easement, had deprived himself of the right to call for the aid of a court of equity: (Heath v. Bushnell, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 549. M.R.)

LANDLORD AND TENANT—LEASE BY A CORPORATION—ABSENCE OF CORPORATE SEAL—IMPLIED YEARLY TENANCY.—The respondents, who are a corporation, by a lease not under their corporate seal, let the appellant into possession of premises, who occupied and paid the reserved rent during the term, and held over after its expiration for two years at the same rent, when the tenancy was determined by notice to quit given by the respondents. By one of the terms of the lease the tenant was to put, and keep, and deliver up the premises in tenantable repair, and in an action by the respondents for dilapidations in breach of the appellant's covenant to repair, it was held by the Exchequer (Kelly, C. B., and Bramwell, Pigott, and Cleasby, BB.), on the authority of Wood v. Tate, 2 Bos. & Pul. N. R. 247, that although the lease was void ab origine for want of the corporate seal, yet the appellant having occupied and paid rent under it, and having held over at the same rent, an implied tenancy from year to year was created, to which the covenant to repair was a term in the agreement that was applicable, and that the respondents were entitled to maintain the action. Per Kelly, C. B.—The contract was an executed one, and there was no want of mutuality between the parties. On the one hand the appellant might be sued on the covenant, and on the other there was an equitable obligation on the respondents to fulfil their part of the contract into which the appellant had entered confiding in their good faith; and that equitable obligation formed a good legal consideration for maintaining an action for the breach of any terms of the contract, of which specific performance would be decreed in equity. Per Bramwell, B.—Where a tenant has occupied and paid rent for premises under a corporation, there may be a good common law tenancy between him and them, although the lease under which he entered into possession may be void for want of the corporate seal, and as there may be in fact no lease at all: (Merrall v. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 573. Ex.)

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES' LAW JOURNAL.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.
STOCK AND SHARES IN A COMPANY—CHARGE—ORDER—JUDGMENT DEBTOR.—M. W., by her will, executed in the Scotch form, "gave, granted, and disposed to, and in favour of, W. and S., or the acceptors or survivors of them as trustees, all and sundry lands, &c., and in general her whole means, estate and effects, on trust in the first place for the payment of debts, funeral, and testamentary expenses; secondly, for the payment of certain specific and pecuniary legacies; and with regard to the residue and remainder of her said estate and effects, upon trust to pay, assign, and dispose the same equally between the defendant and two other persons when they should attain twenty-one years respectively. And she directed her said trustees to pay or invest, as by the said will directed, the legacies thereby bequeathed, so soon after her decease as her means could be judiciously converted into cash, and in any event that that be done not later than twelve months after her death." At her decease, in 1866, M. W., the testatrix, was absolutely entitled to a sum of money in the Three per Cents. Reduced, standing in the joint names of herself and G. H., and also to certain preference shares in a railway company standing in her own name, and which stock and shares formed part of the estate of the testatrix bequeathed by her will as aforesaid. The stock and shares respectively were now standing in the names of the trustees of the will: Held, by the Court of Exchequer, Kelly, C. B., Bramwell and Cleasby, B.B. (making absolute a rule to set aside an order of Willes, J., charging the above stock and shares with payment of a judgment-debt recovered against the defendant), that the defendant had no interest either vested or contingent in the said stock and shares that could be charged under either 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 14, or 3 & 4 Vict. c. 82, s. 1. (Cragg v. Taylor (15 L. T. Rep. N. S. 584; L. Rep. 2 Ex. 131; 36 L. J. 63, Ex.), distinguished, on the ground that the defendant in that case had an interest, though contingent, in the shares themselves, but here the defendant had no interest, contingent or otherwise, in the stock and shares themselves, but only a contingent interest in the proceeds thereof after the same should have been converted into cash, and dealt with by the trustees under the trusts of the will: (Dixon v. Wrench, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 492. Ex.)

WINDING-UP—DIVIDEND.—A dividend had been declared: to some of the creditors a considerable amount was due for interest as well as for principal. The dividend was ordered to be paid upon the principal and interest, pari passu: (Re the Humber Iron Works, &c Company, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 508. M.R.)

WINDING-UP—PRACTICE.—On an ex-parte application a special examiner had been appointed to take the evidence of witnesses to be examined orally throughout the whole winding-up of a company. H., an alleged contributory, on being subpoenaed to attend before the special examiner, had refused to do so on the ground that the special examiner had been appointed without his consent: Held, that H. was perfectly justified in declining to go before a special examiner to whose appointment he had not consented. Every person concerned has a right to be heard on the appointment of a special examiner. The practice of appointing a special examiner once for all in a winding-up is a highly improper practice, and one which the court will not sanction: (Re Smith, Knight, and Co., 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 511. M.R.)

RAILWAY—WHAT IS LUGGAGE.—The decision that a rocking-horse is not passengers' luggage, already commented upon, will be found fully reported in Hudston v. The Midland Railway Company, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 526. Q.B.

MERCANTILE LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

BREACH OF TRUST BY FACTOR—RIGHT TO FOLLOW MONEYS FRAUDULENTLY CONVERTED.—In April 1867 B. and Co., at the instance of H., and on his representation that the indigo market was in a favourable state for the purchaser, gave a cash draft for 2700*l.* for the purchase for them of forty-five cases of indigo. H. made no such purchases, and gave no account of his disposal of the 2700*l.* to Messrs. B. H. was adjudicated a bankrupt in Oct. 1867, and W. B., one of the firm of B. and Co., was chosen assignee. From the books, &c., of the bankrupt, it afterwards appeared that the bankrupt had applied the moneys of B. and Co. in reducing mortgage debts, and in investments in indigo, which had resulted in profits. The mortgaged property was afterwards sold, and a surplus resulted to the bankrupt's estate: Held, that the 2700*l.* was clothed with a specific trust, and that B. and Co. were entitled to the profits made by the bankrupt on the dealings in indigo, and to the surplus resulting from the sale of the mortgaged property, as the proceeds of their own money misapplied by the bankrupt, as far as the same could be traced: Held, also, that there having been a breach of trust, the facts of which had only recently come to their knowledge, B. and Co. were not barred from now seeking their remedy, although the breach of trust occurred in 1867: (20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 547, Bank. Com. Holroyd.)

ECCELSIASTICAL LAW.

THE IRISH CHURCH ABOLITION BILL.

A PEER has communicated to us the following as the reasons which have determined the majority of the Lords to reject this Bill on the second reading. Of their value every reader will form his own judgment.

1. Because they are of opinion that the country has not had sufficient time and opportunity for considering a measure of such magnitude and importance. It was only suggested twelve months ago. The general election was had upon the naked resolution alone, and with none of the details of the scheme submitted to the judgment of the constituencies. No measure of equal importance, and effecting so vast a revolution, was ever before passed so hastily. Parliamentary Reform was discussed by the country for twenty years, Free Trade for five years. The Lords rejected the Bills embodying these measures several times, until repeated and eager discussion had made the country familiar with the plans proposed and the results to be anticipated from them. When it was plain that they were deliberately adopted by the country, with ample opportunity for discussion and reflection, the House of Lords bowed to the decision, and accepted the measures so indorsed.

2. The Lords believe that this Bill has not been sufficiently considered by the country, and that public opinion has not been yet decisively pronounced upon it. They have no purpose to resist the deliberate desire of the country, declared after full discussion. They propose to send back the Bill that it may receive the further consideration demanded by the greatness of its issues. If, after such investigation, with full knowledge of the revolution it inaugurates, the opinion of the country shall deliberately declare itself in favour of the Bill, the Lords will bow to that decision.

3. The Lords know well that tame submission of their own judgments now would insure a demand for a repetition of the same process again and again until their place in the constitution will be practically destroyed. They must make a stand sooner or later, and it is more manly to do so now than after submission to degradation. They may be defeated, but they will not be dishonoured, and if they are doomed to extinction it will be with the respect and not amid the contempt of the world.

4. To surrender Protestantism without a struggle would be an act of cowardice, if not of treachery.

Such are the reasons given to us by one of those whose vote will be governed by them. We state them in substance, not in words, as we have received them. We do not agree with the conclusion, for weighty reasons for a different course have not been considered. They will, however, be received with respect even by those who dissent from them, for they are manifestly dictated by a sober judgment, and are not, as it has been surmised, prompted by pride or by any desire to set public opinion at defiance.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

FACULTY TO DEDICATE CONSECRATED GROUND—PROHIBITION.—A piece of ground was formally consecrated in 1778 as a churchyard for the parish of S. In 1865, by an order in council, burials were ordered to be discontinued in the churchyard, none having taken place there for forty years previously. In the same year the guardians of the parish, in rebuilding their workhouse erected part of the buildings, including a chapel for the inmates of the workhouse, on a portion of the consecrated ground where no corpses had ever been buried, and then applied to the Consistory Court for a faculty to authorise this use of the portion of consecrated ground built on. On application by a stranger to the parish for a prohibition to restrain the judge of the Ecclesiastical Court from granting the faculty: Held, that although ground once consecrated cannot, without the authority of an Act of Parliament, be used for secular purposes, yet a prohibition should not be granted in this case, as the faculty applied for had reference partly to the erection of a chapel on the consecrated ground, which the Consistory Court might authorise, and this court would presume that the inferior court would not act beyond its jurisdiction; and (2) because the applicant for a prohibition was an entire stranger to the parish: (Reg. v. Twiss, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 522. Q.B.)

COUNTY COURTS.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

COSTS OF APPEAL.—On a motion on behalf of a successful appellant from a decision of the County Court, to vary the order drawn up by the registrar, on the ground that it merely gave the appellant the costs of the suit up to the decree in the County Court, and did not allow him the costs of the appeal, Stuart, V. C., said: "Although it may be the rule at common law that the costs of an appeal should follow the result, it has never been the rule in the Court of Chancery. There the court, in determining the question of costs, always takes into consideration the conduct of the parties and the circumstances of the litigation. To make the party who has been successful in the court below pay the costs of both parties on appeal would be to make him pay for the mistake of the judge. The rule at common law is one which I cannot in conscience follow, and to which in ordinary cases I have not the slightest intention of adhering. The motion to vary the minutes must be refused." (Fallows v. Slatter, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 513. V.C.M.)

SUNDERLAND COUNTY COURT.

(Before H. STAPYLTON, Esq., Judge, and two Nautical Assessors.)

THE FRIENDSHIP v. THE SPARTAN;
THE SPARTAN v. THE FRIENDSHIP.

Anchoring ships—Foul berth—Collision—Admiralty jurisdiction.

Botterell (Oliver and Botterell) for the Friendship.

Simey for the Spartan.

The evidence in this case, which was somewhat conflicting, showed that the Friendship on 1st March last, anchored in Lowestoft North Roads, at a distance of from a cable and a half (135 fathoms) to a quarter of a mile from the Spartan. On the next day the wind being squally, the Spartan dragged her anchor and drove down with the wind upon the Friendship, and did the damage complained of. A North Sea pilot proved that the eighth of a mile distant would be a good and safe berth for a ship in these roads.

Simey cited the case of the Volcano (2 W. Rob. 33), where the Volcano was held liable for taking up improper anchorage with a small bower anchor only, and for not letting go a second anchor.

Botterell, in reply, cited the case of the Northampton (1 Spinks Eccl. & Adm. Rep. 160), where it was held that where vessels are lying at anchor there should be space left for swinging to the anchor, so that in ordinary circumstances the two vessels could not come together, and he submitted that as the Spartan admitted that there was a cable and a-half between the two vessels, the Friendship could not have given the Spartan a foul berth.

Held, that the Friendship did not give the Spartan a foul berth, and that the Spartan was solely to blame in the collision. Verdict for the Friendship in both cases.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

EXECUTION-CREDITOR—DELAY IN ISSUING ON INVALIDITY OF DEED.—An execution-creditor obtained judgment in an action against the debtor on the 29th July 1868. A deed was then set up, and the matter was taken into the Bankruptcy Court in February 1869. It was held that as the creditor had been throughout insisting on the invalidity of the deed, and asserting his right to his execution under the judgment in the action, he had not been guilty of any delay which could disentitle him to the leave which he asked for, and leave to issue execution against P. was accordingly given: (Ex parte Osmont, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 505, L. J.).

COMPOSITION-DEED—IRREGULARITY.—In an action of indebitatus assumpsit, the defendant pleaded a composition-deed under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, made between himself the debtor, of the first part, "the undersigned creditors" (hereinafter called "the said creditors") of the second part, and the trustees of the debtor's marriage settlement of the third part, by which deed, after reciting a resolution by the creditors to accept a composition by instalments at three, six, and ten months; and also an agreement by the said trustees that payment of the said dividends should be deferred until the other creditors were paid the said instalments; and also an agreement by the majority in number, &c., of the creditors to carry out the said resolution, the debtor covenanted with the said creditors parties of the second part, "to pay them the said composition at the periods mentioned," and also with the said parties of the third part to pay them the said composition after the expiration of the said ten months, and "the said creditors" thereby released the said debtor from their several debts. The plea alleged the deed to be binding under the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act 1861, upon the plaintiff, a non-assenting creditor, as if he had been a party, and had executed it. It was held that as the deed, on the face of it, was not made with all the creditors of the defendant, and only those who actually executed or signed it could derive any benefit under it, or have any right to sue the debtor on his covenants, it was, on the authority of Benham v. Broadhurst, in the Exchequer Chamber, 11 L. T. Rep. N. S. 537; 84 L. J. 61, Ex.; 3 H. & C. 472, an invalid deed, and that the plea setting it up was bad. It was held, also, that the plea was bad for not averring that the parties to the deed of the third part who were postponed to the other creditors of the second part, had either executed or assented to the deed. Bramwell, B., said that it was necessary that all the trustees, and not some or one of them only, should execute the deed, as otherwise a non-executing trustee might challenge the acts of the other in equity: (Gaircross v. Wills, 20 L. T. Rep. N. S. 529. Ex.)

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

[NOTE.—This department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editor is not responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it.]

MANAGING CLERKS IN THE COUNTY AND MAGISTRATES' COURT.—Allow me, through the columns of your widely-circulated paper, to bring under the notice of the legal profession generally the very important subject above alluded to. The case that has induced me to make the following observations is that of Holland v. Standing, reported in the LAW TIMES of the 27th March last. Whether His Honour's judgment was legally right or not I shall not at present attempt to argue; I shall suppose it to be so, and upon that supposition, what results follow? First, that as construed the several Acts relating to attorneys are held to impose a most unjust and ridiculous restriction upon gentlemen who have strictly followed the arduous and expensive course of study and apprenticeship directed by those Acts for the express purpose of qualifying them for becoming attorneys. Secondly, as construed, the Acts are held to prohibit a gentleman who has fulfilled the numerous and particular directions therein contained, from performing a certain description of professional work which very often happens to be the identical branch of practice for which his services are required by the party engaging him as managing clerk. It does appear to me impossible that the Legislature ever intended such a construction to be put upon the Acts in question. In no other profession, trade, or calling is there any similar restriction as to a person who has been legally apprenticed. The evident intention was to prevent an unqualified person, one who not been articulated and admitted, from being able to act as, or for, an attorney, and not as the present construction extends, to place a party, who has in every way, by education, articles, and admission, by study and heavy expenses legally qualified himself for an attorney, in no better position than one who has not been articulated and admitted. The injustice of such a construction is too palpable to require any comment. It may be observed by gentlemen of Mr. Clough's principles that if an articulated and admitted clerk wishes to appear in the County Court, or before the justices in petty sessions, he ought to take out his certificate, and start as an attorney on his own account. My answer to this is that many highly educated, honourable, and clever men have by means of the greatest economy succeeded in legally qualifying themselves to perform the duties of an attorney, but are not in a position to justify their starting on their own account. Surely it never could have been the intention of those who framed the Acts in question ever to have imposed such a cruel and paltry restriction upon parties really deserving encouragement and help. Can it be conceived that if such a construction had really been intended, the restriction attaching to a qualified managing clerk should only extend to that very important duty of appearing in the County Court, and not in the least to interfere with his power and right to transact all or any of the other (comparatively unimportant) business of the office in which he may be engaged, such as preparing conveyances, mortgages, leases, settlements, wills, briefs, affidavits, &c.? The absurdity of the restriction

Crisp, Frank—W. H. Ashurst; F. Knight; T. M. Harvey
Crowder, William Henry—G. A. Crowder
Davidson, James Henry—S. Davidson
Davis, Benn—J. F. Davis; A. A. Pollock
Davis, George—J. Morris
Downie, Alexander Francis Mackenzie—T. Parr; F. S. Parker
Dowse, Francis—G. Walker
Dunn, John—F. Knight; T. M. Harvey
Dutton, James—A. Bailey
Dyer, Joseph Horton—C. Stringer; T. G. Woollacott
Eastham, William—J. Eastham
Egar, Thomas—W. J. Hollett; C. E. Lewis
Edson, William Brewis—G. Brewis; J. G. Youll
English, Alban Milburn—A. H. English
Farquharson, Arthur Theodore—B. B. Pooley
Flint, Abraham John—W. Small; S. Leech
Foster, William Edward—E. G. Ayliff
Fox, Wilson Lloyd—T. H. Tilly; H. Tilly
Furston, James—H. Webster; G. E. East
Garstang, Robert Blackledge—B. Henton
Gilbert, Edwin Philip—F. W. F. Cleverton
Godfray, Hugh Charles, B.A.—E. Foster; P. S. Knowles
Goldring, Thomas Wallace—T. Z. Goldring
Gould, Thomas—W. B. Tarrant
Gray, Frederick John—W. Grange; E. Byrne
Grundy, Frederick—C. Grundy
Guillaume, Frederick—E. Guillaume
Harding, Nest Corp—H. Brittan
Hardwick, Walter Edward Farrin—S. Danks
Harlow, Joseph Johnson—T. Goater
Hartcup, Herbert James—W. Hartcup
Hawkin, Frederick Thomas—H. E. Watson
Heaton, Robert—J. J. Thornley
Heritage, John Wilson—F. Heritage
Hett, Francis Crowder—J. Hett; R. M. Russell
Hewison, Frederick—E. Bauner
Hope, Herford Edwin—W. Orford
Hudson, Henry—G. Fry
Iberty, Willoughby—J. J. G. Boyle
Ingram, James Crofts, B.A.—J. Ingram
Jackson, Henry James—H. Hall, jun.
Jenkins, Robert Rice—H. Jenkins
Jones, Francis William—A. G. Jones
Jones, John Roberts—W. Williams
Jones, Thomas Alley, jun.—T. A. Jones
Jones, Thomas Parry—L. Adams
Julian, William—G. Eaton
Kennedy, Charles—E. H. Collis
Lawrence, Edward—P. D. Lowndes
Lawrence, John—T. Teulmin; W. Carruthers
Lee, Arthur—A. H. Clarke
Lee, Cecil Radford—J. Rogers
Leeming, Charles Henry—F. Jubb
Letts, Charles—J. Letts
Lewis, Davis Robert—W. E. Smith
Lloyd, Henry Harman—H. H. Parr; G. Lloyd
Lloyd, Robert Owen—G. Boydell
Lockhart, Lewis Chalmers—J. O. Head
Lovibond, George—H. Lovibond
Lyett, Henry—J. Bagshaw
Maitis, Henry—A. B. Hordern; T. F. Maddock
Mellor, Edward Daniel, B.A.—J. Hollams
Mellor, George James—W. Unwin; E. G. Tattershall
Micklethwait, William—W. Murton
Mitchell, William George Carter—T. W. Pearce; W. Lay
Moore, Edward Thomas—B. P. Broothhead
Moore, James Wharton—T. A. Watson
Moss, John Miles, B.A.—C. Morris
Mury, John Frederick—G. B. Mury
Muggrave, John Raven—J. Muggrave
Newey, Edwin Cottrell—W. R. Willis
Newton, Frederick Hawkins—G. Brown
Obelin, John—J. Mackrell
Ollard, Sidney—W. L. Ollard; H. Nicholson
Palmer, Charles William—F. Barlow
Payne, William Griffin—S. M. Beale
Pearless, Reginald Wilson—J. R. Pearless
Pearson, Benjamin Clater—T. T. Pearson; O. A. Williams; T. T. Pearson
Pennington, Frank James—E. H. Few
Petch, Richard—T. B. Burland
Peter, Charles—R. Peter
Pugh, Oliver Vaughan—J. Pugh; W. I. Bull
Read, John Alexander—J. E. Varley
Rodway, George Wood Barrett—G. W. Rodway
Rooper, Maximilian George—G. Rooper
Russell, Arthur—E. Davies
Ryley, James—E. Wynder
Sadler, Augustus Charles—E. R. Sadler; F. Richardson
Salmon, William Henry Campbell—R. Phippen
Sampson, Joseph—J. Lamb
Shaw, David Allison—G. Mills
Shenton, William—A. J. Lee
Sherrard, George Clifton—S. Woodbridge
Siddall, Thomas Mortimer—J. G. Wilson; T. Diggle
Smith, Samuel Bilton—N. Wilkinson
Smith, Spencer Marsh—T. Smith
Smyth, Benjamin—S. B. Robertson
Syms, Frederick Richard—J. L. Syms
Tanner, William Burbridge—W. B. Lanfear
Tattershall, John Henry—J. Piskop
Thomson, Joseph Arthur—G. J. Robertson
Van Dommere, Jonathan E. Smith—J. B. Falconar
Warburton, William—F. Marriott
Warner, Edward Lee—C. T. Arnold
Warriner, Edmund—B. F. Thompson; T. Wight; A. S. Lawson
Wason, James, jun.—P. Simpson
Watkin, James Buckley, jun.—J. B. Watkin
Watson, James—W. Watson
Whithead, James Dove—F. W. Calvert
Wilson, Richard Arthur, B.A.—T. Thring
Wilson, Rowland Holt—G. A. Partridge
Wright, Frederick Ashfield—J. Newton
Wright, Warner—L. B. Cooke; E. A. Parker

MARAVILLA COCOA FOR BREAKFAST.—The cocoa (or cacao) of Maravilla is the true Theobroma of Linnaeus. The Globe says: "Taylor Brothers' Maravilla Cocoa has established a thorough success, and superseded every other cocoa in the market. For homeopathic and invalids we could not recommend a more agreeable or valuable beverage." Sold, in packets only, by all grocers.

arising from the present construction of the Acts is only equalled by its injustice. I sincerely trust that the foregoing observations may be the means of bringing this subject under the consideration of the legal profession, and thereby getting the question thoroughly discussed, and settled according to the evident intention of the Acts, and the just claims of the parties interested. W. H. F.

CONVEYANCING FORM.—Some time since, a correspondent asked for a form of limitation of property to children. I inclose two; one is intended to be used where the beneficiaries are the children of the testator, the other where they are the children of a third person. They have been framed so as to avoid the necessity of using any clause of accretion; and, whilst being within the rule against perpetuities, they prevent the share of any child or grandchild vesting under the age of twenty-one years, except in the case of children of a child of a third person dying after him, when such postponement of vesting would, of course, be void under that rule. In my experience, testators seldom wish the share of a daughter in personalty (to which these forms refer), to vest in her husband, in case of her marrying and dying under twenty-one; but rather that it should be divided amongst her children, if any; and, in default of children, that it should revert to her own family. LEX.

BEQUEST FOR CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN OF TESTATOR—PROPERTY VESTED IN TRUSTEES TO CONVEY, &c., AND EITHER SUBJECT OR NOT TO A LIFE INTEREST TO BE HELD.

In trust for such child or children of mine living at my decease [or born in due time afterwards (a)], and for such child or children living at my death of any child or children of mine as [have died or (b)] shall die in my lifetime, and also for such child or children of any child of mine who shall die after me, and before attaining the age of twenty-one years, as either before or after my decease attain the age of twenty-one years, if more than one, in equal shares as between brothers and sisters, but so that the children of any child of mine shall take only the share which their deceased parent would have taken if living and of the age of twenty-one years at my decease.

BEQUEST FOR CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN OF A THIRD PERSON (PROPERTY VESTED AS BEFORE).

In trust for such child or children of A. B., living at his decease [or born in due time afterwards (c)], and for such child or children living at his death of any child of the said A. B. as shall die in his lifetime, as either before or after his decease shall attain the age of twenty-one years, and also for such child or children of any child of the said A. B. as shall die after him and before attaining the age of twenty-one years, if more than one, in equal shares, &c., ut supra, substituting for "mine," the words "the said A. B.," and for "my decease," the words "the decease of the said A. B."

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.

[N.B.—None are inserted unless the name and address of the writers are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.]

Queries.

29. DEEDS OF SETTLEMENT AND TRUSTEES.—A., by deed of settlement, gave land to B. and C., to hold to B. and C. and their heirs, to the use of B. and C. and their heirs, during the lives of the three daughters of A. (D., E., and F.), in trust for the benefit of D., E., and F., and after their decease to the use of the children of D., E., and F., as tenants in common. A. died long since; B. and C. paid the rents and profits of the land to D., E., and F., and the survivor during their lives. They are all now dead, leaving altogether twenty-seven children, who are now in possession. B. and C. are also dead, and the title deeds to the land are in the hands of G., the heir-at-law of C., the survivor. G. wishes to get rid of the whole matter, and to hand the deeds to the proper party. Will some one say to whom he should deliver them? An authority on the point would be acceptable. J. H. W.

30. APPRENTICE.—Whether, since the passing of the Act of 31 & 32 Vict. c. 141, an apprentice, bound by indenture during his minority, can avoid the indenture on his attaining twenty-one, the term of apprenticeship not having expired; or whether he is not liable to be proceeded against, under the Act above-mentioned, if he leaves his master's service without the consent of the master, although he may have attained his majority. (See sect. 2—definition of terms "employed," and "contract of service.") Z.

Answers.

(Q. 3.) EQUITY OF REDEMPTION—MORTGAGE.—I know of no case upon the subject, but I do not think there can be any doubt upon the point. Before the passing of the Fines and Recoveries Act, a married woman could exercise a power of appointment over real estate without a fine or recovery, as to which, see Sug. Powers, 154, 3rd edit.; and the passing of the Act left her rights unaltered in this respect (sect. 78). M. E. S.

(Q. 22.) RAILWAY.—A railway company is certainly bound to provide such accommodation for its passengers, as they are entitled to by the class of tickets

- (a) In case testator is a male.
- (b) In case of any children of testator dead at date of will.
- (c) In case A. B. is a male.

issued to them; that is to say, a first-class passenger cannot, against his will, be forced to travel in a second-class carriage. But I see no reason why a company, if it chooses, should not allow a passenger to travel in a better class of carriage than that to which his ticket entitles him, provided that the rights and comfort of the passengers of that class are not thereby affected. M. E. S.

(Q. 23.) WILL—VESTING.—I know of no very late case upon the subject, but in the absence of further words or expressions in the will explanatory of, or relating to, the bequest, it appears to me that the gift comes within the rule in Leake v. Robinson, 2 Mer. 363, and is contingent only. M. E. S.

(Q. 25.) ARTICLED CLERK.—I venture to assert that "B. D.'s" answer to "R. K.'s" inquiry is not correct. I cannot see how the 6th section of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, affects the assignment of an articulated clerk, either to the London agent of his master, or to any other solicitor either in London or the country. The section referred to provides that an articulated clerk may pass one year of his articles with the London agent of the solicitor to whom he is articulated, without any assignment. It has nothing whatever to do with the assignment of an articulated clerk from one master to another. A. B.

(Q. 26.) MORTGAGES IN POSSESSION.—Mortgages in possession are justified in selling the mortgaged property under a power of sale, without fixing any reserved price, even though such sale be made at a disadvantageous time. And the right accrues at law as well as in equity. (See Smith's Compendium of Real Property, pp. 370 and 380; and Smith's Manual of Equity, p. 306.) It would further appear from Stephens's Commentaries, vol. 1, p. 313, that it is not necessary there should be any surplus arising from the sale, to secure which would be the object of a reserved price. The mortgagor can, nevertheless, require a strict account of the application of the proceeds. A reservation of the price would necessarily prevent the mortgagee of an overcharged estate from ever selling, so that the estate would lie on hand greatly to his detriment, and with no advantage to the mortgagor. S. L. R.

—Not only are mortgages and other fiduciary vendors not liable for selling without a reserved bidding, but they would be liable for fixing a reserve price, unless they had special authority to do so. The law on the whole subject will be found in Dart, V. & P. 34 (of which book, I am glad to see, a new edition will be shortly ready) and Lewin on Trusts, 315. The case is not affected by the fact of the mortgages being in possession. M. E. S.

(Q. 27.) LIABILITY OF ESTATE FOR DEBTS.—The estate is not liable to C. D.'s debts, for he never had possession. E. F., the grandson, claims, not as heir to his father—though he may trace his descent through him—but as heir to the purchaser. The expectancy of an heir apparent is a mere contingent interest, hence the owner cannot assign it at law. But although the contract of an expectant heir will bind himself, it will not bind the succeeding heirs, that is, if the estate do not fall during the lifetime of the contracting heir. (See Watkins on "Conveyancing," vol. 2, p. 200.) S. L. R.

— "C. D." never having had any interest in the estate, it cannot be liable for his debts. M. E. S.

(Q. 28.) VERBAL AGREEMENT—MARRIAGE—SETTLEMENT.—By the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds any agreement made upon consideration of marriage must be in writing and signed by the party to be charged therewith. In the case in question, then, B. cannot enforce the agreement. (See Chitty on Contracts, 7th edit., p. 65.) S. L. R.

—Marriage articles, like agreements for the purchase of real estates, are required to be in writing, signed by the party to be charged therewith, or by some other person lawfully authorised by him (29 Car. 2, c. 3, s. 4), but, like an agreement of the latter kind, marriage articles may be established through the medium of a correspondence carried on by a series of letters, provided the terms are sufficiently full and distinct (Randall v. Morgan, 12 Ves. 57); and if articles are intended to be reduced into writing, which intention is prevented by the fraud of one of the parties, equity will oblige the fraudulent party to perform it; so where there has been a part performance of an unsigned or unwritten agreement, as where a wife has been permitted, under such an agreement, to enjoy the interest of a certain sum for her separate use during the marriage, a court of equity will enforce a specific performance of it (Taylor v. Beach, 2 Ves. 297). But marriage itself will not constitute a part performance. (Extracted from Hughes on Conveyancing, vol. 2, p. 750.) B. D.

—The answer to this question will depend upon the circumstances of the case. The authorities to which "W." should look to discover the law upon the point are principally Caton v. Caton, 38 L. J. 886, Ch.; Hammerley v. De Biel, 12 Cl. & F. 45, 62, n.; in Re Gulliver, 2 Jur. N. S. 701; Williams v. Williams, 37 L. J. 854, Ch. One thing is certain, that the fact of the agreement not having been in writing, as required by the Statute of Frauds, will be no bar to relief in equity, the agreement having been in part performed. M. E. S.

LAW SOCIETIES.

THE SOLICITORS' BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION.

The ninth annual festival of this association was held at Willis's Rooms, St. James's, on Wednesday evening last, the Lord Justice SELWYN presiding. There were about 100 gentlemen present, the Bar being represented by W. Forsyth, Esq., Q. C.; E. P. Price, Esq., Q. C.; Hon. George Denman, Q. C., M.P.; Sir Richard Bagallay, Q. C.; Joshua Williams, Esq., Q. C.; Mr. Serjt. Ballantime; Mr. Serjt. O'Brien; Mr. Serjt. Sleight; Mr. Secondary Potter; J. Morgan Howard, Esq., Barrister-at-Law; G. Miller, Esq., Barrister-at-Law; L. B. Clarence, Barrister-at-Law; W. Streeter, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.

Amongst the general company were Major Ellis, Royal Marines; Holder Ravenshaw, Esq.; Desmond McCarthy, Esq.; Henry T. Young, Esq., solicitor, London; Thomas Harrison, Esq., solicitor, London; J. S. Torr, Esq., solicitor, London; Sydney Gedge, Esq., solicitor, London; William Evans, Esq., solicitor, Birmingham; G. Brindley Acworth, Esq., solicitor, Rochester (and party); E. Benham, Esq., solicitor, London; W. B. Yates, Esq., solicitor, Northampton (and party); K. H. Fryer, Esq., solicitor, Gloucester (and friend); E. Hedger, Esq., solicitor, London; Sidney Smith, Esq., solicitor, London; William Yewd, Esq., solicitor, London; R. B. Lowndes, Esq., solicitor, London (and party); F. H. Hallett, Esq., Ashford; W. Furley, Esq., solicitor, Canterbury; J. B. Monckton, Esq., solicitor, London; W. H. Rowland, Esq., solicitor, Croydon (and party); H. Kimber, Esq., solicitor, London; &c., &c., &c.

The musical arrangements were under the management of Herr Wilhelm Ganz. Toastmaster, Mr. Goodchild.

After the cloth had been removed, the loyal toasts were given.

In proposing that of "The Prince and Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family," the CHAIRMAN said he had to propose the health of a member of their own profession, who, though he had not attained distinction as a barrister, was nevertheless enrolled as a bencher of the Temple.

The "Army, Navy, and Volunteers" was next given by the CHAIRMAN. Of the volunteers he could speak from his own experience. The Inns of Court corps included some of the most persevering and intelligent members of their profession, and they were a body of men whose loyalty was undoubted, for they gave up much valuable time in order to make themselves efficient volunteers. He might instance Mr. Justice Willes and the late Mr. Druce. And he thought the solicitors had discovered that the man who was willing to serve his country was also efficient as an advocate.

Major ELLIS replied for the army and navy. Mr. ROXBURGH, Q.C. replied for the volunteers. It was a duty he did not expect to perform, but as a volunteer he should not shrink from saying a few words. He felt proud of being able to say that he had been a volunteer of the Inns of Court from the first enrolment, and though he did not now discharge the duties as properly as he ought, he very much regretted that the corps had not received many of the younger members of the Bar in its ranks, to fill the places of such men as himself, who had served long enough to earn retirement. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. E. P. PRICE, Q.C., was next called upon to give "The Health of Her Majesty's Judges." He said he had no doubt whatever that the toast entrusted to him would be received with unanimity and cordial feeling. He might say a great deal personally and individually of Her Majesty's judges, but as had been said recently by one of them, they were quite willing to abide by the opinion of the public by their reported judgments and by the mode in which they conducted themselves every day. But he believed, in proposing the toast and in asking them to receive it, it was more in honour of the institution of judges than for any individual merits, however great they might be. They were living at a time when some of the most time-honoured institutions were standing upon their trial, and some it was supposed were found wanting in the balance that was struck against them, but he was quite sure that nobody wished to see any alteration in the constitution of the judicial bench of this country. (Hear, hear, and applause.) Whatever suggestions might be made as to the assimilation of their constitution to those of other countries, it was certain that Englishmen would never allow the judges to be nominated by popular election. They knew that no Government with whom the appointment of the judges rested would allow itself to be led away, however large the majority might be that it had at its back, so as to make an appointment that would not meet with the sanction of public opinion, and so long as that freedom of choice remained it would always go hand in hand with public opinion in this country. Once appointed, the judges could exercise their judgments freely, for they could not be removed, and they were independent of the Government on the one hand, and popular applause on the other. They were not to trim their sails to catch the popular gale; and the time had gone by when a judge would do anything that would trammel his independent position. He (Mr. Price) found that his learned friend Mr. Denman had been attached to this toast, and it was in the fitness of things that the honoured name of Denman should be associated with the toast of Her Majesty's judges—(Hear, hear)—because his father, who was so well known to many grey heads, was a most distin-gushed ornament to the judicial bench. (Applause.) He proposed the health of Her Majesty's judges with such a length of judicial life as should not interfere with the aspirations of the youngest member of the English Bar. (Laughter and applause.)

The Hon. GEO. DENMAN, Q. C., M.P., replied. He could not help saying that it was with great pleasure he found himself rowing in the same boat with his excellent friend the chairman, and in connection with the good cause they were met to promote. His name had been coupled with the toast, and he felt it to be a very great compliment to recognise in his humble person that Bench to which at the last hours of his life he should be proud of. Her Majesty's judges had very hard work to do; and he thought very few people considered what qualities were required to make a judge such as they were alone satisfied with in these days. He must be a man of temper, patience, and learning; he must be a man of constant and unwearied diligence, and whom all classes could look upon as a man of honour and independence; and in fact he must be a selection from the best specimens of the body to which many of them there belonged—viz., the Bar of England, to which they were so proud to belong. If he were a judge to return thanks he perhaps could not have said so much; but he asked them if they were not satisfied that, with the fewest possible exceptions, those men who filled the Bench of this country as it had been filled for generations, possessed all those qualifications he had named. (Cheers.) This applause gave evidence that they felt that was the case, and that was sufficient praise for the judges; for, of all the men in the world, those best qualified to judge were the solicitors, whose business it was to choose for their clients the courts in which their causes were to be heard, and sometimes to advise on appeals and in others to acquiesce in a judgment without an appeal. Having to deal with such delicate matters as these, he believed there was no body of men more capable of appreciating the value of the judges than were the solicitors of this country; and that being so, he could only say that, had he been a judge himself, he should have felt proud and greatly honoured by the way in which the toast had been received, and he was sure his right honourable friend the chairman would feel gratified that the tribute of admiration had been so freely and heartily made. The hon. gentleman concluded by thanking them for the kindness with which they had received him, and he could not help thinking that it was not owing to his personal merits that he had been placed in a somewhat false position in having to respond to the toast of "The Judges." (Cheers.)

Mr. SYDNEY GEDGE, M.A., next proposed the "Bar." He said it was a toast popular in all English assemblies; but on this occasion it was peculiarly so, because they were principally an assembly of solicitors, and there was no body of men who were so well qualified to appreciate the men of the Bar, because they admired them not for that which attracted the public, such as a telling appeal to a jury, but for their kindly interest and zeal on their behalf, and the good-natured generosity with which they went into the matters with the solicitors from first to last; and for frequently giving their advice without fee or reward. Long might the Bar exist to give its assistance to the solicitors, and long might the solicitors exist as a separate body. Mr. Justice Hannen, at their last anniversary, had spoken in favour of the amalgamation of the two professions; but he (Mr. Gedge) frankly said he hoped such amalgamation would never take place. (Hear, hear.) It was for the interest not only of the two professions, but for the public, that the two professions should be kept distinct. They had a division of labour at present, and this gave persons an opportunity of developing a speciality, for it could not be expected that general subjects could be thoroughly understood by any one. His experience taught him that the further the litigants were away from the courts the better. If they took the case of arbitrations, with counsel, solicitors, and clients on either side of the table, they would find that the clients sometimes shook their fists at each other; he had even seen solicitors get angry with each other, but he had never found that to be the case with counsel. He thought, therefore, that the further those who had to argue the cases were removed from the client the better, for sympathy naturally sprang up where there was direct communication with a client. He thought it was a great advantage to have a body of men trained to take the matter as an A and B case. His client, for instance, told him an immense deal that had nothing to do with the case; and when that was taken to the junior counsel he struck out one half, and his leader knocked off the other half, and when they got to the judge they found that there was only one point upon which the whole case turned. He therefore hoped nothing would be done to amalgamate the two Professions. He should, however, like to see something in connection with the law established analogous to the University tripos, so that young men could choose the profession for which their talents best fitted them. The Bar must still stand as high as ever, for one of their number, Sir Roundell Palmer, was marked out not only on account of intellect for the Chancellorship, but for those other qualities as a statesman; and he had refused the highest honour in his profession rather than break a conscientious scruple, and for this they ought to be proud of him. (Hear, hear, and cheers.) The pleasure of proposing the toast was much enhanced on this occasion by Mr. Forsyth's name being coupled with it, whose book on that most eloquent of jurists, Cicero, entitled him to great respect. (Applause.)

Mr. FORSYTH, in reply said he supposed he owed the coupling of his name with the toast to the accident of seniority in his profession, but he hoped not to the seniority of age. The brief had been put into his hands, and they would admit that his clients were tolerably numerous and respectable. He had one little cause of quarrel with Mr. Gedge, because he (Mr. Forsyth) had always understood that the person who had been guilty of writing the work alluded to could not have been a lawyer, as they were well aware that lawyers had nothing to do with fiction. The only novels that they ought to be familiar with were those of Justinian. He however hoped that a little fondness for literature would never be thought to disentitle a man to success, and that he might not even confine his attentions to the volumes of Chitty and Tait. Among the solicitors they had, if not the most popular, some of the best authors on interesting subjects during the last few years. But he had to return thanks for the Bar of England, and he found himself in some difficulty. At an ordinary dinner party, and at an ordinary assembly, it was a toast to which it was easy to respond. It was then not difficult to impose upon the credulity of the public, and descant upon the brilliancy of the Bar, and that would be taken as gospel. That would not do there. He knew it was vain to speak of the merits of an article to those who were familiar with its use, who were well acquainted with its defects and its merits, and, therefore, for him to speak of their merits or demerits was very much like carrying coals to Newcastle. But no body of men were more likely to take an interest in such an institution as this than the body to which he had the honour to belong, for the very distinction gained at the Bar was owing to the favour of the solicitors. They hoped that that favour would be worthily bestowed where success had been attained; and if this was carried out, which he believed was the case, the members of the Bar could say:—

"Tis not in mortals to command success:—
But we'll do more, Sempronius, we'll deserve it."

(Cheers.) He believed the relations of the Bar with the solicitors as they now existed, were of the most worthy kind, being based upon mutual respect and perfect freedom. It used to be said of the army of France that every soldier carried in his pocket the baton of marshal; and he had often thought that the solicitors might still to a certain extent be said to carry the woollack of the future Lord Chancellor; but notwithstanding that they felt the necessity of obtaining their favour, he hoped it would never be obtained by unworthy means, and he was sure they would despise the barrister who would attempt so to obtain it. Mr. Gedge had alluded to a subject which had of late excited some interest, he meant the amalgamation of the two Professions. He had lately been travelling in the United States, where the two Professions were united into one. He believed it was a great mistake. He felt quite sure that not only the interests of the Profession, but of the public at large were best served by a division of labour, and that nothing really practically useful would be gained by an amalgamation of the two. And it should not be forgotten that one of the arguments in favour of amalgamation was, that the solicitors were deprived of the right of pleading at the Bar; but that was not so, for if any solicitor thought he was more fit than his counsel, the path of a barrister was open to him at a moment's notice. (No, no.) That was not a fitting place to argue the question, but he knew several gentlemen who a short time ago were members of another branch of the Profession who were now barristers. His own impression was, that nothing would be gained by an amalgamation; but on the other hand the public would be injured. There was one thing, however, which he wished to see realised, and that not at a distant date, when both solicitors and barristers should worship together in a temple of justice more worthy of the Profession than any they had hitherto had. A great deal of time had been wasted on the "battle of the sites," and on that question he held an opinion which would no doubt put him in a minority, and it was that he cared little where the site was chosen, whether at Carey-street or on the Thames Embankment, provided that when made it shall be fit for the purpose, and an architectural ornament to this great metropolis, and worthy of the old time-honoured profession of the law. The Courts of Westminster, Chancery, and Guildhall were a disgrace to the country. He hoped before their next meeting the foundations would be laid of a temple of justice that would be an ornament to the metropolis, and a credit to the professions to which they belonged. (Cheers.)

The CHAIRMAN then rose to propose the toast of the evening, "The Solicitors' Benevolent Association, and may prosperity attend it." He said: I find myself encumbered with two difficulties, one of having too good a case, and the other of having to speak to an assembly of persons who are far more competent to deal with the subject than I can pretend to be. From Mr. Gedge's observations, I cannot help thinking that my last predecessor in this chair (Mr. Justice Hannen) altogether got rid of such a fix, for he seems to have taken another and very distinct topic, viz., the amalgamation of the two branches of the Profession. There are so many provisions for the improvement of the law and the alteration of the law, that I think we may relegate to the law societies the discussion of any such question, and the only amalgamation which I venture to suggest is that of the amalgamation of the Profession in carrying into effect the objects of a society so useful as that we are met to promote. If that amalgamation has not been so complete as it might have been, then the sooner it is brought about the better; and I think there has been an excess of courtesy in the arrangements of the seats, for we have the barristers separated from the solicitors, instead of having them dispersed anyhow. The first thing we have to consider is the necessity for an institution such as the one we are met to support to-night; and I feel at the same time that you are much more competent to form an opinion, but still I have two kinds of experience on this subject, the one a negative and the other a positive experience. That which I venture to call a negative experience was one which I got when at the bar; and many of the members of the Bar will bear testimony to it, viz., the practice of claims being constantly made upon the members of the Bar to relieve the necessities of other members of the Bar, who by illness have been reduced to a state of destitution. The demands were often excessive, and the applications were frequently without authority. We have often felt the want of a body like the present, to obtain subscriptions and apply them in a proper manner. That is what I call a negative experience. I have also a positive experience, gained as a governor of the Corporation of the Sons of the Clergy, where I have seen the advantage of a body wholly engaged in administering to the wants of such an association as this. I could produce in the monthly reports of that body a disclosure of the privations of the members of that sacred profession such as those who have not seen these monthly reports would scarcely believe. The solicitors are not exempt from the common misfortunes of mankind; in fact, there are more than ordinary casualties in their profession. There are the failure of clients and unpaid bills in addition to the common accidents of life; and it is those things which the society is intended to obviate, and it has the double object of a benefit society and a mutual assurance society. It remains to be considered whether—after having been established—the body is adequately supplying the wants which exist. Although it is but a youthful society it has managed to tide over the billows of eleven years, and, unlike many other societies, it still continues to pay interest. It has abolished the odious system of canvassing, which is a most corrupt thing in connection with charities. It has established a body of solicitors in London and the country upon whom devolves the duty of saying who is and who is not a proper object of charity. There is no case where the selection made by that body has ever had the breath of suspicion passed upon it. The affairs of this society have not only been justly and fairly, but economically, administered. It may be that it has not gone as fast as other societies, which, however, are liable to fall through going the pace, but it has gradually accumulated its funds till they amount to 15,000*l.*, and I consider that, what we have seen of the wreck of societies, which so many of us have been engaged in the process of winding-up—(a laugh)—it is no small thing to say that in this society there has been no approach to failure, but there has been a constant progress. (Hear, hear.) With regard to the economy of the society, on looking to the expense of administering the funds, I must say they are not inconsiderable when contrasted with the sum actually expended for the purposes of the society. I think one practical subject is how that proportion is to be reduced in favour of the funds of the society. I speak under great difficulty, for I have very imperfect means of knowledge, but when I find two societies in the same branch of the Profession, and having separate offices and separate expenses, I cannot help thinking that it would be wise to make an attempt to amalgamate the two societies. I am not following the example of Mr. Justice Hannen, because I think it is an amalgamation very germane to the question before us. The Law Association is a most excellent, and every way worthy to be placed by the side of this society; and its objects are similar whilst it has been longer in existence. It is a society formed for the purpose of assisting the widows and families of solicitors in the metropolis and its vicinity. It has become difficult to say what the metropolis and vicinity include, because London is going out of town and the country is coming into the town; and I should be sorry to define what is the metropolis. I think by an amalgamation of these two societies the expenses could be diminished, and both societies would be benefited. It may be presumptuous in me to throw out the hint—(cries of "No, no")—but long before I knew of the existence of this society I was an advocate of amalgamation. There is a great waste of resources in the expenses of administration of charities. I believe in an office being opened where you can go and pay your cheque, and say the particular charities you wish to subscribe to, and then be done with it. An institution such as this enables a man to obtain, if he should be in an unfortunate position of want, assistance for himself or his family, objects which every man must consider desirable. We need not look far for instances of persons whose lot seemed to put them above all aid of this kind; but you had a recent case of a member who had joined under circumstances which rendered it most unlikely that he should require aid, but he had been suddenly called away, and his widow was now dependent upon the resources of the society. It required no such instance to prove the desirableness if not the necessity for joining such an institution. We all know that such an institution is of primary interest and importance; and we ought to give it all the support in our power. That is to be effected by the amalgamation and cordial co-operation of all branches of the profession. Speaking as being the only judge present, though I am surrounded by many future judges. I think the society's claims have not been sufficiently made known to them. The Bar have done their part, for they have come forward, and are here represented by many of the most distinguished of their body. The solicitors have done their part; but I am sorry to find that though the society has been in existence eleven years, there are still 8000 solicitors not members of this society. We are driven to seek for the cause for their abstinence from the taking a part in such a cause. It cannot be attributed to want of intelligence or benevolence on the part of those who are most active and energetic in the cause of others. It must simply be through ignorance of the existence of this society, for I am not ashamed to say that until I was asked by the Lord Chancellor to take the chair I was entirely ignorant of this institution. It is very probable that I may have received a circular, or seen an advertisement of it; but to anyone who has the extraordinary number of blue books, and red books, and books of other colours, the only safeguard lies in the waste-paper basket. And therefore it is useless to depend upon circulars or advertisement, but it is by active exertion in canvassing all members of the Profession, in which I include the judges and the Bar, that a different result is to be brought about. We must seek out those not members, and when we have discovered them the circular may be effectual. I have no doubt that all present will be willing to give their time and cash, and urge others to become members of a society so beneficial to the widows and families of our fellow-workers. This is a good work in which we can all join; and let us each take our part in doing something towards this society, and then it will go on with greatly increased prosperity as the years roll on. I hope we shall all do this for the future, so that it may reach the prosperity it deserves. His Lordship concluded by giving "The Solicitors' Benevolent Association, and may prosperity attend it."

The names of those who had given donations to the society were here read over. The total amounted to about 6000.

Mr. HENRY T. YOUNG then gave the "Chairman of the evening." He said Mr. Cookson was to have proposed that toast; and he begged their indulgence whilst acting as his deputy. The accomplishments of the judges had been given by a former speaker, and he would content himself by saying that their chairman had those qualities in an eminent degree. (Hear, hear.) He had shown them in his career up to the present time; and they must not forget that, in accepting the Lord Justiceship, he had given up a Parliamentary career as the representative of his old University of Cambridge. Their chairman belonged to a most distinguished family, and they could all appreciate with what feelings the brothers Selwyn, each of whom stood foremost in his own profession, had contributed to the honour of that most excellent and distinguished family. (Applause.) He did not know whether the future would reveal another position to the learned judge—he did not allude to the Lord Chancellorship, for at the rate at which law reform was going on it was doubtful whether that functionary would be retained. Whether in the proposed amalgamation of courts an equity judge shall be considered perfectly at home on the very dry land of law, or whether he shall float on what some people called the unfathomable depths of the sea of equity, they did not know; but of one thing they were certain, that their chairman would never get out of his depths. They only hoped they would not amass the business of the law so that it would be impossible for any judge to discharge his duties properly. They would find that the ingredients of the law were very difficult to mingle at all. In conclusion, he hoped that they would always have such judges as they had at present to adorn the Bench.

The CHAIRMAN then replied, and, in doing so, said the very question raised by Mr. Young had been discussed at the Mansion House a short while ago, when Baron Bramwell told him that he was not a judge of the land. To this he (the chairman) replied that he was then a judge of the water, because he had administered justice as umpire on the Thames long before any of the judges at Westminster Hall had been elevated to the bench. Whatever might come out of this ocean of change, he trusted that Her Majesty's Justices would do what they could towards the objects of an association like the present.

Sir RICHARD BAGGALLAY, Q.C. proposed the "Directors, Auditors, and Stewards," to which Messrs. W. Norman Harrison and W. J. Dillon Webb responded.

The "Visitors" were proposed by Mr. Edward Benham, and acknowledged by Mr. Joshua Williams, Q.C.

The meeting, which had been a very successful one in every respect, was then brought to a close.

LAW PROPERTY AND LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

The following is the report of the directors at the annual general meeting held on Friday last, 4th June, at the society's offices, 30, Essex-street, Strand:

"The period having again arrived for the annual general meeting of this society, the directors beg to submit to the proprietors the following statement of its operations during the past year, together with the accounts and balance sheet, duly audited.

"Since the date of the last report, proposals for assurance have been received amounting to the sum of 184,888*l.*, and policies have been issued assuring the sum of 156,219*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

"The new premium income derived from the latter amounts to 5223*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.*, which, the directors cannot but trust, the proprietors will deem highly satisfactory. The expenses of the society have remained on the previous economical scale. The directors are happy to state that the policies which have become claims during the year have not exceeded the number and amount that might reasonably have been expected. In accordance with the provisions of the deed of settlement, two of your directors retire this year, viz.:—Ralph Thomas Brockman, Esq., John Mead, Esq. These gentlemen, being eligible, offer themselves for re-election. Your auditors, Mr. Greville and Mr. Ollard also retire, but in accordance with the deed of settlement offer themselves for re-election. The directors have only to congratulate the shareholders on the steady progress and sound condition of the society's affairs, and again to invite their active co-operation in extending its business."

The above report, having been read at the meeting, was adopted unanimously. Ralph Thomas Brockman, Esq., and John Mead, Esq., were re-elected directors of the society. Mr. Greville and Mr. Ollard were also re-elected auditors of the society for the ensuing year.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE LAW SOCIETY.

This excellent society, the anniversary of which was celebrated on Wednesday evening, was established in the year 1817, by several county solicitors and attorneys, its primary object being to sustain the character of the legal profession, by encouraging an honourable course of practice, and by discountenancing and repressing whatever may be calculated to produce a contrary tendency, as well as to mark with becoming regard what is due to the members, or any unmerited imputation against their character and conduct; and also to protect the interests of the society in Parliament, and to afford relief to distressed members and others residing in the county and city, and to their families. The amount of their funded capital, after very capital management, has increased to the substantial sum of 2300*l.*, which is invested in the Reduced Three per Cents. Several widows have been, since the formation of the society, and are still receiving help, viz., 20*l.* per annum each.

Moreover, some attorneys have been articleed from the funds of the association. One of its rules requires the members to hold their annual gatherings successively at the various towns in the county; and this year it was decided that the meeting should be held at the Severn Bank Hotel, Newnham, under the presidency of M. F. Carter, Esq., president for the year.

The dinner was announced for half-past four p.m., at which hour a goodly number of the members had arrived. An excellent banquet was provided, under the able management of Mr. and Mrs. Deakin. The wines fully sustained the reputation of this handsome hostelry. Upon the removal of the cloth, the usual loyal and patriotic toasts were duly honoured; after which the president read a letter from Mr. John Burrup, of Gloucester, who has been the secretary to the society from its commencement, upwards of fifty years ago, to the present time, acknowledging and thanking the members for the sum of 100*l.* which had been voted to him at the last meeting, in recognition of his services as honorary secretary and treasurer. The health of the president was proposed and cordially drunk, and also that of the hon. secretary, which was responded to by Mr. J. W. Burrup, the assistant secretary. Among the company were Messrs. M. F. Carter, L. W. Winterbotham, R. C. Paul, Jas. Wintle, T. M. Croome, Edward Washbourn, R. Anderson, W. F. Rogers, George Whitcombe, J. W. Burrup, W. Warman, R. S. Helps, A. S. Helps, R. Ellet, J. Mullings, C. F. Gale, H. A. Maule, &c.

LEGAL OBITUARY.

ROBT. EDWIN SMITH, ESQ.

We have lately lost from our roll of solicitors, Mr. Robert Edwin Smith, one of our most worthy, honest, and respected of our Profession. He was the head of the firm of Messrs. Smith, Pawden, and Low, of 12, Bread-street, Cheapside, London, where he had been in practice for some years rather extensively. He was known for his perseverance, and for the close attention he gave to all the varied duties of his Profession.

Mr. Smith was descended from an old Northumberland family, and was the proprietor of that beautiful mansion called Thirston House, embosomed in woods on the banks of the Coquet, near Felton, and of a considerable estate on both sides of that romantic river. These lands in Thirston, in very ancient times, belonged to David Strabolgi, son, and heir of David de Strabolgi, formerly Earl of Athol, and Johanna, his wife; they were part of the possessions of Almare de Valencia, late Earl of Pembroke, which he held in capite from Edward II., King of England. To trace the descent of this property would be more curious than useful. It is sufficient to say that they, in due time, became part of the possession of the Smith family. The eldest branch of that family in Northumberland were the Smiths of Fogston. Thomas Smith of that place settled Thirston on his second son Thomas, the great great grandfather of the gentleman, whose biography we are now recording. The father of Mr. R. E. Smith lived at Thirston House, dispensing the ancient hospitality of a country squire. He was a justice of the peace, and had all that appertained to the character of the fine old English gentleman living upon his own estate. Mr. Robt. Edwin Smith was his fourth son, and never expected to succeed to the estates of his father, and, therefore, was sent into the world to make his own way. He was apprenticed to Wm. Dickson, Esq., the present clerk of the peace for county of Northumberland. He served his time with him at Alnwick, in Northumberland, and went to London. The family estate descended to him on the death of his three elder brothers; still he followed his Profession to which he was devoted, and died at his house at Hyde-vale, near Greenwich, after a short illness, on the 26th May, 1869, in the forty-eighth year of his age. He married the daughter of James Wilson, of Chevington, and has left his widow and four young children to mourn his loss. His eldest son succeeds him as heir to the family estates.

THE COURTS & COURT PAPERS.

CIRCUITS OF THE JUDGES.

The following circuits have been fixed:—

HOME (Lord Chief Baron Kelly and Mr. Justice Mellor)—Hertford, July 12; Chelmsford, July 15; Lewes, July 20; Maidstone, July 26; Croydon, Aug. 2.

OXFORD (Mr. Baron Pigott and Mr. Justice Montagu Smith)—Berkshire, July 8; Oxford, July 12; Worcester, July 15; Stafford, July 20; Salop, July 28; Hereford, Aug. 2; Monmouth, Aug. 4; Gloucester, Aug. 9.

SOUTH WALES (Mr. Baron Channell)—Haverfordwest, July 5; Cardigan, July 9; Carmarthen, July 13; Cardiff, July 17; Brecon, July 30; Presteign, Aug. 5; Chester, Aug. 9.

THE GAZETTES.

Professional Partnership Dissolved.

Gazette, May 23.

CLARK, EDWARD PATON, and GEORGE HENRY, attorneys, solicitors, and conveyancers, Prescott and St. Helen's, April 1.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, June 4.

To surrender at the Bankruptcy Court, Basinghall-street.

ADAMS, CHARLES JAMES, waiter, Reform-st., Holloway, Pet. May 23. Reg. Brougham, O. A. Paget. Sol. Biddles, South-sq. Gray's-inn. Sur. June 11.

ALD, WILLIAM, clerk to a brick merchant, Sittingbourne. Pet. June 3. Reg. Roche, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Cape, Rose, and Pearson, Great George-st., Westminster. Sur. June 10.

ALDRIDGE, THOMAS, coal merchant, Slough. Pet. May 23. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Gardiner, St. Swinburn's. Sur. June 21.

ALLAN, GEORGE, book shop keeper, Andover-st., Holloway. Pet. May 23. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Dobie, Greenwich-st. Sur. June 10.

ATKINSON, JOSEPH ROBERT WILKIN, out of business, Upper George-st., Epsom. Pet. May 23. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Biddles, South-sq. Gray's-inn. Sur. June 11.

BAGGS, HENRY, baker, Goldington-st., St. Pancras. Pet. June 1. Reg. Murray, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Poles, Bartholomew close. Sur. June 21.

BALSHIN, THOMAS, lodging house keeper, Nelson-cottage, East Greenwich. Pet. May 23. Reg. Roche, O. A. Parkyns. Sur. June 10.

BEALIE, JOHN, postmaster, Holloway-ter, Upper Holloway. Pet. May 31. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Kimber, Great Winchester-st. Sur. June 11.

BORTH, JOHN, cabinet maker, Rockingham-st., New Kent-rd. Pet. May 2. Reg. Murray, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Noley, Trinity-st. Sur. June 21.

BOSTER, GEORGE, carpenter, London-rd., near Kingdon. Pet. June 1. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Olive, Portsmouth-st. Lincoln's-inn-fields. Sur. June 21.

BRECKTON, THOMAS JONES, jun., accountant, Cannon-st., and Arundel-villa, Upper Tooting. Pet. May 23. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Treherne and Co., Sur. June 21.

BROWN, GEORGE, X., widow, out of business, Westminster-rd., Ealing. Pet. June 2. Reg. Murray, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. McMillan, Bloomsbury-sq. Sur. June 21.

CHILL, ROBERT, tailor, Salisbury-ter, Kilburn. Pet. June 1. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Lewis and Co., Basinghall-st. Sur. June 21.

COOPER, JACOB, tanner, Hagden-rd., Great Prescott-st. Pet. May 23. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Lewis and Co., Basinghall-st. Sur. June 21.

COCKER, THOMAS HENRY, cabinet inlayer, Portland-rd., Notting-hill. Pet. June 1. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Marshall, Lincoln's-inn-fields. Sur. June 21.

DALBY, FRANCIS, formerly carpenter, Ipswich. Pet. May 31. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Jennings, Ipswich. Sur. June 18.

DEAN, THOMAS, gasfitter, Kingsland-rd., Pet. June 2. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Brighton, Bishopgate-st. without. Sur. June 10.

EVANS, JAMES, victualler, Britannia-st., Bishopgate-st. Pet. May 23. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Tanqueray and Co., New Broad-st. Sur. June 21.

FORBES, DAVID COLIN, foreign glass merchant, Coleman-st., and McIntosh-rd., Upper Holloway. Pet. June 1. Reg. Roche, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Bolton, Great Swan-alley, Moorgate-st. Sur. June 10.

FRECKLEY, FREDERICK ROBERT AUGUSTUS, attorney, St. Mark's-creek, Epsom. Pet. May 23. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Philip, Panama-st. Sur. June 11.

GIBBS, CHARLES FREDERICK, clerk, Horselydown. Pet. May 23. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Edwin, Blackman-st. Sur. June 21.

HARDY, CHARLES, out of employment, Bushey. Pet. June 1. Reg. Murray, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Kimber, Great Winchester-st. Sur. June 21.

HARRISON, NATHANIEL, miller, Holywell mills, near Oxford. Pet. May 23. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Singleton and Co., Great James-st. Sur. June 10.

HARTWORTH, ROBERT JOHN LEWIS, out of business, Westminster-villa, Kensington. Pet. June 2. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Brown, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 21.

HIGH, JAMES, gentleman, Teddington. Pet. Mar. 23. Reg. Roche, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Eley, New Broad-st., City. Sur. June 10.

HOLLIDAY, JOHN, jun., tailor, Whitechapel-rd. Pet. May 31. Reg. Murray, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Barrett, Bell-yd., Doctors'-commons. Sur. June 21.

HUGHES, WILLIAM JOHN REID, brass founder, Pennycuik, Poplar. Pet. April 23. Reg. Roche, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Watson, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 21.

LEWIS, WILLIAM, builder, Bromley. Pet. June 1. Reg. Murray, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Layton, jun., Navarino-cottage, Bow-rd. Sur. June 21.

JACOBS, CHARLES, clerk to a public company, Tennyson-rd., Lambeth. Pet. May 23. Reg. Brougham, O. A. Paget. Sol. Dobie, Greenwich-st. Sur. June 10.

JONES, BENJAMIN, social traveller, Croydon. Pet. May 31. Reg. Murray, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Downing, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 21.

LAWRENCE, JAMES, out of business, Blackheath. Pet. June 1. Reg. Murray, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Elmalle, Forey, and Sedgwick, London-rd. Sur. June 21.

LEWIS, ALFRED, house decorator, Adair-rd., Upper Westbourne-pk. Pet. June 2. Reg. Murray, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Cooper, Portman-st., Portman-sq. Sur. June 21.

LOVEY, ALFRED, late tailor, Fishmonger-alley, Fenchurch-st. Pet. May 23. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Biddles, South-sq. Gray's-inn. Sur. June 11.

MACHART, THOMAS, publican, Harrow. Pet. June 1. Reg. Murray, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Anstey, Morris, and Co., Old Kent-rd. Sur. June 21.

MELKIN, THOMAS ROWLAND, auctioneer, Cornwall-croft, Anerley. Pet. May 23. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Parry, Oroydon. Sur. June 10.

OAKLEY, ALFRED, butcher, Tottenham. Pet. May 31. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Smith, Norfolk-st., Strand. Sur. June 10.

PATTS, NATHANIEL HENRY, wine merchant, Mitling-ls. Pet. May 23. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Hall, Fenchurch-st. Sur. June 21.

ROBERTSON, JOHN FRANCIS, stock broker, Threadneedle-st. Pet. Mar. 23. Reg. Brougham, O. A. Paget. Sol. Biddles, South-sq. Gray's-inn. Sur. June 11.

SHEPARD, JOSEPH, watchmaker, Ealing. Pet. June 1. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Olive, Portsmouth-st., Lincoln's-inn. Sur. June 10.

SIX, ELLIOTT, waiter in the royal arsenal, Woolwich. Pet. May 23. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Hughes and Co., Woolwich. Sur. June 11.

STEELE, MARY ANN, widow, milliner, Hackney-rd. Pet. June 1. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Biddles, South-sq. Gray's-inn. Sur. June 11.

THEVOT, FRANCOISE, spinster, assistant to a restaurant keeper, Wandsworth-creek. Pet. May 23. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Biddles, South-sq. Gray's-inn. Sur. June 11.

TOLSON, JOHN, baker, Battle. Pet. June 1. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Senior, June 10.

TUNER, GEORGE EDWIN, builder, Jarvis-rd., Fulham. Pet. June 1. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Smith, Norfolk-st., Strand. Sur. June 10.

VERALL, CHARLES, ironmonger, Chatham. Pet. June 2. Reg. Murray, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Lewis, Mann, and Co., Old Jewry. Sur. June 21.

WATSON, JOHN, and WATSON, GEORGE, coach builders, Hand-croft, Homewood. Pet. May 23. Reg. Brougham, O. A. Paget. Sol. Biddles, South-sq. Gray's-inn. Sur. June 11.

WILKINS, WILLIAM, engineer, Gode-rd., Clapham. Pet. May 23. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Alfred and Andrew, Great James-st., Bedford-rd. Sur. June 21.

WYNNE, DANIEL, beer retailer, High-st., St. Giles. Pet. May 31. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Watson, Bell-yd., Doctors'-commons. Sur. June 21.

YELLY, HARRY FLEMING, architect, Clarendon-sq., Fentons-villa. Pet. June 2. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Nicholson and Co., Chancery-ls. Sur. June 21.

YOUNG, FREDERICK, and STANFORTH, SAMUEL, ironmongers, King-st., Brompton. Pet. May 23. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Ashurst and Co., Old Jewry. Sur. June 10.

To surrender in the Country.

ABBOTT, THOMAS, beer-teller, Runcorn. Pet. May 22. Reg. & O. A. Nicholson. Sol. Wood, Runcorn. Sur. June 10.

ABRI, WILLIAM, druggist, Brownhills, near Wakefield. Pet. June 1. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Pearson and Gould, Stourbridge. Sur. June 10.

ALLEN, CHARLES PLATCHEE, clerk in holy orders, Derby. Pet. June 1. Reg. Tudor, O. A. Harris. Sol. Woods, Derby. Sur. June 21.

ANCHER, ROBERT, die dealer, Coventry. Pet. May 23. Reg. & O. A. Kirby. Sol. Smallbone, Coventry. Sur. June 10.

ATKINSON, JOHN, commission agent, Manchester. Pet. May 18. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Cobbe, Wheeler, and Cobbe, Manchester. Sur. June 10.

BOTTOM, DAVID, yardman, Puddock, Biddersfield. Pet. May 3. Reg. & O. A. Jones. Sol. Sykes, Biddersfield. Sur. June 23.

BRAHME, GEORGE, publican, Great Yarmouth. Pet. May 18. Reg. & O. A. Chamberlin. Sur. June 23. Reg. May 18.

BRUMPTON, THOMAS, beerhouse keeper, Market Basin. Pet. June 2. Reg. & O. A. Rhodes. Sol. Balfour and Chambers. Sur. June 19.

BRUMM, JOSEPH, trader, Balthamston, near Dewsbury. Pet. May 18. O. A. Young. Sol. Simpson, Leeds. Sur. June 21.

CHAMBERS, GEORGE WALTER, grocer, Peckleton. Pet. June 4. Reg. Hill, O. A. Kinnear. Sol. Bock, Nottingham. Sur. June 10.

DAWSON, ELIZABETH, shopkeeper, School-croft, Sheffield. Pet. May 18. Reg. & O. A. Wake and Rodgers. Sol. Messrs. Binney, Sheffield. Sur. June 17.

DOWSETT, THOMAS BROOKS, baker, Heybridge. Pet. June 1. Reg. & O. A. Codd. Sol. Digby, Malden. Sur. June 17.

FALLOWS, WILLIAM, bookkeeper, Worsley Messes. Pet. May 23. Reg. & O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Darlington, Wigan. Sur. July 8.

FIRTH, GEORGE, butcher, Beckingdale, Newport. Pet. June 2. Reg. & O. A. Halton. Sol. Wannop, Carlisle. Sur. June 10.

FOORD, THOMAS, victualler, Isle of Sheppey. Pet. May 27. Reg. & O. A. Bates. Sol. Willis, Sheerness. Sur. June 15.

FREEMAN, ARTHUR JEWELL, tea merchant, Manchester. Pet. May 22. Reg. Murray, O. A. McNeill. Sol. Slicker, Manchester. Sur. June 17.

FURBER, AUGUSTIN VALENTINE, surveyor, Combe Down. Pet. May 27. Reg. & O. A. Smith. Sol. Bartrum, Bath. Sur. June 15.

GORING, MARY, grocer, Darlington. Pet. May 31. Reg. Tudor, O. A. Kinnear. Sol. Brevitt, Darlington. Sur. June 18.

GORT, MART, widow, grocer, Runcorn. Pet. May 20. Reg. & O. A. Parkyns. Sol. May, Warrington. Sur. June 10.

GRAY, ALFRED, common brewer, Wyke Regis, near Weymouth. Pet. May 21. O. A. Carrick. Sol. Atkinson, Blandford, Forum, and Hirtzel, Exeter. Sur. June 21.

GREEN, ALBERT JOHN, filter, Monks Coppenhall. Pet. May 17. O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Butler, Exeter. Sur. June 17.

GRIGGS, EMILY ELIZABETH, milliner, West Cowes. Pet. May 23. Reg. & O. A. Blake. Sol. Joyce, Newport. Sur. June 10.

HANCOCK, GEORGE, spring knife manufacturer, Sheffield. Pet. June 1. Reg. & O. A. Wake and Rodgers. Sol. Messrs. Binney, Sheffield. Sur. June 17.

HATTON, WILLIAM, farmer, Presbury. Pet. May 31. Reg. Farrell, O. A. McNeill. Sol. Pickford, Macclesfield. Sur. June 15.

HEMINGWAY, JOHN, spinner, Barlborough. Pet. May 31. Reg. & O. A. Watson. Sol. Schooner and Brandy, Dewsbury. Sur. June 10.

HIVIA, JAMES, engine fender, Lowestoft. Pet. June 2. Reg. & O. A. Holden. Sol. Ramwell, Bolton. Sur. June 18.

HITCHCOCK, JAMES, baker, Taunton. Pet. June 2. O. A. Carrick. Sol. Trenchard and Walsh, Taunton; and Hirtzel, Exeter. Sur. June 21.

HOOD, ROBERT, pork butcher, Brighton. Pet. May 31. Reg. & O. A. Everhead. Sol. Holtham, Brighton. Sur. June 18.

HULME, GEORGE, machinist, Rochdale. Pet. June 1. Reg. & O. A. Jackson. Sol. Sandring, Rochdale. Sur. June 18.

JONES, WILLIAM, hostler, Wellington. Pet. May 31. Reg. & O. A. Newell. Sol. James, Wellington. Sur. June 11.

LANG, ROBERT, fisherman, Ramsate. Pet. May 19. Reg. & O. A. Snowden. Sol. Bowling, Ramsate. Sur. June 18.

LAYCOCK, UTOPIA, cotton manufacturer, Burnley. Pet. May 27. Reg. Murray, O. A. McNeill. Sol. Gardner, Manchester. Sur. June 23.

LYONS, THOMAS HYTHONSON, provision dealer, Birmingham. Pet. June 1. Reg. Hill, O. A. Kinnear. Sol. Messrs. Hodgson, Birmingham. Sur. June 10.

MACHART, ROBERT, newswriter, Farnworth. Pet. May 31. Reg. & O. A. Clayton. Sol. Johnston, Newcastle. Sur. June 15.

MEENON, JOSEPH, miller, Manchester. Pet. May 13. Reg. & O. A. McNeill. Sol. June 17.

MICHAEL, WILLIAM, shopkeeper, Nantwyd. Pet. June 2. Reg. & O. A. Sheppard. Sol. Plevin, Tynid. Sur. June 10.

MILNER, EDWARD WATSON, coal merchant, Weston-super-Mare. Pet. June 1. Reg. Wilde, O. A. Acranam. Sol. Mantell, Weston-super-Mare. Sur. June 17.

MURRAY, WILLIAM, baker, Great Bedford. Pet. May 23. Reg. & O. A. Hirtzel. Sol. Jowett, Bedford. Sur. June 11.

PARKES, WILLIAM, and BATHFORD, CHARLES, metallic bedstead manufacturer, Birmingham. Pet. June 1. Reg. Tudor, O. A. Kinnear. Sol. Messrs. Hodgson, Birmingham. Sur. June 18.

PARRY, EDWARD, printer, Great Brunswick-st., Hulme. Pet. June 1. Reg. Farrell, O. A. McNeill. Sol. Allen, Manchester. Sur. June 15.

PHILPIN, JOSEPH, commission agent, Manchester. Pet. June 1. Reg. & O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Law, Manchester. Sur. July 8.

QUICK, CHARLES, coachbuilder, Bath. Pet. May 29. O. A. Smith. Sol. Bartrum, Bath. Sur. June 15.

RYALL, WILLIAM JOHN KNIGHT, architect, Tettenhall. Pet. May 23. Reg. & O. A. Brown. Sol. Stratton, Wolverhampton. Sur. June 10.

SOMERFIELD, NATHAN WALKER, victualler, Halifax. Pet. May 23. Reg. Rankin, O. A. Dyson and Rankin. Sol. Harle, Leeds. Sur. June 18.

STEDD, SAMUEL, greengrocer, Horsecroft, near Rochdale. Pet. May 23. Reg. & O. A. Jackson. Sol. Holland, Rochdale. Sur. June 18.

SHARMAN, CHARLES, victualler, Brixham. Pet. May 21. Reg. Davis, O. A. Johnson. Sol. Overall, Leamington Friars. Sur. June 10.

SHAW, JOHN, late druggist, Gool. Pet. May 27. Reg. & O. A. Wilson. Sol. Green, Howden and Gool. Sur. June 30.

SHAW, ELIZABETH, widow, cotton dyer, Kirkstall. Pet. June 3. O. A. Young. Sol. Drake, Huddersfield. Sur. June 21.

SHEPHERD, JAMES, tobacco pipe maker, Worcester. Pet. June 1. Reg. & O. A. Kinnear. Sol. O. A. Parkyns. Sur. June 10.

SIMPSON, FRANK, photographic artist, Nottingham. Pet. May 10. Reg. & O. A. Patchitt. Sol. Brown, Nottingham. Sur. June 10.

SMITH, GEORGE BYRON, fish hawk, Halliwell. Pet. June 2. Reg. & O. A. Holden. Sol. Edge and Dawson, Bolton. Sur. June 10.

STEVENSON, THOMAS, and STUBBS, ROBERT, plumbers, Nottingham. Pet. May 31. Reg. & O. A. Patchitt. Sol. Cranoh, Nottingham. Sur. June 30.

SWAINSON, ROBERT, dealer in brooms, Liverpool. Pet. Feb. 10. Reg. & O. A. Hine. Sur. June 15.

THOMAS, BENJAMIN, clerk in holy orders, Slabesh, near Haverfordwest. Pet. June 1. Reg. Wilde, O. A. Acranam. Sol. Bramble and Blackburn, Bristol. Sur. June 17.

TOLLEY, WILLIAM, painter, Kinger. Pet. June 2. Reg. & O. A. Hartwell. Sol. Collis, Southbridge. Sur. June 21.

TOMLINSON, WILLIAM, ironmonger, Ludworth. Pet. May 27. Reg. & O. A. Brooks. Sol. Messrs. Drinkwater, Hyde. Sur. June 15.

WILSON, JAMES, machine closer, Coventry. Pet. May 31. Reg. & O. A. Wiltshy. Sol. Gery, Coventry. Sur. June 16.

WILLIAMS, JAMES BEVAN, shoemaker, Tenbury. Pet. June 1. Reg. & O. A. Norris. Sol. Preston, Tenbury. Sur. June 21.

WINDSOR, JOHN, and WINDSOR, CHARLES LYONS, agricultural labourer, Dunsbury. Pet. May 23. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. James and Griffin, Birmingham; and Croxon, Oswestry. Sur. June 10.

WORSLEY, CHARLES HENRY, wheelwright, Almondsbury. Pet. May 18. Reg. & O. A. Jones. Sol. Freeman, Huddersfield. Sur. June 10.

Gazette, June 8.

To surrender at the Bankruptcy Court, Basinghall-street.

AYLEN, EDWARD SAMUEL, out of business, Bonchurch-hill, near Romford. Pet. June 5. O. A. Paget. Sol. Keighly, Ironmongers-ls. Sur. June 23.

BATHFORD, HENRY EDWARD, greengrocer, Alvey-st., Walworth. Pet. June 2. Reg. & O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Cooke, Greenwich-bldgs, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 23.

BILLINGS, MARY ANN, widow, out of business, New Church-st., Jamaica-rd., Brompton. Pet. June 4. O. A. Paget. Sol. Green, R. Post-st., Strand. Sur. June 23.

BLOOM, JAMES, farmer, East Dereham. Pet. June 3. Reg. Murray, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Saunders, East Dereham. Sur. June 21.

BRIDE, JOHN HENRY, shirt manufacturer, Criswell-st., Granadine, Brompton. Pet. June 4. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Langton, Walbrook-house, Walbrook. Sur. June 24.

DEAN, JAMES, out of business, Albert-st., Clapham-rd. Pet. June 4. Reg. Murray, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Maniere, Great James-st., Bedford-rd. Sur. June 21.

EDGINGTON, EDWIN THOMAS, commercial clerk, Commercial-rd. east, St. George's-st. East. Pet. June 2. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Drake, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 18.

FALTY, JOHN, cheesemonger, Bethnal-green-rd. Pet. June 3. Reg. Murray, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Frost, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 21.

FORDHAM, JOSEPH, builder, Armagh-rd., North Bow. Pet. June 5. Reg. Roche, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Wood, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 23.

FUGGLES, EDWIN, baker, Battersdown. Pet. June 3. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Olive, Portsmouth-st., Lincoln's-inn. Sur. June 18.

GALES, THOMAS SKULTHORP, builder, Portobello-rd., Notting-hill. Pet. June 5. O. A. Paget. Sol. Webb, Union Bank-chambers, Carey-st. Sur. June 23.

HAAS, FRITZ, and WINTER, GUSTAV, foreign agents, Carter-ls. and Dean-st., Doctors'-commons. Pet. June 3. O. A. Paget. Sol. Phil, Panama-ls. Sur. June 23.

MARTIN, JOHN THOMAS, out of business, Denhead. Pet. June 3. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Jones, New-lin, Strand. Sur. June 18.

MARTY, WILLIAM, bedding manufacturer, Curdland, Shore-croft, Pet. June 4. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Nash, Arling-st., New North-st. Sur. June 21.

RITCHIE, ROBERT ALLEN, draper, Campbell-rd., Bow. Pet. May 21. Reg. Roche, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Marsden, Friday-st., Cheapside. Sur. June 23.

JACKSON, HARRY TODD, of no occupation, Forest-hill. Pet. June 4. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Linklaters and Co., Walbrook. Sur. June 21.

LANUM, GEORGE, builder, Bloomfield-pl., Paddington, and Ted-dington. Pet. June 3. Reg. Brougham, O. A. Paget. Sol. Biddles, South-sq. Gray's-inn. Sur. June 23.

MARTIN, JOHN THOMAS, out of business, Portobello-rd., Notting-hill. Pet. June 4. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Drake, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 24.

MANNING, GEORGE, timber merchant, Commercial-rd., Peckham. Pet. June 4. Reg. Murray, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Towle, Greenwich-bldgs, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 21.

MOODY, ROBERT, jun.; MOODY, WALTER TIBBELL; and MOODY, FREDERICK, common brewers, Newmarket St. Mary. Pet. June 1. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Ford and Co., Basinghall-st., near St. James's. Sur. June 23.

NEDHAM, CHARLES, gunsmith, Piccadilly. Pet. June 2. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Moxon, Lincoln's-inn-fields. Sur. June 18.

NOKES, THOMAS, miller, Grays and West Thurrock. Pet. June 1. O. A. Paget. Sol. Brady, dischambers, St. Sur. June 21.

PARKER, WILLIAM, tailor, Poplar-pl., Moscow-rd., Paddington. Pet. June 1. Reg. Brougham, O. A. Paget. Sol. Price, Fenchurch-bldgs. Sur. June 21.

PRICE, HARRIS, tailor, Old Montague-st., Osborn-st., Whitechapel. Pet. June 1. Reg. Murray, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Newham, Bucklersbury. Sur. June 21.

SCHOFFER, MARTIN (trading as Hoffman and Co.), commission agent, Cross-ls. Pet. June 1. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Watson, Basinghall-st. Sur. June 21.

SCOTT, CHARLES, out of business, Portenew Town. Pet. June 4. O. A. Paget. Sol. Kimber and Ellis, Lombard-st. Sur. June 23.

SEED, WILLIAM FRANCIS, musician, Canonbury-st., Islington. Pet. June 2. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Davis, Golden-sq. Sur. June 21.

TWISCH, FREDERICK, and TWISCH, JOHN, common brewers, New Windsor. Pet. May 22. Reg. Murray, O. A. Parkyns. Sol. Lawrence, Pleys, Boyer, and Baker, Old Jewry-chambers. Sur. June 21.

WARREN, JAMES, in no business, Great Alle-st., Goodman's-fld. Pet. June 4. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Messrs. Lewis, Ely-pl. Sur. June 18.

WHITE, CHARLES HENRY, glass dealer, Camberwell-rd., Camberwell. Pet. June 1. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Hicklin, Trinity-sq., Borough. Sur. June 21.

WHITE, JAMES, coal merchant, Lamb's Conduit-passage, Red Lion-sq. Pet. June 1. Reg. Brougham, O. A. Paget. Sol. Biddles, South-sq. Gray's-inn. Sur. June 23.

WILKINSON, ALFRED, railway inspector, Abdon-rd., Hammersmith. Pet. June 1. Reg. Peppys, O. A. Graham. Sol. Louis, Wellington-st., Strand. Sur. June 18.

To surrender in the Country.

ANGEL, BENJAMIN, over, Melcombe Regis. Pet. June 3. Reg. & O. A. Andrews. Sol. Tizard and George, Weymouth. Sur. June 22.

BLACKLEY, JOHN, salesman, Manchester. Pet. June 2. Reg. Farrell, O. A. McNeill. Sol. Burton and Elliott, Manchester. Sur. June 21.

BOLAND, RICHARD, working jeweller, Birmingham. Pet. June 4. Reg. & O. A. Guest. Sol. Howlands, Birmingham. Sur. June 23.

